INDICTMENT

Vio. 18 U.S.C., Section 88, now 18 U.S.C., Section 371—conspiracy to violate Naturalization Laws; 8 U.S.C., Section 746(1) and Section 746(5)—Naturalization Laws.

A true bill,

/s/ GEORGE SIELER,
Foreman.

Bail, $5,000.00 for each defendant.

PENALTY: 1st Count—Imprisonment not exceeding 2 years, or fine not exceeding $10,000.00, or both;

2nd and 3rd Counts—Imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or fine not exceeding $5,000.00, or both, on each count.

First Count

(18 U.S.C., Section 88; now 18 U.S.C., Section 371)

The Grand Jury charges: That Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson (hereinafter called "said defendants") on or about the 23rd day of June, 1945, and continuing thereafter until on or about October 1, 1945, and for some time prior thereto, the exact time being to the Grand Jury unknown, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said Division and District, did conspire with each other, and with divers other persons to the Grand Jury unknown, to defraud the United States by impairing, obstructing and defeating the proper administration of its naturalization laws, in the manner following, to wit: By having said defendant Harry Renton Bridges fraudulently petition for and obtain naturalization in a naturalization proceeding in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, by falsely and fraudulently stating and representing to the said Court in said proceeding numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, that he, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges, had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States; that said statement and representation so agreed to be made, and made, as aforesaid, as said defendants, and each of them at all times herein mentioned well knew, were false and fraudulent in this, that said defendant Harry Renton Bridges had in truth and in fact belonged to and been a member of the Communist Party in the United States from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945; that said statement and representation were material to said naturalization proceeding.

That in pursuance of such conspiracy, and during the existence thereof, and in furtherance, and to effect the objects thereof, said defendants, respectively, did and performed the following overt acts:

1. On the 23rd day of June, 1945, defendant Harry Renton Bridges filed at the office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in the City of San Francisco, State of California, an application for a Certificate of Arrival and preliminary form for petition for naturalization.

2. On or about the 8th day of August, 1945, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges appeared before Lloyd H. Garner, a Naturalization Examiner of the United States, at San Francisco, State of California, in the office of the County Clerk in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and gave testimony in the matter of the application of said defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization.

3. On or about the 8th day of August, 1945, said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, at the office of the County Clerk in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, signed as witnesses a petition for naturalization in the case of defendant Harry Renton Bridges.

4. On or about the 17th day of September, 1945, said defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, appeared in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and gave testimony in support of the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization.

Second Count

The Grand Jury further charges: That on the 17th day of September, 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, Honorable Thomas M. Foley, Superior Judge, presiding, there came on for hearing a naturalization proceeding, numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, on the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization under the Nationality Act of October 14, 1940; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges then and there was called and produced as a witness in said proceeding then on for hearing, and took an oath before said Court that he, the said defendant, would testify truly in said proceeding, and said Court then and there had competent authority to administer said oath, and did administer it; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges did then and there wilfully and knowingly make a false statement under oath in certain matters which were material to the issues of said proceeding then and there being heard, giving the following answers to questions asked, to wit:

> "Q. Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to the Communist Party in the United States?
> "A. I have not; I do not."

That said answers so stated and testified to by defendant Harry Renton Bridges were, and each of them was, as said defendant then and there knew, wilfully false and contrary to his said oath, and said defendant did not then and there believe said answers, or any of them, to be true, and the said answers were, and each of them was, then and there believed and known by him to be false.

That in truth and in fact said defendant at the time of so testifying belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States, and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945.

That said statement and testimony of said defendant, and said answers given by him as aforesaid, were upon a material matter, and were material in and to the issues of said proceeding.

Third Count

(8 U.S.C., Section 746(a)(5).)

The Grand Jury further charges: That said defendants, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on or about the 17th day of September, 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said Division and District, did wilfully and knowingly encourage, aid, advise and assist a person, to wit, Harry Renton Bridges, not then and there entitled thereto, to obtain, accept and receive a Certificate of Naturalization, which was to be procured, and was procured by fraud, as said defendants, and each of them, at all times herein mentioned well knew, said fraud consisting of false and fraudulent statements and representations made in a naturalization proceeding before the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the City and County of San Francisco, numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, and said Harry Renton Bridges did not belong to the Communist Party in the United States and had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States, whereas in truth and in fact said Harry Renton Bridges then and there, as said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, then and there well knew, belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States, and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945.

District Court of the United States, Northern District of California, Southern Division

At a Stated Term of the Southern Division of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, held at the Court Room thereof, in the City and County of San Francisco, on Thursday, the 16th day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-nine.

Present: The Honorable Michael J. Roche,
District Judge.

[Title of Cause.]

ARRAIGNMENT OF HENRY SCHMIDT; PLEA OF NOT GUILTY ENTERED BY EACH DEFENDANT; ORDER ALLOWING DEFENDANTS TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1949, TO FILE MOTIONS FOR BILL OF PARTICULARS

Case came on regularly this day for arraignment of defendant Henry Schmidt; hearing of motion for bill of particulars, etc., and motion for enlargement; hearing re time within which to file motions; also for entry of pleas. Robert B. McMillan, Esq., Asst. U. S. Atty., was present for the United States. Defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson were present with their attorney, Herbert Resner, Esq.

Defendant Henry Schmidt was arraigned upon Indictment, stated his true name to be as contained therein, and thereupon Mr. Resner waived reading of Indictment. Copy of Indictment was handed to defendant Henry Schmidt, who stated he understood the charge against him.

Defendants were called to plead and thereupon defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson each pleaded "Not Guilty" to the Indictment filed in this case.

After hearing the arguments of the attorneys, it is Ordered that the defendants have to and including September 1, 1949, within which to file motions for bill of particulars, etc., as will more fully appear in an order this day signed and filed.

Ordered case continued to September 1, 1949, for hearing of motions to be filed herein and to be set for trial.

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

MOTION OF HARRY RENTON BRIDGES TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT AND THE FIRST AND SECOND COUNTS THEREOF

To the Honorable Michael J. Roche, Judge of the Above-entitled Court:

Comes now Harry Renton Bridges, one of the defendants herein, by his counsel Richard Gladstein, Esq., per George R. Andersen, Esq.; Herbert Resner, Esq.; Norman Leonard, Esq., and Irvin Goodman, Esq., and moves the above-entitled Court for its order dismissing the indictment herein and the first and second counts thereof, upon each and all of the grounds hereinafter set forth:

I.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Statute of Limitations

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof is barred an tolled, and the Court is entirely without jurisdiction, by the operation of the statute of limitations, namely, Title 18 U.S.C. §3282, since the indictment and the first and second counts thereof were not found within three years next after the alleged offenses were committed.

II.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Former Jeopardy

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof puts him in jeopardy of his life or limb for alleged offenses for which he has heretofore been so subjected to jeopardy on four prior, separate and distinct occasions, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

III.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Former Acquittal

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof constitutes a prosecution against him for alleged offenses for which he has been tried on four prior, separate and distinct occasions; and this prosecution of the defendant Bridges therefore is contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirely by reference hereto.

IV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty or property without due process of law and it is unfair, arbitrary, unreasonable, capricious, a perversion of justice and a persecution of this defendant and the labor union, namely, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, of which he is president, and its members, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that the present prosecution is the fifth in a series of such proceedings against this defendant, all based upon the same charges and alleged evidence, and which proceeding has been instituted against defendant, as have been the four prior proceedings, because defendant is an effective labor leader and has dared to exercise the freedom that belongs to him as a human being and is guaranteed to him by the Constitution of the United States.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

V.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Res Judicata

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof constitutes a deprivation of the defendant Bridges' life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and this prosecution is capricious, arbitrary, unreasonable, a perversion of justice and a persecution of this defendant in that all of the issues raised by said indictment and the first and second counts thereof have been adjudicated between the parties hereto on four prior separate and distinct occasions and all and each of said prior adjudications have been resolved in favor of the defendant Bridges; and therefore said prior adjudications have rendered the prosecution raised by this indictment and the first and second counts thereof res judicata, and the instant prosecution is therefore barred and without basis in law.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

VI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Estoppel

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives him of life, liberty or property without due process of law, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the conduct and actions of the plaintiff in this cause estop it from proceeding herein and from prosecuting this defendant under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof in that the plaintiff agreed, consented and admitted to the naturalization as a citizen of the United States of this defendant, which naturalization proceedings are the basis for this prosecution and indictment, and that at the time of said naturalization proceedings the plaintiff had in its possession full knowledge of all of the defendant's activities for the entire period of time covered by this indictment, and with said knowledge the plaintiff stated in open court at said time that it had no objection that defendant Bridges be and thereupon he was naturalized.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

VII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Failure to Rely

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the plaintiff did not and could not have relied upon any alleged false statements or misrepresentations of the defendant Bridges claimed to have been made at the time of his naturalization since there had been four prior, separate and distinct proceedings in which the plaintiff had the full and complete opportunity to, and it did, inquire into the subject matter of the said alleged false statements and misrepresentations.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

VIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Equal Protection of the Law

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives defendant Bridges of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that it denies to him the equal protection of the laws since the defendant Bridges, alone of all persons in the country, has been singled out and prosecuted on five separate and distinct occasions for the same alleged offenses.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

IX.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Liberty of Expression and Action

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives defendant Bridges of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and invades and deprives him of his rights of freedom of speech, press, assembly, petition and opinion contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that said indictment was found and the prosecution of the defendant Bridges ~~the~~reunder is being conducted because of his labor union activities, and said indictment was found and said prosecution is being conducted by plaintiff for the purpose of harassing, intimidating and silencing defendant Bridges in his said labor union activities and in the expression of his opinions and beliefs in connection therewith.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

X.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Bad Faith

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof constitutes a deprivation of defendant Bridges' life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the said indictment and the first and second counts thereof was found and the prosecution of the defendant Bridges is being conducted thereunder in bad faith and for ulterior purposes and not for the purpose of enforcing the naturalization or any other laws of the United States.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

XI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Misconduct of Prosecution

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under this indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives defendant Bridges of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the plaintiff has been guilty of prejudicial misconduct upon the basis of which it obtained a return of this indictment and is proceeding with the prosecution in the following respects:

1. The plaintiff has offered improper inducements to witnesses to testify against defendant Bridges.

2. The plaintiff has utilized illegal methods to obtain evidence against defendant Bridges.

3. The plaintiff created an atmosphere of hysteria before the Grand Jury which found the indictment, and said indictment was returned upon the basis of bias and prejudice as a result thereof.

4. The prosecution improperly swore witnesses before the Grand Jury which found this indictment to secrecy in violation of Rule 6(e) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts.

5. The Attorney General of the United States, under whose direction this indictment was found and this prosecution undertaken, has made prejudicial statements against defendant Bridges, and has admitted the defendant Bridges is being prosecuted because of his labor activities.

6. The plaintiff's attorneys improperly, prejudicially, and without basis impugned activities of counsel for defendant Bridges.

7. The plaintiff has engaged in public activities and statements creating an atmosphere of hysteria, unfairness, bias and prejudice against defendant Bridges rendering an impartial trial of said defendant impossible.

The affidavits of defendant Bridges, Herbert Resner, and Harold M. Sawyer, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

XII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Illegally Obtained Evidence

The indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges is without authority in law and said indictment and the first and second counts thereof are void and of no legal effect whatsoever in that the evidence which was presented to the Grand Jury which returned said indictment and the first and second counts thereof was illegally secured, obtained and presented by representatives or agents of the plaintiff herein, contrary to and in violation of the rights of the defendant Bridges as guaranteed to him by the First, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and, contrary to the provisions of the Federal Communications Act (47 U.S.C. §605).

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

XIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Incompetent, Illegal or Insufficient Evidence Before the Grand Jury

The prosecution of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges under the indictment and the first and second counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty or property without due process of law and is unfair, arbritrary, unreasonable, capricious, a perversion of justice and a persecution of this defendant, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that no legal or competent evidence was or could have been presented to the Grand Jury which found said indictment in support of the allegations of the said indictment or the first or second counts thereof, or which justified or sustained or could have justified or sustained said Grand Jury in returning the said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against this defendant.

The defendant Bridges' affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, is made a part hereof in its entirety by reference hereto.

XIV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Unauthorized Persons Present in the Grand Jury Room

The indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges is void and of no legal force or effect whatsoever and the present prosecution is without authority in and is contrary to law, in that during the time that the plaintiff presented alleged evidence to the Grand Jury, which found this indictment and upon the basis of which this indictment was returned there were persons not authorized by law present before said Grand Jury and during its sessions, contrary to and in violation of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for United States District Courts.

The affidavits of Roy A. Pyle and Frank Slaby, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

XV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense

The said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States.

XVI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Fraud

The said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States in that it does not appear from the said indictment or the first and second counts thereof how or in what manner the statements, representations and conduct alleged therein to have been made and done by the defendant Bridges did defraud or could have defrauded the United States, or constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States.

XVII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Materiality

The said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that it does not appear from the said indictment and the first and second counts thereof how or in what manner the statements representations and conduct therein alleged to have been made and done by this defendant were or could be material to the naturalization proceedings therein referred to.

XVIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Reliance by Plaintiff

The said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that it does not appear from the said indictment or the first or second counts thereof how or in what manner the plaintiff relied or could have relied upon the statements, representations and conduct therein alleged to have been made and done by said defendant.

XIV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
Essential Elements or Ingredients Not Alleged

The said indictment and the first and second counts thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that said indictment or the first or second counts thereof do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness, and certainty every essential element or ingredient of the offenses charged so as to enable defendant Bridges to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XX.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
An Essential Element or Ingredient Not Alleged in Count 1

The said indictment and Count 1 thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "on or about October 1, 1945, and for some time prior thereto, the exact time being to the Grand Jury unknown," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Bridges to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XXI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
A Second Essential Element or Ingredient Not Alleged in Count 1

The said indictment and Count 1 thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Bridges to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XXII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
An Essential Element or Ingredient Not Alleged in Count 2

The said indictment and Count 2 thereof against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "from 1933 up to and including the said 17th day of September, 1945," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Bridges to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

This motion and the various parts thereof is based upon all of the files, records, papers and proceedings in the above-entitled cause, the affidavits of Harry Renton Bridges, of Herbert Resner, Harold M. Sawyer, Roy A. Pyle, and Frank Slaby, served and filed herewith, and upon memoranda of law and points and authorities served and filed herewith, and upon such other documents, memoranda, affidavits, evidence and presentments as defendant may make.

Wherefore, defendant Harry Renton Bridges moves the Court that this indictment and the first and second counts thereof be forthwith dismissed.

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

MOTION OF HENRY SCHMIDT TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT AND THE FIRST AND THIRD COUNTS THEREOF

To the Honorable Michael J. Roche, Judge of the Above-Entitled Court:

Comes now Henry Schmidt, one of the defendants herein, by his counsel Richard Gladstein, Esq., per George R. Andersen, Esq.; Herbert Resner, Esq.; Norman Leonard, Esq., and Irvin Goodman, Esq., and moves the above-entitled Court for its order dismissing the indictment herein and the first and third counts thereof, upon each and all of the grounds hereinafter set forth:

I.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment Statute of Limitations

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof is barred and tolled, and the Court is entirely without jurisdiction, by the operation of the statute of limitations, namely, Title 18 U.S.C. §3282, since the indictment and the first and third counts thereof were not found within three years next after the alleged offenses were committed.

II.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment Due Process of Law

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty and property without due process of law, and it is unfair, arbitrary, unreasonable, capricious, a perversion of justice, and a persecution of this defendant and the labor union, namely, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, of which he is an International Representative, and its members, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that the present prosecution is the fifth in a series of such proceedings against an officer of said labor union, one of defendant Henry Schmidt's co-defendants, to wit, defendant Harry Renton Bridges, all based upon the same charges and alleged evidence, and which proceeding has been instituted against this defendant as well as against said defendant's co-defendant Bridges, as have been the four prior proceedings, because this defendant and the said co-defendant Bridges are effective labor leaders and have dared to exercise the freedom that belongs to them as human beings and that is guaranteed to them by the Constitution of the United States.

The affidavits of the defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

III.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Estoppel

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives him of life, liberty and property without due process of law, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the conduct of the plaintiff in this cause estopped it from proceeding herein and from prosecuting this defendant under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof in that the plaintiff agreed, consented and admitted to the naturalization as a citizen of the United States of this defendant's co-defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, which naturalization proceedings are the basis for this prosecution and indictment, and at the time of said naturalization proceedings the plaintiff had in its possession full knowledge of all of this defendant's co-defendant Bridges' activities for the entire period of time covered by this indictment, and with said knowledge the plaintiff stated in open court at said time that it had no objection that this defendant's co-defendant Bridges be and thereupon he was naturalized; and, further, in that the plaintiff agreed, consented and stated in open court that this defendant was a satisfactory witness at the hearing of the naturalization proceedings of this defendant's co-defendant Bridges, which naturalization proceedings are the basis for this prosecution and indictment, and further stated in open court at the said hearing that it had no further questions to ask of this defendant.

The affidavits of the defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

IV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Failure to Rely

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the plaintiff did not and could not have relied upon any alleged false statements and misrepresentations of this defendant himself or this defendant's co-defendant Bridges claimed to have been made at the time of the latter's naturalization since there had been four prior, separate and distinct proceedings in which the plaintiff had the full and complete opportunity to, and it did, inquire into the subject matter of the said alleged false statements and misrepresentations.

The affidavits of the defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

V.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Liberty of Expression and Action

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives the defendant Schmidt of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and invades and deprives him of his rights of freedom of speech, press, assembly, petition and opinion contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that said indictment was found and the prosecution of the defendant Schmidt thereunder is being conducted because of his labor union activities, and said indictment was found and said prosecution is being conducted by plaintiff for the purpose of harassing, intimidating and silencing defendant Schmidt in his labor union activities and in the expression of his opinions and beliefs in connection therewith.

The defendant Schmidt's affidavit, the defendant Bridges' affidavit, and the defendant Robertson's affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

VI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Bad Faith

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof constitutes a deprivation of defendant Schmidt's life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the said indictment and the first and third counts thereof was found and the prosecution of the defendant Schmidt is being conducted thereunder in bad faith and for ulterior purposes and not for the purpose of enforcing the naturalization or any other laws of the United States.

The defendant Schmidt's affidavit, the defendant Bridges' affidavit, and the defendant Robertson's affidavit, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

VII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Misconduct of Prosecution

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under this indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives defendant Schmidt of his life, liberty or property without due process of law contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that the plaintiff has been guilty of prejudicial misconduct upon the basis of which it obtained a return of this indictment and is proceeding with the prosecution in the following respects:

1. The plaintiff has offered improper inducements to witnesses to testify against defendant Schmidt.

2. The plaintiff has utilized illegal methods to obtain evidence against defendant Schmidt.

3. The plaintiff created an atmosphere of hysteria before the Grand Jury which found the indictment, and said indictment was returned upon the basis of bias and prejudice as a result thereof.

4. The prosecution improperly swore witnesses before the Grand Jury which found this indictment to secrecy in violation of Rule 6(e) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts.

5. The Attorney General of the United States, under whose direction this indictment was found and this prosecution undertaken, has made prejudicial statements against defendant Schmidt, and has admitted the defendant Schmidt is being prosecuted because of his labor activities.

6. The plaintiff's attorneys improperly, prejudically, and without basis impugned activities of counsel for defendant Schmidt.

7. The plaintiff has engaged in public activities and statements, creating an atmosphere of hysteria, unfairness, bias and prejudice against defendant Schmidt rendering an impartial trial of said defendant impossible.

The affidavits of defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, and of Herbert Resner and Harold M. Sawyer, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

VIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Illegally Obtained Evidence.

The indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt is without authority in law and said indictment and the first and third counts thereof are void and of no legal effect whatsoever in that the evidence which was presented to the Grand Jury which returned said indictment and the first and third counts thereof was illegally secured, obtained and presented by representatives or agents of the plaintiff herein, contrary to and in violation of the rights of the defendant Schmidt as guaranteed to him by the First, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and contrary to the provisions of the Federal Communications Act (47 USC §605).

The affidavits of the defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

IX.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Due Process of Law
Incompetent, Illegal or Insufficient Evidence Before the Grand Jury

The prosecution of the defendant Henry Schmidt under the indictment and the first and third counts thereof deprives him of his life, liberty or property without due process of law and is unfair, arbitrary, unreasonable, capricious, a perversion of justice and and a persecution of this defendant, contrary to and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that no legal or competent evidence was or could have been presented to the Grand Jury which found said indictment in support of the allegations of the said indictment or the first or third counts thereof, or which justified or sustained or could have justified or sustained said Grand Jury in returning the said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against this defendant.

The affidavits of the defendants Schmidt, Bridges and Robertson, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

X.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Unauthorized Persons in the Grand Jury Room

The indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt is void and of no legal force or effect whatsoever and the present prosecution is without authority in and is contrary to law, in that during the time that the plaintiff presented alleged evidence to the Grand Jury which found this indictment and upon the basis of which this indictment was returned there were persons not authorized by law present before said Grand Jury and during its sessions, contrary to and in violation of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for United States District Courts.

The affidavits of Roy A. Pyle and Frank Slaby, filed concurrently herewith, pursuant to Rule 47, Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, are made a part hereof in their entirety by reference hereto.

XI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State An Offense

The said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt, do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States.

XII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Fraud

The said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States in that it does not appear from the said indictment or the first and third counts thereof how or in what manner the statements, representations and conduct alleged therein to have been made and done by the defendant Schmidt did defraud or could have defrauded the United States, or constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States.

XIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Materiality

The said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that it does not appear from the said indictment and the first and third counts thereof how or in what manner the statements, representations and conduct therein alleged to have been made and done by this defendant were or could be material to the naturalization proceedings therein referred to.

XIV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
No Reliance by Plaintiff

The said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that it does not appear from the said indictment or the first or third counts thereof how or in what manner the plaintiff relied or could have relied upon the statements, representations and conduct therein alleged to have been made and done by said defendant.

XV.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
Essential Elements or Ingredients Not Alleged

The said indictment and the first and third counts thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt do not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense or offenses against the United States, in that said indictment or the first or third counts thereof do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness, and certainty every essential element or ingredient of the offenses charged so as to enable defendant Schmidt to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XVI.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
An Essential Element or Ingredient Not Alleged in Count 1

The said indictment and Count 1 thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "on or about October 1, 1945, and for some time prior thereto, the exact time being to the Grand Jury unknown," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Schmidt to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XVII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
A Second Essential Element or Ingredient Not Alleged in Count 1

The said indictment and Count 1 thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Schmidt to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XVIII.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Failure to State an Offense
An Essential Element or Ingredient
Not Alleged in Count 3

That said indictment and Count 3 thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States in that the allegations of said count "from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945," do not set forth with sufficient clearness, precision, definiteness and certainty an essential element or ingredient of the offense charged so as to enable the defendant Schmidt to prepare his defense and to permit him to assert the judgment in bar of a subsequent prosecution.

XIX.

Motion to Dismiss Indictment
Statute Repealed

Said indictment and Count 3 thereof against the defendant Henry Schmidt are based upon a statute; namely, 8 U.S.C. §746(5), which has been repealed by C. 645, 80th Congress, Second Session, Public Law 772, §21.

This motion and the various parts thereof is based upon all of the files, records, papers and proceedings in the above-entitled cause, the affidavits of Henry Schmidt, Harry Renton Bridges, J. R. Robertson, Herbert Resner, Harold M. Sawyer, Roy A. Pyle and Frank Slaby, served and filed herewith, and upon memoranda of law and points and authorities served and filed herewith, and upon such other documents, memoranda, affidavits, evidence and presentments as defendant may make.

Wherefore, defendant Henry Schmidt moves the Court that this indictment and the first and third counts thereof be forthwith dismissed.

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

AFFIDAVIT OF HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

Territory of Hawaii,
City and County of Honolulu—ss.

Harry Renton Bridges, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am one of the defendants above named. I am also the President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, a labor organization whose membership of approximately 70,000 consists primarily of workers in the longshoring, warehousing and allied industries on the Pacific Coast of the United States and in the Territory of Hawaii. My co-defendant R. J. Robertson is also an officer of that union; he is its First Vice-President. My co-defendant Henry Schmidt is presently International Representative of that union. I am executing this affidavit in Hawaii because I am on this date in Hawaii in connection with union affairs pursuant to permission granted to me by the Court to remain outside of its jurisdiction until September 15, 1949.

I.

My personal history insofar as it is material to this case is reviewed in part in the report of the Hon. James M. Landis which was returned in 1939 after the first deportation proceeding in which I was involved—a report which I understand my attorneys in this case have already filed with the Court. I refer the Court to that report.

Briefly, however, I should like to state for the Court's information that my legal entry into the United States occurred in 1920 when I was approximately nineteen years old. After some intermittent employment as a seaman, I settled down in San Francisco in 1922 or 1923 and after a while commenced to work as a longshoreman on the San Francisco waterfront. I continued to earn my living in this way and so far as I know I was indistinguishable from the other thousands of longshoremen who worked on the San Francisco waterfront until 1934. During this period of time, so far as I know, I was not the subject of any particular inquiry or investigation on the part of the Government or any of its branches or agencies.

As the Court knows, there was a longshoremen's strike which commenced in May, 1934, and which was then extended to other waterfront and maritime groupings. I was elected chairman of the Joint Strike Committee and played an active role in the leadership of the strike. Thereafter I was elected President of the longshoremen's local in San Francisco and subsequently I became President of the Pacific Coast District of the International Longshoremen's Association, the labor organization with which the longshoremen were then affiliated, and still later I became, and still am, the President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. I am now, and have been for many years, a member of the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. In addition, during the period from 1934 to the present

I have had official positions in other labor organizations such as the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

It was shortly after I became chairman of the Joint Strike Committee during the 1934 waterfront strike in San Francisco that the Government and its various agencies and agents undertook an investigation of me, my political beliefs, affiliations, memberships, and so forth. That investigation, as the public records to which I will refer in a moment show, has been one continuous, unremitting thing.

The forces behind that investigation which rapidly took the form of a persecution, prosecution and harassment, were the forces which stood to lose by the attacks which the longshoremen under my leadership were making upon what the judges of the Circuit Court of this Circuit described when my case was before them in 1944 as the "most vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen" (Bridges v. Wixon, 144 F. 2d at 938). Prior to the 1934 strike the longshoremen's wages were 85c an hour; it was necessary for longshoremen to "shape up" several times a day in order to obtain employment (that is to say, it was necessary for them to congregate around the pier-heads or the employment offices of the various stevedoring employers and bid against each other for what jobs were available); under such a system it is obvious that there would be and there was much discrimination, favoritism, so-called "kick-backs" in which men actually paid straw-bosses and foremen for the privilege of working; there was no such thing for longshoremen as paid vacations or compulsory safety codes, limitations on the size of loads, scheduled days off, or any of the decent working conditions which we now think of as normally appurtenant to the American working man's job.

As a result of the struggles of the longshoremen's union under my leadership throughout the years, vast improvements in working conditions have been obtained. We succeeded as a result of the 1934 strike in abolishing the "shape up" and it became possible for longshoremen to be dispatched to their employment through a centralized hiring hall in which work was rotated and equalized insofar as possible and in which there was no discrimination against longshoremen because of race, color, creed or national origin, and in which "kick-backs" and favoritism were eliminated. During the years since 1934 we have succeeded in obtaining for longshoremen vacations with pay, the arbitration of grievances, a compulsory safety code, limitations on the size and weight of loads thereby reducing the number of accidents and deaths suffered by longshoremen on the job. We have also been able to obtain a scheduled day off for longshoremen so that despite the continuous nature of the operation, a longshoreman can know in advance when his day off will be and plan to have a decent kind of social life with his family.

On the wage front alone we have made impressive gains. In 1933 longshoremen were earning 75c an hour; prior to the 1934 strike they were earning 85c an hour; as a result of the award of the Longshore Board which terminated the strike in 1934 they were earning 95c an hour.

In February, 1941, their wages went up to $1.00 an hour.

In February, 1942, their wages went up to $1.10 an hour.

In October, 1944, their wages went up to $1.15 an hour.

In October, 1945, their wages went up to $1.37 an hour.

In November, 1946, their wages went up to $1.52 an hour.

In January, 1947, their wages went up to $1.57 an hour.

In February, 1948, their wages went up to $1.67 an hour.

In December, 1948, their wages went up to $1.82 an hour, which is the present straight-time wage rate for longshoremen.

Of course, since the end of the 1934 strike, longshoremen have enjoyed a six-hour work day so that their actual hourly earnings since 1934 are really greater than what is reflected by the foregoing figures.

As I have said, as a result of my assuming the leadership of the longshoremen in this long struggle to improve their conditions, I found myself the target of a tremendous campaign against me. Seizing upon the technical excuse of my alienage, the campaign took the form of a campaign to deport me. If I had not been an alien, I suppose some other approach would have been taken by those who resisted at every step the efforts the union under my leadership was making to improve the working conditions of the longshoremen.

II.

In 1934 and 1935, while the strike was still on, or almost immediately after its conclusion, an investigation of me was conducted by the District Director of Immigration and Naturalization in San Francisco. As a result of the investigation, the District Director reported to the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization as follows:

> "The investigation of the alien referred to above has failed to show that he is in any manner connected with the Communist Party, or with any radical organization.
> "The Crime Prevention Detail of the local police department, comprising eleven officers and the Captain of Police in charge, one of whose chief duties is to investigate activities of radicals and of leaders of the Communist Party in particular, have likewise been unable to date to obtain any evidence that the alien has ever been a member of the Communist Party or in any manner directly affiliated therewith, or a member of any radical organization.
> "In discharging the duties of my detail at the city prison in investigations of aliens arrested and charged with crime, and of aliens arrested and charged with Communistic or radical activities, I have maintained a very > close contact with the Crime Prevention Detail from a period long antedating the general strike in S. F. until the present date. I, therefore, know that the officers of said detail have made constant effort to obtain evidence that would in any way connect the alien with radical organizations, or show his membership therein, but with the result heretofore set forth."

This report is contained in a "Memorandum for the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization" prepared in 1936 by W. W. Brown, Legal Advisor; Thomas S. Finucane, member of Board of Review, and Joseph Savoretti, Chief Examiner, Legal Branch. In addition to the report of the District Director of Immigration and Naturalization in San Francisco, California, Messrs. Brown, Finucane and Savoretti further reported:

> "It was reported to the District Director at S. F. that Bridges was implicated in the criminal destruction of a railroad bridge in Australia prior to his arrival in the U. S. and that he had a criminal record in Australia. If true, this would make him deportable. The report was investigated at the request of this service by the American Consul in Melbourne, Australia, who, under date of November 5, 1934, reported that the police authorities at Melbourne had no record of Bridges.
> "It was also reported that Harry Bridges was identical with one Harold Harvey, a known Communist, whose activities were referred to > in the Fish Committee hearings, but when Bridges' thumbprint, obtained from seamen's identification cards, was compared with the corresponding thumbprint of Harold Harvey, on file in the Bureau of Identification of the New Orleans Police Department, it was established that Harold Harvey and Harry Bridges were two entirely different individuals.

> "A report that Harry Bridges had recently visited Canada was also carefully investigated, as he would be deportable if he had reentered the U. S. without examination. No evidence of this alleged visit to Canada was found, but it was discovered that he had apparently been impersonated there on one occasion by an individual bearing some slight resemblance to Bridges, who sought to cash in on the latter's notoriety.
> "In short, whenever any legal ground for the deportation of Bridges has been brought to the attention of the Department of Labor, it has been investigated but, invariably, it has been found that he was in the clear, and that his status as an immigrant was entirely regular."

After this administrative investigation which completely cleared me of charges that I was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party, there was another investigation which inquired into the same subject matter conducted by George D. Reilly, then Solicitor of the Department of Labor under the jurisdiction of which the Immigration and Naturalization Service at that time came. During the course of said investigation, I was sworn by Mr. Reilly and on October 18, 1937, testified under oath as follows:

> Q. Were you—or are you—a member of the Communist Party? A. No.
> Q. Are you a member of any organization or society which believes or teaches or publishes matters teaching or advocating the overthrow of the Government by force? A. No.
> Q. Do you yourself believe or advocate such doctrines? A. No.

As a result of this investigation, no action was taken by the Department of Labor against me.

Despite the fact that these two investigations had cleared me of charges that I was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party, the Secretary of Labor in 1938 issued a warrant which was amended in 1939 for my arrest with a view to my deportation, upon the ground that I was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States. A true and correct copy of this warrant of arrest reads as follows:

"Warrant
For Arrest of Alien
United States of America
Department of Labor
Washington

"55973/217

"To District Director of Immigration and Naturalization, Baltimore, Maryland, or to any Immigrant Inspector in the service of the United States.

"Whereas, from evidence submitted to me, it appears that the alien Alfred Renton Bryant Bridges alias Harry Renton Bridges alias Harry Dorgan alias Canfield alias Rossi, who entered this country at San Francisco, California, ex SS 'Ysabel,' on the 12th day of April, 1920, has been found in the United States in violation of the immigration laws thereof, and is subject to be taken into custody and deported pursuant to the following provisions of law, and for the following reasons, to wit: The Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Act of June 5, 1920:

"(a) In that after he entered the United States he became and now is a member of an organization, association, society and group that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

"(b) In that after he entered the United States he became and now is affiliated with an organization, association, society and group that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

"(c) In that after he entered the United States he became and now is a member of an organization, association, society and group that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published and displayed printed matter advising, advocating and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States;

"(d) In that after he entered the United States he became and now is affiliated with an organization, association, society and group that causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published and displayed printed matter advising, advocating and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States.

"I, by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the laws of the United States hereby command you to take into custody the said alien and grant him a hearing to enable him to show cause why he should not be deported in conformity with law. The expenses of detention, hereunder, if necessary, are authorized payable from the appropriation 'Salaries and Expenses, Immigration and Naturalization Service, 1938.' Pending further proceedings the alien may be released from custody upon his own recognizance.

"For so doing, this shall be your sufficient warrant.

"/s/ TURNER W. BATTLE,

"TURNER W. BATTLE,
"Assistant to the Secretary of Labor.

"Amended and reissued this 12th day of June, 1939."

In partial response to a request for a bill of particulars filed by my attorneys in that proceeding, the Government replied that the organization referred to in the warrant was the Communist Party of the United States of America.

Thereafter, pursuant to this warrant, a hearing on the issues raised by it was held before the Hon. James M. Landis, duly designated as Trial Examiner in the case by the Secretary of Labor. The hearing commenced on the 10th day of July, 1939, and the taking of testimony was concluded on the 14th day of September, 1939. The stenographic transcript of the hearing comprises 7724 pages; 138 exhibits were introduced on behalf of the Government, and 136 were introduced on my behalf. A total of 60 witnesses were sworn and appeared. The issues of the case were therefore exhaustively litigated.

During the course of the hearing, while under examination by Government counsel on July 10, 1939, I testified under oath as follows:

> Q. Are you now a member of the Communist Party? A. No.
> Q. Or have you at any other time in the past been a member of the Communist Party?
> A. No. (P. 11)

Again, during the course of the hearing, while under examination by Government counsel on August 2, 1939, I testified under oath as follows:

> Q. Do you belong to any organizations whatsoever in this country outside of the Longshoremen's Association? A. No.
> Q. None whatsoever?
> A. None whatsoever. (P. 2465)

Subsequently, on the same day and under the same circumstances and still under oath, I testified as follows:

> Q. Have you ever been a member of a Communist Fraction?
> A. I believe you have to be a member of the Party to be a member of the Fraction, and I have not. (P. 2490)

During the course of said proceeding the Government produced many witnesses who testified in support of its contention that I was a member of the Communist Party.

After the taking of testimony had been concluded, an opportunity was afforded to both the Government and my attorneys to file briefs on the questions of fact and law which were raised by the amended warrant and the evidence adduced by both sides in relation to those issues, and such briefs were filed. Upon a full and complete consideration of the entire record and the briefs filed, the Trial Examiner, the Hon. James M. Landis, did on the 28th day of December, 1939, transmit to the Secretary of Labor his findings and conclusions on the matter before him. The findings and conclusions, a true and correct copy of which, as I have said, my attorneys have already filed with the Court in this proceeding, comprise a printed bulletin of 150 pages. They represent, as an examination of them will show, a careful and considered evaluation of the testimony adduced and of the points of law involved by a truly competent and discerning examiner. The conclusion of the Hon. James M. Landis reads as follows:

> "The evidence therefore establishes neither that Harry R. Bridges is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States of America."

The Secretary of Labor approved the findings of Dean Landis and his conclusion, and canceled the warrant of deportation.

One would have thought, and I did, that with two investigations and one completely exhaustive hearing, exonerating me of membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party of the United States, the "case of Harry Bridges" would have been closed.

However, Dean Landis' decision only led to demands that the deportation laws be changed to make certain that I would be deported. A special bill was introduced and actually passed the House of Representatives directing the Attorney General forthwith to take me into custody and deport me "notwithstanding any other provisions of law" (H.R. 9766, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess.). This bill died in a Senate committee after Mr. Justice (then Attorney General) Jackson denounced it as inconsistent with the American practice and tradition of due process of law (S. Rep. 2031, 76th Cong., 3rd Sess., p. 9).

Thereupon Congress amended the deportation law, overturning a Supreme Court decision (Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22, 283 L.Ed. 1082, 59 S. Ct. 694 [1939]) in the process, so that it might be possible to proceed against me again. The author of the amendment did not conceal his purpose. He said:

> "It is my joy to announce that this bill will do, in a perfectly legal and constitutional manner, what the bill specifically aimed at the deportation of Harry Bridges seeks to accomplish. This bill changes the law so that the Department of Justice should now have little trouble in deporting Harry Bridges and all others of similar ilk." (76th Cong. Rec. 9031.)

The prophecy was quickly realized and the new Attorney General, Francis Biddle, directed the Federal Bureau of Investigation to reopen the "Bridges case" and after having received a report of that agency, a report which incidentally impugned the judicial integrity of the Hon. James M. Landis, issued a new warrant for my arrest and deportation upon substantially the same grounds as had been set forth in the earlier warrant. This occurred just a little over a year after the Secretary of Labor had canceled the warrant of deportation as a result of the Landis findings and conclusion.

The warrant of 1941 reads as follows:

"Warrant
For Arrest of Alien
United States of America
Department of Justice

"No. 55973/217

"To District Director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, San Francisco, Calif. Or to any Immigrant Inspector in the service of the United States.

"Whereas, from evidence submitted to me, it appears that the alien

"Alfred Renton Bryant Bridges or Harry Renton Bridges, who entered this country at San Francisco, California, on the 12th day of April, 1920, has been found in the United States in violation of the immigration laws thereof, and is subject to be taken into custody and deported pursuant to the following provisions of law, and for the following reasons, to wit: The Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the Acts of June 5, 1920, and June 28, 1940, in that after entering the United States he has been a member of or affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States; that, after entering the United States he has been a member of or affiliated with an organization, association, society, or group that writes, circulates, distributes, prints, publishes, or displays, or causes to be written, circulated, distributed, printed, published or displayed, or that has in its possession for the purpose of circulation, distribution, publication, issue or display, written or printed matter advising, advocating, or teaching the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States.

"I, by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the laws of the United States, hereby command you to take into custody the said alien and grant him a hearing to enable him to show cause why he should not be deported in conformity with law. The expenses of detention, hereunder, if necessary, are authorized payable from the appropriation 'General Expenses, Immigration and Naturalization Service, 1941.' Pending further proceedings the alien may be released under bond in the sum of $3,000.

"For so doing, this shall be your sufficient warrant.

"Witness my hand and seal this 12th day of February, 1941.

"W. W. BROWN,
"Chief, Warrant Branch."

Membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party constituted the conduct claimed by the Government in the second proceedings as the ground for deportation.

Government counsel (Clarence N. Goodwin) in his opening statement made that clear. He said:

> "A ground on which the Government demands the deportation of the alien is that after entering the United States he has been a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party . . . " (P. 32)
> "The evidence will show that . . . the Communist Party sought and obtained the membership, affiliation, cooperation and aid of the alien whose case is now being heard." (P. 39-40)
> "We will further show that subsequently he became a member of and became affiliated with the Community Party . . ." (P. 40)

Pursuant to the warrant, a hearing on the issues raised was held before the Hon. Charles B. Sears, duly designated as Presiding Inspector in the said cause by the Attorney General. The hearing commenced on the 31st day of March, 1941, and the taking of testimony concluded on the 12th day of July, 1941. The stenographic transcript of the hearing comprises 7546 pages; 297 exhibits were introduced on behalf of the Government, and 62 were introduced on my behalf. A total of 63 witnesses were sworn and appeared, only two of whom were witnesses at the 1939 hearing before the Hon. James M. Landis, and both of whom had on both occasions appeared on my behalf.

The issue of my membership in the Communist Party was one of the issues on which evidence was submitted. All of the issues raised by the warrant were exhaustively litigated. After the taking of testimony had been concluded, an opportunity was afforded to both the Government and to my attorneys to file briefs on the questions of fact and law which were raised by the warrant and the evidence adduced by both sides, and such briefs were filed.

Thus it appears as a matter of record that not only had two investigations exonerated me of charges that I was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party, but that two full-dress hearings occurred in which this issue was litigated. Together, those hearings consumed in point of time a period of almost six months; the total stenographic record ran to a total of 15,270 pages; the total number of exhibits introduced was 663; and the total number of witnesses sworn and testifying was 122.

Thus it appears that the simple question of my membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party has been subjected to the most exhaustive kind of litigation one could imagine.

The litigation which was instituted by the issuance of the warrant of arrest in 1941 was finally determined by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1945 (Bridges v. Wixon, 326 U. S. 135, 89 Ed. 2103, 65 S. Ct. 1443). The stages of the proceeding which intervened from the time of the hearing before the Hon. Charles B. Sears to the decision of the Supreme Court were succinctly summarized by Mr. Justice Douglas, speaking for that Court:

> "The inspector designated to conduct the hearings and make a report, Hon. Charles B. Sears, found . . . that after entering this country Harry Bridges had been affiliated with both organizations [the Communist Party and the Marine Workers Industrial Union] and had been a member of the Communist Party. He recommended deportation. The case was heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals which found that Harry Bridges had not been a member of or affiliated with either of those organizations at any time after he entered this country. The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board and rendered an opinion in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by the inspector and ordered Harry Bridges to be deported. A warrant of deportation was issued. Harry Bridges sur> rendered himself to the custody of respondent and challenged the legality of his detention by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California. That court denied the petition and remanded petitioner to the custody of respondent. 49 F.Supp. 292. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed by a divided vote. 144 F.(2d) 927, 944. The case is here on a petition for a writ of certiorari which we granted because of the serious character of the questions here presented." (326 U. S. 139-140.)

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals which had affirmed the District Court's denial of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus, and said:

> "Since Harry Bridges has been ordered deported on a misconstruction of the term 'affiliation' as used in the statute and by reason of an unfair hearing on the question of his membership in the Communist Party, his detention under the warrant is unlawful." (326 U. S. 156.)

III.

The nature and character of the case adduced by the Government in these prior proceedings is illustrated by the observations of the various administrative and judicial officers who have had occasion to pass upon it. The report of Dean Landis speaks for itself. In his letter of transmittal to the Secretary of Labor, he stated his conviction with respect to the Government's case as follows:

> "What is paraded as truth bears the unmistakable marks of falsehood." (iii)

This conviction of Dean Landis is amply borne out by the record before him. It is an inescapable conclusion from the analysis which he makes of the key government witnesses in that case.

Of the first witness who was sworn on behalf of the Government (Laurence A. Milner), the Trial Examiner concluded that he was a man "who has no regard for an oath," and that he could best be dismissed as a "self-confessed liar, a man who has admittedly tried twice—once successfully—to make falsehood parade as truth." (pp. 17, 19)

With respect to another Government witness (Aaron Sapiro), the Dean characterized him as a "disbarred and repudiated attorney" to whom "truth matters little." (pp. 86, 87)

Of Miles Humphries, a Government witness, the Dean concluded that his testimony was "a morass of prevarication." (p. 89) He also stated with respect to this witness that his "tendency toward prevarication was almost pathological." (p. 110)

With respect to the Government's witness James W. Engstrom, the Trial Examiner concluded that he "left a convincing impression that he was not telling the truth." (p. 110)

Of another witness produced by the Government, Ida Castor, the Trial Examiner found that "Her testimony . . . is both contradictory and meaningless;" that she became involved "in a series of amazing contradictions and impossible situations;" and that "further efforts at prevarication took place which simply involved [her] more deeply in the pit that she had dug for herself." (p. 116)

The foregoing is not a complete or exhaustive listing of the witnesses whose testimony was found by the Trial Examiner, appointed by the Secretary of Labor, to be totally unworthy of belief. It is illustrative, however, of the nature and character of the persons from whom the Government sought to adduce testimony to establish its contention that I was a member of, or affiliated with, the Communist Party.

More significant than all of the foregoing is another facet of the case which was developed against me in the hearing before Dean Landis. That is the impropriety of the conduct of the Government officials in charge of the preparation of the case. The record revealed that responsible Government officials sought by means of improper inducements to procure certain testimony to establish that I was a member of the Communist Party with knowledge that the testimony sought was false.

After detailing the evidence which shows that a responsible Government officer suggested that false testimony might result in the release of innocent prisoners at San Quentin, and after noting that the Government made no effort whatsoever to deny, meet or explain this testimony, the Dean said:

> "The extraordinary nature, to say the least, of this conduct is patent . . . no one would > question the impropriety of a Government official threatening to throw an innocent man in jail on a groundless charge unless he produced certain testimony. There is little substantial distinction between such conduct and that here involved—withholding action that might release an assumedly innocent man from jail unless he produced certain testimony." (p. 73)

The nature and character of the case against me in the proceedings before Judge Sears was substantially the same. The Attorney General's Board of Immigration Appeals which reviewed the record in the proceedings, commented that the Presiding Inspector's rejection of the testimony of most of the Government's witnesses was "more than justified" and added:

> It is unnecessary to detail here the patent contradictions and extreme improbabilities which riddle the testimony of Richard A. St. Clair; nor need we recreate the atmosphere of complete unreliability which the cold words of the record eloquently convey. The tortuous convolutions of Maurice J. Cannalonga's testimony rendered it worthless on its face. No consideration need be given to the suggestion of improper conduct on the part of the F.B.I. in coercing him into appearing. That he lied freely is evident; and if it were not, his story was confused and unimpressive to a degree which would have rendered it valueless had there been no cross-examination or subsequent impeachment. William C. McCuistion appears in a light scarcely more favorable. The episode to which he and Innes testified contained initially strong elements of the improbable. His testimony as to how and where he met Bridges varied. He attempted to bolster it by connecting it with an alleged attempt on Bridges' part to "get" Lundeberg at a time when the record shows Bridges and Lundeberg were on terms of friendship and mutual cooperation. And, finally, his testimony is replete with statements which suggest a mental state bordering on egomania. Indeed, although there are other adequate grounds, one of the strongest factors tending to discredit Peter J. Innes, another witness, is the fact that his testimony dovetails so perfectly with that of McCuistion. Neither is worthy of credence. John C. Thompson is another discredited witness whose testimony merits no analysis here. Insofar as Ezra Chase and the Lovelaces gave testimony requiring comment, they are discussed below on the point of affiliation. Nathaniel Honig's testimony presents a slightly more complex problem. Whether other Service witnesses testified only to isolated Communist meetings at which they claimed to have seen Bridges, Honig remembered at least sixteen. He did not, however, remember the address or the name of the owner of any of the homes where they took place, apparently because he was instructed to forget them (1462). He also remembered little or > nothing specific which occurred at them. He was the only witness whom Bridges might have been expected to remember, had they had the alleged contacts, but whom he denied ever having met. The Alien's testimony on this point was corroborated by Schmidt. The evidence of Amos Kelley, Thomas Laurence and Sam Diner presents no elements worthy of mention here beyond those detailed by the Presiding Inspector:" (In re Harry Renton Bridges, Before the Board of Immigration Appeals, in Deportation Proceedings, Jan. 3, 1942, pp. 5-6.)

Of Diner, the Presiding Inspector himself had said:

> "Diner was not an impressive witness. His story as to the Trade Union Meeting, where he was removed from office, is not convincing. We have the fact that he made threats of bodily harm, found in the proceeding under which he was bound over to keep the peace." (In the Matter of Harry Renton Bridges, Memorandum of Decision, Sept. 26, 1941, pp. 140-141.)

After the hearing before Judge Sears was concluded I went to New York on union business. While there I discovered that the telephone in my hotel room was being tapped by FBI agents. My attorneys thereupon directed a motion to Judge Sears calling this matter to his attention. This motion was supported by the following affidavits which I am submitting here as exhibits:

Harry Bridges, Aug. 29, 1941, Exhibit "A."

Leon Goodelman, Aug. 28, 1941, Exhibit "B."

Lawrence Kemmet, Sept. 2, 1941, Exhibit "C."

Virginia Gardner, Sept. 2, 1941, Exhibit "D."

Carol King, Sept. 2, 1941, Exhibit "E."

In disposing of the said motion the Hon. Charles B. Sears said as follows:

> "To understand the motion, it is not necessary to detail the facts contained in the original affidavits. Suffice it to say that there is enough in them to show that telephone wires in the room of Harry Bridges in the Edison Hotel in New York City, having interstate connections, were tapped by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation from August 5, 1941, to August 22, 1941, so that communications by telephone were intercepted and heard by agents of the F.B.I. The affidavits show a violation of Section 605 of the Federal Communications Act (47 U.S.C. Section 605), during the period mentioned.
> "Evidence obtained directly or indirectly by such procedure, by Government Agents, cannot be received in the United States Courts of justice; Nardone v. United States, 308 U. S. 338; Nardone v. United States, 302 U. S. 379; Olmstead v. United States, 277 U. S. 438. The same rule should, in my opinion, be applied in administrative proceedings such as this. The rule of procedure upon which the alien relies is stated thus, in the opinion of Mr. Justice Frankfurter in Nardone v. United States, 308 U. S. 338, 341. 'The burden is, of course, on the accused in the first instance to prove to the trial court's satisfaction that wire tapping was unlawfully employed. Once that is established * * * the trial judge must give opportunity, however closely confined, to the accused to prove that a substantial portion of the case against him was a fruit of the poisonous tree.'

"The hearing in this case was closed on June 12, 1941, and the evidence was then complete. More than a month and a half elapsed before wiretapping occurred.

"It is self-evidence that the wiretapping referred to as occurring in August could have had no relation to evidence offered or received at the preceding hearing."

IV.

As the Supreme Court's summary of the subsequent proceedings in the Sears hearing shows, the District Court's denial of the writ of habeas corpus was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit by a divided Court (114 F. 2d 927). The vote of the Court was three to two, with Judges Healey and Garrecht dissenting, and with Judge Stephens, who joined with the majority, stating in a concurring opinion that his careful attention to the evidence in the case had not left in his mind "the pleasurable satisfaction that . . . the truth has been revealed." Judge Stephens furthermore was authorized to state that Judges

Wilbur and Matthews (the other Judges who constituted the majority) were in agreement with this expression. (144 F. 2d 938.)

Judge Healey, writing for himself and Judge Garrecht, analyzed the evidence carefully and concluded his dissenting opinion by saying:

> "Rather than deport the alien on evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without hestitation by any American Court, it would seem a more forthright procedure to do what was proposed in the first place, deport him by legislative resolution 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law.'
> "I think the judgment should be reversed with directions to grant the petition." (144 F. 2d 943-4.)

Thus it appears that two of the five Judges of the Circuit Court were satisfied that the evidence aduced against me would have been "condemned and proscribed in any American Court." It is also clear that all five of the Judges of the Circuit Court were not satisfied that the truth was revealed in the record upon which the finding of Communist Party membership had been made by the Attorney General, but that for technical reasons only, three of them felt that they had to affirm.

As indicated, the Supreme Court reversed the lower tribunals. It found that there had been a misconstruction of a portion of the statute and that there had been an unfair trial on one of the issues. In a concurring opinion, the late Mr. Justice Murphy said:

> "The record in this case will stand forever as a monument to man's intolerance of man. Seldom if ever in the history of this nation has there been such a concentrated and relentless crusade to deport an individual because he dared to exercise the freedom that belongs to him as a human being and that is guaranteed to him by the Constitution."

In Mr. Justice Murphy's concurring opinion he analyzes the forces behind the "relentless crusade" against me to which I have referred briefly above and shows that they represent the economic, political and social groupings both in and out of Government which had the most to gain from the exploitation of the longshoremen on the Pacific Coast. He shows that this crusade was pressed irrespective of the violence that it did to our traditional concepts of law simply because I played a role in alleviating to some extent that exploitation.

The Supreme Court's decision exonerating me of the charges that I was affiliated with or a member of the Communist Party was rendered on June 18, 1945. Immediately thereafter I proceeded with the steps necessary to complete my pending application for naturalization. On June 23, 1945, five days after the Supreme Court's decision, I filed my application for certificate of arrival and preliminary form for petition for naturalization, which was witnessed by my co-defendant Schmidt. On August 8, 1945, I appeared before a naturalization examiner and gave testimony in connection with my application for naturalization. On the same day my co-defendants Schmidt and Robertson witnessed my petition for naturalization. On September 17, 1945, all three of us appeared in Judge Foley's court and gave testimony in the naturalization proceedings, and my certificate of naturalization was issued. All of this occurred within three months of the Supreme Court's decision. These are the actions which are the basis for the present indictment against us.

Having investigated me administratively twice, having conducted hearings in connection with the case twice and my case having gone to the Supreme Court of the United States, which exonerated me in June, 1945, the Government interposed no objection to the granting of my naturalization in September, 1945.

I am attaching to this affidavit, marked Exhibit "F," a full, complete, true and correct copy of the "Application for Certificate of Arrival and Preliminary Form for Petition for Naturalization" which was made and executed by me on or about the 23rd day of June, 1945, and I desire to incorporate that document into this affidavit and make it a part of this affidavit.

There is attached hereto and marked Exhibit "G" a full, complete, true and correct copy of the "Petition for Naturalization" which was made and executed by me on or about the 8th day of August, 1945, and I desire to incorporate that document into this affidavit and make it a part of this affidavit.

There is attached hereto and marked Exhibit "H" a full, complete, true and correct copy of the transcript of the testimony taken before the Honorable Thomas J. Foley, Judge of the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the City and County of San Francisco on September 17, 1945, in my naturalization proceedings, and I desire to incorporate that document into this affidavit and make it a part of this affidavit.

The indictment refers to certain conduct on the part of the defendants as having taken place on June 23, 1945. The execution by me and the witnessing by my co-defendant Schmidt of the document marked Exhibit "F" is the action taken by us on June 23, 1945, in connection with the naturalization proceedings.

The indictment refers to certain conduct on the part of the defendants as having taken place on August 8, 1945. The execution by me and the witnessing of my co-defendants Schmidt and Robertson of the document marked Exhibit "G" is the action taken by us on August 8, 1945, in connection with the naturalization proceedings.

The indictment refers to certain action taken by the defendants on September 17, 1945. The testimony given by us, as recorded in Exhibit "H," is the only action taken by us (except that I took my oath of allegiance, too) on September 17, 1945, in connection with the naturalization proceedings.

The Exhibits, "F," "G," and "H" attached to this affidavit show all of the action taken by us in connection with the naturalization proceedings. As appears from these exhibits, the Government at the time of my naturalization, made no objection to the granting of the citizenship.

V.

For the Government now (four years later) to contend that I have all along been a member of the Communist Party and that I and my co-defendants were parties to a conspiracy to defraud the Government because we engaged in the simple routine acts of completing my citizenship application seems to me, in the light of this whole history, to be a continuing of the campaign which has been directed against me throughout all these years. Now that I am a citizen, the forces opposed to me and to the program of my union under my leadership, are not able to utilize a deportation proceeding as the basis for an attack against me and what I have come to represent. So they have developed this new case. As this affidavit and the public records upon which it is based show, the fifteen-year crusade against me has been motivated by the interests which my union has opposed. That this still is the case appears not only from the context in which this case is now placed but from the statements of the chief Government attorney himself, the man who was responsible for the institution of the prosecution against me. The Attorney General of the United States who instituted this prosecution against me and my co-defendants made crystal clear the purpose of this prosecution when, in discussing the present longshoremen's strike in Hawaii, he said in Milwaukee on June 26, 1949:

> "... I think that the case against Bridges has already been of some help in the Hawaii situation.
> "If we are successful in our prosecution of > Bridges . . ., it may be that we can break the Hawaiian situation without any other intervention."

I am attaching to this affidavit, marked Exhibit "I," a full, complete, true and correct photostatic copy of an article to this effect which appeared in the Milwaukee Journal on June 27, 1949. The Court of course already knows that my co-defendant Schmidt is actively participating in the Hawaiian strike on behalf of the longshoremen.

I wish to state to the Court that the Hawaiian strike is a struggle on the part of the Hawaiian longshoremen of the same significance, character and magnitude as was the strike of the Pacific Coast longshoremen in 1934. The nature of the economic interests against which the longshoremen are struggling today in Hawaii is best described in an opinion rendered by three Federal Judges who had occasion to review the situation in Hawaii within the past year and who described in great detail the feudal nature of the Hawaiian employers' economy and their efforts to beat down the aspirations of the workers of Hawaii, many of whom have been organized under the banner of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. That opinion gives possibly more clearly than I could, and from a source which the Court might be more inclined to credit, the picture of the background of the current struggle which the union under my leadership is engaging in in Hawaii today. The opinion is I.L.W.U. vs. Ackerman, 82 F.Supp. 65, and was rendered by Circuit Judge Biggs, District Judge Metzger, and District Judge Harris, one of this Court's colleagues.

When the Attorney General who instituted this prosecution against me and my co-defendants admits that this prosecution "can break the Hawaiian situation," it is perfectly clear that he either wittingly or unwittingly is carrying forward the campaign against me which I have already discussed.

I am not a lawyer but it seems to me that there must be some end to the continuing prosecution and persecution of me because I have tried to be an honest and effective labor leader. My attorneys will argue the legal points involved, but I submit to your Honor that I should not be tried time and again and again on the same issues and for the same reasons and under the same circumstances for which I have heretofore been tried and concerning which I have heretofore been vindicated.

Draft Boards to Aid Men Let Out of Army

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, announced in Washington yesterday that a re-employment program had been worked out for soldiers selectees to be released this fall. The War Department expects to release 200,000 men by Christmas.

The Selective Service Act, Gen. Hershey pointed out, requires employers to restore selectees to their old jobs without loss of seniority unless the employers' circumstances have changed and makes re-hiring impossible.

Gen. Hershey said state Selective Service directors will appoint re-employment committeemen for local boards. These committeemen will get in touch with employers to find out if the soldiers' old jobs are available. If not the committeeman and the State Employment office will both try to find jobs [illegible]

I am the President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, C. I. O., with a membership of some 30,000. My office address is at 593 Market Street, Room 317, San Francisco, California.

On or about the 12th day of February, 1941, a warrant for my arrest was issued by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, and thereafter from the 31st day of March for a period of approximately eleven weeks hearings in connection with these warrant proceedings were conducted in San Francisco, and the matter is now pending decision.

During the months of July and August, 1941, I have been intermittently at the Hotel Edison located at 228 West 47th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York.

Shortly after I began to reside at the Hotel Edison I became suspicious that my actions were being watched and my conversations listened in on. This suspicion became a certainty on or about the 5th day of August, 1941. On that day, in the lobby of the Hotel Edison, I saw a person I recognized as an agent whom I had previously seen on the West Coast. Thereafter I went back to my room, Room 1027, and looked under the door between Room 1027 and the adjoining room, Room 1025, and saw equipment in Room 1025 which I recognized as wiretapping equipment.

Beginning on or about the 21st day of July I had been located at the Hotel Edison in Room 827. On or about July 31st when I returned to the hotel I was assigned to Room 1027. I left the hotel on August 1st, and when I came back on August 4th I asked for a single room, not a room with double beds, and a room higher up. My suspicions were aroused by the fact that I was again assigned to Room 1027 which I stated I did not want.

Shortly after I saw this equipment on the floor, which consisted of earphones, wires, and a portable recording machine. I 'phoned a number of trade unionists with whom I transacted business explaining to them that my wires were being tapped and that confidential information should not be conveyed to me over the telephone.

On or about August 7th or 8th I secured a pair of field glasses and later a pair of binoculars. I thereupon went to the roof of the Hotel Piccadilly, located at 227 West 45th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York, and from there was able to look into Room 1025 of the Hotel Edison. The curtains of Room 1025 were open as were also the windows, and the wiretapping equipment was lying partly on the bed and partly on the floor.

On the following day I rented Room 1231 at the Hotel Picadilly, and with my binoculars I saw three or four persons in Room 1025 of the Hotel Edison. I gave up this Room 1231 in the Piccadilly on or about August 15th.

On or about August 18 Lawrence Kammet rented Room 929 at the Hotel Piccadilly for the use of the newspaper PM. Thereafter Leon Goodman, a reporter for that newspaper and Eugene Badger, a camera man for the same paper, were in the room a large part of the time. Both from Room 1231 and Room 929 of the Hotel Piccadilly, I and my friends observed the occupants of Room 1025 of the Hotel Edison. We saw them using earphones and otherwise engaged in what appeared to be listening in on conversations and 'phone calls of Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison. So that I could observe this at times friends of mine went to Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison, and at other times so that the observers in the Piccadilly could witness it, I went to my room at the Hotel Edison, Room 1027.

On Tuesday morning, August 19, I realized that Room 1025 at the Hotel Edison was not occupied for the first time as far as I knew since I had occupied Room 1027. I turned on the radio, put through a call on the telephone, and then unscrewed the cover of the telephone box and opened it. At this time Lawrence Kammet was in my room. When the telephone box was opened he and I observed a black microphone attached to the other wires in the telephone box. I thereupon screwed back the cover of the telephone box.

On Thursday, August 21, in the evening of that day, Leon Goodelman, Eugene Badger, Lawrence Kammet, and I were in Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison. I called the manager, Hugh J. Conners, again unscrewed the telephone box and showed him the mechanism. Eugene Badger took pictures of the box with the cover open. I told Mr. Conners that my wire was being tapped by the occupants of the next room, Room 1025, and I wanted to know what the hotel proposed to do with it. Mr. Conners disclaimed any knowledge or responsibility for what was going on and stated that he could not disturb the occupants of the next room. He called the house detective, Fred Collier, and I asked Mr. Collier whether he had been in the adjoining room. He denied having been in there although I had seen him leave that room. The occasion on which I had seen him leave that room was when he came into my room when my telephone had gone dead, and he stopped to tell me that it was off the hook, when in fact this was not the case until Collier himself shoved the telephone so that it was partly off the hook.

On Thursday evening after I had opened the telephone box in Room 1027 I heard the telephone bells in Room 1025 tinkle, and likewise heard a sound as though wires were being clipped and suitcases being hastily shut. At this time my telephone rang and the operator asked me if I was calling downstairs, which was quite impossible otherwise the operator downstairs could not have gotten me. I stated to the operator that apparently the next room had gotten their wires crossed, and called upon Conners and Collier to witness this episode. I asked Conners to call the occupants of the next room, Room 1025 from my room, Room 1027, but he refused to do so but agreed to call them from downstairs. Meanwhile the camera man, Badger, sat down in the hallway just outside my room and said in a loud voice that he would stay there for thirty days if necessary, but that he would take a picture of the occupants of Room 1025.

Thereafter an employee of the telephone company, who identified himself as J. Seuss, came to Room 1027 and I showed him the microphone and asked him what it was. He would go no further than to say that it was not standard telephone equipment but refused to give it a name. After a time he did say, "Your guess is as good as mine."

At my request Oliver M. Salisbury, vice-president of the American Communications Association, who was a licensed electrician, came with a friend of his who was identified as employed for fifteen years by the Radio Corporation of America as a radio technician. Both Mr. Salisbury and his friend identified the mechanism in my telephone box as a radio induction microphone which was not standard equipment in a telephone box. They stated that it was capable of picking up the conversation in the room and over the telephone.

At about 2:30 a.m. on Friday morning, August 22, the occupant of Room 1025 opened his door and ran out. The camera man, Badger, took a flash-light picture of his back as he fled down the hall.

At about 3 a.m. on August 22 one of the owners of the hotel, Nathan Kramer, came to my room and I asked him to open Room 1025. He refused to do this but agreed to go into the room himself if all of the persons in Room 1027 would go back into that room and close the door. Thereafter Mr. Kramer came back into Room 1027 and stated that Room 1025 was unoccupied.

At about 4 a.m. on Friday morning three plainclothes men, one of them Lieutenant Jacobs of the New York Police force, came to my room and stated they came upon the request of the hotel management. After I told them that the F.B.I. had been tapping my wires they said they would rather not have anything to do with the matter. They did ask the manager to let them go into Room 1025, but when he refused to do so they left about 6 a.m.

At about 3 p.m. on Saturday, August 23, Mr. Shepard, the assistant manager, finally let me and Lawrence Kammet look into Room 1025. He found a clamp attached to the radiator and connected to it was a length of rubber insulated wire containing two strands which had apparently been clipped. We also found three pieces of black wiring tape about an inch or an inch and a half in length. In the dresser drawer there were two pieces of carbon paper, and by holding this up to the light we discovered that each piece carried the same words, and that the words at the end of the sheet were

"Evelle J. Younger
Special Agent."

I asked Mr. Shepard to put this material in the hotel safe, and he placed all of it in a large envelope which he sealed.

On information and belief, that the tapping of my telephone wire from at least on or about the 5th day of August, 1941, to and including the 22nd day of August, 1941, was instigated and carried out by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. On information and belief, that a substantial portion of the evidence introduced at the deportation hearing against me was obtained, directly or indirectly, thru the tapping of telephone wires of myself and other witnesses at the said hearing. The sources of my information and the grounds of my belief are the fact that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been tapping my wires subsequent to the said hearing, and that there was even more reason to tap telephone wires of myself and other witnesses prior to and during the said hearing.

I discovered the said tapping of my telephone wires as a result of the fact that I was suspicious that my wires would be tapped because public authorities had listened in on my conversations in the past, as for instance, during the 1937 Convention of the Maritime Federation at Portland, Oregon, when Doyle and Brown of the Portland Police Department concealed a dictaphone in my room which I discovered. (Cf. Findings and Conclusions of the Trial Examiner, p. 57).

On Saturday, August 23, I moved from the Hotel Edison and moved to Room 929 at the Hotel Piccadilly, in which I am now residing.

On Monday, August 25, I was informed by Mr. Goodelman and Mr. Kammet that the package containing the articles discovered in Room 1025 had been given to the former occupants by the Hotel Edison. I thereupon looked in the telephone book for the name Evelle J. Younger and found that he was listed as residing at 307 East 44th Street.

Harry Bridges Finds Wires Tapped in Edison Hotel ...

FBI Men Suspected of Planting Illegal Apparatus in Room

By Leon Goodelman

An "induction mike," one of the most efficient devices for tapping telephone wires and overhearing conversations within a room, was planted in Harry Bridges's room in the Hotel Edison during his stay there.

I saw the microphone. PM's Gene Badger photographed it.

Mr. Bridges, West Coast CIO leader, is here on business pending a decision in the Department of Justice's action to deport him to his native Australia. He was accused of being a Communist, a charge which he denies.

Mr. Bridges told me he was certain that the wire tapping—which is against federal law—was done by FBI men.

I tried to reach the FBI and ask them if they were spying on Bridges and if so what their purpose was. I was told that the only person authorized to make a statement was B. Edwin Sackett, chief of the New York area, and that he was "out of town and unavailable for comment."

My four days on this story, my personal knowledge of the facts and subsequent checking of other sources leave little doubt in my mind that the men spying on Bridges were FBI agents.

Kept Long Vigil

It was because of a series of coincidences that Mr. Bridges himself discovered that his wires were being tapped. First he saw in the hotel a man he recognized as an FBI man who had attended the Bridges deportation hearing in San Francisco. Second, he was unable to get the hotel management to give him another room. Third, he looked under the door of an adjoining room and saw a suspicious-looking mass of apparatus.

After Mr. Bridges became suspicious, he notified friends, who invited me to verify his suspicions.

Four days and nights I occupied a room in a hotel across the street. Day and night, through high-powered binoculars, I watched the men in the room next to Mr. Bridges's.

I made tests to satisfy myself that these men were spying on Mr. Bridges.

For example: One night I noticed one of the men repeatedly get up from his chair and run to the left corner of his room.

A Ring—A Dash

It developed that this action took place each time the phone rang in Mr. Bridges's room. I arranged to have Mr. Bridges telephoned to at certain times. Each time he was called, one of the men ran to the corner.

I reasoned then that in the left corner of the room near the window lay the wire-tapping apparatus. This substantiated Mr. Bridges's story that he had seen a portable recording machine and other equipment lying on the floor when he looked under the connecting door between his and their room. The apparatus later was shifted to the corner and out of sight.

It was no coincidence, either, that each time Mr. Bridges entered his room the men made a mad dash for the floor and came up wearing earphones.

Harry Bridges

Jigsaw Letters

When Mr. Bridges was alone they relaxed. When he was with someone they continued to listen through the phones until Mr. Bridges was alone or the room empty.

The men frequently used a typewriter. They never used it when Mr. Bridges was in his room. Often the typing began the moment he left and ceased abruptly upon his return.

At other times the men could be seen piecing together little scraps of paper and gluing them onto white or blue backing. Mr. Bridges suspected that the scraps were from his waste basket. He deliberately tore a sheet of paper into shapes that he would recognize. He then ran to another hotel room opposite the Edison and watched through glasses. He told me the pieces being pasted together were from his wastebasket.

To make certain that the men did not relax their duties during the time they were being watched, Mr. Bridges would call important New York trade union leaders and arrange for conferences in his room. More often than not these conferences did not actually take place. Other persons substituted for the men who were supposed to be there.

Harry Bridges checked into the Edison on July 2. He often left town and on his return would check in again. Each time, the hotel gave him a different room.

On July 31 he asked for a $3.50 room. He was told, he says, that no $3.50 room was available but that he would be put into a $4 room for the same rate because he was staying only a few days. That room was 1027.

It's Always 1027

On Aug. 4 Mr. Bridges returned from his week end. He asked for a room higher up and cheaper. He planned to stay for some time. He told me he was told that no other rooms were available but that he could have 1027 again at the $3.50 rate.

"It was then that I spotted this FBI monkey in the lobby," he said.

On Aug. 9 he checked out for the week end. He made arrangements when he left for a room at a special monthly rate of $75 on a higher floor.

On Monday he returned. Again he was told that there were no rooms available of the type he wanted. However, if he wanted to go back to 1027 he could have it for $3 a day and would have to pay for only 13 out of the first 14 days he was there. Thereafter he would pay for six out of every seven he was in the room.

Mr. Bridges again took the room. A half hour later he went to a pay phone and called the hotel. He said that he asked for a $3 single room with a southern exposure above the 10th floor and was told that such a room was available.

The Edison management maintains that there was no significance to the fact that Bridges was continually assigned to 1027 at lower rates.

On Aug. 12 Mr. Bridges picked up his phone. It was dead.

Suspicious Sounds

"I could hear sounds through the wall," he said. "I could see apparatus spread all over the floor from under my door. I saw someone walk into the room. There was a whispered conversation for three or four minutes. Then the person left. As their door closed there was a knock on mine. It was the house detective, Jeff Collier, with a note saying my phone was off the hook. I showed him that it wasn't. He picked it up. It was working again."

It was then Mr. Bridges believes, that his phone was tapped.

One of the strongest indications that the men in the room adjoining Mr. Bridges's were FBI men came after Mr. Bridges had confronted hotel employes with evidence of wire tapping. [Leon Goodelman's day-to-day account of his experience on this assignment appears on the next page.] The hotel employe professed to know nothing of the wire tapping and said they were unable to do anything about it.

A friend of Mr. Bridges thereupon called in two police officers and told them of Mr. Bridges's suspicions.

The police officers looked at the telephone box dubiously and one of them said, "We can't do anything about this if it is an FBI case."

"But the law is being broken," the friend insisted.

"We can't do anything about it now. We'll have to check."

The officers returned some hours later.

"We can't do anything about it," the spokesman said.

"Do you mean it's an FBI job?" I asked.

"We can't do anything about," was the answer.

Bridges finally prevailed on the management to open room next to his in his presence. Inside, according to Bridges, they found a 12-foot length of heavily insulated wire, hidden behind and clamped to the radiator, three pieces of electrical tape under the phone box which was directly behind the box in Bridges' room, a tube of LePage's glue, and two pieces of carbon paper.

By holding the carbon paper up to the light Bridges and another witness could see, they say, that they were investigation reports made out by an individual who signed himself "special agent."

For years the FBI has been trying to obtain evidence on which to deport the Australian-born Bridges. Wherever he goes, there goes the FBI.

In the middle of December, 1940, J. Edgar Hoover, sunning himself in Miami, stated to the press that "the evidence we have submitted to the Department of Justice is sufficient to justify the deportation of Harry Bridges."

This statement was made one year after Dean Landis of Harvard Law School, after extended hearings had cleared Mr. Bridges of being a Communist and of advocating the overthrow of the Government.

Subsequently Mr. Bridges was accused again. It is on this accusation that he is now awaiting a verdict.

This is the sensitive dictograph found in Mr. Bridges's room. Telephone man said it was no amateur job.

Book Guild Files Charges

The Book and Magazine Guild has filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board charging E. P. Dutton & Co., book publishers, with unfair labor practices. The union, which recently lost an election among the firm's employes, said that the company had influenced its workers in an unfair manner by creating an anti-union atmosphere.

FBI Passes Up the Opportunity To Deny Spying on Harry Bridges

By Leon Goodelman

The FBI, in New York and in Washington, is keeping comparatively mum on charges that it tapped Harry Bridges's phone in the Hotel Edison during his stay there.

After the appearance of PM on the newsstands yesterday with its detailed exposure of the hidden microphone, reporters asked the New York office of the FBI for a statement.

My story described how for four days and nights I watched listeners at work in the room next to Mr. Bridges's tapping phone calls and ordinary conversations. It told, too, how the dictograph was discovered in the phone box next to Mr. Bridges's bed.

B. Edwin Sackett, chief of the New York area of the FBI, met the press at noon. At first he requested that he be allowed to speak off the record. When reporters insisted on a quotable statement, he said:

"I have no comment whatsoever to make. It is contrary to the policy of the FBI to comment on allegations of alleged investigations we may or may not be conducting."

From Washington came a like reply.

Meanwhile, Mr. Bridges, militant West Coast CIO leader, made a new statement:

"I knew the FBI was listening in on and recording every conversation and phone call in my room in the Hotel Edison. I challenge them to play these records for the press, at a public meeting or on the radio over a nation-wide hookup.

"I have charged in the past that the FBI is an instrument of labor spying. What has happened in the Edison Hotel just bears this out. Nothing other than labor business was transacted in my room."

When the listener in Room 1025 fled at 2 a.m. Friday, Aug. 22, nine hours after the discovery of the dictograph in Mr. Bridges's phone box, the hotel management refused to let anyone enter the room. Two days later Mr. Bridges finally prevailed on the hotel to let him look around.

With the hotel detective and an assistant manager, he searched the room. Among other things they found two sheets of carbon paper, one of which, according to Mr. Bridges and another witness, bore the name "Evelle J. Younger, Special Agent."

The articles found in the room were sealed by the hotel. I went to the Edison yesterday hoping for a look at them. Richard K. Shepard, assistant manager, said the persons who had occupied the room had claimed the articles, including the carbons, at noon—shortly after PM was on the newsstands.

The room had been registered in the name of Fred West, 1427 N. State St., Chicago. Investigation revealed that there was no Fred West known at that address and that it was the home of a prominent Chicago attorney.

Witness Who Listened In Confirms Bridges's Charges

It Was the FBI All Right, Says Visitor to 'Mr. West's' Room

By Leon Goodelman

First-hand evidence to confirm the fact that it was the FBI that tapped Harry Bridges's phone and planted a dictograph in his room in the Hotel Edison is now in PM's possession.

This evidence was given to me by a person who was present in room 1025 in which the wire tapping operations took place while an FBI agent engaged in these activities.

I talked with this person yesterday. Before this witness would talk I was required to promise I would withhold any identification. I shall therefore refer to this person as X.

I have obtained permission, however, to disclose the true identity of X to the proper officials in the event of an investigation or prosecution conducted by a responsible governmental agency.

Room 1025, Hotel Edison, was taken by an FBI agent under the pseudonym of Fred West. At the address given by Fred West in Chicago no Fred West is known.

X watched 'Fred West' at his [illegible] engage in wire tapping.

I know 'Fred West's' true identity.

An FBI agent who worked under 'West' is Evelle J. Younger. Younger's name was found typed on a sheet of carbon paper left behind in room 1025 after the discovery of the dictograph in Bridges's room. Appended to his name were the words Special Agent.

I checked Evelle J. Younger. He is an FBI agent. He gave up his New York residence last week after the dictograph was discovered in his room. The forwarding address he left was the FBI Seattle [illegible].

Here is the story told to me by X:

"I was invited by Fred West to see how the FBI works. When I went to room 1025 at the Hotel Edison I had no idea that the person in room 1027 was Harry Bridges or that his wires were being tapped.

"I went to room 1025 out of sheer curiosity. There were two beds in the room. Between them was a phone box. Under the phone box was a mass of apparatus.

"One of the things I saw was a recording machine. It had a number of recording discs on it.

The dictograph planted in Bridges phone box

This is a reconstruction of room 1025 from a rough sketch by X. A is the locked door between 1025 and Harry Bridges' room. B is the entrance to 1025.

"Then there was a large box that looked like a radio. It had dials on it which Fred West would adjust when listening in on conversations in Mr. Bridges's room. He could bring the sound up or make it softer.

"Attached to this apparatus were two sets of earphones. On one set you could hear only what was said in Mr. Bridges's room. On the other you could hear both ends of a telephone conversation.

"I personally put on one of the sets of earphones and listened to Mr. Bridges. I heard him make a number of phone calls. During the time I was in room 1025 Mr. Bridges was alone.

"My first information of the fact that it was Mr. Bridges who was in the next room was when he answered the phone and said 'This is Harry Bridges speaking.'

"During phone conversations Fred West, who had on the two-way earphones, took the conversations down in writing.

"I questioned Fred West on the legality of wire tapping. He dismissed my question in an off-hand manner and I didn't get a satisfactory answer.

"I was shocked to discover that this sort of activity was going on. I didn't think it fair that anyone should attempt to get something on another person in such an underhanded and reprehensible way.

"I don't know Mr. Bridges. I never met him or spoke with him. I know little about him and never took any great interest in his case. Yet I knew that if this could be done to him it could be done to anyone. To me it seemed un-American. It embarrassed me. It was like reading someone else's private mail or listening behind a door or peeping through a keyhole. It violated my conception of civil liberties and a person's right to the privacy of his own home.

"These are my reasons for giving you this information."

X's story bears out in every way the observations I made while for four days and nights I watched the agents at work.

Two days ago I saw husky, pipe-smoking B. Edwin Sackett, chief of the New York area of the FBI. I asked him then for a comment on my story. He leaned back in his chair, smiled and said:

"Your story is so silly and ridiculous that I wouldn't dignify it by either a denial or a confirmation."

Lawrence Kammet, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I reside at 500 St. Johns Place, in the Borough of Brooklyn, County of Kings, City and State of New York.

I am a publicity writer on the staff of the Greater New York Industrial Council, C. I. O.

On Wednesday, August 13th, I was in Room 1231 at the Hotel Piccadilly with Virginia Gardner and Harry Bridges for several hours, from about 7:30 or 8 p.m. to about 9:30 or 10 p.m. I was stationed at the window sitting on the floor with field glasses. The lights in the room were out and the shade was partially drawn but was raised enough so that I could look out and see a man sitting at a typewriter in Room 1025 at the Hotel Edison. He was apparently just sitting and not typing.

After a while Harry Bridges and I went to Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison. We had a conversation in that room and then I went back to Room 1231 at the Hotel Piccadilly. Through my field glasses I could see Harry Bridges telephoning in Room 1027 of the Edison and the regular lights were out in Room 1025. However, there seemed to be a light on the floor. I saw a man get up with earphones on his ears and a wire coming down from each earphone to a single cable under the man's chin. He stood up for a few minutes, then knelt down and went out of sight. He appeared to be a tall and large man.

On Monday, August 18, I rented a room on the south side of the Hotel Piccadilly, Room 929. I was in the room from about 7 p.m. until midnight. I observed Harry Bridges come into his room, Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison. Prior to that the next room in the Edison, Room 1025, was dark. When Bridges entered Room 1027 the light in the adjoining room, Room 1025, went on and the shade was pulled down. The room remained in that condition for about an hour until Harry Bridges left Room 1027, at which time the shade in Room 125 was raised and the light in that room went out. On this occasion there were with me in my room, Room 929 at the Hotel Piccadilly, Leon Goodelman, a reporter for the newspaper PM, and Euguen Badger, a camera man for the same paper. On Tuesday morning a Big Bertha Camera was delivered to Room 929 at the Hotel Piccadilly for the said Badger. On several occasions on Tuesday, August 19, Wednesday, August 20, and on Thursday, August 21, I saw two different individuals, one apparently light-haired, and one apparently dark-haired, in Room 1025 at the Hotel Edison. On one occasion, I do not quite remember on which of these days, I saw as I recall it, the light-haired man pasting together scraps of paper with a yellow tube of glue.

On Tuesday morning, August 19, I went into Room 1027 which was then occupied by Harry Bridges. On that occasion Bridges began to hunt around his room. He unscrewed the cover of the telephone box and opened the box. When the box was open both Bridges and I plainly saw a black microphone attached to the other wires in the telephone box with shiny, new, chromium or steel wires. After seeing this Bridges screwed back the cover of the telephone box.

On Thursday, August 21, at or about 5 p.m. the said Goodelman, said Badger, Bridges and myself were in Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison, Bridges called the manager, Hugh J. Conners, and showed him the microphone. Bridges said his wire was being tapped by occupants of the next room and he wanted to know what the hotel was going to do about it. Mr. Connors said it was all new to him, and he disclaimed knowledge or responsibility. He said he could not disturb the occupants of the next room. Conners called the house detective, Fred Collier, and Bridges asked Collier whether he had ever been in the adjoining room. The house detective disclaimed having been in the next room although he had been seen to leave that room to tell Bridges that his telephone was off the hook when in fact this was not the case. While the individuals aforesaid were in Room 1027 I heard the telephone bells tinkle in Room 1025, and heard a noise that sounded like wires being clipped and suitcases being shut. There was a general commotion in Room 1025. Bridges' telephone rang. Bridges said, apparently in answer to a question, that the persons in the next room had apparently gotten their wires crossed, and called upon Conners and Collier to witness this episode. Conners agreed to call the occupants of the next room from downstairs. Meanwhile Badger sat down on a chair in the hallway with his camera focused on the doorway of Room 1025 and said in a loud voice that he would keep vigil for thirty days if necessary, but that he would take a picture of the occupants of that room.

A telephone man who identified himself as J. Seuss came to Room 1027 and stated that the microphone was not standard equipment, that he did not care to name it, and added, "Your guess is as good as mine," or words to that effect.

Thereafter one, Oliver M. Salisbury, vice-president of the American Communications Association, a licensed electrician, arrived with a friend identified as employed for fifteen years by the Radio Corporation of America as a radio technician. Both agreed that the mechanism which was not standard equipment in the telephone box was a radio induction microphone capable of picking up the conversation in the room and over the telephone.

After these persons had been in Room 1027 I went back to Room 929 at the Hotel Piccadilly and lay on the bed there with my field glasses trained on Room 1025 of the Hotel Edison. The shades were down, the lights were out, and the room was in darkness, as it was by then 9 P.M. At or about 2:30 A.M. I heard a commotion from Room 1027 which sounded as if there were about six people in the room, and I saw a flash on that side of the Hotel Edison. Thereafter I went back to Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison.

At or about 3 A.M. Nathan Kramer, the manager of the Hotel Edison, was asked by Bridges to open Room 1025, but refused to do so. He was willing, however, to go in that room himself if the persons in Room 1027 would close the door. We did so and Mr. Kramer thereafter came back and reported that Room 1025 was unoccupied. He stated nothing about any luggage in the room.

At about 4 A.M. of that morning, Friday, August 22, three plainclothes men, one of them Lieutenant Jacobs of the New York Police, came to Room 1027. After Bridges said that the F.B.I. had been tapping his wire the plainclothes men said that they would rather not be in the middle. They were not sure about the law and they would rather check on it. However they did ask the manager to let them in on a friendly basis which the management refused to do. The detectives left at about 6 A.M.

At about 3 P.M. on Saturday, August 23, the assistant manager, Mr. Shepherd, let Bridges and myself look in Room 1025. One bed was not made up and the shades were drawn. One window on the court side was open. It was about three feet from the window of an adjoining room. We found a clamp commonly used in grounding listening devices attached to the radiator, and affixed to it was a twelve foot length of rubber insulated wire containing two strands of wire which had been clipped. We also found three pieces of black wiring tape about one and a half inches in length. In the dresser drawer there was some carbon paper. I held up a sheet and at the bottom saw the words

Special Agent."

There was also a tube of LePages glue. Mr. Shepherd took all of these articles and placed them in a large envelope sealed. He stated that they were the property of the occupants of Room 1025.

A short time after Bridges and myself had investigated Room 1025 at the Hotel Edison a representative of the New York Telephone Company came to Room 1027 of the Hotel Edison at Bridges' request, and was asked by Bridges to remove the microphone from the telephone in that room. In order to do so he had to go into Room 1025, and Bridges and I accompanied him into that room in the presence of the assistant manager, Mr. Shepherd. The representative of the telephone company thereupon opened the terminal box of the telephone in Room 1025 and found that the wires from the microphone which were in the telephone box in Room 1027 were attached to the wires in the box in Room 1025. He thereupon unfastened the wires. I was asked to go into Room 1027 and remove the microphone from the telephone box in that room, and I did so, at the same time pulling out the wires which were connected to the telephone box in Room 1025.

On Monday, August 25, Goodelman and I went to the Hotel Edison. We were informed by Mr. Conners that the package containing the articles discovered in Room 1025 had been picked up by the occupants of the room at about 12 o'clock of that day. He refused to disclose the claimants and said he had no comment to make.

Thereafter on that day we went to 307 East 44th Street, New York City, and asked for Evelle J. Younger, that being his address as it appears in the New York telephone book. The house man stated that Younger had checked out an hour before. We went to the desk clerk and found that a forwarding address had been left, Evelle J. Younger, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Seattle, Washington.

Virginia Gardner, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am the secretary of the Citizens Committee for Harry Bridges with offices at 1265 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York, Room No. 619.

On or about Wednesday, the 13th day of August, 1941, I went into a room at the Hotel Piccadilly, located at 227 West 45th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York. I went to this room at or about 6 P.M. with Harry Bridges and Lawrence Kammet. I stationed myself at a window. I looked through a pair of binoculars at Room 1025 of the Hotel Edison, located at 228 West 47th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York. Through the curtains of that room I could see a man sitting at a typewriter.

After he had been with me for some time in the room at the Hotel Piccadilly, Lawrence Kammet left, taking Mr. Bridges' key to his Edison room, No. 1027. When Kammet entered that room, the man at the typewriter in Room 1025 dived to the floor, but soon returned to his position at the typewriter. In about fifteen minutes, Kammet returned to the room where Mr. Bridges and I were watching through glasses. Mr. Bridges then left and went over to the Edison, and shortly thereafter we saw him come to the window of No. 1027.

Kammet and I waited for about half an hour in the room at Hotel Piccadilly. Meanwhile, three friends joined Mr. Bridges, whom we observed. There was a red glow from the floor in Room 1025 at the Hotel Edison. At the close of about half an hour Kammet left the Hotel Piccadilly and went to Room 1027 at the Hotel Edison. At this time I knelt on the floor holding the binoculars for about thirty minutes. During this time I saw the man in Room 1025 getting up in a crouching position. He rose a little further, perhaps in a kneeling position. The short window curtains were slightly apart at the windows in his room, and I got a profile view of the man and could see an attachment across his head and earphones at his ears. I saw a profile view of his face. He had a ruddy complexion and dark hair which, I believe, was parted in the middle. He had a rather broad face. He was wearing a 5 white shirt. The light went out in Bridges' room, Room 1027, and the man in the next room went down to the floor. At that point my telephone rang, and shortly thereafter the telephone in Room 1025 likewise rang. The man in that room stood up. He was very tall and I could see him speaking at the telephone. At this time he wore no earphones. After he had answered the telephone he dropped down to the floor again where he remained until I left the room at the Hotel Piccadilly.

Carol King, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am one of the attorneys for Harry R. Bridges in connection with the deportation proceedings now pending against him.

Upon the basis of the facts set forth in the annexed affidavits of Harry Bridges, verified the 29th day of August, 1941, of Leon Goodelman, verified the 28th day of August, 1941, and of Lawrence Kammet and Virginia Gardner, both verified the 27th day of August, 1941, it seems plain that Bridges' telephone in Room 1027 of the Hotel Edison, 228 West 47th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York, was tapped by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation from at least on or about August 5, 1941, until August 22, 1941.

The warrant of arrest against Bridges issued on or about February 12, 1941. He was put under arrest and released on bail February 14, 1941. The application by counsel for additional time to prepare for the hearing was opposed by Lemuel B. Schofield, Special Assistant to Attorney-General in Charge of Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the hearing commenced on March 31, 1941.

Before and during the hearing, counsel did not have facts at their disposal to establish that wiretapping was unlawfully employed, either directly or indirectly, by the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Immigration and Naturalization Service in the securing of evidence which was presented at the said hearing.

In Nardone v. U. S., 302 U. S. 379, the United States Supreme Court had reversed convictions for frauds on revenue because "a vital part of the prosecution's proof" consisted of telephone messages intercepted in violation of 47 U.S. § 605.

Section 605 of the Federal Communications Act, United States Code, Title 47, in part provides:

> ". . . no person not being authorized by the sender shall intercept any communication and divulge or publish the existence, contents, substance, purport, effect or meaning such intercepted communication to any person."

When the Nardone case came before the United States Supreme Court a second time, the judgment was again reversed. Nardone v. U. S., 668. At that time, Mr. Justice Frankfurter recognized that the only question open to the United States Supreme Court was " 'whether the [trial] judge improperly refused to allow the accused to examine the prosecution as to the uses to which it had put the information' which Nardone v. U. S., supra, found to have vitiated the original conviction." Mr. Justice Frankfurter said:

> "A sensible way of dealing with such a situation—fair to the intendment of § 605, but fair also to the purposes of the criminal law—ought to be within the reach of experienced trial > judges. The burden is, of course, on the accused in the first instance to prove to the trial court's satisfaction that wire-tapping was unlawfully employed. Once that is established—as was plainly done here—the trial judge must give opportunity, however closely confined, to the accused to prove that a substantial portion of the case against him was a fruit of the poisonous tree."

United States v. Weiss, 34 F. Supp. 99, likewise arose after the reversal by the Supreme Court of a conviction based upon evidence secured by wire-tapping (Weiss v. United States, 308 U. S. 312). The government stipulated among other things that:

> "whereas the defendants in the above named case intend to apply to this Court for an order:
> * * *
> "B. Directing the United States to submit to an examination with respect to the uses made by it of such intercepted messages and facts ascertained by it as a result of such use:"

The court granted subdivision B as set forth above.

In the case at bar, contrary to the situation presented in the second Nardone and second Weiss case, the wiretapping was discovered only after the hearing had been conducted. But that does not change the applicable principle. In view of the fact that any adjournment of the hearing was opposed by Major Schofield who was actively engaged in preparing the Government's case, and he refused to furnish defense counsel with prior statements of government witnesses, opportunity to discover wire-tapping before or during the hearing was seriously circumscribed. If the F.B.I. was tapping Bridges' wires after the hearing, it is a fair inference that they had tapped not only his wires but those of other witnesses when the case was being prepared for hearing. This cannot be definitely ascertained without an examination of the appropriate government officials. To paraphrase the words of Mr. Justice Frankfurter in the second Nardone case: having proved, as is plainly done by the annexed affidavits, that wire-tapping was unlawfully employed, the Presiding Inspector must give opportunity to Bridges "to prove that a substantial portion of the case against him was a fruit of the poisonous tree."

Instructions to the Applicant

Pages 1, 2, and 3 of this form must be completely filled out (preferably on the typewriter).

Immigrant Identification Cards and Alien Registration Receipt Cards. Every alien who entered the United States for permanent residence on the basis of an immigration visa on or after July 1, 1928, and prior to August 27, 1940, should be in possession of an immigrant identification card. Every alien in the United States should be in possession of an alien registration receipt card. You need not forward either card with this application. However, you will be required to present these cards when you appear to file your petition for naturalization and to surrender them at the time you are admitted to citizenship. You should therefore carefully save your immigrant identification card and your alien registration receipt card.

Photographs. You are required to send with this application three photographs of yourself taken within 30 days of the date of this application. These photographs must be 2 by 2 inches in size with the distance from the top of head to point of chin approximately 1¼ inches, must not be pasted on a card or mounted in any other way, must be on thin paper, have a light background, and clearly show a front view of your face without hat. Snapshots, group or full-length portraits will not be accepted. Each of these photographs must be signed by you on the margin and not on the face or the clothing.

Money Order. If you are not within one of the classes named below in this paragraph, you must get a United States postal money order in the sum of $2.50, payable to the order of the "Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, Washington, D. C.," in payment for the issuance of a certificate of your arrival in the United States. The money order must be attached to this application when you send it or take it to the immigration and naturalization office at the address given on the first page of this form. You do not have to send a money order if (1) your arrival in the United States was on or before June 29, 1906; or (2) your declaration of intention (first paper) is dated on or after July 1, 1929; or (3) you filed a petition for naturalization on or after July 1, 1929; or (4) you are otherwise excused by law from the requirement of a certificate of arrival.

Date of Your Arrival. If you do not know the exact date of your arrival in the United States, or the name of the vessel or port, and you cannot obtain this information by consulting your family or friends who came over with you, give the facts of your arrival as you remember them in the appropriate blank spaces on the first page of this form. Your immigrant identification card or your passport, ship's card, or baggage labels, if you have them, may help you to answer these questions.

Nationality and Race. Nationality in statement No. 6, page 3, refers to the country of which you are a citizen or subject. As to "race" in the same statement, Section 303 of the Nationality Act of 1940 provides that only white persons, persons of African nativity or descent, and descendants of races indigenous to the Western Hemisphere are eligible for naturalization. There are certain exceptions, in the cases of native-born Filipinos who have served honorably in the United States Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard for a period of at least 3 years, and in the cases of women who have lost United States citizenship through marriage.

As stated above, the following races are eligible for naturalization:

White.
African or African descent.
Filipino.
Indian.
Eskimo.
Aleutian.

State to which of these classifications you belong.

Witnesses. The names, occupations, and addresses of two citizens you expect to bring with you as witnesses when you appear for examination to file your petition should be stated in items (22) and (23) on page 3. (These witnesses must have personal knowledge of your residence in the State where you now reside and have resided for the past 6 months, and of your character and other qualifications. A foreign-born witness must bring proof of his citizenship.)

Penalty for Falsely Swearing in Naturalization Cases

It is a felony, punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both, for an alien or other person, whether an applicant for naturalization or citizenship, or otherwise, knowingly to make a false statement under oath, either orally or in writing, in any case, proceeding, or matter relating to, or under, or by virtue of any law of the United States relating to naturalization or citizenship. (Nationality Act of 1940, Sec. 346 (a) (d).)

(1) Answer to Question No. (1), Page 1 of Application:

My certificate of arrival shows that I arrived in San Francisco April 12, 1920, but in previous declaration of intention, not having the certificate available and not being certain of the date, I gave my best recollection at that time as "on or about May 7th, 1920."

(2) Answer to Question No. (2), Page 1 of Application:

I have resided continuously in the United States since my entry on April 12, 1920, except when absent as a seaman on American vessels; and continuously in the State of California, where I now live, since February, 1922, except for an absence as a seaman from March 6, 1922, to October 4, 1922, an interval when I sailed as a seaman aboard the USS Lydonia, of the U. S. Coast Geodetic Survey; and the further exception of a brief residence at Coos Bay, Oregon, in November and December of 1923.

(3) Answer to Question No. (5), Page 1 of Application:

In previous applications and declarations, I have given my birth date as July 28 or July 29, 1899; and also July 28, 1900. Until a few years ago, I was uncertain of the date. This was due to the fact that, during the first war, I wished to ship out as a merchant seaman on vessels that were going into war zones, and because I was then too young to be accepted, I advanced my age two or three years as the necessity required. Later, as I grew older, I switched my age back one or two years. I did this so many times that I finally wound up not sure of my birth date. For a time I believed it was July 28 or July 29, 1899, and later I thought it was 1900. About four or five years ago, I wrote to my family in Australia about this, and they advised me that my correct birth date was July 28, 1901.

(4) Answer to Question No. (11), Page 1 of Application:

I did not come to this country on a ticket of passage, but I signed my seaman's articles at Auckland, New Zealand.

(5) Answer to Question No. (20), Page 2 of Application:

Directly after making my entry at San Francisco in 1920, I began to sail on American vessels. In February, 1921, I became a resident of New Orleans, Louisiana, and continued to reside there until about October 4, 1921, although during that period I also made short voyages as a seaman on American vessels. I left New Orleans as a seaman on an American vessel about October 14, 1921, and returned to San Francisco to begin my residence there about February 27, 1922. About March 6, 1922, I took employment as a seaman aboard the USS Lydonia, and this employment lasted until about October 4, 1922, when I resumed my San Francisco residence. This was continued to date, except for a brief residence at Coos Bay, Oregon, in November and December, 1923.

(6) Answer to Question (30) Page 2 of Application:

During the last twenty years I have been charged with violations of traffic ordinances—improper parking (several times), and improper driving (probably three or four times). These occurred in San Francisco and in Los Angeles. In all cases, charges were disposed of either with a warning or with a small fine. I was also arrested for picketing as a Union man during a strike in New Orleans, Louisiana, in 1921. The charge against me was dismissed.

On December 26, 1936, I was arrested in Los Angeles and charged with negligent homicide. After investigation, the District Attorney's office pronounced it as an unavoidable accident, and on the District Attorney's motion, the charges against me were dismissed.

In 1938 I was arrested in Baltimore, Maryland, on a charge of being subject to deportation. My case was tried in 1939 at Angel Island before Dean

James M. Landis. He found and held that the charges against me were untrue, and recommended that the warrant of arrest be canceled. The Secretary of Labor accepted this recommendation and ordered the proceedings dismissed and the warrant of arrest canceled. In 1941 I was again arrested in San Francisco under a warrant, charging me with being subject to deportation. I was tried before Judge Charles Sears, whose adverse recommendations were rejected by the U. S. Board of Immigration Appeals. This board found that the charges against me were untrue, and that they should be dismissed. However, Attorney-General Biddle overruled the Board's decision. I brought Habeas Corpus proceedings in the Federal Court, and these proceedings have just been terminated with a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court on June 18, 1945, reversing the lower court because it had refused to hold my deportation invalid, and granting a writ of habeas corpus.

(7) Answer to Question (7), Page 3 of Application:

Agnes Bridges and I were married at Coos Bay, Oregon, approximately December 2, 1923, and later remarried on May 1, 1934, at San Francisco, California.

(8) Answer to Question (13), Page 3 of Application:

I previously filed a declaration of intention on July 13, 1921, at New Orleans, Louisiana, and a preliminary form for petition for naturalization on June 15, 1928, at San Francisco, but when I brought my witnesses to the hearing, I was told that the papers had expired. I then filed a new declaration of intention on August 9, 1928, at San Francisco, and a preliminary form for a declaration of intention on May 7, 1936, at San Francisco.

(9) Answer to Question (18), page 3 of Application:

My original residence began at San Francisco on April 12, 1920, when I entered this country. However, this residence was broken up with trips as a seaman on American vessels up until October 4, 1922. Since this date I have continuously resided in the United States. I have also continuously resided in San Francisco, California, since October 4, 1922, except for a brief residence in November and December, 1923, at Coos Bay, Oregon.

'Red Problem Under Control'

Attorney General Says Subversives on the Run Except in Hawaii

The justice department and the federal bureau of investigation, without indulging in witch hunts or endangering the democratic rights of individuals, have the Communist problem under control, except perhaps in Hawaii, Atty. Gen. Tom C. Clark said Sunday.

He spoke to about 5,000 persons at the German Relief Day festival at Old Heidelberg park. Later, at a dinner at the University club, he discussed many of the nation's domestic and foreign problems.

A dozen persons, among them known Communists, picketed the the club while Clark was there.

Membership Off 40%

In his talk at the dinner, Clark reported that:

"Some drastic action" may be needed to combat subversives in Hawaii but elsewhere subversion is on the run.

September 17, 1945

(After the Petitioner, Harry Renton Bridges, and the two witnesses appearing in his behalf, J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt, were first duly sworn by the Deputy County Clerk, Walter Castagnetto, the following proceedings took place.)

Q. Do you each vouch for his loyalty to the United States?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Schmidt: Yes.

Q. Do you recommend him as a person of good moral character?

Mr. Robertson: Yes.

Mr. Schmidt: Yes. [2]

Q. Do you recommend him to this Court for citizenship?

Mr. Robertson: I do.

Mr. Schmidt: I do.

Mr. Garner: These witnesses are satisfactory, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Castagnetto: (The Clerk): Now, the applicants will remain in the courtroom. The witnesses can go home if they want. They don't have to wait, but the applicants must wait for examination.

The Court: The witnesses may remain if they wish, or leave as they wish; but the applicants will all remain.

Examination of the Petitioner, Mr. Bridges, by Mr. Garner

Q. (By Mr. Garner): Where do you live, Mr. Bridges?

A. No. 14 Graystone Terrace, San Francisco.

Q. Your occupation?

A. Union official at the present time.

Q. Where were you born?

A. Melbourne, Australia.

Q. How long have you been in the United States?

A. All told, I would say from 1920. That includes the years I went to sea on American ships.

Q. Your home has been here since then continuously? A. Yes.

Q. In the United States—your home has been in the United States since 1920?

A. Since 1923 ashore, and two or three years before that sailing on American ships. [3]

Q. You are married? A. I am.

Q. You have one child?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Have you ever been arrested for anything at all? A. On one occasion.

Q. When was that, please?

A. 1921 in New Orleans.

Q. What was the charge? A. Picketing.

Q. And the outcome, what was it, a fine or imprisonment?

A. Neither. I was kept in the county jail overnight, or substation, and released the next morning without being held or booked. I was arrested for deportation on a couple of occasions, I forgot to mention that.

Q. Outside of the deportation cases, that is the only criminal offense with which you have been charged?

A. Would that include traffic violations?

Q. Have you ever been arrested on traffic violations?

A. Yes. Well, not—I was arrested once for an automobile accident.

The Court: I might say deportation proceedings have been held not to be criminal proceedings.

The Witness: I was arrested for an automobile accident in December, 1946, in Los Angeles, and held in the police station for a few hours, and eventually released on bail, and the charge—I have forgotten what the charge was. But anyway, a little boy was killed, and the case was dismissed later as an unavoidable accident.

Mr. Garner: The case was dismissed, then, against you? [4] A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you believe in the form of government we have in the United States at the present time? A. I do.

Q. Do you know what the highest law in the United States is?

A. The Constitution of the United States.

Q. The Constitution divides the form of government into three branches. Can you tell me why we have three branches of government?

A. To prevent the concentration of power in the hands of any one branch.

Q. Do you believe in that principle of the Constitution. A. I certainly do.

Q. Can the Congress of the United States make laws for the entire—for instance, for the various states, for the states as individual states?

A. No, not necessarily. Congress has certain delegated powers. Congress cannot make law that governs all the states, but certain states' rights are reserved by the states.

Q. Under the Constitution of the United States, there is a provision that no property can be taken for the public use without compensation. Do you believe in that principle of government?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe in the private ownership of property? A. I do.

Q. Do you believe in the private ownership of the means of production of wealth and property?

A. I believe in private ownership, but I also believe in some [5] regulation.

Q. Do you believe in the private ownership of railroads and mines, and other public utilities, like the telegraph companies? A. I do, right.

Q. Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to any organization that advocated the overthrow of the government by force or violence? A. No.

Q. Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to the Communist Party in the United States?

A. I have not, I do not.

Q. And have you belonged to any organizations that are affiliated with the Communist Party?

A. I have belonged to organizations that have been accused of affiliation with it.

Q. (By the Court): In your mind is there any ground for the accusation?

A. None at all. I mean, your Honor, certain labor organizations have been accused.

The Court: Well, of course, Mr. Bridges, we are all cognizant of the history of your petition for citizenship and the deportation proceedings. They have all become a part of this proceeding and involve the question. One of the main questions was the question of your affiliation with any organization that in any way advocated the overthrow of this government by force or violence. Now, "affiliation" is a pretty broad word, and one of the questions was at the time of making the application, "Were you ever a member?" [6]

I know you are, and your counsel, Mr. Gladstein, is very familiar with those cases. Now, your testimony is that you do not now, or ever have been, ever affiliated with ~~any~~ organization that advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence? A. That is right.

Q. (By Mr. Garner): Have you ever been known, or used, any other name at any time?

A. No.

Mr. Garner: If the Court please, I have no further evidence. I have an affidavit which was received by the Department on Friday of last week. I have had no opportunity to make any investigation of it. I merely offer it for what it is worth. (handing to Court).

The Court: This is an affidavit of Agnes Bridges. Is that Mrs. Bridges?

The Witness: My wife, yes, sir.

Mr. Garner: It contains certain statements there that——

The Court: Well, I think this—I don't think that this affidavit can be used as substantive evidence.

Mr. Garner: I am not offering it as evidence.

The Court: But, however, the information in it can be used as a basis for questioning the Petitioner, if you see fit to.

Mr. Garner: It sets out there that he has been known under another name. I have asked him and he has denied it. [7]

Q. (By the Court): It states here that meetings of the Communist Party were held at 3249½ Harrison Street, in which you presided at those meetings. Is that correct?

A. No, never, your Honor.

Q. It further states that the said Harry Bridges deeming the hiding place for his Communist membership party book unsafe where it was hidden in said bathroom under the linoleum, then with his knife over the lintel of a door leading from the kitchen of said home to a rear porch made a slit back of said lintel, and between the plaster, so that the membership book could be hidden therein.

That is incorrect, is it?

A. That is right. It is true I searched my house many times, your Honor, because I was afraid that at certain times when things were pretty hectic that someone would try to plant things there. But at no time was there any incident like that, nor does it have any substance at all, and it is an incorrect statement.

Q. It states further that your affiant during the summer of 1934 and during the 1934 strike went to the State of Oregon for a time on a visit to relatives. That upon her return your affiant was instructed by said Harry Bridges, through one Kasperson, or Casperson, to remove said Communist membership book in the Communist Party from its hiding place over the aforesaid door to a place of safety, as he had been informed that someone was going out to get it. [8]

Is that statement correct?

A. I only know one person—I had a friend by the name of Kasperson who was never in my house, if that is the person referred to. But, of course, the rest of it is untrue.

Q. It states in substance that the membership book held by Harry Bridges in the Communist Party was held under the name of one Harry Dorgan, the name used to designate Harry Bridges by the Communist Party.

Is that correct?

A. That name came up in my trial at Angel Island when counsel for the government introduced a book in evidence merely for identification, because it had been used as the basis for a warrant issued against me. But they stated at that time they were not offering it in evidence, because they had no connection between the alleged book and myself. I know they sold that book, and they sold for $500 a copy. That is the origin of that book.

The Court: Do you wish to look at that affidavit, Mr. Gladstein? (handing to Mr. Gladstein).

Q. (By Mr. Garner): You deny that you have ever used any other name than Bridges?

A. No, never any other name at all.

Mr. Gladstein: May I say we have just concluded a trial before Judge Deasy in which the applicant was the plaintiff in a divorce action, and it is rather significant that his wife testified during the course of that trial, [9] as evidence of her faithfulness and loyalty to him, and of her having been a good wife, that she had made affidavits stating truthfully that the charges against Mr. Bridges that he had been a Communist were wholly false, and it is true that she had made such affidavits.

The Court: She so testified in the divorce case?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. There is an affidavit in which she deposes and states that certain testimony given by a man named Lundeberg during the second deportation trial, accusing Mr. Bridges of being a Communist, was wholly false.

I suppose your Honor knows the old adage that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.

The Court: Well, her statement as to the veracity of Lundeberg's testimony would not be of any use. But if she impeached herself——

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, she did, as a matter of fact, and her counsel offered no testimony on her part to show she had been a good wife.

Now, the significance in the action was merely this, that while she gave the affidavit at the time, that affidavit was not admissible in evidence, and when she was asked to testify in the case, to merely testify as to what she had been willing to put in the affidavit, she said she wouldn't walk into a courtroom and testify to it. Judge Deasy considered that an element of lack of conjugal cooperation. That was the only point in that case. [10]

There have been two questions that would be regarded as significant in this application. One is whether Mr. Bridges' political and ideological views and activities during his life here would qualify him or bar him from citizenship; and the other is whether he has acted as a man of good moral behavior. As I understand it, the government today takes no position——

The Court: Well, I think maybe you'd better let the government express their views.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

Teh Court: However, I will say this, the examination prescribed by the law, the examination of an applicant, provides that he shall be questioned as to the relationship of the individual in the United States to the government, national, state and local, and the rights and privileges drawn from that relationship, and also the duties and responsibilities which arise from it.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: These questions have been directed to that part of the law that prescribes that part of an examination of an applicant.

Q. Do you know when the Constitution of the United States was formally adopted?

A. The actual date?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't, your Honor. It was some one, two or three years after it was ratified.

The Court: It was adopted on September 17, 1787. This [11] is the 158th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution described by William Gladstone as the most remarkable work known to him in modern times, and to have ever been produced by the human intellect. So today is a memorable occasion.

You also realize that by taking citizenship you have certain duties and responsibilities that go with American citizenship?

The Witness: Yes.

Q. That you have become a partner in the great American commonwealth of people?

A. I do, your Honor.

Q. And that means in the future every action of yours, whether it be in your work in labor service or business or finance, it is to redound to the general welfare of everybody.

A. I have had a chance to learn that, your Honor.

Q. And you subscribe to that and are willing to conduct yourself according to that pattern in the future? A. Whole-heartedly.

The Court: Do you have any further questions?

Mr. Garner: The government has no further questions.

The Court: Well, do you have any objection?

Mr. Garner: No objection, your Honor.

The Court: Now, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: I simply think, now, your Honor, in view of the fact that the government takes the position it has no objection, and in view of the thorough investigation that this case has had over the course of years, I believe [12] that the applicant has more than qualified himself on the record for citizenship.

The Court: I think now in view of the long history of this case I will now accord the applicant, Mr. Bridges, an opportunity to make a statement for himself, if he would like to.

Mr. Gladstein: Thank you, your Honor.

The Witness: Well, your Honor, I am not going to make a speech.

The Court: Well, just make any statement you like.

The Witness: I think I have possibly had more opportunity and I think more good reason to recognize and appreciate that citizenship is a priceless possession and privilege than most people who apply for it, and if I am awarded citizenship it will really be the result of a seventeen-year attempt to prevent citizenship. However, all during the time, it seemed to me that eventually the machinery of government and the governmental forms would operate the way I believe they will operate, and confer upon me the privileges of citizenship.

I know the freedoms and particularly those freedoms that go with citizenship and the laws that govern citizenship and the nation, and it is certainly my intention to cherish those privileges and to apply them in such a way that I hope they will apply to more people than they do now, and to apply them in such a way that the government and its institutions [13] will be strengthened instead of weakened.

The Court: I will say this, that anyone who has had such a struggle for citizenship as this applicant has had should make one of our best citizens, in view of that long struggle. [14]

I, John H. McDaniels, official reporter of the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, do hereby certify:

That the foregoing fourteen pages contain a true, full and correct transcript of the testimony of the witnesses and the proceedings given and had on September seventeenth, 1945 in relation to the Naturalization Proceedings of Harry Bridges, and taken by me in shorthand at the time and place mentioned, and thereafter transcribed into longhand typewriting, and that the same is a correct statement of the case.

Membership Off 40%

In his talk at the dinner, Clark reported that:

"Some drastic action" may be needed to combat subversives in Hawaii but elsewhere subversion is on the run.

He and J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, had agreed on the necessity of continuing the spy trial of Miss Judith Coplon even though it meant disclosure of some FBI secrets. "To drop the case would have given a green light to espionage in the United States," he said. He denied that Hoover had planned to resign because of the trial's disclosures, as was reported last week.

The FBI is so well in control of the subversive problem that "if anything happens" it could within 24 hours take all steps necessary to insure the nation against sabotage.

Communist party membership has dropped about 40% in the United States in the last few years.

There is "some spy hysteria" that is not warranted.

Gospel of Brotherhood

In his talk at the picnic, Clark said that America must "carry the gospel of brotherhood everywhere."

"Ours," he said, "is the challenge to help build a world in which people may live free from fear and terror, where children may grow up unafraid, where justice reigns among all men. This is no fantastic dream—it is exemplified in Chicago, in Milwaukee, and in a thousand other communities in the United States."

At the dinner-meeting, Clark said that as a cabinet member he had gained the impression that the United States was in a much better position in the cold war than it was a year ago.

"The English perhaps are recovering from the war slower than we

Henry Schmidt, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am one of the defendants in the above-entitled action. I am presently an International Representative of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, CIO. I am executing this affidavit in Hawaii because I am on this day in Hawaii in connection with union affairs, pursuant to permission granted to me by the Court to remain outside of its jurisdiction until September 15, 1949.

I have read the affidavit of Harry Renton Bridges executed this day, and so far as facts therein stated are within my knowledge I know them to be true and correct. The facts in that affidavit which are within my own knowledge are those relating to the wages and working conditions of longshoremen on the Pacific Coast, both before and after the 1934 strike, the part played by Harry Renton Bridges as a leader in the efforts of the longshoremen to better their lot, and the continued harassment and persecution of Harry Renton Bridges as a consequence.

With respect to Harry Renton Bridges' naturalization proceedings, the statements in his affidavit concerning my part in those proceedings are true and correct. I did nothing more than to witness the "Application for Certificate of Arrival and Preliminary Form for Petition of Naturalization," a copy of which is attached to Harry Renton Bridges' affidavit and marked Exhibit "F," to witness the "Petition for Naturalization," a copy of which is attached to Harry Renton Bridges' affidavit and marked Exhibit "G," and to testify at the proceeding before Judge Foley as is recorded in the court reporter's transcript, a copy of which is attached to Harry Renton Bridges' affidavit and marked Exhibit "H."

AFFIDAVIT OF J. R. ROBERTSON

State of California,
City and County of San Francisco—ss.

J. R. Robertson, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause. I am also the First Vice-President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO. I have read the affidavit of Harry Renton Bridges executed on the 29th day of August, 1949, and so far as the facts therein stated are within my knowledge, I know them to be true and correct. The facts in that affidavit which are within my own knowledge are those relating to the wages and working conditions of the longshoremen on the Pacific Coast both before and after the 1934 strike, the part played by Harry Renton Bridges as a leader in the efforts of the longshoremen to better their lot, and the continuing harassment and persecution of Harry Renton Bridges as a consequence. With respect to my own participation in these events and the participation of my co-defendant Henry Schmidt in these events, I desire to inform the Court as follows:

In 1934 I was engaged in organizational activities among the warehousemen in San Francisco, which activities led up to the organization of Local 38-44 of the International Longshoremen's Association on July 14, 1934. That organization was the predecessor of the present warehousemen's union in San Francisco which is now known as Local 6 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. I was elected to the Executive Board of the local union in 1935 and I was a busines representative of the local union in 1936. In 1937 I functioned as an organizer for the entire Pacific Coast district of the International Longshoremen's Association, the labor organization which was the predecessor of the present International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. During the year 1937 my duties as organizer for the International Association took me for a time to the Northwest, both in Portland and Seattle, and for a time somewhat later in the year into the Southern part of California around the Los Angeles area. After the change of affiliation from the International Longshoremen's Association to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, I was assigned by the ILWU Convention to organize warehouse workers in and around New Orleans into the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. I worked at this task during the year 1938. In 1939

I was elected the First Vice-President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, my primary responsibilities being to oversee the organizational work of the union. I have remained in that capacity and served in that capacity ever since 1939. From 1938 to 1949 I have been an elected delegate from the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union to the National Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

My co-defendant Henry Schmidt's connection with the organization of longshoremen is substantially as follows:

He participated with my other co-defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, in organizing the San Francisco longshoremen in 1933 and 1934. He was a member of the union's strike committee during the 1934 and the 1936 strikes. He was a delegate from the longshoremen's local (which was then the International Longshoremen's Association, Local 38-79) to the San Francisco Labor Counsel (American Federation of Labor) in 1935. He was a member of the same local union's Executive Board in 1935. He was a member of the International Longshoremen's Association's Pacific Coast District Executive Board in citaion's Pacific Coast District Executive Board in 1937. He was elected President of the San Francisco Longshoremen's Local in 1937 when it was still affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association. He was elected President of the same local after its affiliation with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union when it became and is now known as Local 10 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. He was President of that local in 1939, and parts of 1940 and 1941. He served as a member of the local union's Labor Relations Committee (that is the group that meets with the employer group for the purpose of adjusting grievances and endeavoring to work out the problems that arise under the terms of the collective bargaining contract between the union and the employers) in the years 1935, 1938, 1941, and 1942. He has served as a delegate from his local union to the Maritime Federation of the Pacific which, as its name indicates, was a federation of maritime unions on the Pacific Coast. He served in that capacity during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937. He was a delegate to the California State Federation of Labor (American Federation of Labor) in 1935 and 1936, a delegate to the Convention of the International Longshoremen's Association in 1937, a delegate to the San Francisco CIO Council (after the longshoremen became affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations) in 1938, 1939, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1948 and 1949. He was a delegate to the California State CIO Convention in 1938 and 1940. He was a member of his local's Executive Board in 1947, 1948 and 1949. He was a member of the International Executive Board of the ILWU in 1937 and 1938. He was a member of the Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board from 1942 to 1945, a member of the Coast Labor Relations Committee (which has the same function on a Pacific Coast-wide basis as does the local Labor Relations Committee referred to above) from 1943 to 1949. He has been a delegate from his local to many conventions of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and in the years 1946, 1947, 1948 and to the present time, he is an International Representative of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union in Hawaii.

The foregoing paragraphs indicate to some extent the degree to which both my co-defendant Schmidt and I have participated with my co-defendant Harry Renton Bridges in organizing longshore workers and warehouse workers, and in endeavoring to lend our efforts to his attempts to improve the lot of these workers.

With respect to Harry Renton Bridges' naturalization proceedings, the statements in his affidavit concerning my part in those proceedings are true and correct. I did nothing more than to witness the "Petition for Naturalization," a copy of which is attached to Harry Renton Bridges' affidavit and marked Exhibit "G," and to testify at the proceeding before Judge Foley as is recorded in the Court Reporter's transcript, a copy of which is attached to Bridges' affidavit and marked Exhibit "H."

AFFIDAVIT OF HAROLD M. SAWYER

State of California,
City and County of San Francisco—ss.

Harold M. Sawyer, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

He is a member of the law firm of Gladstein, Andersen, Resner & Sawyer, with offices at 240 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, California. He is admitted to practice in the above-named Court and in the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

On June 6, 1949, at or about the hour of 10 o'clock in the morning, he appeared on behalf of Herman Mann and others, appellants, appealing from an order previously made by Honorable Michael J. Roche, Judge of the above-entitled Court, denying a motion to quash and set aside purported Grand Jury subpoenas directed to appellants and each of them. At said time and place there appeared in opposition to said appeal F. Joseph Donohue, Esq., Special Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States.

During the course of argument it developed that persons sworn as witnesses before the Grand Jury were likewise sworn not to reveal the substance of their testimony or the proceedings before the Grand Jury at which they were present. And during the course of the argument affiant pointed out that under Rule 6(e) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure for the United States District Courts, there was no legal justification or power to impose any obligation of secrecy upon witnesses inasmuch as they did not fall within the category of persons who under the terms thereof might be sworn to secrecy.

At or about the close of the argument, the said F. Joseph Donohue said to the Court that an oath of secrecy had been imposed upon witnesses, but that in the future no such oath would be imposed on any witnesses summoned before the Grand Jury with respect to the cause then before the said Court of Appeals or who were represented by affiant's law firm or attorneys associated therewith.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

An indictment was found and returned against defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson. The several counts, embraced in the indictment, are as follows, to wit:

First Count: (18 U.S.C., Section 88; now 18 U.S.C. Section 371) . . . . on or about the 23rd day of June, 1945, and continuing thereafter until on or about October 1, 1945, and for some time prior thereto, the exact time being to the Grand Jury unknown, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said Division and District, did conspire with each other, and with divers other persons to the Grand Jury unknown, to defraud the United States by impairing, obstructing and defeating the proper administration of its nata year ago.

"The English perhaps are recovering from the war slower than we would like to see," he said. "This slowness I believe is because they have abandoned the free enterprise system which is what made England great in the past and what has made our nation great.

"Not Witch Hunting"

"In our own country, we are not witch hunting nor are we indulging in any raids, but we are progressing steadily against the Communists. Without endangering the democratic rights of anyone, we are insuring protection to the mass of loyal Americans.

"Hawaii is the only spot at the present time where our domestic Communist problem is serious. We may have to take some drastic action there. But I think that the case against Bridges (Harry Bridges, president of the leftist CIO International Longshoremen's union who is under indictment for perjury) has already been of some help in the Hawaii situation.

"If we are successful in our prosecution of Bridges, as I am certain we will be, it may be that we can break the Hawaiian situation without any other intervention."

Langer Was Speaker

Appearing with Clark at the Relief day program, sponsored by American Relief for Germany, Inc., were Senator Langer (Rep., N. D.), Senator Wiley (Rep., Wis.) and federal, state and city officials.

Langer, speaking in German, urged a "more sensible" policy toward Germany. He said that German industrial recovery was vital to the defense of the entire western world.

Wiley said that immigration laws and bills applying to displaced persons should be revised to permit a new flow of German immigration.

Schuhplattlers, yodelers and costomed singing and dancing groups lent a gay, Germanic air to the festival. Proceeds are to be used for the needy in Germany.

uralization laws, in the manner following, to wit: By having said defendant Harry Renton Bridges fraudulently petition for and obtain naturalization in a naturalization proceeding in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, by falsely and fraudulently stating and representing to the said Court in said proceeding numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, that he, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges, had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States; that said statement and representation so agreed to be made, and made, as aforesaid, as said defendants, and each of them at all times herein mentioned well knew, were false and fraudulent in this, that said defendant Harry Renton Bridges had in truth and in fact belonged to and been a member of the Communist Party in the United States from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945; that said statement and representation were material to said naturalization proceeding.

That in pursuance of such conspiracy, and during the existence thereof, and in furtherance, and to effect the objects thereof, said Defendants, respectively, did and performed the following overt acts:

1. On the 23rd day of June, 1945, defendant Harry Renton Bridges filed at the office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in the City of San Francisco, State of California, an application for a Certificate of Arrival and preliminary form for petition for naturalization.

2. On or about the 8th day of August, 1945, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges appeared before Lloyd H. Garner, a Naturalization Examiner of the United States, at San Francisco, State of California, in the office of the County Clerk in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and gave testimony in the matter of the application of said defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization.

3. On or about the 8th day of August, 1945, said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, at the office of the County Clerk in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, signed as witnesses a petition for naturalization in the case of defendant Harry Renton Bridges.

4. On or about the 17th day of September, 1945, said defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, appeared in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and gave testimony in support of the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization.

Second Count: (8 U.S.C., Section 746(1), now 18 U.S.C., Section 1015(1).) * * * on the 17th day of September, 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, Honorable Thomas M. Foley, Superior Judge, presiding, there came on for hearing a naturalization proceeding, numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, on the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization under the Nationality Act of October 14, 1940; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges then and there was called and produced as a witness in said proceeding then on for hearing, and took an oath before said Court that he, the said defendant, would testify truly in said proceeding, and said Court then and there had competent authority to administer said oath, and did administer it; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges did then and there wilfully and knowingly make a false statement under oath in certain matters which were material to the issues of said proceeding then and there being heard, giving the following answer to questions asked, to wit:

> "Q. Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to the Communist Party in the United States? A. I have not; I do not."

That said answer so stated and testified to by defendant Harry Renton Bridges were, and each of them was, as said defendant then and there knew, wilfully false and contrary to his said oath, and said defendant did not then and there believe said answers, or any of them, to be true, and the said answers were, and each of them was, then and there believed and known by him to be false.

That in truth and in fact said defendant at the time of so testifying belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States, and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945.

That said statement and testimony of said defendant, and said answers given by him as aforesaid, were upon a material matter, and were material in and to the issues of said proceeding.

Third Count: (8 U.S.C., Section 746(a)(5).) * * * that said defendants, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on or about the 17th day of September, 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said Division and District, did wilfully and knowingly encourage, aid, advise and assist a person, to wit, Harry Renton Bridges, not then and there entitled thereto, to obtain, accept and receive a Certificate of Naturalization, which was to be procured, and was procured by fraud, as said defendants, and each of them, at all times herein mentioned well knew, said fraud consisting of false and fraudulent statements and representations made in a naturalization proceeding before the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the City and County of San Francisco, numbered 28152 in the records of said Superior Court, that said Harry Renton Bridges did not belong to the Communist Party in the United States and had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States, whereas in truth and in fact said Harry Renton Bridges then and there, as said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, then and there well knew, belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States, and had belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States, and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945.

A series of Motions to Dismiss were filed herein by the defendants. These Motions are, in the main, identical as to each defendant, save and except as to the defendant Harry Bridges; he raises the additional grounds that the instant prosecution is barred by reason of the application of the doctrines of res adjudicata and double jeopardy. In this respect he asserts that the indictment, and the whole of the prosecution, must fall as a result of asserted constitutional infirmities. The Court will take up hereafter the several grounds of the motions.

Elaborate briefs have been presented in association with extended oral argument and the Court is now fully advised.

The principal objection presented is that the Statute of Limitations has barred the prosecution. This objection applies to all defendants.

Defendants have also moved for a Bill of Particulars and also for Discovery. By stipulation of counsel these several matters are to be heard at a later date and the Court reserves ruling on said motions.

(1) The asserted bar of the Statute of Limitations:

Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the indictment, based upon the operation of the Statute of Limitations (Title 18, Section 3282) is without merit.

The first count of the indictment alleges a violation of the general conspiracy statute (18 U.S.C., 371, formerly Section 88). The date of the offense alleged is "on or about the 23rd day of June, 1945, and continuing thereafter until on or about October 1, 1945."

The plaintiff concedes that more than three years have elapsed prior to bringing the indictment (approximately three years and seven months); but plaintiff contends that the Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act has intervened and tolled the operation of the statute. See Section 590(a), Title 18, U.S.C., now Section 3287[1].

This interpretation of the statute is based upon the clear, concise, and realistic holding of Judge

[1] "When the United States is at war the running of any statute of limitations applicable to any offense (1) involving fraud or attempted fraud against the United States or any agency thereof in any manner, whether by conspiracy or not, or (2) committed in connection with the acquisition, care, handling, custody, control or disposition of any real or personal property of the United States, or (3) committed in connection with the negotiation, procurement, award, performance, payment, for, interim financing, cancellation, or other termination or settlement, of any contract, subcontract, or purchase order which is connected with or related to the prosecution of the war, or with any disposition of termination inventory by any war contractor or Government agency, shall be suspended until three years after the termination of hostilities as proclaimed by the President or by the concurrent claimed by the President or by concurrent resolution of Congress. * * *"

Learned Hand in U.S. v. Gottfried, 165 Fed. 2d, 360 (certiori denied 333 U.S. 860; petition for rehearing denied 333 U.S. 883), 367:

> "* * * The argument—drawn from the Congressional debates—is that (the statutory) language should be confined to frauds of those who contracted with the United States. * * * And that it does not include interference even though fraudulent which results in no pecuniary loss. Textually this reasoning has nothing to commend it, except so far as the word 'fraud' may imply pecuniary loss; and, whatever might be said as a new matter for so circumscribing that word, it has been the law, at least since 1910, that in the statute under which this indictment was drawn, 'fraud' includes any conduct, 'calculated to obstruct or impair its' (the United States') 'efficiency and destroy the value of its operations and reports.' We see no reason for reading the words, 'defrauding the United States' in the statute of limitations now in question less comprehensively; certainly there was not enough ground for that in the debates of Congress. Besides, the purpose of the amendment was not to let crimes pass unpunished which had been committed in the hurly-burly of war, an overriding motive which perfectly fits the situation at bar."

Counts two and three of the indictment charge violations of Sections 746 (1) and 746 (a) (5) of Title 8. These alleged violations arose under the Nationality Act. The period of limitations in Title 8, Section 746 (g) provided for a period of five years before prosecutions were barred.

The Government contends that the general saving provision contained in Section 21, Title 18, Act of June 25, 1948, is applicable to preserve this five-year limitation period, in addition to the extension afforded by the Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act. Section 21 reads as follows:

> "The sections or parts thereof of the Revised Statutes or Statutes at Large enumerated in the following schedule are hereby repealed. Any rights or liabilities now existing under such sections or parts thereof shall not be affected by this repeal."

Defendants assert that the general three-year period, as provided in Section 3282, Title 18, has de-limited the five-year period and that, therefore, both of these counts are likewise barred by the statute. Defendants contend that Section 3282 is retrospective in effect. This contention is untenable. I have concluded that the general saving provision, supra, continues the "rights and liabilities" theretofore existing under the Sections of the Nationality Act upon which the instant prosecution is grounded.

We are confronted here with an extremely broad provision which seeks to preserve "rights and liabilities" of the parties. Advisedly, the saving clause sought to encompass within its scope the preservation of all such rights and liabilities which were in existence at the effective date of the enactment, September 1, 1948. It is reasonable to conclude that Section 21 carried with it and preserved not only the criminal liability for the perpetration of the offenses charged in Title 8 but likewise kept alive the applicable five-year Statute of Limitations under which the government might prosecute the offenders. If defendants' contention were correct then we would be confronted with the anomalous situation of keeping alive a right, while at the same time failing to preserve the remedy afforded by the applicable Statute of Limitations.

The said provision preserves the status quo of all rights and liabilities. This applies equally to the Government as well as to the Defendants and, accordingly, I have concluded that the five-year period of limitations applies to the offenses theretofore arising under the Nationality Act, more particularly embraced in counts two and three of the indictment.

The Government also advances the contention that the general saving clause, as embraced in Section 109, Title I, is applicable to all three of the counts. It is unnecessary to pass upon this contention for, as the Court has concluded, the Statute of Limitations has been tolled as a result of the application of the Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act as well as Section 21, supra.

The Government contends that the Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act is equally applicable to all three counts on the general theory that fraud is implicit in each count. Reliance is placed upon Knauer v. U. S., 328 U.S. 654,[1a] 672, 673; U. S. v.

[1a] "Fraud connotes perjury, falsification, concealment, misrepresentation." p. 657.

Ness, 245 U.S., 319, 324. This contention is no doubt sound for when we examine the statute in question, subdivision one (F.N. 1, supra), it is manifest that the language used is broad, sweeping and all-inclusive as to fraud in a generic sense, perpetrated "in any manner, whether by conspiracy or not."

Defendants' contention that the fraud contemplated must involve transactions involving pecuniary loss to the Government or having to do with government wartime contracts is not borne out by even a casual examination of the Suspension Statute. It is abundantly clear that Section I must be interpreted as involving the specific type of fraud that is involved as a result of false swearing under the Nationality Act. Note, that the fraud may be perpetrated "in any manner" and is not limited to the area as contended for under the case of Marzani v. U. S., 168 Fed. 2d. 133.[1b] Cf. U. S. v. Gilliland, 312 U.S. 86; U. S. v. Agnew, 6 F.R.D. 566, 568; U. S. v. Curley, 122 Fed. 738.

Mr. Chief Justice Hughes in Gilliland v. U. S., supra, p. 93, said in speaking of the type of fraud with which we are dealing:

> "* * * The statute (false claims) was made to embrace false and fraudulent statements or representations where these were knowingly and wilfully used in documents or affidavits 'in any matter within the jurisdiction of any department or agency of the United States.' In this, there is no restriction to cases involving pecuniary or property loss to the Government. The Amendment indicated the Congressional intent to protect the authorized functions of governmental departments and agencies from the perversion which might result from the deceptive practices described. We see no reason why this apparent intention should be frustrated by construction." (Italics ours.)

Accordingly, the Motions of defendants to Dismiss the indictment grounded upon the assertion that the Statute of Limitations has barred each and every count contained in the indictment are, and each of them is, Denied.

(2) Jeopardy, Former Acquittal, and Res Adjudicata:

The defendant, Bridges, invokes the doctrines of double jeopardy, former acquittal, etc., as a basis for the dismissal of the indictment.

Defendant Bridges says, "But this is not a simple prosecution. This case has become a cause celebre, taking its place in history with the prosecution of Peter Zenger, the Witchcraft Crimes of the early Colonial days, the Alien and Sedition prosecutions of the post-period of World War I, and prosecutions of the Haymarket Riot, Tom Mooney, and Sacco and Vanzetti."

It is contended that the institution of this criminal prosecution places Harry Bridges in jeopardy because "he has heretofore been so subjected to jeopardy on four prior, separate and distinct occasions, contrary and in violation of the provisions of the Fifth Amendment." This contention, of historic and atmospheric background, does not provide a legal basis for the dismissal of the indictment.

It appears affirmatively from the record that defendant Bridges has never been subjected to criminal prosecution under the statutes which form the basis for the present indictment, nor has he ever been subjected to criminal prosecution by the United States Government, prior to the bringing or institution of the within prosecution. There has been no double jeopardy within the meaning of the said Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Defendant concedes that the earlier proceedings against him were not "technically criminal prosecutions," but argues that, because the result of the earlier civil proceedings, such as the deportations hearings, might have ended in a more severe penalty than a criminal penalty, that the civil proceedings should be considered criminal in nature and extent. The Court has not been referred to any rule or principle of law or reason which would support this novel contention. Counsel for defendant, however, with great force seeks to have this Trial Court depart from well-known principles and launch upon some heroic venture and, at this stage of the proceeding, strike the criminal indictment down and render ineffectual the efforts of the Government in the prosecution of what the Government regards as felonious conduct upon the part of the defendant Bridges. If more compelling reasons were present than may appear in the case at Bar, this Court, under accepted and well-recognized rules, is foreclosed from deciding the case at this stage upon constitutional grounds. See Baker v. Grice, 169 U.S. 284, 292; Ark. Fuel Oil Co. v. La., 304 U.S. 197, 202.

Suffice, in disposing of this branch of the defendant's arguments to say:

(a) Defendant Bridges has never been the subject of criminal prosecution under any statute arising out of the facts and circumstances present in the case at bar.

(b) The "double jeopardy" provision of the constitution requires that there be a second prosecution for the same offense.

(c) No Court of the United States, so far as I know, has ever held that a prior civil action or proceeding may be considered a criminal prosecution for the purpose of invoking this provision of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

See Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U. S. 391, 399.

(3) Due Process of Law:

The instant ground urged by the defendant Bridges as well as the other two defendants is that of the Due Process Clause. He says in this connection that under the indictment he is deprived of his life, liberty and property without Due Process in that the instant proceeding, criminal in nature, is the fifth of a series of such proceedings. This contention on Mr. Bridges' part is based upon the erroneous predicate that the prior proceedings were criminal in their nature. As to the defendants Robertson and Schmidt, the contention is devoid of any merit and, accordingly, the several Motions based upon this ground are, and each of them is, Denied.

(4) Estoppel:

The defendants assert that the doctrine of Estoppel might be invoked against the Government in this criminal case. It is contended, in effect, that the Government had in its possession knowledge of the defendants' activities at the time of the naturalization proceeding and entered no objection at that time. It is further contended that the Government is, therefore, foreclosed from prosecuting a violation of a criminal law which grew out of proceedings in naturalization.

This contention is, in the light of the record, novel. However novel it may be, it is without merit. Accordingly, the several Motions based upon this ground are Denied.

(5) Reliance on Statements Made by Defendant:

The next ground for dismissal is that the Government of the United States did not rely on the statements made by the defendant Bridges in the naturalization proceedings.

This is not a matter which affects the sufficiency of the indictment and cannot serve as a basis for the dismissal. See U. S. v. Eisler, 75 Fed. Supp., 634, 638. The question of relevancy is not open to one who, as alleged, knowingly makes false statements with the intent to mislead the officials of the Government.

This ground is asserted by all of the defendants and, accordingly, the several motions are, and each of them is, Denied.

(6) Equal Protection of the Law:

This ground is based upon the assertion "the defendant Bridges alone of all persons in the country has been singled out and prosecuted on five separate and distinct occasions for the same alleged offense."

This assertion is, as already indicated, without merit and does not comport with the facts. It affirmatively appears in the record that Harry Bridges has not been prosecuted on five separate occasions for the same offense. The Motion, therefore, of the defendant Bridges in this respect is Denied.

(7) Bad Faith:

In this connection all the defendants have moved to dismiss upon the ground of Bad Faith in the prosecution, alleging that, among other acts, the prosecution presented illegal evidence to the Grand Jury. They refer to this Court's opinion in I.L.W.U. v. Ackerman, 82 Fed. Supp. 65. This decision is unavailing. See U. S. v. McGuire, 64 Fed. 2d. 485, 492; Kastel v. U. S. 23 Fed. 2d, 156, 158. There is no evidence before this Court that the Government, through and by its agencies, acted in Bad Faith in connection with the criminal proceedings more recently instituted. This is pure assumption at this stage of the proceedings and is immaterial. Ordinarily, the motive of the prosecutor is immaterial. Cf. Laughlin v. Garnett, 138 Fed. 2d, 931; Laughlin v. Rosenman, 163 Fed. 2d, 838.

The Motions to dismiss on the ground of Bad Faith are and each of them is, Denied.

In addition to the foregoing grounds, defendants assert, in support of Motions to Dismiss, the asserted misconduct of the prosecution; alleged illegally obtained and incompetent evidence; allegedly unauthorized persons in the jury room.

The Court has painstakingly examined the record, and there is no basis in fact or in law for the said grounds and the assertion thereof. The several motions, therefore, based upon said grounds are, and each of them is, Denied. In this connection it might be said in passing that the attack made by the defendants in this respect is somewhat reminiscent of that urged in U. S. v. Foster, p. 482, supra.

(8) Failure to State Offense:

The next ground worthy of comment is the asserted failure of the indictment to state an offense. The Government contends in this connection that the indictment complies with the provisions of said Criminal Rules (7)(c) in that each count embraced in the indictment represents a clear and concise statement containing all the essential elements of the offense.

The defendants' Motions are based on the following:

(a) That the indictment does not state sufficient facts to constitute an offense.

(b) That it does not appear from the indictment how the alleged false statements did or could have defrauded the Government of the United States.

(c) That it does not appear in the indictment how or in what manner the alleged false statements would or could be material to the naturalization proceedings.

(d) That it does not appear in the indictment in what manner the Government relied on the false statements.

(e) That the allegations concerning the date of the offense are not clear.

These several grounds are without merit.

The indictment, as drawn, complies in the fullest extent with the revised Rules of Criminal Pleading. The pronouncements of the Court of Appeals for this Circuit have been fully met and complied with. See Rose v. U. S., 149 Fed. 2d, 755; Tagum v. U. S., 110 Fed. 2d, 555; Sutton v. U. S., 157 Fed. 2d, 661. The statutes upon which the counts of the indictment have been predicated are neither vague nor are they general in their terms. The authorities are uniform and in agreement that, where the statute violated is clear upon its face and the elements are named, then an indictment which follows the language of the statute is not insufficient.

The Court has concluded that the test, as indicated in Haggner v. U. S., 285 U.S. 427, 431, has been met and complied with and that the charges are sufficiently definite that it will afford the protection of the constitutional prohibition of jeopardy in the event of a subsequent proceeding growing out of the same facts.

With respect to the assertion that the indictment does not show how the alleged false statements defrauded the United States:

If the defendant Bridges' answer to the question of whether he was a member of the Communist Party was, as alleged, a false statement which was given to an agency of the United States Government in a naturalization proceeding, then his answer constituted fraud. Cf. U. S. v. Curley, 130 Fed., 1, 8; Haas v. Hinkle, 216 U.S. 462, 479; U. S. v. Goldsmith, 108 Fed. 2d, 917. See Gearhard Sisler v. U. S., 176 Fed. 2d, 21, 24, wherein the Court said:

> "* * * It is common knowledge that the Communist Party, in whatever country it exists, is under the authority and control of the Party heads in the Soviet Union. Even the name of the organization known as 'Communist International' indicates it is the overlord of Communists everywhere."

Defendants lay particular stress upon the ground that it allegedly does not appear how the false statements "were or could be material to the naturalization proceedings referred to therein."[2] The Section in question, upon which the prosecution is in particular grounded (Section 1015 (a), Title 18, U.S.C.), makes no reference to "materiality." It provides:

> "* * * Whoever knowingly makes any false statement under oath in any case, proceeding or matter relating to or under or by virtue of any law of the United States relating to naturalization, citizenship, or registry of aliens" * * * shall be punished according to law.

In Prevost v. U. S., 149 Fed. 2d, 747, 748, the Court said in part:

> "* * * Appellant contends that counts one and two were defective in failing to show how and in what manner, if at all, the replies mentioned were material. The sub-sections of which counts one and two charged violations say nothing about materiality. The Motion was properly denied."

However, the question of relevancy is not open to one who knowingly makes false statements with intent to mislead officials of the Government. See U. S. v. Eisler, supra; Kay v. U. S., 303 U. S. 1.

The defendants, not only in their oral arguments before the Court, but also in the moving papers, have repeatedly asserted that they are entitled to know from the indictment when and where the defendant Harry Bridges allegedly became a member of the Communist Party, as a matter of pleading. There is no occasion to be any more precise than to state that from 1933 up to and including September 17, 1945, the defendant, Bridges, belonged to the Communist Party.[3]

[2] Defendant Bridges contends that the question propounded to him concerning his asserted Communist affiliation was irrelevant. This Court has held to the contrary. See Van Laeken v. Wixon, 84 F. Supp., 958. Cf. opinion of late Judge A. F. St. Sure, 22 Fed. Supp., 145.

(9) Challenge of the Defendant to the Grand Jury:

The defendants charge that the Grand Jury which returned the indictment was not selected according to law, that the Grand Jurors were disqualified, and they challenge the entire Grand Jury array.

This Court has already passed upon the subject matter of this objection; it is settled and at rest. See Thiel v. Southern Pacific, 67 Fed. Supp. 934; affirmed 169 Fed. 2d, 30; certiori denied 69 Supreme Court, 162. See also opinion of Judge Fee in Local 36, et al., v. U. S., No. 11,638 (Ninth Circuit), September 28, 1949.

(10) Defendants' Request for Minutes of Grand Jury:

There is no showing made before this Court that would impel the conclusion that there was no legal evidence before the Grand Jury which justified the return of the indictment. See U. S. v. Foster, supra, p. 483; Stewart v. U. S. 300 Fed. 769; U. S. v. Antonelli Fireworks Co., 53 Fed. Supp. 870, 876. There is no merit to the request; therefore, it is Denied.

[3] Authorities such as U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, and Fontana v. U. S. 262 Fed. 283, cited by defendants are distinguishable.

Accordingly, all and singular, the Motions, including the Motions to Dismiss, on the part of the defendants are, and each of them is, Denied.

The Court reserves ruling on the Motions for Discovery and Bill of Particulars.

The Government may present herein an order based upon the foregoing.

Dated: October 12, 1949.

United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division

At a Stated Term of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, held at the Courtroom thereof, in the City and County of San Francisco, on Tuesday, the 22nd day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-nine.

Present: the Honorable George B. Harris,
District Judge.

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

MINUTE ORDER ADJUDGING VINCENT HALLINAN GUILTY OF CONTEMPT OF COURT; SENTENCE

The parties hereto and the jury impaneled herein being present as heretofore, the further trial of this case was this day resumed.

Vincent Hallinan, Esq., attorney for defendant Harry Renton Bridges, continued his opening statement to the Court and jury. John H. Shoemaker continued his testimony on behalf of the United States. Ordered jury excused during argument before the Court.

In the absence of the jury, Vincent Hallinan, Esq., attorney for defendant Harry Renton Bridges, was Adjudged Guilty of Contempt of Court. Ordered that Vincent Hallinan be, and he is hereby, sentenced to serve Six (6) Months in an institution to be designated by the United States Attorney General or his authorized representative.

Ordered that the contemnor, Vincent Hallinan, be remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal and that judgment be entered herein accordingly.

It Is Further Ordered that the Clerk of this Court deliver a certified copy of the order on contempt, together with accompanying certificate, to the United States Marshal or other qualified officer, and that the copy serve as the commitment of the contemnor.

It Is Further Ordered that Vincent Hallinan's name be stricken from the Roll of Attorneys admitted to practice in this Court.

After hearing the defendant Harry Renton Bridges and James Martin MacInnis, Esq., attorney for defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, It Is Ordered that execution of sentence of imprisonment as to Vincent Hallinan be stayed until the completion of the trial of this case.

The jury thereupon was recalled into Court and, after being duly admonished, was excused until Wednesday, November 23, 1949, at 10 a.m.

CONTEMPT OF COURT ON THE PART OF VINCENT HALLINAN

Title 18, U.S.C. 401(1)

CERTIFICATE IN CONFORMITY WITH RULE 42(a), FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

In conformity with Rule 42(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, I hereby certify that the conduct for which the defendant is punished for criminal contempt was committed in my presence and was seen and heard by me during sessions of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, under the following circumstances:

Beginning on the 17th day of November, 1949, and continuing up to and including the 21st day of November, 1949, the events hereinafter recited, and annotated by me,[1] took place in the courtroom.

The Court: * * * Adverting to the proceedings on Thursday, November 17, 1949, it became apparent to the Court that defense counsel, Vincent Hallinan, was not making an opening statement in any judicial sense, but was using it as a medium and sounding board for dragging in before the jury irrelevant, incompetent and inflammatory matter, with the studied and avowed purpose of prejudicing this prosecution in the light of events, incidents and characters, having no place in the proceeding before the jury. Hopeful that I might define the responsibilities of counsel both for prosecution and defense and the Court, we engaged in a lengthy discussion in the absence of the jury, attempting to avoid any further conduct on Mr. Hallinan's part in the future, to the end that the trial proceed in an orderly judicial fashion.

Now, from time to time, Mr. Reporter, I shall make reference to page and line in the transcript, and if by chance I am inarticulate or you fail to understand me, may I ask that you halt and I will give you the exact page and line.

The Reporter: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: We start our journey through the transcript at page 528, line 24, wherein the Court said in part:

[1] Contained in pages 776 to 809, 869 to 874, inclusive, Transcript of Record, in United States v. Harry Renton Bridges et al., No. 32117-H, which said transcript is annexed hereto and made a part of this certificate for all purposes.

> "Now, I think, Mr. Hallinan, that you are anticipating much of the Government's case; you are indulging in speculation on speculation. And in addition, creating an atmospheric quantity at this stage designed to prejudice and inflame the jury in connection with any sage, considered judgment they may have on the evidentiary matters. Now, that is my judgment."

At page 529, line 16, Mr. McMillan made his position clear on behalf of the Government. I shall not read it into the record, the excerpt from his comment, but it may be found at page 529, line 16, to and including page 530, line 9.

At page 530, after additional colloquy between Court and counsel, the Court:

> "Mr. Hallinan, I am loath to interrupt a lawyer in the course of a statement. I think, and unless it be a very, very material interruption that it is unfair as a rule."

I then spoke of your skill as well as the skill of the prosecution counsel. And I meant what I said. And I said further,

> "And dealing with skilled men, I always feel very comfortable about it. I feel that we haven't that ineptitude that sometimes attaches to a trial. I say that to you frankly."

I then was hopeful, perhaps naively so, that you would heed my rulings and my orders. My comment appears further at page 531, lines 1 to and including lines 22; and even a casual reading or listening to what I had to say would tend to convince or lead one to believe that my rule was firm and that my orders clear. Mr. Hallinan, page 531, line 23:

> "Mr. Hallinan: I have no (and then several dashes). Any ruling Your Honor has made I have no quarrel with. I think you have been very fair and very proper."

At page 532, again counsel, Court—Court, counsel comments. Mr. Hallinan referred to the fact that he had only three weeks to prepare.

> "The Court: You have the benefit, of course, of associate counsel—the old firm no doubt are helping a little bit?
> "Mr. Hallinan: Yes;"——

this was in an undertone, a sort of an aside or stage whisper, but the Reporter captured it.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Yes—who made the motions that Your Honor treated with contempt."

That was only a few moments before that, Mr. Hallinan had stated he was in complete accord with the Court's rulings on the preliminary motion, that he felt my rule on the question of res adjudicata, estoppel, prior adjudication, was correct, and that they were correct. And I believe the written opinion which I have rendered and which is on file memorializes my views in that respect, subject to any view that may be had hereafter in any court of competent jurisdiction on appeal, if there be an appeal.

We now turn to page 535, wherein the Court again was very clear as to what my rule was, what it would be.

> "The Court: Well, for the immediate pur> poses, then, Mr. Hallinan, I shall sustain objections interposed to that type of presentation at this stage of the proceedings."

We were then trying to adjust ourselves in the light of Mr. Hallinan's rather broad, somewhat intemperate views of an opening statement. I was attempting to bring him down to date so that the following morning we might proceed in an orderly fashion before the jury.

More discussion, Mr. MacInnis made some comments, much matter gone over. And then the Court, at page 540, after the lengthy colloquy, the exchange of views, the sifting and re-sifting of matters that counsel had in mind.

> "The Court: Counsel, I have made my ruling and that is going to be the rule tomorrow morning."
> "Counsel——," speaking to Mr. Hallinan—"I have made my ruling and that is going to be the rule tomorrow morning."

I was then referring to the matter of the continuity of the opening statement to be addressed to the jury the following court day.

The following morning, having contented myself, and with the reassurance from Mr. Hallinan that he would refrain from the avenues which he had been traveling in the opening statement, unbridled as he was, I had occasion to talk to the jury. They were called in, and at page 541 I spoke to the jury for probably ten or fifteen minutes, somewhat colloquially, but yet I believe aptly, and I told the jury the province of the opening statement. I distinguished between the opening statement and the closing arguments. I spoke of inflammatory matter and prejudice. I spoke of admonitions and the request for admonitions, so that the jurors might fully understand the proceedings. Those remarks occupy considerable comment in the transcript and at page 545, in the presence of the jury, at line 5, I said:

> "Now, with that general statement in mind, I ask Mr. Hallinan to proceed, having in mind the limitations under which I desire the opening statement to be made."

Mr. Hallinan, who was in entire accord, further said:

> "I might say I have since last night discarded much of what I intended to say in deference to Your Honor. I am sorry to create any impression in your mind that I may be going beyond what is fair, because certainly you do not deserve such treatment. You have been very fair to everybody in this case."

We then settled down, hopefully expecting that some recognition would be given to the Court's orders, which I had so painstakingly and carefully prepared and made, in the exercise of the discretion which I regarded as sound, and which I now regard as sound. However, it was not long until Mr. Hallinan, unbridled again, lapsed into a violation of the orders. At page 550 the Court had occasion to sustain an objection interposed by Mr. McMillan to matters that should not have been brought in on an opening statement and to matters which should not have been brought before the jury. At page 554, line 5, Mr McMillan, a patient man, a man whom I have known for many years for his extreme patience, orderly conduct and forbearance, said:

> "Mr. McMillan: May it please Your Honor, we are obliged——"

and a pause——

> "Patience has always been a very predominant feature in my nature, but I can't let these matters go by."
> "The Court: The objection is sustained."

I shall not attempt to advert to the long dissertation on Mr. Hallinan's part that had to do with some internal warfare between the CIO and the A.F. of L. I had already admonished Mr. Hallinan that we were not concerned with this internal warfare and we were not trying any labor union or unions.

Again, at page 555, line 5, Mr. McMillan:

> "Well, may it please Your Honor, the difficulty about this whole matter is, it is historical and it is argumentative; it properly belongs in an argument, not an opening statement. In an opening statement it is not intended to take a shotgun——"
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Now, an organization of sailors on the Pacific Coast, a member of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, was controlled by a man who will appear before you. His name is Harry Lundeberg, one of the most remarkable of the witnesses that will be produced. He is like a character from Jack London, a typical bucko mate, with a reputation for violence and ferocity as wide as the Seven Seas, a man who has been arrested for brawling and assaults in half the courts of the world. Dominating this union with an iron hand, he burned the ballots that were taken——"

"Mr. McMillan: If Your Honor please,——

"Mr. Hallinan: ——by his union concerning the federation——

"Mr. McMillan: Just one moment.

"Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. You want to talk?

"Mr. McMillan: I want to make an objection, Mr. Hallinan. You as a lawyer, with your wide experience, know that you have no such statements to prove in this court.

"The Court: This—I again repeat another admonition to the jury, that what Mr. Hallinan has to say is in reality that type of matter that may be reserved for closing argument, if the facts demonstrate it. This wild anticipation of the Government's case is to my mind novel; I have never experienced it before in these courts, and I am naturally indulgent toward counsel on both sides, to the end that this case be heard fairly and impartially and that we have all the evidence before us. But I think, Mr. Hallinan, that these excoriations and vituperative matter bearing upon Mr. Lundeberg and others has no place at the present time.

"Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

"Mr. McMillan: May I interrupt, just to give a good example? He has stated Mr. Lundeberg has been arrested in every port——

"The Court: I noticed that. I noticed that. All parts of the world. And I will instruct the jury to disregard that statement."

Only a few seconds or minutes after, page 558, Mr. Hallinan again lunged or launched into the same demeanor, same conduct, persistent, studied as it was. 561, again, we find at line 4. Reference was to the prior page, 560. The Court sustained an objection.

"The Court: Objection sustained.

"The prior reference by counsel, Mr. Hallinan, was to the Government agents.

"Mr. McMillan: It is quite eloquent, but——

"The Court: The objection is sustained.

"Mr. Hallinan: The strength and extent to which these people were willing to go may be learned from the fact that as early as 1936 they caused a warrant for Mr. Bridges' arrest on a deportation inquiry to be issued by the Secretary of Labor. The result of that deportation inquiry I am not going to go into, but the fact that one existed is one of the utmost importance and is one of the things that the jury will have to take into consideration in analyzing what the witnesses are saying. And I will presently explain to you why. The United States House of Representatives passed against Harry Bridges the only bill of attainder ever passed in the United States, and——"

"Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, if Your Honor please, that is argumentative. He is not in some conference now.

"The Court: Objection sustained.

"Mr. McMillan: Counsel has been indicating everybody. I think he, as Edmund Burke says—you can't indict a whole nation."

Then at 562, Mr. Hallinan, line 5:

Now he has stooped to the level of personalities and indulged himself adequately at the expense of the Government counsel:

"Mr. Hallinan: Of course, what I should have done is have some little pest along with me so I wouldn't have the burden of quarreling with people. Now, Mr. Donohue sits elegantly by and urbanely surveys this, while Mr. McMillan, who is very friendly——

"Mr. Donohue: ——"

Mr. Donohue finally came to the surface.

"Well, I think it is about time, if your Honor please."

Up to this moment he had been sitting by and Mr. McMillan was carrying the brunt.

"The Court: Yes, I think it is about time for the Court to say a few words, Mr. Hallinan——

"Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, did you take cognizance of the oratory that Mr. McMillan just engaged in, in stating you cannot indict —quoting Edmund Burke, and so forth?

"The Court: I am going to direct my attention to your characterization concerning Mr. Donohue, his urbane manner in sitting there, and so forth. This is no courtroom wherein to indulge yourself, Mr. Hallinan, in these general characterizations that sometimes have room or harbor in other tribunals. This is a most serious matter. I have treated it as a serious matter. The Government will, and I hope you do. We are not going to get any place in the trial of this case by any such characterization or personalities indulged in. If you desire to indulge yourself in that direction, I suggest you do it elsewhere.

"Mr. Hallinan: Well, I apologize for it, your Honor. I didn't mean——

"The Court: There is no apology necessary.

"Mr. Hallinan: I will not fall into that again, your Honor.

"The Court: There is no apology necessary to the Court, because I do not deal in apologies. I deal in more stringent matters."

Here the warning started to come. The dawn is breaking on what inevitably results this morning.

At 565, no sooner had I concluded my remarks, the ink was not dry on the reporter's pen, 565, line 2, Mr. Hallinan again in one of the flights which so characterize the alleged opening statement:

"In 1937 Mr. Bridges attended a convention in Seattle, and agents of the Immigration Department dictographed his hotel room and tapped his telephone wire. And that being discovered was made a matter of such public record that it cannot be disputed, because Mr. Bridges and his union forthwith communicated with the United States Government protesting what, whether right or wrong, they called an infringement of his liberties, of his constitutional rights. The papers ran great articles upon it, and it was widely broadcast everywhere, and letters of indignation and protest rained upon the responsible parties."

"Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please your Honor——

"The Court: I waited for an objection. I think in the absence of the prosecution noting an objection, the Court will intrude itself. There is no question involved in this case of wire-tapping. I take it from assurances given to me on the motion to dismiss, there will be no effort made on the part of the Government to introduce any evidence as to the result of any unlawful enterprise?

"Mr. Donohue: I renew that assurance.

"The Court: You renew that assurance?

"Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor."

He rose to renew his assurance again to the Court.

"The Court: The objection is sustained. The jury is admonished to disregard the statement, of any kind, character or description, bearing upon that matter."

Quiet prevailed for one page of the transcript, and at page 567 again the barrage of interruptions.

Reference was made to the alleged mistress of Harry Lundeberg. At this juncture Mr. Hallinan was stooping to an all-time low. Page 566, line 15:

> "Now, as early as 1936 there had been introduced into Harry Bridges' union and into his personal office as his private secretary a woman employed by the Waterfront Employers Association, and she was also the mistress of Mr. Harry Lundeberg. And at that time Mr. Bridges"——

And then Mr. McMillan:

> "Object to these statements, may it please your Honor.
> "Mr. Hallinan: The same purpose, your Honor."
> "Mr. McMillan: I can't understand why counsel feels that he is obliged to lug in a mistress here and there.
> "Mr. Hallinan: We didn't lug her in; they sent her in."

Page 567:

> "We want to show your Honor this is a complete"—— and there is a break in the thought. Then the Court:

> "The Court: Now, this is not an opening statement, Mr. Hallinan, either traditionally or in any concept that I have ever heard of. I have already stated my position."

"Mr. Hallinan: Now, aside from any general matter, such as I have"——

"The Court: And an opening statement, if I may amplify one step further, is not a sounding board wherein you may give vent to the external and immaterial matters that ~~have existed~~ over a period of many, many years. I think it rather an extreme situation that reference be made to this woman at this juncture, without any evidence before this Court or jury. You might well in the same breath condemn, indict, destroy, burn at the stake, any person in the City and County of San Francisco, by a bland statement. Now, you gentlemen are asking for a fair trial, the essentials of constitutional rights. And I think you had better"——

Then Mr. Hallinan interrupted.

By reference to the headlines in the paper, again transcending, bridging, the orders made by the Court with reference to news articles.

The Court again: "Mr. Hallinan, am I entirely obtuse in the trial of this case? Or have we descended into another strata of judicial process? I admonished this jury categorically, unequivocally, with every bit of vigor I have,—which vigor is expending itself in my colloquy with you—that you are not to read the newspapers (addressing the jury) under any conditions. And this Court, mindful of the admonition to you, does not indulge himself in the reading of the newspapers. Now, Mr. Hallinan indi> rectly has given you part of what the headlines are, which is a direct reflection upon this Court's admonition to you."

Quiet again prevailed for another page of transcript. At page 569, line 1, an objection was interposed. The Court:

> "Mr. Hallinan, let us pause momentarily and analyze just what we say. You characterized wholesale all of these witnesses as perjurers, low people, characterized them with vile, vituperative terms. 125 in number. I do not know at the present time the identity of any witness about to be called for the United States Government, and I dare say that in large part you do not. Now, I think it highly unfair to this Court, indulgent as I have been with you, to continue on that line or that particular vein."
> "Mr. Hallinan: All right, your Honor."
>
> "The Court: I can't say any more."
> "Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will drop that."

The transcript would seem to indicate a strain at that moment—the feeling was growing. The Court's patience was being exacted.

Several pages without interruption—perhaps that dull sort of a trial that Mr. Hallinan enjoys to remain away from; characterization was made that the Court should not indulge in a dull trial. So that seemingly it became him to create some mild degree of excitement. At page 571, line 22, or line 11, Mr. Hallinan:

> "The motives of the witnesses who will tes> tify, whether they are Communists, ex-Communists, rival union leaders or Government agents, are equally open to inquiry by the jury. Bridges was possessed of a faculty that may do him more harm in these matters than all his serious philosophy."

Then he adverted to the espionage activities of the FBI in New York City. He then concluded his remarks:

> "If he (Mr. Bridges) went into a hotel lobby, a young man would be looking through a hole cut in a newspaper.
> "Mr. McMillan: I object to that.
> "The Court: Sustained."

Then page 574, the Court, again responding to an objection urged by Mr. McMillan, and to matters that were incompetent and irrelevant. The Court, addressing myself to Mr. Hallinan:

> "The Court: What you propose to do is perfectly plain to me, Mr. Hallinan, and that is to assassinate in advance every witness who might take this stand without any evidence before this Court of the general characterizations and vituperations."

I shall not pause to read many matters which otherwise might be adverted to, by reason of the limitations of time.

I pause, however, at page 577, line 25. Mr. Hallinan, still launching forward in his discussion, or so-called "opening statement":

"However, Mr. Bridges has made the mistake of not taking the $50,000 that was offered to him back in 1934 to throw the strike and go back to Australia——

"Mr. McMillan: That is objected to.

"Mr. Hallinan: We will show that.

"The Court: The objection is sustained and the jury is instructed to disregard the statement."

Page 580, referring to the powerful feudal Five Companies of Hawaii, Mr. Hallinan stated:

"The situation there was the renewal of about what had happened in San Francisco—poison gas and clubs for the workers and a storing up of the"——.

And then there was an interruption.

"Mr. McMillan: If it please your Honor,——

"Mr. Hallinan: This is not ancient history; this happened within the last year.

"Mr. McMillan: The poison gas, rocks, stones——

"The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. McMillan."

At page 582, line 5, Mr. McMillan again interrupted:

"If your Honor please, if this is not an argument after all the evidence is in, I do not know what I am talking about.

"Mr. Hallinan: If I may finish one paragraph, I will do so."

Then the Court, after all this colloquy:

> "It is unnecessary for me to admonish the jury again to disregard these statements."

Then we come to the first witness; this barrage had only died in its echoes off the walls and its reverberations through the courtroom, when Mr. Lloyd Garner took the stand. There is a very significant mention of a date at the very threshold of his testimony, and this date may prove, and is, a focal point around which my comments hereafter hinge.

> "When were you first employed by the Bureau of Immigration in the City of San Francisco? A. From April, 1941.
> "Q. And that employment here continued for how long?
> "A. Until about April, 1948."

Now, mark you, for the record,—from April, 1941, he was employed in the San Francisco office of the Bureau of Immigration in the City of San Francisco. Bearing that date in mind, we examined painstakingly, carefully, assiduously, the transcript. What do we find? The same tactics, the same studied performance, the same desire to introduce irrelevant, incompetent and inflammatory matters before the jury.

Page 705, line 10. This is during the course of the examination of Mr. Lloyd Garner. Mr. Hallinan had launched into a dissertation upon the deportation proceedings. I have not counted the number of times, but I dare say the record is replete with my rule that the deportation proceedings had no bearing in fact or in law upon this trial or any part thereof; and the record is replete with Mr. Hallinan's acquiescence as a matter of law. Yet we find his transgressions:

> "The Court: I remark and I reiterate, Mr. Hallinan, as I did with your colleague, Mr. MacInnis, that there is no issue with respect to the deportation proceedings before this Court, there is no issue upon which the Supreme Court decision would be controlling as a matter of fact or as a matter of law. Now, what this man may have done with respect to matters of prior consequence would not aid or determine any issue in this case."

By "this man" I referred to Mr. Garner.

We now attempt—and I sought to find it, if I could, before reaching a determination—to find Mr. Hallinan's good faith. Good faith—with respect to his conduct in his asking the questions; because behind these matters and behind the pages of transcript, in making a determination of this character, we must perforce look for good faith or the absence of good faith. So I sought it, if it did exist.

At page 706, line 17, Mr. Hallinan, adverting to the credibility of Mr. Garner:

> "And your Honor will remember that there is a serious question of credibility involved in that this defendant supplies something that is entirely missing from anybody else in the prosecution's case—that is, the question of whether or not the co-defendants were ever questioned concerning affiliation or membership in the Communist Party. A very serious question of this witness' credibility in that. And we are entitled to explore that to the farthest limits."

He referred to the examination conducted by Mr. Garner in the preliminary sense of the co-defendants, Messrs. Schmidt and Robertson. In that Mr. Hallinan then took the position and now takes the position, no doubt, that the question was not addressed to them concerning their Communist affiliation or membership.

Page 706, line 17, Mr. Hallinan takes the position that he is entitled to examine the witness Garner concerning the Supreme Court decision and the Landis decision, because a serious question has arisen concerning the witness' credibility; that is, whether the co-defendants, Schmidt and Robertson, were ever questioned concerning affiliation or membership in the Party, the Communist Party.

Without any further or more exacting examination, it must be apparent, as it was to me last evening and as it is now, that there is a complete lack of good faith, fair dealing, on Mr. Hallinan's part in attempting to lug in or haul by the ears the Supreme Court decision or Mr. Landis' decision. For—and I mark for the record—neither Mr. Schmidt nor Mr. Robertson were involved in the prior poceedings. They were not identified therein in any manner, and questions addressed to the prior record would not be proper under any theory concerning Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt. So, where is the good faith in asking the questions?

Also, I examined page 713, at line 14, wherein Mr. Hallinan made what I regarded as a rather unusual statement, if not amazing. Page 713, line 14, again addressing himself to Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt, in seeking to seize upon a theory wherein he might haul in paragraphs from the opinion of the Chief Justice or the Supreme Court, and from Mr. Landis, and have those paragraphs culled and capsuled, so that the jury might have them. 713, line 14:

> "Mr. Hallinan: But now if those witnesses get on the witness stand and should say, 'I am a Communist and have been all along, a member of the Communist Party, and I wasn't asked that question, but I did say that Mr. Bridges was not or that he was eligible for citizenship,' then they have undermined him now by coming in and cutting the ground from under their feet and saying to the jury, 'Here they lied to this man on a question of their own citizenship,' and it is a very important card in the prosecution's case, as your Honor will see when the evidence finally develops."

The same persistent theory, the same persistent apparent lack of good faith.

Then we advert to page 730, all the time in the questions seeking good faith; what is Mr. Hallinan attempting to do? Page 730, line 9. At page 729 there had been a dissertation about the wire-tapping episodes, a reference to Dean Landis' opinion, a reference to the Supreme Court decision. Then at page 730, again I reiterate my rule, so there would be no misunderstanding about it, so that it would deeply embed itself in Mr. Hallinan's mind, so that there could be no mistake about it to any person in the courtroom or to counsel or to the jurors or to any other person. The Court:

> "I will hold to the lines, I will hold right to the line on the evidentiary matters I will hold right to the line in the exercise of a sound discretion, and I have made the announcement to the jury, I have announced to the jury and to your predecessors lawyers"—(I meant by that Messrs. Gladstein, Resner, Andersen and Sawyer and others) "that these matters of prior consequence had no legal bearing upon this matter. Now, what would it serve this case to pry into all of these prior matters, the determinations therein, legal, extrajudicial or however it appear? It would not be binding upon the jury or the Court as a factual matter."

Next at page 734, line 24, Mr. Hallinan, addressing his questions now to Mr. Garner, cross-examining. The record is riddled with objections. 734, line 24, Mr. Hallinan, addressing himself to Mr. Garner:

> "Now, did you read that portion of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which charged the Federal agents with illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges?

> "Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.
> "Mr. Hallinan: This goes to his participation"——

speaking of Garner's participation. Mindful, Mr. Garnier came into the Government service in 1941. Bear that factor in mind through all this discussion.

> "The Court: The objection is sustained that it is not in conformity with the ruling, Mr. Hallinan, and is an attempt to bring before the jury matters in obviation of my ruling. I admonish the jury to disregard any implications in the question."

We now turn to page 738. The strain of the proceedings became a little more apparent—tempers a little more raw. 737, Mr. Paisley is first heard. Page 737, from lines 12 to 25, there is a colloquy between Mr. Paisley and Mr. Hallinan.

> "Mr. Hallinan: I think I am permitted to finish my question without interruption by counsel," and so forth.
> "Mr. Paisley: No guesswork, your Honor.
> "Mr. Hallinan: If he would, he would blush." Referring to Mr. Paisley. Then the question:
> "Now, I want to ask this question: You do have information that the Government indulged in illegal wire-tapping upon the two previous"——

Mr. Paisley—mildly, Southern drawl, temperate:

> "Just a moment, counsel."

Then the question, continuing:

> "—— two previous deportation proceedings, have you not?
> "Mr. Paisley: If your Honor please, if this is not contempt of court, I have never seen it in my career.
> "Mr. Hallinan: That is the first time I have ever heard counsel make a statement—I ask the jury be admonished——
> "The Court: The objection is sustained, the jury is admonished to disregard any implications contained in the question. I have heretofore"——

I was interrupted by Mr. Hallinan.

> "Mr. Hallinan: I have asked your Honor to ask the jury to disregard the statement that counsel just made. It is a highly improper statement.
> "The Court: The statement made by counsel may well be within the realm of his province to make. I shall not instruct the jury to disregard his statement.
> "Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception, if the Court please."

And then the Court; this is the first indication on my part, I say, that I had reached or was about to reach the extreme ends of my patience:

> "And I say to you, Mr. Hallinan, your persistent conduct along this line, studied as it appears to be, may well eventuate in the situation that counsel refers to."

"Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception to that statement:

"The Court: The objection is overruled.

"Mr. Hallinan: Very well."

Now, that colloquy was no sooner over, the Court's admonition was still echoing when Mr. Hallinan asked the following question of Mr. Garner:

"Now, did you yourself in the period preceding, that is, looking toward the deportation of Harry Bridges, and during that time—not at the present time—receive any information from any federal official or agency that Harry Bridges' wires were being illegally tapped?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

"The Court: Sustained."

Bear in mind, again, keep it ever present in mind, that Mr. Garner, on the testimony before the Court, first came into the government service in 1941. Mr. Hallinan pounding through again?

"Have you at any time throughout the origin of the proceedings"—now bear in mind the origin of the proceedings against Harry Bridges, back in 1937 or 1938, up to the present time, that is, up to today—"made any protest of any kind to any agent of the government or any attorney of the government that there was or has been an illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges?

"Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

"The Court: Sustained.

"Mr. Hallinan: Did you at any time in the course of your connection with this case state to any official or agent of the Government that you would not be a party to an illegal effort to injure this man?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please, and again I ask Your Honor to admonish counsel to confine his cross-examination to the well-established rule of law to which Your Honor invited his best attention.

"The Court: The objection is sustained.

"Mr. Hallinan: Very well."

Mr. Hallinan, again driving through, notwithstanding the objections and the ruling of the Court, made manifestly clear, again by Mr. Hallinan:

"In your study, whatever study you did make of the Landis position, you learned that 62 witnesses had been presented by the Government against Harry Bridges, and that Dean Landis had rejected all of them as liars and perjurers? Didn't you find that out?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question and again state to Your Honor that Mr. Hallinan's deliberate and repeated questions, which he knows as a lawyer are beyond the scope of the limitation defined by Your Honor, is highly contemptuous of the decision of this Court.

"The Court:" I responded, I suppose, rather feebly by this time.

"The Court: It is an attempt to circumvent the ruling of this Court and place before this jury by indirection matters that have been ruled out, matters that are immaterial and that are irrelevant.

"Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, we have no ruling upon any such question as that. There has been nothing said in that matter."

I was rather astounded and somewhat taken aback. I said:

"That has been before the recess period, at least 45 minutes in discussion.

"Mr. Hallinan: What it amounts to, Your Honor, is rendering it almost impossible to find out. This witness has now a seal of objections thrown around him that prevents the defense from finding out what his real interest in the case is."

Now the thread is drawn closely. Now the web is woven. Now Mr. Hallinan's adroitness is being felt. He is completely dethroning this witness. He is stabbing him in the back.

"The Court: That observation is uncalled for, unwarranted, purely gratuitous and part of a studied plan.

"Mr. Hallinan: Now, I ask Your Honor—pardon me—I enter an objection to that statement and I ask that the jury be instructed to ignore it.

"The objection is not well taken, Mr. Hallinan.

"Mr. Hallinan: And I except to the Court's refusal to so instruct the jury."

Now, up to this juncture and including a review of the record thus far, it appeared to me manifestly clear that the questions were not asked in good faith, that the wholesale barrage and attack made upon witnesses in advance was not made in good faith, that it represented merely an attempt to besmirch and belittle the witnesses without any basis for an excursion or departure into the prior deportation proceedings, without any basis in fact or in law for a departure into or an inquiry with reference to the Landis decision or any other decision in the prior deportation proceedings, including, of course, the Supreme Court decision. The questions, the manner, the deportment and the decorum represented, in the opinion of the Court, a studied plan to destroy in advance the effectiveness and the asserted truthfulness of the witness placed upon the stand by the bland assertion that somewhere, some time, he might have been associated with an alleged conspiracy, which, of course, Mr. Hallinan has referred to as somewhat fantastic.

At page 748, again in my quest for good faith, again, naively I thought I might find it some place, at 748, line 23, this question, as I recall, was presented vigorously, in a commanding voice. This was addressed to Mr. Lloyd Garner, then on the stand on cross-examination:

> "Q. Prior to the deportation proceedings, which were tried—tried—"——

Now let us take the key word, tried. In 1939, if the deportation proceedings were tried in 1939, it follows as the night the day that the subject matter of the inquiry addressed to Mr. Garner had long since preceded 1939——

> "were tried in 1939 before Dean Landis, did you personally (and here is the vice—now we find the vice)—did you personally have anything to do with installing a wire-tapping device in Harry Bridges' room in the Hotel Multnomah in Portland?"

Again I say for the record, and so that our mental equanimity may not be disturbed, that Mr. Lloyd Garner first came into the government service in April, 1941. Where is the good faith? Where are the dulcet tones of tying this man into an alleged conspiracy?

At 749, Mr. Paisley,—he comes to the front again——

> "Your Honor, I object to it on the same ground that Your Honor has sustained us on, I was about to say a hundred times, and to show how ridiculous it is.
> "Mr. Hallinan: I object to an argument in the presence of the jury on a question of fact."

I think even Mr. Hallinan must have smiled at that comment.

> "The Court: You had your argument. I will let counsel argue a bit here.
> "Mr. Paisley: To show how ridiculous——"

and there are three key words in what Mr. Paisley said——

> "ridiculous or how uninformed or insincere the remarks of counsel are, I am told this witness did not come with the government until 1941."

If there be any inaccuracy in ~~Mr.~~ Paisley's statement, it is with reference to the fact that he was told. He heard it. It came out of the mouth of the witness on the direct examination. It was in this courtroom for all to hear.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't know."

Mr. Hallinan doesn't know when Mr. Garner came with the government service, and yet at page 587 of the transcript, as I already adverted to, Mr. Garner stated categorically that he came with the service in 1941, and up to the time of this colloquy and up to the time of this misconduct, no one in this courtroom ventured to suggest that Mr. Garner did not come in the government service prior to that time.

> Continuing—"Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't know.
> "The Court: He so testified.
> "Mr. Hallinan: I want an answer to the question, if the Court please.
> "The Court: Did you enter an objection, counsel?
> "Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes, certainly.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. Hallinan."

Notwithstanding that, he questioned again Mr. Garner, driving him now, in the vernacular, with rights and lefts, trying to destroy him, to beat him to the ground, beat him over the head, stab him in the back.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Did you personally in the > year 1941 have any part, or did you participate in any wire-tapping of a telephone in Harry Bridges' room in a hotel in New York City?"

Here is Mr. Lloyd Garner, the mild-mannered deputy, an administrative officer of the United States Government, whom Mr. Hallinan has translated into an alleged nefarious trafficker in installing dictographs in hotel rooms in New York City. Absurd, preposterous.

> "Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. That presumes, Your Honor, that occurred. Counsel is thereby attempting to testify that such an occurrence took place, it seems to me.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Did you personally have any contact with any persons employed, employees of the United States Government, engaged in the tapping of telephone wires of Harry Bridges in a hotel in New York City in 1941?"

A persistent, studied continuity of conduct, not bordering on contempt, but contemptuous in every form and degree.

> "Mr. Paisley: Same objection on the same ground.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Might I have a moment? That is all."

Mr. Donohue then took up redirect examination having to do, as I recall, with an affidavit of the wife or former wife of the defendant Harry Bridges. I think it was finally ruled out on the ground of hearsay. However that may be, it becomes unimportant to the instant discussion.

At page 754 Mr. Hallinan, dissembling with the Court, seeking to justify a non-existent reason for his course of studied conduct, seeking to jettison the witness.

> "Mr. Hallinan (Referring to Garner): I want to ask the witness now, I want to read off portions of the decision of the Supreme Court and Judge Landis' decision and ask him if those were the parts that he read before he asked these two defendants whether or not they were members of the Communist Party. I want to ask him the specific things because he says he does not believe he read them all, that he read excerpts from them."

It is needless for me to reiterate, to repeat or to restate that there is no reason, logically or in law, for the attempted excursion of Mr. Hallinan into the recesses of the past records on deportation looking toward the ferreting out of the truth of Mr. Garner's testimony in and with respect to the two defendants, co-defendants, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson. That is manifestly clear.

"The Court——" ——after Mr. Hallinan's wheedling and somewhat dissembling, said he wanted a ruling from me. He now wanted a ruling. We have now reached page 755 and he was asking me to rule. Up to this point I had ruled persistently with continuity and with some degree of grave thoroughness.

> "The Court: Counsel, thus far you have not had much regard for my rulings whether I made them formally or informally, in the presence of the jury or in the absence of the jury."

> "It is a sort of travesty at this late stage again to tell me about it. Do you have an objection to it, counsel?
> "Mr. Paisley: I certainly do, Your Honor.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: There isn't any question, Your Honor, to which an objection should be made."

I thought there was.

Page 755, line 19, Mr. Paisley again, I suppose somewhat amazed with reference to our western type of practice.

> "Mr. Paisley: I not only object to that procedure and that question, Your Honor, but I must object to counsel continually standing before this bar and disregarding the rulings of this Court on this line of testimony. He has been told a dozen times that what went on in these prior proceedings had nothing to do with the simple issues in this case. He stands here repeatedly showing his utter contempt of Your Honor's rulings."

Mr. Hallinan at this juncture asked for a mistrial, which I promptly denied. Page 756, line 17. Then there were matters of an assorted offer of proof by Mr. Hallinan on page 758, which came as a sort of anti-climax or an epilogue, if you please, to the little drama that I have so carefully read.

We will now take a recess.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER OVERRULING OBJECTIONS TO TESTIMONY OF THE WITNESS, JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

During the course of the examination of the witness, John H. Schomaker, produced by the prosecution, the following occurred:

P. 886, line 9:

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Under the ruling of his Honor will you tell his Honor and the members of the jury your recollection of the conversation had at the time you and Herman Mann were present with Mr. Bridges at Mr. Bridges' home?

The Court: Have you specified the date?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you state the date earlier?

A. It was in—it was in the latter part of October, 1933.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, I want to make the objection which I said goes to a disposition of the case, or a disposition of a large part of any possible proof that this witness might introduce hereafter. While your Honor has ruled on certain matters as to their legal significance, in the matter of the decision itself, there is another matter that is involved in the same thing. While a decision may not constitute once in jeopardy or a final judgment, still matters that have been decided in it are res adjudicata. Now, res adjudicata is not a question addressed to the Court alone. Res adjudicata, as you will bear me out, is a mixed question of law and fact and addressed to the jury, and while it has been held error, and reversible error, for the Court not to permit the offer of res adjudicata to be made in the presence of the jury, still in deference to other discussions that have taken place, I suggest that we be permitted now to make the objection and make a tender of proof on the judgment that I have discussed here, that is, the Supreme Court decision of 1945, to limit any testimony relating to any possible membership in the Communist Party of Mr. Bridges from June, 1945, to the time that the naturalization proceedings took place, which would be in August,

> I would like to make that in a formal manner, and I would like to be heard to argue on it. Mr. Cleary has prepared an argument on it. It will take some little time to present, and if your Honor would permit us to do that—if you wish, we will make the offer in the presence of the jury. If you would prefer, let the Jury stand by or be excused until two o'clock.

The basis for the objection is that the decision of the Supreme Court in Bridges v. Wixon, 326 U. S. 135, has decided the question of alleged membership of the defendant, Bridges, in the Communist Party. Accordingly, it is said this Court is foreclosed from again considering this point.[1]

The problem is now posed specifically by pertinent objection to the introduction of evidence bearing upon this particular factual issue. Counsel for the defendant concedes that there has been no double jeopardy within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, but claims that the prosecution is now foreclosed from introducing evidence with respect to Bridges' alleged membership in the Communist Party, during the years from 1933 and following, on the basis that the Supreme Court in Bridges v. Wixon, supra, finally passed upon this factual consideration.

Prescinding to the issue which obtained in

[1] Heretofore on the Motion to Dismiss, this Court heard elaborate arguments on the question of "double jeopardy" and "res adjudicata" and decided these legal issues in bar, among others, against the defendants.—F. Supp.——

Bridges v. Wixon, supra, it is apparent, from even a casual reading of the decision, that there is no merit to defendant's contention that the Supreme Court finally passed upon the said issue of membership in the Communist Party. The majority opinion did not declare that the evidence, given its full weight, was insufficient as a matter of law. To the contrary, the Court held that evidence had been admitted improperly and in violation of regulations intended as procedural safeguards. Under such circumstances the Court did not declare on the evidence, but rather upon the admissibility of certain unsworn statements emanating from one O'Neal. It appeared, therefore, that the crucial finding by the Attorney General was arrived at in reliance upon incompetent evidence in violation of a regulation of a department, designed to insure fair hearings and to safeguard the rights of aliens. The Supreme Court's opinion is not res adjudicata of the issue challenged by the defense. Pierson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281, Harris v. Biszkowicz, 100 Fed. 2d. 854, 856.

The key to the Supreme Court's reasoning in granting the writ of habeas corpus may not be extracted from broad generalizations, but is to be found in statements appearing on pages 154 and 156 of the Opinion, and culminating with this very cogent language:

> "Since it was error to admit O'Neal's unsworn statements against Bridges, since they were so crucial to the findings of membership, and since that issue was so close, we are unable to say that the order of deportation may be sustained without them."

To sustain the plea of res adjudicata, it is essential, among other things, either that the cause of action be the same or that the exact point was in issue and decided. (See Sourino v. U. S. 86 F. 2d. 309, 310.) The cause of action in the present case is distinct from that in the deportation proceeding while the point decided by the Supreme Court in the prior proceeding was one of procedure and practice and was not upon the merits. (See 50 Corpus Juris Secundum, Sec. 696; Clegg v. U. S. 112 F. 2d. 886, 887; Cf. Gilbert v. American Surety Co. 121 Fed. 499, 501.)

Accordingly, It Is Ordered that the objections interposed be and the same hereby are Overruled.

At a Stated Term of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, held at the Courtroom thereof, in the City and County of San Francisco, on Monday, the 10th day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifty.

Present: The Honorable George B. Harris,
District Judge.

[Title of Cause.]

ORDER DENYING MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL AND IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT; SENTENCE

This case came on this day for hearing of motions for new trial, motions in arrest of judgment, and for pronouncing of judgment. The defendant Harry Renton Bridges was present with his attorney, Vincent Hallinan, Esq., and defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson were present with their attorney, James Martin MacInnis, Esq., J. Joseph Donohue, Esq., Special Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, and Robert B. McMillan, Esq., Assistant United States Attorney, were present on behalf of the United States.

Mr. Hallinan, filed, in open Court, a motion for new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment on behalf of defendant Harry Renton Bridges.

Mr. MacInnis filed, in open Court, a motion for new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment on behalf of each of defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson.

After hearing Mr. Hallinan and Mr. MacInnis on behalf of the defendants, and Mr. McMillan on behalf of the United States, It Is Ordered that each of said motions be, and the same is hereby Denied.

Thereupon the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was called for judgment and sentence. Mr. Hallinan made a motion that the case of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges be referred to the Probation Officer of this Court for pre-sentence investigation and report, which motion was ordered Denied. The Court having asked the defendant whether he has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced, and no sufficient cause to the contrary being shown or appearing to the Court,

It Is Adjudged that the defendant is guilty as charged and convicted.

It Is Adjudged that the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, having been convicted upon his plea of not guilty and a verdict of guilty of the offense charged in the First and Second Counts of the Indictment filed herein against him, be and he is hereby committed to the custody of the Attorney General or his authorized representative for imprisonment for a period of Two (2) Years on Count One of the Indictment, and Five (5) Years on Count Two of the Indictment.

It Is Further Ordered that the sentences of imprisonment imposed on said defendant on Counts

One and Two of the Indictment shall commence and run Concurrently.

(Defendant Harry Renton Bridges is not mentioned in Count Three of Indictment.)

It Is Ordered that the Clerk of this Court deliver a certified copy of this judgment and commitment to the United States Marshal or other qualified officer and that the copy serve as the commitment of the defendant.

It Is Ordered that judgment be entered herein accordingly.

Mr. Hallinan, on behalf of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, presented to the Clerk a Notice of Appeal. After hearing Mr. Hallinan and Mr. McMillan, It Is Ordered that the amount of bail for release of defendant pending determination of appeal be fixed in the sum of Twenty-five Thousand Dollars ($25,000.00). Ordered that the defendant be remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal.

Thereupon the defendant Henry Schmidt was called for judgment and sentence. Mr. MacInnis made a motion that the case of the defendant Henry Schmidt be referred to the Probation Officer of this Court for pre-sentence investigation and report, which motion was ordered Denied. The Court having asked the defendant whether he has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced, and no sufficient cause to the contrary being shown or appearing to the Court, It Is Adjudged that the defendant is guilty as charged and convicted.

It Is Adjudged that the defendant Henry Schmidt, having been convicted upon his plea of not guilty and a verdict of guilty of the offense charged in the First and Third Counts of the Indictment filed herein against him, be and he is hereby committed to the custody of the Attorney General or his authorized representative for imprisonment for a period of Two (2) Years on Count One of the Indictment, and Two (2) Years on Count Three of Indictment.

It Is Further Ordered that the sentences of imprisonment imposed on said defendant on Counts One and Three of Indictment shall commence and run Concurrently.

(Defendant Henry Schmidt is not mentioned in Count Two of Indictment.)

It Is Ordered that the Clerk of this Court deliver a certified copy of this judgment and commitment to the United States Marshal or other qualified officer and that the copy serve as the commitment of the defendant.

It Is Ordered that judgment be entered herein accordingly.

Mr. MacInnis, on behalf of defendant Henry Schmidt, presented to the Clerk a Notice of Appeal. After hearing Mr. MacInnis and Mr. McMillan, It Is Ordered that the amount of bail for release of defendant pending determination of appeal be fixed in the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00).

Ordered that the defendant be remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal.

Thereupon the defendant J. R. Robertson was called for judgment and sentence. Mr. MacInnis made a motion that the case of the defendant J. R. Robertson be referred to the Probation Officer of this Court for pre-sentence investigation and report, which motion was ordered Denied. The Court having asked the defendant whether he has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced, and no sufficient cause to the contrary being shown or appearing to the Court,

It Is Adjudged that the defendant is guilty as charged and convicted.

It Is Adjudged that the defendant J. R. Robertson, having been convicted upon his plea of not guilty and a verdict of guilty of the offense charged in the First and Third Counts of the Indictment filed herein against him, be and he is hereby committed to the custody of the Attorney General or his authorized representative for imprisonment for a period of Two (2) Years on Count One of the Indictment, and Two (2) Years on Count Three of Indictment.

It Is Further Ordered that the sentences of imprisonment imposed on said defendant on Counts One and Three of Indictment shall commence and run Concurrently.

(Defendant J. R. Robertson is not mentioned in Count Two of Indictment.)

It Is Ordered that the Clerk of this Court deliver a certified copy of this judgment and commitment to the United States Marshal or other qualified officer and that the copy serve as the commitment of the defendant.

It Is Ordered that judgment be entered herein accordingly.

Mr. MacInnis, on behalf of defendant J. R. Robertson, presented to the Clerk a Notice of Appeal. After hearing Mr. MacInnis and Mr. McMillan, It Is Ordered that the amount of bail for release of defendant pending determination of appeal be fixed in the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00). Ordered that the defendant be remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal.

Thereafter, the parties hereto not being present, and the attention of the Court having been called to the fact that the Notice of Appeal as to each of the defendants had not been properly drawn, It Is Ordered that said Notice of Appeal be not filed.

J. R. ROBERTSON.

JUDGMENT AND COMMITMENT

On this 10th day of April, 1950, came the attorney for the government and the defendant appeared in person and with counsel;

It Is Adjudged that the defendant has been convicted upon his plea of not guilty and a verdict of guilty of the offense of violation of Title 18 USC., Sec. 88; now Title 18 U.S.C Sec. 371; and Title 8 USC., Sec. 746 (a) (5), Counts 1 and 3, of Indictment. Defendant unlawfully did conspire with divers other persons to defraud the United States by impairing, obstructing and defeating the proper administration of its naturalization laws, and defendant did wilfully and knowingly encourage, aid, advise and assist a person to obtain, accept and receive a Certificate of Naturalization, said person not being entitled thereto, as charged in the Indictment, Counts 1 and 3 and the court having asked the defendant whether he has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced, and no sufficient cause to the contrary being shown or appearing to the Court,

It Is Adjudged that the defendant is guilty as charged and convicted

It Is Adjudged that the defendant is hereby committed to the custody of the Attorney General or his authorized representative for imprisonment for a period of Two (2) Years on Count One of the Indictment, and Two (2) Years on Count Three of the Indictment.

It Is Further Ordered that the sentences of imprisonment imposed on said defendant on Counts One and Three of the Indictment, shall commence and Run Concurrently:

Defendant J. R. Robertson is not mentioned in Count Two of said Indictment.

It Is Ordered that the Clerk deliver a certified copy of this judgment and commitment to the United States Marshal or other qualified officer and that the copy serve as the commitment of the defendant.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY SUBMITTED BY DEFENSE

"Not Given"

GEORGE B. HARRIS,
United States District Judge.

Come now the defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson and respectfully request this Honorable Court to give the following instructions in the above-entitled cause:

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 1

The Court advises the jury to return a verdict of Not Guilty in favor of the defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson.

This advice from the Court, relative to your duties in respect to deliberations upon the case is given because, in the opinion of the Court, the evidence adduced by the Government is not sufficient to warrant a verdict of conviction against any defendant.

Hence the Court advises the jury to find all of the defendants Not Guilty.

(If the foregoing suggestion of an advised verdict of acquittal for all defendants is refused, then, in lieu thereof, defendants propose the following instruction which will become Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 2.)

Not given:

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 2

The Court advises the jury to find the defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson Not Guilty.

This advice of the Court in respect to your deliberations upon the defendants Schmidt and Robertson is based upon the opinion of the Court to the end that there does not exist in the record of this case sufficient evidence to support a verdict of conviction against either of the defendants Henry Schmidt or J. R. Robertson.

Hence, the Court advises you to return a verdict of Not Guilty in favor of the defendants Schmidt and Robertson.

Concerning the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, the issue of his guilt or innocence becomes a question of fact for you to determine, based upon your evaluation of the weight of evidence in this case and gauged by the instructions upon the law which I shall read you.

In leaving to the determination of the jury the issue of whether or not the defendant Harry Renton Bridges is guilty or innocent, the Court in no wise expresses or intends to express any opinion, one way or the other upon the merits of the case, but leaves this entire issue to be determined by the jury as regards the defendant Harry Renton Bridges.

(If the foregoing suggestion for an advised verdict of acquittal in favor of the defendants Schmidt and Robertson is adopted by the Court, the following proposed instruction, to be designated Defendants' Instruction No. 3, is offered, to be read along with the foregoing instruction.)

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 3

In advising the jury to return a verdict of Not Guilty in favor of defendants Schmidt and Robertson and leaving to the determination of the jury only the issues surrounding the accusation brought against the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, the Court has concluded that there is no evidence in the record of this case to support the charge of any unlawful or fraudulent conspiracy between the three defendants.

Hence the only matter toward which you may properly direct your deliberations under the foregoing advice is the Second Count of the indictment returned in this cause, by whose language the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, alone, is charged, in substance, with falsely answering the question put to him before the Superior Court of the State of California at San Francisco in his citizenship hearing: "Question: Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to the Communist Party in the United States? Answer: I have not; I do not."

And unless the evidence shows the guilt of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges as to the matters contained in the above-described accusation to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt, he too must be found Not Guilty.

(In the event that the Court refuses to give defendants' proposed instructions 2 and 3, as offered above, the remaining instructions, covering various phases of this case, are proposed.)

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 6

Of course you may not decide any issue in this case on the basis of passion or prejudice or upon suspicion, conjecture or surmise.

The fact that the personal viewpoint of the defendant Bridges may have antagonized many people of more conservative leanings is no evidence whatsoever of his guilt in this case.

In this case the ultimate issue to be determined by you is this: "Does the evidence show to a moral certainty and beyond reasonable doubt that the defendant Bridges is guilty as charged?"

If the evidence fails to demonstrate the guilt of the defendant Bridges to a moral certainty and beyond reasonable doubt it will be your duty to find him Not Guilty.

Bridges vs. Wixon,
(1945) 326 U.S. 135, 65 S. Ct. 1443.

Not given.

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 7

I instruct you that if you find, from all the evidence in this case, that there would be no motive upon the part of defendants, or any of them, to commit the crime charged in the indictment, you shall consider the absence of such motive as a circumstance in determining your verdict in this case.

Schmidt vs. United States
133 Fed 257 (CCA 9th) at page 263.

> "The absence of apparent motive, while not ground for an instruction on the part of the court that such absence might be considered as favorable to the defendant, should always be taken into consideration by the jury as a circumstance in determining the question of whether or not the accused himself committed the offense. It is also a sound principle of interpretation that where no apparent motive appears, the offense charged shall be referred to the operation of the least guilty motive."

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 11

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 13

The motives which may affect the credibility of a witness are those arising from interest, relationship, bias or prejudice..

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 18

The credibility of a witness may be impeached by the ascertainment not only of the fact that such witness is interested in the prosecution or biased against the defendants but also by showing of the degree of such interest or bias in order that the jury may measure the depth and violence of his prejudice.

If you find that any witness for the prosecution has been produced by compulsion of any kind or character you may consider such compulsion, including the kind or degree of it, in judging the credibility of such witness.

Cal. Jur. Vol. 27, p. 121,

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 21

A witness called by the prosecution may not terminate your inquiry into his credibility because of past inconsistent statements by merely offering his declaration to the jury: "I was a member of the Communist Party at that time and I followed a policy of deceiving other people; now that I have left the Communist Party I am telling the truth."

The jurors are entitled to examine independently any propensity for false statements on the part of such witness and the jurors are not bound by the declaration of such witness renouncing his past inclinations to deceive; to the contrary, the jury, in estimating the total credit that should be accorded the testimony of such witness, may consider such admissions of prior deceptions and accord to them such weight as human experience may dictate.

Not given.

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 22

In judging the credibility of any witness who appears before you you are naturally entitled to determine, at the outset, whether the recollection of such witness be extensive or vague, clear or indistinct.

You may also consider whether or not a witness purports to present a perfect memory as to events long since past as contrasted to a want of recollection concerning more recent events of equal importance.

You should look with some caution upon the testimony of any witness who offers detailed evidence concerning supposed events occurring long ago but whose memory is indistinct or lacking as concerns more recent events of equal importance in his life.

Davis v. California Powder Works,
84 Cal. 617 (1890).

(In the case above cited the validity of a Mexican land grant was in question. The witness Alvarado testified to signing the same as governor on a particular date forty years before. He was cross-examined as to many other events in his life of great importance but was unable to recollect any dates. It was held that this was a proper means of cross-examination to indicate the probability that he was mistaken. The California Supreme Court used the following language: "A shrewd witness, who is swearing falsely to something which cannot be disproved by direct testimony, will confine his recollection wholly to that single fact, professing a want of recollection of all the facts and circumstances attending it. An inexperienced witness, whose willingness to oblige his friend exceeds his judgment, will endeavor to give verisimilitude to his tale by a recital of imaginary circumstances. A stringent cross-examination will generally involve the latter in a web of contradictions, which will be in a measure evaded by the other, with the answer that he 'does not recollect'.")

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 23

The jury has the right, and even the duty to compare the testimony of any witness as to the details given concerning events of the past with the lack of ability of such witness to offer details of incidents of equal importance occurring almost contemporaneously with his appearance in court.

If there is such a difference in the purported abilities of the witness, his testimony in such instances should be viewed with caution.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 25

Where the prosecution relies entirely upon circumstantial evidence in its effort to prove the charges, such circumstantial evidence must not only be consistent with the hypothesis of guilt, but must exclude to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt every other rational conclusion.

In other words, where the circumstantial evidence is susceptible of two or more hypotheses or interpretations, each of which is based upon reason, it is the duty of the jury to reject that hypothesis or interpretation which leads to the conclusion of guilt, and to acquit the defendants, unless the hypothesis or interpretation favoring the conclusion of innocence is not based on reason, and is excluded beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty.

Further, where the prosecution relies upon a series or chain of circumstances in its effort to prove its charges, each necessary link or fact necessary to support the conclusion of guilt must be proved to you beyond a reasonable doubt. The chain of evidence is no stronger than its weakest link, and if one necessary fact is not proved to you beyond a reasonable doubt, then the conclusion of guilt must fall and it would become your duty to acquit the defendants.

Each material fact and circumstance necessary to complete a chain of independent facts and circumstances relied upon by the prosecution to establish the commission of a crime, and to identify the accused as perpetrator, must be established to the same degree of certainty as the main fact sought to be established by such circumstantial evidence, that is, to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt. The right of a jury to return a verdict of guilty is not an arbitrary right; no jury has the right to forfeit the liberty of a defendant upon mere suspicion; in this case, if the jury finds that the facts upon which any suspicion of guilt might be raised against the defendants are entirely consistent with the theory of his innocence, the defendants must be acquitted.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 32

The witness, Lloyd H. Garner, an officer of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the United States, testified, among other things, that he had certain oral interviews with the defendant Henry Schmidt and with the defendant J. R. Robertson, respectively, during the course of which interviews he asked each of said defendants whether or not they had ever belonged to the Communist Party of the United States; he stated that each of said defendants answered this question in the negative.

The defendants Schmidt and Robertson have denied that they were ever members of the Communist Party and they have also denied that any such oral conversation with the witness Lloyd H. Garner ever took place.

In connection with the evidence outlined above, you are instructed that Rule 150.1 (c) of the regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service provides as follows:

> "All statements secured from the alien or any other person during the investigation which are to be used as evidence, should be taken down in writing; and the investigating officer shall ask the person interrogated to sign the statement * * *"

You are advised that you may consider the applicability of the foregoing rule of the regulations of our Immigration and Naturalization Service in connection with your deliberations upon the truth or falsity of the statements thus made by the witness Lloyd H. Garner.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 33

The Government does not contend that the defendants Schmidt and Robertson made any statement before the Superior Court of the State of California at San Francisco in the citizenship hearing of Harry Bridges concerning the issue of whether or not Bridges had ever been a member of the Communist Party. The Government does contend, however, that, in an alleged oral interview had between the witness Lloyd H. Garner and the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, respectively, they were asked by Garner whether or not Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party and that they replied in the negative.

In connection with the foregoing state of evidence as well as with all evidence concerning the alleged oral interview between the witness Lloyd H. Garner and the defendants in this case, you are instructed that evidence as to alleged oral statements or admissions attributed to any of the defendants must be viewed by you with caution.

I instruct you that the crime of conspiracy includes the following essential elements:

(1) There must be a combination of two or more persons;

(2) There must be a real agreement, combination, or confederation with a common design; mere passive cognizance of the crime or unlawful act to be committed or more negative acquiescence is not sufficient;

(3) There must exist an unlawful purpose or act to be accomplished or done or a lawful purpose to be accomplished by unlawful means.

If any one of the foregoing elements be lacking, no conspiracy will have been proved and you must find the defendants Not Guilty.

I instruct you that you cannot find the defendants or any one or more of them guilty of the offense of conspiracy as charged in the First Count of the indictment unless you are convinced from the evidence to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt that on or about the 23rd day of June, 1945, or some time prior thereto (and, in any event not later than the proceeding in the Superior Court in the State of California at San Francisco on September 17, 1945, in which defendant Harry Renton Bridges was admitted to citizenship) at least two of the three defendants had a conversation or exchanged communications, either oral or in writing or partially oral and partially in writing.

during the course of which conversations or exchange of communications the matter of the petition or contemplated petition of Harry Renton Bridges was discussed and that in such discussion some one of the defendants stated or suggested or intimated or implied that Harry Renton Bridges was not truly qualified under the laws of the United States to obtain citizenship and that for him to obtain citizenship it would be necessary to deceive the aforesaid Superior Court by falsely and fraudulently stating and representing to such Court in the proceeding on the petition of Harry Renton Bridges that he, the said defendant Bridges, had never belonged to the Communist Party of the United States.

Unless you find from the evidence that there was such a false and fraudulent statement, suggestion, intimation or implication, thereupon agreed to and acted upon by two or more of the defendants, you must find all of the defendants Not Guilty upon the charge of conspiracy.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 40

I instruct you that a conspiracy to obtain that to which one is legally entitled is not punishable as a conspiracy to defraud the United States.

In other words, if the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was entitled to become a citizen of the United States under our laws, no conspiracy to assist him in the obtaining of his citizenship could ever be punishable as a crime.

Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 15, p. 1092, citing United States v. Biggs, 157 F. 264 D.C. Colo, affirmed in 211 U.S. 507, 53 L. ed. 305, 29 S. Ct. 181.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 43

The defendants Schmidt and Robertson are charged, in substance, with unlawfully and fraudulently conspiring to defeat the laws of the United States by aiding Harry Bridges in his application for citizenship.

Of course, if Harry Bridges was lawfully entitled to obtain his citizenship in the United States, then no crime could have been committed by any person who aided him in the effectuation of this desire.

But one of the questions to be resolved by the jury in relation to the conduct of the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, who appeared as witnesses for the defendant Bridges upon his citizenship petition, is this:

What was the basis for the statements given by the defendants Schmidt and Robertson before the Superior Court of the State of California at San Francisco? Were the statements then and there made by the defendants Schmidt and Robertson made with reasonable reliance upon information, public or otherwise, which they then and there possessed concerning the defendant Harry Bridges?

If the jury finds that the defendants Schmidt and Robertson reasonably relied upon information of a public nature concerning the defendant Harry Bridges and that they based their testimony in the citizenship hearing of Bridges upon their reliance in the verity of such information, then they cannot be found guilty of any act of fraud, and it will become the duty of the jury to find defendants Schmidt and Robertson Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 44

In support of the charges brought against them by the prosecution, the defendants Schmidt and Robertson are accused of giving the following testimony before the Superior Court of the State of California at San Francisco in support of the petition by the defendant Harry Bridges for citizenship:

> "The witnesses are both citizens of the United States?"
> Answers: "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."
> Question by you: "You each have known the petitioner for the last five years or longer?"
> "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."

By you: "And you know him to be a resident of this country at this time?"

"Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."

By you: "Do you each vouch for his loyalty to the United States?"

"Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."

Your question: "Do you recommend him as a person of good moral character?"

"Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."

"Do you recommend him to this court for citizenship?"

"Mr. Robertson: I do." "Mr. Schmidt: I do."

The defendants Schmidt and Robertson admit that they gave such testimony.

In uttering the statements, observations and/or recommendations just now read, the defendants Schmidt and Robertson were entitled to rely, not only upon such independent knowledge as each may have possessed concerning the life of Harry Bridges but they were entitled further to base such reliance upon any public documents discussing the involved subject matter, including the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the previous cause in which the deportation of the defendant Harry Bridges was attempted.

Under our law, the intent to defraud is of the essence of any alleged criminal scheme or artifice.

If such essence be lacking, there is no such scheme or artifice, and hence no crime.

Hence if the defendants Schmidt and Robertson placed a reasonable reliance in the verity of the statements of the Supreme Court of the United States in the decision already mentioned and gave their testimony in the citizenship hearing of Harry Bridges based, either in whole or in part upon the language contained in such decision of our Supreme Court, then they cannot have committed any crime and they must be found Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 45

If the defendants Schmidt and Robertson read the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the previous cause involving the attempted deportation of Harry Bridges and believed in the statements therein made and endorsed by the Supreme Court of the United States and then and there formed their own beliefs concerning the status of Harry Bridges, relying, either in whole or in part upon such statements as uttered by the Supreme Court of the United States to the end that they, the defendants Schmidt and Robertson gave testimony before the Superior Court of the State of California at San Francisco in support of the application of defendant Harry Bridges for admission to citizenship, relying thereon, they cannot be held to have committed any crime at all and they must be then found by you to be Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 46

The defendants Schmidt and Robertson are charged with having conspired to defraud the Government of the United States and they have asserted that any statements made by them, respectively, in connection with the application of Harry Bridges for citizenship, were made upon reliance, among other things, upon the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in the previous cause in which the deportation of Bridges was attempted.

You are instructed that the matter of intent is always an essential element of fraud. Whenever the belief of a person or the motive of his act or conduct is in issue, he may not only testify directly that he had no intent to defraud, but he may buttress such statement or denial with the testimony of relevant circumstances including the reading of properly authenticated public documents contending to support his own statements.

If you find that the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, in taking part, or aiding the defendant Harry Bridges in the advancement of his petition for citizenship, read the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the matter referred to and relied upon the verity of the same, then they have negatived the assertion of any intent to defraud, and the jury must consider such circumstances in passing upon their guilt or innocence.

Willful fraud is of the essence of the accusation brought against the defendants Schmidt and Robertson.

Hence the jury may consider any testimony bearing directly upon the question of the intent or the motives of the defendants Schmidt and Robertson in giving testimony in support of the citizenship petition of Harry Bridges.

If the jury finds that the defendants Schmidt and Robertson relied upon the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in the previous cause involving the attempted deportation of Bridges and were led thereby to believe that Harry Bridges was eligible to citizenship, they must be found Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 52

The indictment contains the phrase "material matter" and, in this connection, I instruct you that in order to constitute a crime the testimony contained in the Second Count of the indictment and alleged to be false must relate to a matter material to the naturalization proceedings of Harry Renton Bridges, and if, from all the evidence in this case, you are not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the testimony contained in Count Two of the indictment and alleged to be false relates to a matter material to the naturalization proceedings of Harry Renton Bridges, you must return a verdict of Not Guilty, as to the Second Count in the indictment.

> "The materiality of the testimony assigned in perjury is always a question of law, and not of fact; hence, the judge, and not the jury, is to pass upon the materiality of the testimony; but, like many other questions of law, it may become a mixed question both of law and of fact, in which case the court should admit it, limited by proper instructions. However the materiality of the alleged false testimony cannot be proved by the mere opinion of witness: the witnesses are no more competent to prove correct conclusions in this respect than the jury trying the cause, and, for this reason, the opinion of witnesses as to the materiality of such testimony must always be excluded. It is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to what facts constitute "material testimony."

(Emphasis added.) Wharton's Criminal Evidence, 11th Ed. Vol. 1 pp 589-590.

"It is unquestionably true that the materiality of the evidence adduced upon the former trial was a question to be determined by the trial judge. This was a question of law, but in a charge of perjury the question of materiality of the evidence adduced upon the former trial is necessarily a mixed question of law and fact. That is, it is not an abstract question of law, but depends upon what occurred upon the former trial. Materiality depends primarily upon the issues involved in the former trial and upon the evidence adduced in support of these issues. What the evidence was, and what the pleadings were upon that trial is a question of fact. Whether the testimony alleged to be perjured was material to such issue is a question of law" * * * (Emphasis added.)

I instruct you that under the Second Count in the indictment, namely the perjury count, the evidence submitted by the Government must be clear, convincing, and direct. It must be of a more direct and positive character than is required to justify a verdict of guilty of other offenses. I therefore instruct you that unless evidence of the character that I have just mentioned has been presented to you by the Government in this case, you must return a verdict of not guilty against the defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, under the Second Count of the indictment.

I instruct you that there are other essential elements of the crime of perjury, each of which the Government must prove to your minds beyond all reasonable doubt, in addition to the essential elements that are alleged in the Second Count in the indictment. If the Government fails to prove them, or any one of them, to your minds beyond all reasonable doubt, you should return a verdict of not guilty. These other essential elements include the following:

1. That the statements allegedly sworn to by defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, if false, must have been made with criminal intent.

2. That the statements allegedly sworn to by defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, must have been made with intent that they be taken as true.

> "It is also well settled that the false statement upon which a charge of perjury is based must be made with criminal intent. The statement must be false and wilfully and deliberately given with intent that it be taken as true, and with knowledge that it is false." 41 Am Jur Sec. 8 p 7.

And if you find that the methods employed by the defendant Bridges have always been those sanctioned or permitted under the framework of our democratic and constitutional government, you may give consideration to this circumstance along with all of the other facts of the case.

In determining the question of whether or not the activities of the defendant Harry Renton Bridges went beyond the mere enlistment of Communist Party aid in legitimate union matters, you may consider all of the evidence in this case, including evidence concerning the opposition by the defendant Bridges to the Communist tactics of fomenting strikes and including evidence concerning the belief by the defendant Bridges in the policy of arbitration and direct negotiation to settle labor disputes, with the weapon of the strike reserved only as a last resort.

Even if you should find that the Communist Party of the United States may have had the illegitimate objective of overthrowing our government by force, you are advised that the evidence shows it also had the lawful objective of improving the lot of working people in the normal trade union sense. Under our law, one who cooperated with the Communist Party in promoting legitimate objectives could not, by that fact alone, be said to sponsor or approve of any other or unlawful objectives.

You cannot reach the finding that the defendant Harry Bridges or any other defendant in this case was a member of the Communist Party of the United States merely because of evidence that they or any one of them may have cooperated with the Communist Party in any activities in relation to the labor movement.

"Individuals, like nations, may cooperate in a common cause over a period of months or years though their ultimate aims do not coincide. Alliances for limited objectives are well known. Certainly those who joined forces with Russia to defeat the Nazis may not be said to have made an alliance to spread the cause of Communism. An individual who makes contributions to feed hungry men does not become 'affiliated' with the Communist cause because those men are Communists. A different result is not necessarily indicated if aid is given to or received from a proscribed organization in order to win a legitimate objective in a democratic controversy."

You are hence instructed that the defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson must be acquitted unless the evidence shows to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant Bridges was actually a member of the Communist Party of the United States within the periods of time discussed in this case.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 66

I instruct you that in order for defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, to have been a member of the Communist Party in the United States, you must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt from all the evidence in this case, (1) that defendant signed an application blank for membership in the Communist Party in the United States (2) that defendant accepted membership therein and (3) that said Communist Party in the United States accepted defendant as a member.

If the foregoing elements are not proved by the Government to a moral certainty and beyond doubt, the defendants must be found Not Guilty.

The following are some of the cases that seem to indicate the correctness of the foregoing instruction:

U.S. ex rel Kettunen v. Reimer Comm of Immi 79 Fed (2) 315 (CCA 2nd) Circuit

Judge Chase said * * * "His application was held in abeyance pending the next meeting which he was told to attend. He did attend, but by that time changed his mind about becoming a member and requested the secretary to wait a while before sending his application to Minneapolis. As a result, his application was never sent to headquarters; he never received a membership book, and did not become a member of the Communist Party." "His application for membership would indicate his then sympathy with its aims, but his reconsideration and failure to join shows his unwillingness to let his sympathy control his actions, and there is no proof which shows any mutual recognition that cooperation was to be expected from him."

There are several issues in this case, some pertaining to the First Count of the indictment, some pertaining to the Second Count of the indictment, some pertaining to the Third Count of the indictment, some pertaining to the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, some pertaining to the defendant

Henry Schmidt, some pertaining to the defendant J.R. Robertson, some pertaining to the credibility of witnesses and some pertaining to other related matters.

But this is the basic issue, for it pertains to all of the defendants, to all of the counts of the indictment and to each offense charged against each defendant. No one of the three defendants can be lawfully convicted of any offense charged in the indictment unless the evidence proves to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt that at some time during the period commencing with the year 1933 and ending with the 17th day of September, 1945, the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was in fact and actually a member of the Communist Party in the United States.

The defendants have offered testimony of witnesses concerning their reputation and, with reference to such testimony, I instruct you that a good reputation, if you believe from all the evidence that the defendants have a good reputation, creates a presumption that the defendants did not commit the crime charged in each and every count in the indictment in this case.

It is often said, in our law, that evidence of good reputation comes to the aid of the presumption of innocence.

> "Evidence of good character is applicable to both the commission of the crime and the grade of the crime. Proof of this character strengthens the presumption of innocence, and by establishing good character a presumption is created that the accused did not commit the crime. This view proceeds upon the theory that a person of good character and high reputation is not likely to have committed the act charged against him."

I instruct you that the Government and the defendants are entitled to the individual opinion of each juror on the issues of fact in this case. It is the duty of each of you to consider and weigh all the evidence in the case and from such evidence to determine, if you can, the question of guilt or innocence of the defendants. When you have so determined that question, you should not be influenced in giving your verdict by the mere fact that any number of all of your fellow jurors may have reached a different conclusion. If, after careful consideration of all the evidence, your mind is fairly made up, and you are convinced that you are right, it will be your duty to stand by your decision. But each juror should freely and fairly discuss with his fellow jurors the evidence and the deductions to be justly drawn therefrom; that it is his duty to do. If, after such a full and fair discussion, any juror is satisfied that his original decision was wrong, then he should unhesitatingly abandon such decision and render his verdict according to such final decision.

It is your duty as jurors not only to receive and to evaluate all evidence admitted before you by the court, but to give your attention to the arguments of counsel as to the weight or interpretation of the evidence. You should not arbitrarily disregard the arguments of counsel in the case unless such arguments are at variance with the evidence itself, for the purpose of permitting extensive argument by both counsel in a major case is that either or all of such counsel may be of assistance to the jury in the exercise of logic or deductive reasoning in an attempt to ascertain the truth.

In listening to such arguments of counsel, you are entitled to be mindful that each represents a partisan theory which he is bound to uphold, although at the same time you are instructed that the interest of a prosecutor in a criminal case is not, and should not be, that the prosecution shall win its case, but only that justice shall be done. The prosecutor is, in a very definite sense, a servant of the law itself, whose two-fold aim is that guilt shall not escape and similarly, that innocence shall not suffer. It is as much the duty of the prosecutor to refrain from improper methods calculated to produce a wrongful conviction as it is for him to use every legitimate means to bring about a just one.

The presumption of innocence, which surrounds and protects any defendant accused of crime under the American system of law, is not a mere literary phrase. It is a real and practical safeguard and it derives from our constitution and from the Bill of Rights, which guarantee to our citizens their general civil liberties.

Our constitution is not a silent or anemic witness to this, or any other criminal proceeding. It will not stand idly by while one of its subjects finds his liberty endangered in the absence of the fullest proof required by the law.

Thus, you are advised that the presumption of innocence surrounds each defendant in this case at the moment of his accusation. It continues to surround each defendant during all stages of the trial and it persists even into the moments of your deliberations in the jury room.

In a proper case, the presumption of innocence alone may suffice to rebut an entire prosecution. In a case such as the present one where each of the defendants has given testimony in his own behalf, the presumption of innocence surrounds each of such defendants during the giving of his testimony.

No such presumption attaches to any witness produced by the prosecution.

Therefore, you are admonished that in your deliberations you must consider all of the evidence adduced throughout this entire case in the light of the presumption of innocence to the end that, if any reasonable doubt exists as to the guilt of any defendant, it will become your duty to find such defendant Not Guilty.

/s/ HARRIS,

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 74-A

In a criminal case the presumption of innocence, which attaches to any defendant, takes precedence over any other presumption.

For example, as to any witness giving testimony in any particular case, a disputable presumption exists to the effect that such witness is telling the truth, although, as you have been advised, this presumption may be repelled by the character or quality of the testimony of the witness, by the witness's manner of testifying, or by impeaching or contradictory evidence.

Any ordinary presumption of our law, such as the presumption concerning witnesses, is outweighed by the presumption of innocence, which attaches only to defendants in criminal cases.

Under our system of law the presumption of innocence is so important that it is deemed better that one hundred guilty persons go free than that one innocent person should suffer an unjust conviction.

I instruct you that a reasonable doubt is an actual doubt that you are conscious of after going over in your minds the entire case, giving consideration to all the testimony and every part of it. If you then feel uncertain and not fully convinced that the defendants are guilty, and believe that you are acting in a reasonable manner, and if you believe that a reasonable man in any matter of like importance would hesitate to act because of such a doubt as you are conscious of having, that is a reasonable doubt, of which the defendants are entitled to have the benefit. I further instruct you that if you have found one fact necessarily inconsistent with the guilt of the defendants, then, in that event, you must return a verdict of Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 78

The doctrine of reasonable doubt means exactly what the phrase implies. It means that state of the record, viewed conscientiously by you, in which you cannot say you feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charges.

True, an imaginary or fanciful doubt will not give rise to the operation of the doctrine of reasonable doubt because the essence of this principle of our law demands a doubt based on reason.

But if, upon your examination of the evidence there does exist a doubt based upon reason as to whether or not the guilt of the defendants or of any defendant, has been satisfactorily shown, then it must follow that you cannot possess an abiding conviction of the truth of the charges.

The defendants are not obliged to produce the greater weight of evidence in order to entitled themselves to an acquittal, because the burden of proof, which is upon the prosecution, never changes.

All tnat the defendants need establish, out of the whole of the evidence, is a reasonable doubt and if a reasonable doubt does exist it will become your duty to find the defendants Not Guilty.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 82

I instruct you that on the 8th day of January, 1940, the Secretary of Labor, who at that time under the laws of the United States was the officer charged with such matters, cancelled a warrant which had been previously issued for the deportation of the defendant Bridges. This warrant had been issued upon the ground that the defendant Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. The cancellation of the warrant occurred after the Secretary of Labor accepted the findings of a Trial Examiner appointed pursuant to the applicable statutes to inquire into the truth or falsity of the charges.

In view of these circumstances I instruct you that you are not to consider any evidence in this case relating to the defendant Bridges' alleged membership in the Communist Party of the United States prior to the 8th day of January, 1940, those matters having been previously adjudicated.

Not Given.

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 83

I instruct you that pursuant to a warrant issued by the Secretary of Labor of the United States under the applicable statutes, a hearing inquiring into the alleged membership of the defendant Bridges in the Communist Party was concluded before a Trial Examiner on September 14, 1939, and that thereafter pursuant to subsequent legal proceedings the said warrant was cancelled and the proceedings closed.

In view of these circumstances I instruct you that you are not to consider any evidence relating to the defendant Bridges' alleged membership in the Communist Party of the United States prior to the 14th day of September, 1939, those matters having been previously adjudicated.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 84

In a criminal case the defendants are not required to produce any evidence in proof of their own asserted innocence.

The defendants themselves may either testify or not testify in their own behalf, as they choose.

Since the defendants are presumed to be innocent in any criminal case, the burden of proof, as I have heretofore instructed you, remains always with the prosecution.

In order to entitle any defendant to a verdict of acquittal it will be sufficient if a reasonable doubt exists; no other burden is cast by law upon the defense.

(This instruction is proposed because of the repeated statements, made in the argument for the Government, upon the subject of whether or not the defense should have produced certain specified witnesses.)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

vs.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES, HENRY SCHMIDT and J. R. ROBERTSON, Defendants.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY SUBMITTED BY DEFENSE, "GIVEN"

GEORGE B. HARRIS,
United States District Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 4

You are instructed that the fact that an indictment has been returned against the defendants in this case by the Grand Jury constitutes no evidence whatsoever against the defendants.

The indictment in this case is merely a formal accusation. It is part of the machinery by which a criminal trial is conducted under our system of law.

To each of the charges in the indictment, which has been read to you, each of the defendants pleaded Not Guilty.

By their respective pleas of Not Guilty the defendants put into issue every fact material to the accusations brought against them.

The burden is thus cast upon the Government to prove the guilt of the defendants to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt.

In the absence of proof of such degree, the defendants are entitled to be acquitted.

Given.

/s/ HARRIS,
Judge.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 5

I instruct you that the Government must prove to your minds, beyond all reasonable doubt, the truth of each and every essential element alleged in each and every count in the indictment and if, from all the evidence in this case, you are not convinced beyond all reasonable doubt of the truth of each and every essential element alleged in each and every count in the indictment you must return a verdict of Not Guilty as to such count, or counts, in the indictment.

I instruct you that each count alleged in the indictment constitutes a separate and distinct crime, and I further instruct you that the Government must prove to your minds, beyond all reasonable doubt, each and every essential element of each and every count alleged in the indictment, and if from all the evidence in this case, you are not convinced beyond all reasonable doubt of the truth of any one essential elements in any of the counts in the indictment then you must return a verdict of Not Guilty as to such count.

A witness is presumed to speak the truth. This presumption, however, may be repelled by the manner in which he testifies, by the character of his testimony, or by evidence affecting his character for truth, honesty and integrity, or his motives, or by contradictory evidence; and the jury are the exclusive judges of the credibility of the witnesses.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 31

I instruct you that there has been no direct evidence presented in this courtroom that the defendants or any of them met together and agreed or conspired with each other or with any other persons to defraud the United States Government in any manner as alleged in the First Count of the indictment. The only evidence of such a meeting together, agreement, or conspiracy is purely circumstantial, if it exists at all, and therefore the instructions I have just given you with respect to the standards which you must apply to circumstantial evidence are to govern you in your consideration of whatever evidence there is of the existence of the conspiracy.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 34

The crux or core or heart of the offense charged in the First Count of the indictment is conspiracy.

If the defendants did not conspire to do the unlawful things which the First Count of the indictment charges them with having conspired to do they are not guilty of the offense thus charged against them.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 35

I instruct you that a conspiracy is a partnership in criminal purposes. (1)

I instruct you that a conspiracy may also be defined as "a combination of two or more persons, by concerted action, to accomplish a criminal or unlawful purpose, or some purpose not in itself criminal or unlawful, by criminal or unlawful means." (2)

If the above elements are not found by you to be present in the case at bar, no conspiracy will have been proved and you must find the defendants Not Guilty as to the first count.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 41

The defendants Schmidt and Robertson ~~are~~ charged in the first count with entering into a conspiracy.

As in the case of any defendant accused of crime, every material allegation of the indictment must be proved before any verdict of guilt can be entertained.

If the jury finds that there is no evidence whatsoever concerning any conspiracy entered into between the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, or between them, or either of them, with any other persons, the charges brought against these defendants must be rejected and a verdict of Not Guilty must be returned, as to the 1st count.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 42

Since the defendants Schmidt and Robertson are charged with entering into a conspiracy to defraud the United States, the question of whether or not they possessed any criminal intent becomes material to the discussions of the jury.

In any crime, as the Court has heretofore explained, there must be a necessary union of act plus intent, and if one of these two elements be lacking, then no crime at all will have been proved.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 49

As concerns the defense offered on behalf of the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, of course, the crucial question is whether or not there was any intent upon the part of either of these defendants to deceive and defraud the Government of the United States.

The asserted good faith, the intent, the purpose and the motive of what was done by the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, constitute the vital and important element of the whole case brought against them. Hence the jury may consider any material explanation of their motives and purposes in determining the character of their participation in the citizenship hearing of the defendant Harry Bridges.

In summary, I instruct you that a statement upon which perjury may be assigned must have the following legal characteristics: (1) It must be competent testimony; (2) it must be material and relevant to the issue; (3) it must be a declaration of fact, and not a conclusion of the witness; (4) it must be such that it would properly influence the tribunal before which it is made, in its determination of the issue under investigation; (5) it must be false; (6) its falsity must be known to the witness when made, and must be wilfully and deliberately deposed to.

> "It is a general rule, supported by an even current of all the authorities, that to constitute perjury the statement alleged to be false must relate to a matter material to the issue, and that the same rule applies where the alleged false testimony was produced before the grand jury. I instruct you that two elements must enter into a determination that corroborative evidence is sufficient. The first element is that the evidence, if true, substantiates the testimony of a single witness who has sworn to the falsity of the alleged perjurious statement. Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 65

The law recognizes various legal relationships that may exist between an individual and an organization. I shall not attempt to enumerate all such possible relationships, but among them, are such as association between a person and an organization, connections of a business, professional, or other similar nature, affiliation and membership.

Mere associations between an individual and an organization do not constitute membership. The same is true of business, professional, social, or other similar connections. A person may approve some or all of the aims or activities of an organization, yet this does not make him a member of such organization. Even sympathy for the program of an organization, or contributions of money to that organization, do not create the legal status of membership.

The law also recognizes that active cooperation with an organization in its activities does not create the legal status of membership. I have also mentioned the legal relationship which the law designates as affiliation. Affiliation is defined as conduct of a person which indicates an adherence to, or a furtherance of, the purposes or objectives of an organization. Even affiliation, if you should find it to exist in this case, would not constitute the same legal status as membership, for the reason that membership refers to something more than, and different from affiliation. Therefore, even if you find that the defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, has established or maintained a relationship with the Communist Party in the United States consisting of associations, cooperation in its activities or objectives, or affiliation, but if you nevertheless are not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty from all the evidence that the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was ever a member of such Communist Party in the United States, then I instruct you that the answers given by the defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, in the naturalization proceedings would be truthful answers and the defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, would not be guilty thereby of false swearing as charged in this indictment.

See Bridges v. Wixon

> 326 U. S. 135; 89 L. ed 2103 wherein Mr. Justice Douglas, speaking for the Court, said in part:
> "The legislative history throws little light on the meaning of 'affiliation' as used in the statute. It imports, however, less than membership but more than sympathy. . . . But he who cooperates with such an organization only in its wholly lawful activities cannot by that fact be said as a matter of law to be 'affiliated' with it. Nor is it conclusive that the cooperation was more than intermittent and showed a rather consistent course of conduct. Common sense indicates that the term 'affiliation' in this setting should be construed more narrowly. Individuals, like nations, may cooperate in a common cause over a period of months or years though their ultimate aims do not coincide. . . . An individual who makes contributions to feed hungry men does not become 'affiliated' with the Communist cause because those men are Communists. . . . Whether intermittent or repeated the act or acts tending to prove 'affiliation' must be of that quality which indicates an adherence to or a furtherance of the purposes or objectives of the proscribed organizations as distinguished from mere cooperation with it in lawful activities. The act or acts must evidence a working alliance to bring the program to fruition."

". . . Affiliation means something less than membership." Page 2105 of 89 L. ed. Supra.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 66-A

One of the basic issues in this case is whether at any time within the period commencing with the year 1933 and ending on the 17th day of September, 1945, the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was a member of the Communist Party in the United States.

This is one of the first issues which you must resolve for the reason that unless you are convinced from the evidence to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt that at some time within that period the defendant Harry Renton Bridges was actually a member of the Communist Party in the United States it will be your duty under the law and under the oath which you have taken as jurors to return verdicts finding each of the three defendants Not Guilty of each offense charged against him.

Because of the nature of the evidence which has been received during the trial and because of the contentions made by the prosecution and by the defense with respect to the significances and the meanings of such evidence, it is necessary that I instruct you concerning the legal meaning of the phrase "membership in the Communist Party in the United States" as used in each of the three counts of the indictment and, more particularly, that I instruct you concerning the distinction between membership in the Communist Party and certain other acts and conditions and/or states of mind which, as a matter of law, fall short of constituting membership in the Communist Party.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 66-D

To be a member of the Communist Party within the meaning of that term as used in the indictment, a person must be more than merely in sympathy with some or all of its aims; he must be more than merely willing to aid it in a casual or intermittent way; he must be more than merely willing to accept aid from it in furtherance of his own objectives or the objectives of his labor union. As a matter of law such sympathies and/or activities as I have just described fall short of constituting affiliation with the Communist Party and as a matter of law even affiliation with the Communist Party falls short of constituting membership in the Communist Party.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 69

From time to time during the reception of evidence presented by the Government objections have been made to testimony concerning alleged activities of the Communist Party or of its alleged members outside of the presence of the defendants in this case.

Upon the occasions the Court permitted such evidence to be introduced for purposes explanatory of the testimony of particular witnesses, but in each of such instances the Court instructed the jury that such testimony was in no wise binding upon the defendants in this case.

By such admonishment the Court meant to inform the jury and the Court now repeats that the jury may not consider any of the evidence heretofore submitted concerning alleged activities of the Communist Party or of its alleged members taking place outside of the presence of the defendants in this case as tending to show the guilt of any defendant at bar as to the charges for which he stands accused.

You may consider such evidence only for the limited purposes indicated by the Court, but you must remember that such evidence may not be used by you in your deliberations in support of any finding of guilt, because such evidence is not binding upon the defendants.

You are instructed that you are not bound to decide in conformity with the declarations of any number of witnesses which do not produce conviction in your minds against a less number, or against a presumption or other evidence satisfying your minds.

Defendants' Proposed Instruction No. 77

I instruct you that the defendants are not required to prove themselves innocent for the reason that, at the outset of the trial, they are presumed to be innocent. Now this presumption of innocence remains with the defendants throughout the entire trial and it stands as a shield to protect them unless the Government has proved to your minds, beyond all reasonable doubt, each and every essential element in each and every count in the indictment. I further instruct you that the burden of proof never shifts to the defendants for the reason that the defendants have entered a plea of Not Guilty and that such plea puts in issue each and every essential element in each and every count in the indictment. I further instruct you that it is your duty to reconcile the evidence in this case with the presumption of innocence.

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY SUBMITTED BY PROSECUTION

"GIVEN"

George B. Harris, United States District Judge.

General Instructions

It is requested that the Court give its usual instructions upon the following subjects:

1. Province of Court and Jury.

2. Effect of indictment.

3. Presumption of innocence, and burden of proof.

4. Duration of presumption of innocence.

5. Definition of reasonable doubt.

6. Presumption that one intends natural consequence of acts.

7. Credibility of witnesses.

8. Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus.

9. Oral admissions (if instruction requested by accused).

10. Failure of accused to testify (if instruction requested by accused).

11. Weighing testimony of accused.

12. Effect of evidence of good character (if applicable to evidence).

13. Arguments of counsel.

14. Duty to construe instructions as a whole.

15. Circumstantial evidence.

Instruction No. 1

The term reasonable doubt means a doubt for which a good reason can be given in the light of all evidence. It means a doubt which is substantial and not merely shadowy. It does not mean a doubt which is merely capricious or speculative. Neither does it mean a doubt born of reluctance on the part of a juror to perform an unpleasant duty, or a doubt arising out of sympathy for a defendant or out of anything other than a candid consideration of all the evidence presented.

(Charge of Murrah, D. J., Western District of Oklahoma. Pietch v. United States, 110 F. (2d) 817 (C.C.A. 10); cert. den. 310 U. S. 648.)

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 2

The law says we have no power to ascertain the certain condition of a man's mind. The best we can do is to infer it more or less satisfactorily from his acts. A person is presumed to intend what he does. A man who performs an act which it is known will produce a particular result is from our common experience presumed to have anticipated that result and to have intended it.

(Allen v. United States,
164 U. S. 492, 496.)

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 3

There are certain well defined rules which apply as to how you shall weigh and consider testimony. Among them are such as these: First, you have the right to observe the witness upon the stand and to consider the impression he makes upon you with respect to telling the truth or telling a falsehood. You have the right to observe his demeanor, his attitude, whether he appears consciously to be telling to the best of his ability the truth, or whether he appears to be suppressing something, or coloring his testimony in a manner not to reveal the truth. If the witness has the appearance of attempting to the best of his ability to tell the truth, and other circumstances tend to establish that situation, then you give full credit to his testimony. But if you are impressed that the witness is attempting to hide something or is not telling the whole truth, then you have the right to give only such consideration to his testimony as you think it is entitled to receive.

In considering these matters, you are confined to the case itself. You are not entitled to go outside of and beyond the facts and circumstances which this trial develops and make an assumption or reach conclusions with respect to the facts in the case, but as you said in answer to questions when being selected as jurors, you could and would try this case solely upon the facts and law as they are presented here.

Judge.

Instruction No. 4

Expressed in another way, conspiracy is an unlawful agreement entered into by two or more persons to commit a crime against the United States, or to defraud the United States. To sustain a charge of conspiracy, it must be shown that one of the members of the conspiracy did some act, commonly called an overt act, in furtherance of the object of the conspiracy. The overt act need not be criminal in nature if considered separately and apart from the conspiracy; it may be as innocent as the act of a man walking across the street or driving an automobile or using a telephone. But if during the existence of the conspiracy the overt act is done by one of the conspirators to effect the object of the conspiracy, the crime is complete, and it is complete as to every party found by you to be a member of the conspiracy, no matter which one of the parties did the overt act.

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 5

In order to find the existence of a conspiracy, it is not necessary that you find that all these defendants met together and formed an express agreement, for probably when men enter into a plan of the character here charged, they do not expressly agree. Much probably is left to unexpressed understanding and it is not necessary that there should have been any time at which all met and with any formal expression of words agreed upon a plan or conspiracy. They are usually entered into more or less secretly and carried out in a manner so as to leave as little proof or evidence for detection by anyone later. Rarely in conspiracies is there direct proof of the purposes and intentions of the parties; but direct proof is not indispensable. The object of a conspiracy and a defendant's connection with it may be partly or entirely revealed as shown by the facts and the circumstances and the reasonable inferences and conclusions to be drawn from them. But every fact and every circumstance from which the inference is drawn and a conclusion based, must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

If persons act together for a common purpose, and that purpose is the illegal act charged as the object to be accomplished, and the acts of the parties so fit together as to show a common understanding or concert of action as to things to be done, that shows a conspiracy.

(United States v. Potash, et al., District Court for Southern District of New York; affirmed as to four defendants, United States v. Potash, 118 F. (2d) 54 (C.C.A. 2); cert. den. United States v. Potash, 313 U. S. 584).

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 8

I think I should further charge you that all persons working together in the furtherance of a common design are members of the conspiracy, although the part anyone is to take is subordinate, or is to be executed at a remote distance. It is not necessary that each conspirator participate in each step or stage of the common general design. One of them may do one thing, another may do a different thing. Some may take major parts, while the participation of others may be in a minor degree. The mere knowledge, acquiescence, or approval of an unlawful act, without cooperation, or agreement to cooperate, is not sufficient to constitute one a party to a conspiracy. It requires more than proof of a mere passive cognizance of a crime on the part of a defendant to sustain a charge of conspiracy to commit it. And you must find that the defendant did some act, or made some agreement, showing an intention to participate in some way, in such conspiracy.

One who aids or abets a conspiracy, after its formation, with understanding of its purpose, becomes a party to it. One who comes into a conspiracy after it has been formed, with knowledge of its existence, and with a purpose of forwarding its designs, is equally as guilty as though he had participated in its original formation.

> (United States v. Braverman, et al., United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan; affirmed, 125 F. (2d) 283; reversed on other grounds, viz., for resentencing of defendants, 317 U. S. 49.)

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 10

You should especially look to the interest which the respective witnesses have in the trial or in its result. Where the witness has a direct personal interest in the result of the trial the temptation is strong to color, pervert, or withhold the facts. The law permits the defendant, at his own request, to testify in his own behalf. The defendants here have availed themselves of this privilege. Their testimony is before you and you must determine how far it is credible. The deep personal interest which they may have in the result of the trial should be considered by the jury in weighing their evidence and in determining how far or to what extent, ~~if at all~~, it is worthy of credit.

The fact that one is a defendant does not condemn him as unworthy of belief, but at the same time it creates an interest greater than that of any other witness, and to that extent affects the question of credibility. It is a familiar rule that the relations of a witness to the matter to be decided are legitimate subjects of consideration in respect to the weight to be given to his testimony.

Instruction No. 11

On the question of the materiality of the alleged perjurious testimony, I charge you that before you would be justified in finding the defendants guilty you must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt by the evidence presented in the case—

(1) That Harry Bridges did in fact apply for citizenship, as alleged in the indictment;

(2) That Harry Bridges appeared before Judge Foley, as alleged, in the naturalization proceeding.

(3) That he was duly sworn, as alleged.

(4) That, after having been duly sworn, he gave under oath the testimony as alleged, that is, that he was not a member of the Communist Party and had never been a member of the Communist Party;

(5) That the testimony so given was false;

(6) That Harry Bridges, at the time he so testified, knew of the falsity of his testimony; and

(7) That he gave the false testimony wilfully and with criminal intent to deceive.

On the question of materiality of the alleged false testimony, however, I further charge you that it is my duty, as the trial judge, to determine whether or not the alleged false testimony was material testimony in the naturalization proceeding before Judge Foley. I charge you, therefore, that if you find that Harry Bridges gave the answers as alleged in the indictment, then such answers were material answers in the naturalization proceeding.

To state it more briefly, whether or not the alleged false testimony was given in the circumstances alleged is a fact question for you to decide. Whether or not the ~~alleged~~ false testimony was material testimony is a law question for the court to decide. I charge you that the alleged false testimony was material, and that if you find the ~~alleged~~ false testimony was given as alleged you are not to concern yourselves further with the question of materiality of the testimony.

Sinclair v. United States
  279 U. S. 263, 298

The 2nd, 3rd, 5th, and 10th Circuits hold materiality a question of law for the trial judge to determine. The Supreme Court denied certiorari in the Carroll case. We know of no cases to the contrary.

As to the Luse case in this Circuit, 49 F. 2d 241, the opinion is not contrary to the other circuits. It clearly recognizes that materiality is a question of law, and that whether or not the testimony was in fact given is a jury question.

In that case appellant himself urged upon the trial court that materiality was a question of law for the court to decide (p. 245) and not a proper question to submit to the jury. Appellant complained that the prior testimony was prejudicial; that "it was a psychological impossibility for the jury to follow" an instruction to the effect that the transcript of testimony in the former trial was for the court and not the jury.

The 9th Circuit opinion then goes on to recognize that materiality is a "question of law to be determined by the trial judge." "What the evidence was, and what the pleadings were" upon the former trial, "is a question of fact. Whether the testimony alleged to be perjured was material to such issues is a question of law."

A careful reading of page 245 shows that the trial judge's instructions took from the jury the question whether or not the alleged false testimony was in fact given. Court and counsel assumed the pleadings and the transcript conclusive upon the parties on that issue of fact, but counsel did not stipulate it. Therefore, the jury under the court's instructions had nothing upon which to base a finding that the alleged false testimony was even given.

The stipulation as to accuracy of the transcript did not remove "from the consideration of the jury the question of fact involved * * * namely, as to whether the evidence offered to show materiality was actually given in the former trial." In the following paragraph on page 246 the opinion confirms that materiality is a question for the trial judge. See the following language of the opinion on page 246: "Assuming that the evidence read from the transcript was actually given upon the trial of the former case, it was for the court to say whether or not the false evidence was material, and for the jury to say whether the false evidence was given wilfully."

There is nothing in a subsequent opinion in the same case after retrial that is contrary. (64 F. 2d 776; cert. den. 290 U. S. 651.)

Instruction No. 12

Each count of the indictment alleges that "Harry Renton Bridges had in truth and in fact belonged to and been a member of the Communist Party in the United States from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945."

The Court charges you that dates do not have to be proved precisely as alleged, it being sufficient if the allegation of the indictment and proof as to dates substantially correspond.

Instruction No. 13

The motive of the prosecution is not relevant to the ordinary criminal procedure; the material questions ordinarily are whether the defendant has committed the act or acts alleged and whether the act or act constitute a crime. In the instant case, the basic crime charged against the defendant, Bridges, is that of perjury. Though a defendant in a criminal case may show by proper evidence the hostility, bias, or interest of any witness, the motive of the prosecution in instituting the present-criminal action is immaterial unless you believe that such alleged motive constitutes evidence establishing the innocence or guilt of the accused.

Instruction No. 14

In the trial of the case, it became necessary for both the prosecution and the defense to call upon persons with asserted knowledge of the facts to serve as witnesses. Neither side can control the background, the experience, the associations, nor the antecedents of its witnesses.

In the course of the present trial, many terms have been used by counsel to characterize certain individuals on the witness stand. Such terms as labor spy, stool pigeon, liar, perjurer, reformed Communist, and confessed Communist have been applied to ~~several~~ witnesses. In passing upon the credibility or lack of credibility of witnesses characterized by such terms of opprobrium, the jury shall apply the same standards that it utilizes for evaluating the testimony of any other witness.

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 15

In order to delineate for the jury what this case is about as to issues and background, I should point out clearly what it is Not about:

We are not concerned with the following issues that have crept in by insinuation and by indirection, but which may be regarded as immaterial:

(1) Neither the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union nor any other labor organization or association is on trial.

(2) The relative merit or demerit of the A. F. of L. as compared to the CIO is not a question for determination.

(3) Asserted police brutality in connection with the 1934 waterfront strike and with respect to other incidents referred to by the witnesses should not be taken by you as tending to prejudice the prosecution in this case, nor should any sympathy be extended to the defendants, or either of them, by and as a result of such activities. The said issue is foreign to the case before this Court and jury.

(4) Asserted wire tapping by any Government agency or any other persons is not an issue in this case, and the defendants do not claim that any evidence introduced by the Government was obtained as a result of the alleged wire tapping. Therefore, the whole matter of wire tapping is not relevant to the issues in this trial and should be disregarded by you.

(5) Communism, as such, is not on trial in this case.

(6) The prior deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges held before Bureau of Immigration Examiners are in no way in issue in this case, nor are any Court decisions, which have been frequently mentioned, relevant to the issues in this trial. They should consequently be disregarded by you.

(7) The merits or demerits of any internal controversies between Labor Unions or Labor Leaders are not in dispute in this trial.

Given.

/s/ GEORGE B. HARRIS,
Judge.

Instruction No. 16

I charge you that whether or not the defendant, Bridges, was a member of the Communist Party is a question of fact which you are to determine from all the evidence. In reaching this determination, you are to consider all the evidence offered by the respective parties bearing upon this issue.

Membership in the Communist Party may be established by direct as well as circumstantial evidence and by statements or admissions of a party whose membership is in question.

In this case the Government has offered testimony to the effect that the defendant, Bridges, made application for membership, paid dues and received certificates of membership or books evidencing membership, and that the defendant, Bridges, was elected to office in the Communist Party. Government witnesses have testified that the defendant, Bridges, on one occasion stated he was a member of the Communist Party and suggested that others join the Communist Party. Witnesses have also testified that the defendant, Bridges, was present and participated in meetings the attendance at which was restricted to Communist Party members.

In determining whether or not the defendant, Bridges, was a member of the Communist Party, you should take into consideration the testimony offered by the Government to establish membership.

as well as the denials of membership and all the other evidence offered by the defendant, Bridges.

STATEMENT OF POINTS TO BE RELIED ON

Come now the defendants above named and pursuant to the rules in such case made and provided, hereby state the points upon which they intend to rely in connection with the appeal in the above-entitled cause:

I.

The defendants were substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of the misconduct of the Court.

II.

The defendants were substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of the misconduct of counsel for the Government.

III.

The defendants were substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of the fraud, corruption and bribery of witnesses by agents of the prosecution.

IV.

The Court erred in denying a directed verdict of acquittal for the defendants and each of them.

V.

The verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence.

VI.

The verdict is not supported by substantial evidence.

VII.

The Court erred in charging the jury and in refusing to charge the jury as requested.

VIII.

The Court erred in denying the defendants' motions for a mistrial.

IX.

The Court erred in sustaining objections to the admissibility of evidence tendered by the defendants and each of them.

X.

The Court erred in admitting evidence tendered by the Government over the objections of the defendants and each of them.

XI.

The Court erred in denying the defendants' motions, and each of them, to dismiss the indictment:

(a) The return of the indictment and the bringing of the prosecution denied to the defendants, and particularly to the defendant Harry Renton Bridges, the due process of law guaranteed by the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) The prior proceedings were res judicata of the issues involved in this proceeding.

(c) The indictment failed to state facts sufficient to constitute an offense against the United States.

(d) The prosecution was barred by the operation of the statute of limitations.

(e) The question to which the alleged false answer was given was not material to the naturalization proceeding.

For the Defendants Henry Schmidt and
J. R. Robertson:

JAMES MARTIN MacINNIS, ESQ.

The Court: May it be stipulated, gentleme that the jurors are present, together with the fou alternate jurors?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: So stipulated?

Mr. McMillan: So stipulated.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen, we have no arrived at the time of the trial when the gover ment will outline for you in a general fashion t nature of the prosecution and the proof they expe to elicit. You may make your opening statemen

Opening Statement on Behalf of the Government

Mr. McMillan: May it please the court, and yo ladies and gentlemen of the jury: At this time is appropriate, indeed it is required of the gover ment, that it make its opening statement of t nature of this case and of what it expects to pro in order to substantiate the charges in the indi ment against the defendants on trial here, M Bridges, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson.

Now it will necessarily be short, rather sketch as it were. The purpose is simply to advise y generally of the nature of the case and concisel of the evidence we expect to introduce here. Th will enable you, advising you so generally, to follow the proof as it comes in, the evidence, more understandingly as it comes in, unfolds and [477*] develops. It should be kept steadily in sight, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, that statements of counsel at this time or at any stage of the case by any counsel, are not evidence. The evidence, as his Honor has stated, must come from the lips of the witnesses who will appear here under oath upon that stand, and from documents and records which will be introduced here for your inspection, examination and consideration. Always these matters are under the control, the guidance and instructions of his Honor as to the law.

Now the indictment in this case reads as follows. I shall give it to you in full. This indictment was returned by the Federal Grand Jury for this district on May 25, 1949. It charges the defendants in this case as follows: First count: The Grand Jury charges that Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, hereinafter called "said defendants," on or about the 23rd day of June 1945, and continuing thereafter until on or about October 1, 1945, and for some time prior thereto, the exact time being to the Grand Jurors unknown, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said division and district, that is to say, in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, did conspire with each other and with divers other persons to the Grand Jury unknown, to defraud the United States by impairing, obstructing and defeating the proper administration of its naturalization [478] laws in the manner following, to wit, by having said defendant, Harry Renton Bridges, fraudulently petition for and obtain naturalization in a naturalization proceeding in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, by falsely and fraudulently stating and representing to the said court in said proceeding No. 28152, in the records of said Superior Court, that he, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges, had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States; that said statement and representation so agreed to be made and made as aforesaid, as said defendants and each of them at all times herein mentioned well knew, were false and fraudulent in this; that said defendant Harry Renton Bridges had in truth and in fact belonged to and been a member of the Communist Party in the United States from the year 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945; that said statement and representation were material to said naturalization proceeding; that in pursuance of such conspiracy and during the existence thereof, and in furtherance to and to effect the object thereof, said defendants respectively did and performed the following overt acts:

* Page numbering appearing at top of page of original Reporter's Transcript of Record.

1. on the 23rd day of June, 1945, defendant Harry Renton Bridges filed at the office of Immigration and Naturalization Service in the City of San Francisco, State of California, an application for certificate of arrival and preliminary form [479] for petition of naturalization;

2, on or about the 6th day of August, 1945, said defendant Harry Renton Bridges appeared before Lloyd H. Garner, a naturalization examiner of the United States, at San Francisco, California, in the office of the County Clerk, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and gave testimony in the matter of the application of said defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization;

3, on or about the 8th day of August 1945, said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, at the office of the County Clerk in and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, signed as witnesses a petition for naturalization in the case of defendant Harry Renton Bridges;

4, on or about the 17th day of September, 1945, said defendants Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, and each of them, appeared in the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the City and County of San Francisco and gave testimony in support of the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization.

Second count: The Grand Jury further charges that on the 17th day of September 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, Hon. Thomas M. Foley, Superior Judge, [480] presiding, there came on for hearing a naturalization proceeding, No. 28152 in the records of said Superior Court on the petition of defendant Harry Renton Bridges for naturalization under the Nationality Act of October 14, 1940; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges then and there was called and produced as a witness in said proceeding then on for hearing and took an oath before said court that he, the said defendant, would testify truthfully in said proceeding, and said court then and there had competent authority to administer said oath and did administer it; that defendant Harry Renton Bridges did then and there wilfully and knowingly make a false statement under oath in certain matters which were material to the issue of said proceedings then and there being heard, giving the following answers to questions asked, to wit,

> "Q. Do you now, or have you ever belonged to the Communist Party in the United States?
> "A. I have not, I do not.";

that said answers, so stated and testified to by defendant Harry Renton Bridges, were, and each of them was, as said defendant then and there knew, wilfully false and contrary to his said oath; and said defendant did not then and there believe said answers or any of them to be true; and that said answers were, and each of them was, then and there believed and known by him to be false; that in truth and in fact said defendant, at the time of so testifying, belonged to and was a member of the [481] Communist Party in the United States and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945; that said statement and testimony of said defendant and said answers given by him as aforesaid were upon a material matter and were material in and to the issues of said proceeding.

Third count: The Grand Jury further charges that said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on or about the said 17th day of September, 1945, at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, within said division and district, did wilfully and knowingly encourage, aid, advise and assist a person, to wit, Harry Renton Bridges, not then and there entitled therefor, to obtain, accept and receive a certificate of naturalization which was to be procured and was procured by fraud, as said defendants and each of them at all times herein mentioned well knew, said fraud consisting of false and fraudulent statements and representations made in a naturalization proceeding before the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, No. 28152 in the records of said Superior Court; that said Harry Renton Bridges did not belong to the Communist Party in the United States and had never belonged to the Communist Party in the United States, whereas in truth and in fact said Harry Renton Bridges then and there, as said defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson and each of them then [482] and there well knew, belonged to and was a member of the Communist Party in the United States and had belonged to and been a member of said Communist Party in the United States from 1933 up to and including said 17th day of September, 1945.

Now ladies and gentlemen, in support of the indictment which I have just read, the government will produce here witnesses whose testimony will show and establish to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt that the defendants named, Bridges, Schmidt and Robertson, were, on the 17th day of September, 1945, members of the Communist Party of the United States. We shall prove not only the fact that each of these defendants was a member of the Communist Party, but that each knew that the other was such.

We will prove to you that in the summer of 1945 the defendant Bridges was an alien and that in June of that year he filed with the office of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization in the City of San Francisco, an application for certificate of arrival and preliminary form for petition for naturalization; that on or about August 8 of that year the defendant Bridges appeared before Lloyd H. Garner, a naturalization examiner of the United States, at the City of San Francisco, in the office of the County Clerk in and for the City of San Francisco, and then and there gave certain testimony concerning his application for naturalization; that on the same day, August 8, 1945, the defendants Schmidt and Robertson [483] appeared with the defendant Bridges at the office of the County Clerk and before the naturalization examiner of the United States, Mr. Lloyd H. Garner, and that they, the defendants Schmidt and Robertson, signed as witnesses the petition for naturalization of the defendant Bridges; that on the 17th day of September, 1945, all three defendants gave testimony in support of the petition for naturalization of the defendant Bridges before the Superior Court of the State of California in and for the City and County of San Francisco, and that in consequence of the testimony of the three defendants, a certificate of naturalization was fraudulently obtained by the defendant Bridges.

We shall prove to this jury to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt that the defendants, Bridges, Schmidt and Robertson, conspired and agreed that they would make false answers to questions put to them in the naturalization proceedings referred to already, in that they conspired and agreed that they and each of them would deny membership in the Communist Party with respect to themselves and that they, the defendants, Schmidt, Robertson, would deny that they had any knowledge of the membership of the defendant Bridges in the Communist Party.

We shall thus establish that the three defendants and each of them conspiring with each other to defraud the United States by impairing, obstructing and defeating the proper [484] administration of the naturalization laws of the United States.

Now ladies and gentlemen, specifically, with reference to the defendant Bridges, we shall prove to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt that on the 17th day of September, 1945, and before the Hon. Thomas M. Foley, Superior Judge, when he, the defendant Bridges, upon his oath stated that he was not then nor had he ever been a member of the Communist Party of the United States, that he wilfully and knowingly made a false statement; for we shall prove that on that day and many years preceding that day, he was an active, energetic, dues-paying member of the Communist Party of the United States. We shall show the extreme care and caution which both the defendant Bridges and the Communist Party exercised over the many years of his membership to conceal that fact, even from the rank and file of its own membership. We will prove it by the positive testimony of men and women who, by reason of their own position in certain labor organizations and by reason of their own position in the Communist Party, are able to testify to and will so testify positively, to the fact that defendant Bridges during the per[illegible]d alleged in the indictment was a member of the Communist Party of the United States.

Ladies and gentlemen, we shall produce witnesses here whose testimony will show and establish to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt that some time late in 1933 or [485] early 1944, at a place to be described by such witness or witnesses, the defendant Bridges was solicited to join the Communist Party of the United States as a member. We shall prove that he agreed to become a member. We shall prove that he signed an application for membership, that his application was accepted, and that a membership card in the Communist Party was issued and given to him. We shall prove that at that time, and in conformity with the Communist Party plan of keeping secret the membership of persons prominently identified with the labor movement, the membership card issued to the defendant Harry Bridges was issued in the name of Harry Dorgan, that being the family name of his mother. We shall prove that thereafter the defendant Bridges paid dues as a card-carrying member of the Communist Party, and that his old card was turned in annually and a new card issued, though by a procedure quite different from that usually followed—but followed in the instance of the defendant Bridges for the purpose as stated already, of keeping the fact of his membership from becoming too widely known.

These facts we shall prove by the Communist Party member who was commissioned by the district organizer of the Communist Party to solicit the membership of the defendant Bridges, and who in fact procured his signature to that application; and by the unit organizer of the Communist Party, to whom the Bridges membership book was given for the purpose of a more [486] direct delivery to the district membership secretary.

Ladies and gentlemen, we shall prove by witnesses produced here who were close to the defendant Bridges in the Communist Party and in some instances both in the Communist Party and in the labor movement, that he has attended a number of meetings of top faction Communists, meetings the attendance at which was restricted to persons who were only party members. We shall prove the purpose of these meetings, we shall show present at some of these meetings top functionaries of the Communist Party, and we shall show the role of the defendant Bridges, played at these meetings, the times and places of all such meetings shall be given and described by the witnesses testifying.

We shall show by the testimony of those who were present and who cast their ballots for him, that the defendant Bridges, and again under an assumed name—this time under the name of Rossi—was elected in 1936 and again in 1938 to membership in the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the United States at the national convention of the party held in each of these two years. We shall prove that the defendant Bridges at least on one occasion took issue on a question of policy with the leadership of the Communist Party, which thereupon gave consideration to the matter of his expulsion. This we shall prove by witnesses who were present when and where the expulsion was under consideration. We shall prove [487] to your complete satisfaction that the defendant Bridges was not only a member of the Communist Party, but a party-disciplined Communist. By similar character and degree of proof we shall show that the defendants Schmidt and Robertson were active members of the Communist Party; that they attended Communist Party meetings at which the defendant Bridges was present, that they knew defendant Bridges to be a member of the Communist Party of the United States, and that they not only wilfully and knowingly conspired with the defendant

Bridges to defraud the United States, but that they aided and abetted the defendant Bridges to procure his, Bridges', naturalization by fraud.

In short, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the government intends to, and will, prove to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt, every material allegation contained in the indictment, and in so proving it, to the degree which I have stated, we shall respectfully ask and confidently expect at your hands a verdict of guilty on all three counts of the indictment.

The Court: Mr. McMillan, do you desire to make a correction with respect to the date? You mentioned 1933 and then adverted to the following date, 1944; did you mean 1934?

Mr. McMillan: 1934.

The Court: You wish the record corrected accordingly? Mr. McMillan: I do. [488]

The Court: Do you desire to make an opening statement, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I would like to.

Opening Statement on Behalf of the Defendants

Mr. Hallinan: Now, if the court please, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury, there is no use reiterating the purpose of the opening statement. As the court says, it channels the testimony so that the court and the jury know the direction that the direct examination and cross-examination of witnesses is taking, and the purpose that counsel has in mind in asking questions while the witnesses are out of the room, and the jury will know when the witness is on the stand the questions being asked; what is the probable effect that is intended to be adduced from it. And frequently, and almost always, I would say, defendants reserve the opening statement until the close of the prosecution's case, so that they may know exactly what is being said against them, that they may form their defenses in the light of the testimony that has been introduced, and they may not expose their hands in advance. And particularly where people are guilty of a charge, that is always the only procedure that can be safely followed.

However, we have no such intention. We intend to lay all the cards face up on the table for the court, jury and prosecution to determine what we have to say, what we mean and what we are trying to do. [489]

Now, as has been said to you, too, the statements of counsel in an opening statement are not evidence and cannot be accepted by you as evidence, yet it must follow, it must be taken for granted, that in making an opening statement an attorney puts his credit at the risk of what he says in this statement. He would certainly expect to excite the animosity of the jury by saying something that he did not sincerely believe and that he did not sincerely expect to prove. Therefore, in what I say in the opening statement, you may take this, that I have bound myself to this obligation, that anything that we tell you we will prove conclusively by evidence introduced from witnesses upon the stand—not by any arguments, suggestions, or anything of that kind, but by clear and unequivocal evidence.

But one might say, well, how can you assume to prognosticate so accurately what you are going to be able to do? And I will say this, that we can tell you because it is an old story. As has been indicated to you before—and in suggesting this I am not going to mention the results of these matters or comment on the propriety or impropriety of them—but this is the fifth inquiry into this subject.

Mr. Donohue: Excuse me, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: Go ahead.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, this is not the fifth, this is the first. We have raised this question with [490] Mr. Hallinan before. I think he knows the government's position, and I think he knows your Honor's.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't want to mislead anyone.

The Court: I think Mr. Hallinan knows the position of the court. We made it clear in the examination of the jurors upon their qualifications, and I am sure he does not desire to transgress upon my ruling, any ruling of the court.

Mr. Hallinan: That is correct, but there is going to be—Why conceal the thing? Where witnesses are going to be cross-examined as to this testimony in other proceedings. So, as I say, we are not going to discuss what happened in any such proceeding or anything of that kind; just as in discussing the motives of witnesses that will be produced here we are not going to, in this statement—though we might in closing argument—characterize or attempt to define or fix a moral sanction upon their conduct. But not now. I am just going to say, whether or not, the controversy exists between a witness who is going to take the stand and my client, without saying who is right or wrong, and let the jury start off in the trial with the assumption that maybe Mr. Bridges is wrong in it. So I am not going into the merits or demerits of it. And as counsel says, this is the first criminal charge that has been brought. The reason, as I say, that I can express myself so freely is that this is the third open, full dress inquiry before an inquiring administrative body or court which passed [491] upon this exact question.

Mr. Donohue: I must object, if your Honor please.

The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: May I further object, if your Honor please, on the ground that this is not an opening statement by Mr. Hallinan; it is an argument. His tone is argumentative.

The Court: Well, you might consider this in a preliminary sense and not anticipate. I have sustained the objection. I think Mr. Hallinan realizes the ruling.

Mr. Hallinan: Now counsel has said that they will prove certain things to a moral certainty and beyond any reasonable doubt. I will tell you that they will not prove any of those things that they have claimed they are going to prove, so that even scintilla of honest suspicion exists. If they could prove the things that they say they are going to prove, why then, hereafter there will be no certainty in life at all, but everything will be chance, fiction and illusion. That they will produce witnesses who will testify under oath to the facts and conclusions that he has predicted, I freely grant. And the chief reason why I wish to make an opening statement at this time at all, is to direct the jury's inquiry as each witness takes the stand into the reasons why that witness is testifying to what is not the truth. The jury, viewing each witness in the light of what I am going to tell you, will be able to determine whether or not that witness is [492] probably lying, and will be able to determine that almost as soon as the witness takes the stand.

Now we have been told that counsel is going to prove that there was a conspiracy. And there was. There was a conspiracy and a criminal conspiracy. And when a jury is required to determine whether a conspiracy exists, the causes for it, what its purposes may be, it is never sufficient merely to look at the final product; but the jury must go down into the sources and beginnings, the hidden roots and channels, the veins and arteries that supply the final product. In this case a conspiracy will be proven, and the jury is going to see something like—not to use this as argument, but merely by way of illustration—what are those cryptogramic fungi that grow in the jungles of the East Indies that have their roots in mycelium, deep hidden in the dark ground beneath the undergrowth of the thickets, that spring up in a single night and establish themselves there, monstrous, seven feet in diameter, fetid, nauseous, horrible—grow at a terrific speed in the darkness of the jungle in the night and as soon as the sunlight shines upon them in the morning, wither and fade away.

The conspiracy that you are going to have proven to you here—as counsel has [illegible] there is a conspiracy, and we agree—will disclose itself as having certain tap roots that penetrate into the soil from which it derives its sustenance. [493] I will presently explain to you the direction from which each root draws, because the directions are disparate and in many instances one would think contradictory and even hostile. But they all accumulate together to accomplish the same purpose. And these roots feed upon greed, hate, malice, man's inhumanity to man. Because the conspiracy that will be demonstrated here to a moral certainty and beyond any reasonable doubt is not a conspiracy of these poor men to help one of them attain citizenship; we will show the jury that the witnesses who take the stand, one and all, the principals who directed and placed them upon the stand—I am not referring to counsel, because the principals are outside the scope of what counsel has to say—but the persons who animate the whole growth of this noxious plant are engaged in a mean and criminal and fraudulent and inhuman conspiracy to destroy one man. Why should people come forward and do the things that you are going to see people do? Things that are going to shock you! I would not impose upon the credulity of the jury, and I would reserve these matters to a closing argument, so as to allow the jury to slowly assimilate the impact of this one uncontrovertible fact, because a jury might think, "Well, how can this fellow expect us to believe so remarkable a tale as that on his mere statement?" And I would not attempt to pronounce in advance these things, except that I know they will be proven to a moral certainty and beyond any reasonable doubt, because [494] I know that they cannot and will not even be attempted to be honestly denied or questioned, even, by counsel for the government. And I would not say them if I thought that even the extremest diligence of counsel could conceal them from you.

To determine why a great number of witnesses—because in this case there are 125 witnesses that we know of, 125 witnesses!—to determine why those people should enter into a conspiracy which springs to its worst flower in this court room, it is necessary to go back quite a few years to around the time that counsel mentioned, 1933 or '34. And then the first branch of the conspiracy started to grow, somewhat remote from these orderly halls which we now occupy—down in a bloody and terrible struggle on the San Francisco waterfront.

Harry Renton Bridges was born in Australia in 1901, of what counsel consider a respectable family. They weren't even working class people. His father had been an official of the government, descendant of some of those old Irish who immigrated there, probably under force during the rebellions of 1798 that we younger Irish used to recite poems about in our childhood. And he followed the sea himself, became an ordinary sailor before the mast. Interested himself in the Australian labor movement. At that time, back in 1920, a very advanced and liberal labor movement. Did all sorts of things there that we consider now to be quite great achievements in labor relations. Minimum wages, maximum hours, vacations with pay, [495] old age retirement funds after men had worked even as a laborer for a reasonable length of time, maternity leaves with pay for women who were going to have children. But Harry Bridges carried in his heart a love for America, a love of the United States, that surpassed the love of his native land. And he always dreamed of the day when he would come to the United States and become an American citizen in the land of ultimate freedom, justice and equality. And so he carried his life that finally he landed in San Francisco as a common seaman. He stepped from the deck to the wharf and engaged his activities in the longshore occupation. Without making any criticism, other than to say that the situation existed, and without ascribing it to anybody's fault, possibly the mere chance and so forth, he found the conditions on the waterfront such as he thought, rightly or wrongly—I don't care which—should be changed in manners that a great many of the men on the waterfront were hopeful of achieving.

The only union that was in existence at the time was an organization of what is known as a company union, whose primary function was to see that persons who were a little bit too radical in their union notions were quickly separated from any further activity on the docks. He, just as one of the grains of and among all the men along the waterfront, participated in the formation of a union consisting at that time of 400 men. They were immediately blacklisted, put off [496] the waterfront and unable to obtain any work there. And any effort to produce an independent union was by that example immediately crushed and nullified. Bridges entered upon a career of poverty. And that career of poverty was all——

Mr. Donohue: Pardon me; if your Honor please, I know that the court allows a wide latitude of questions with respect to opening statement, but I can see in no way wherein the statements being made now by Mr. Hallinan constitute an offer of proof on the charges which are contained in this indictment. I wish to respectfully say to your Honor that his remarks ought to be circumscribed within a fair field which may be considered as an offer of proof to the allegations of the indictment, not resting purely as a personal history of one of the defendants.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. The very sentence that I was finishing will be pertinent in this inquiry and was inquired into in the court by Judge Foley. That is the reason why he did not become a citizen at an earlier time. That will be pertinent in this case, because that was one of the matters that was inquired into and will appear in the transcript that is produced here. If counsel objects to my discussion of Mr. Bridges' economic situation at that time, I don't want to offend him, but I think it is perfectly proper. What is your Honor's ruling?

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you. [497]

The wages of longshoremen at that time were averaging around $10 a week, and it was impossible for Bridges to obtain the $20 to get a citizenship. That is one of the reasons that was deferred to the late time that it was.

Now with the coming of the NRA and the accession to the presidency of Franklin Roosevelt, an impetus was given to workingmen's organizations. They were encouraged, directly, under the NRA law, to engage in activities for their protection and the employers were required to deal with them collectively. So a great impetus was given to the union movement along the Pacific Coast, and an American Federation of Labor union, an AFofL union, called the "International Longshore Association," or, as it will probably be called here, the "ILA,"—because in these unions we have as many alphabetical designations that you have in dealing with agencies of the U. S. government, you finally lose all sight of what they mean. This union came up into new vigor, because of the encouragement under the NRA regulations. And the men united in a union that became quite strong and vigorous.

At the same time, other ILA unions, or other AFofL unions, such as the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, and organizations of that kind, received a similar impetus of vigor. The time appearing propitious in the year 1934, a demand was made by this new union upon the shipowners and dock employers of the entire Pacific Coast for certain demands which the union [498] considered essential and which the owners considered not. Simply put it that way again, without discussing the merits.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, we have reached the afternoon recess period.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, your Honor.

The Court: And without interrupting you unduly, we full well appreciate the genesis behind the labor movement in the United States, as well as in the State of California; and perhaps the waterfront travail that is written large in the history of this city as well as the state. Much of it is now written in granite, probably, in the history of this state. I cannot see altogether at this juncture,—I am not interrupting you unduly, I want to feel the matter out as we go along.—I cannot feel at this juncture how this historical narrative, however interesting it may be to all of us, would tend to prove or disprove any of the material allegations in this indictment contained. The focal point, as I take it, of the indictment has to do with the alleged false swearing of Mr. Bridges, the alleged conspiracy of his colleagues, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson, before the Hon. Thomas M. Foley, having to do with the matters now, which have become rather deeply engrained upon our memory in this trial. The question was asked him at that time whether he was or had been a Communist. He denied it categorically. Now I suppose, in the natural genesis and development of your historical statement, [499] that you will come to the matter of the motives underlying these witnesses——

Mr. Hallinan: Correct.

The Court: I assume that is the next step?

Mr. Hallinan: That is the next step.

The Court: In the natural and logical order of things.

Mr. Hallinan: And immediately.

The Court: I would assume that to be the juncture.

Mr. Hallinan: That's correct.

The Court: And if we reach that point, as to the motives of these individuals, be it good or bad, and in treating the matter historically as you are, reaching that particular subdivision of your thinking, which is always logical, we come to this natural inquiry: How or in what manner would these people, how could they, be they affected by improper motives—I mean these persons 125 in number who allegedly are going to swear themselves falsely in this court room,——

Mr. Hallinan: I will show you, Judge.

The Court: That is, as you point out. How are they, in what manner would they, cause Mr. Bridges to swear falsely, if he did swear falsely, before the Hon. Thomas Foley?

Mr. Hallinan: That isn't the point. The point is, why do they testify he swore falsely?

The Court: We will take a recess and you think that over for a few minutes.

(Recess.) [500]

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you. It must be understood, ladies and gentlemen, and remembered that Mr. McMillan stated that the witnesses who would be produced here were going to testify to events that happened back in 1933 and 1934. So we are compelled to go back to 1933 and 1934 to explain the reasons why they are doing so. Now, His Honor suggested the controversy on the waterfront might be somewhat remote to be mentioned at this time, and I might say this: While the Judge and all San Franciscans are probably very familiar with these things, a great many persons on the jury have lived in other parts of the country prior to coming here and may not be so familiar with them. I might say also I want the jury to understand one thing. Some of the jurors have not sat before. Every once in a while the Court corrects counsel, instructs counsel as to what limitation should be imposed on what he says and what he does, and counsel sometimes retorts by presenting what argument he may have to the Court to ask the Court to change his mind. Well, don't get the idea from that that the slightest disrespect or controversy is intended toward the Court. The Court concedes to counsel the right to do that and wishes him to do it and does not take exception to it.

I might say, too, parenthetically, so that the jury may have a good concept as to some of the rulings, that we frequently try cases before judges who have no experience in trying [501] cases themselves.

Until his appointment to the bench, Judge Harris was one of the best known trial lawyers in the State of California and his judgment as a lawyer would be respected if his authority as a judge would not be. So you may understand the limitation the judge intends to impose is not a criticism of me, but a proper limitation that he makes. I think I am not exceeding my rights in making that suggestion, Judge Harris.

The Court: That is a fair observation—not as to any qualification on my part.

Mr. Hallinan: That is the one point I insist upon. People remember the famous Flood Estate and the late John Taaffe, who was Judge Harris' associate, and they will back me up and support me on that.

At any rate, ladies and gentlemen, the union—and this comes directly to these charges of Communist discipline and so forth—the union that took up the aegis of the working cause under the ILA was an extremely democratic, militant and sensible body of men, having in mind certain definite purposes that they were determined to attain. To describe Harry Bridges as their leader is to use the word in a special and limited sense, because he was not their leader any more than they made him the articulate organ of their determinations, and he by no means walked ahead of them, but side by side and shoulder to shoulder with the rank and file, a position that, while his leadership and the respect that the unions have reposed in him have [502] constantly increased, he has never changed from; that he has always been only the representative and never the boss of the union.

We will show the jury, as the case proceeds, that this union is one in which there could be no boss, a union that would take direction from nobody, officer, member, outsider, party, organization or individual; that after democratic processes and considerations it arrived at determinations of its own, and instead of Mr. Bridges saying to them, "Do thus," and they did it, they said to him, "Do so," and he did it. He was energetic, active, and worked with great diligence and sincerity for the mutual purposes.

We will show the jury that he is a plain man, without formal education, without those elegances that are usually associated with representatives of great bodies, but of sterling character, granite integrity, unbending and unpurchasable, a man who has resisted the temptations of wealth that have been offered to him, and who has defied the forces of violence and injury that have been administered against him.

He came finally to represent in the eyes of the persons who profited from the existing conditions on the waterfront the sole core of the resistance of the longshoremen to what they considered, at least, vicious and inhuman practices and exploitation. As I say, he was by no means that but he was so represented, and he was so conceived by those interests which then set in train the processes which now have selected you as the instrument of [503] his destruction. The employers on the waterfront, the industrial associations of San Francisco, the Associated Farmers of California and other reactionary organs and agencies combined with, I am glad to say, with a small portion of that veterans' organization that calls itself the American Legion, to produce red squads of the Portland and Los Angeles police departments, because San Francisco has always been a kind of liberal city and did not have the red squads to do the work, professional labor spies, groups of private detectives, and that type of person who could profit from such things were now amalgamated into a close organization under the leadership of one of the group, a man named Harper Knowles, who combined and brought them all together to produce the evidence that Mr. McMillan says will be produced here, to groom, educate and coach people to tell the lies that he says will be told here, and they started an almost fantastic conspiracy that now thrusts its head finally into this courtroom, a conspiracy that has grown and augmented and has drawn to itself other growths and other vines to add to its already noxious growth.

Knowles produced another man, a man named Stanley Merton Doran, and the assistance of Police Chief Keegan—not police chief, Captain Keegan, head of the Portland red squad, to endeavor to get Harry Bridges deported out of the country, and the route they took was strangely different from the route of the [504] conspiracy that its convolutions have since assumed, because they instructed the United States Immigration Department, represented by these gentlemen here, that they had conclusive proof that Harry Bridges was agent of the British Government, sent here to destroy American shipping interests, and they proceeded along that line in an endeavor to have him taken away from the head of this union that had become so militant, so threatening, and seemed to be on the verge of causing them to lose a great deal of money, and transported back to the land from which he had come. But inquiry being made, and Mr. Bridges', if you pardon me, hostility towards the very concept of the British Empire being a sufficient answer to that implication, they cast around for a new mode by which they might destroy him.

At that time Communists, Communism and the Communist Party had not the invidious connotations which have since attached to it. It was then, maybe now, I don't know, a legitimate political party whose members went up and registered on the list of voters just as Republicans and Democrats did, and nominated and ran people all over the United States for office, a miniscule party, but one which nothing very much was said about, but which did have a certain vigor, determination and resolution, and at least, apparently, so far as he was able to judge, a sincere desire to better the conditions of working men all over the world, particularly on the waterfront of San Francisco.

And so Mr. Bridges did not hesitate, and he will not pretend [505] to you, and he will lash his tongue in his mouth before he lies or tries to protect himself by any crawling, weaseling or withdrawing from a position he has since assumed. Mr. Bridges was quite glad, confronted with the tremendous forces that were operating against the little union that he had, to enlist the help of Communists, Republicans, Democrats, any color of political creed or skin that might offer itself as an auxiliary, and if Communists wished to give him advice, he took advice, and if deemed expedient to him, he went before his union and presented it as a possibility, and because of their experience with the black list, being thrown out of work and other far more dangerous things, he and his associates frequently met in secret, in silence, and in dread to determine what might next be done.

So Mr. Knowles and Mr. Doran, who will sit up here and confront you, having now discarded the British agent hypothesis, lay upon a Communist membership or at least a Communist affiliation, and discarding, without even looking at it, the stalking horse that had served them to that thing, they directed their attention now to concocting a new identity for Harry Bridges.

The strike having taken place and being in progress, a terrible struggle now ensued, both on the surface of the field and underneath it, in the recesses where the eyes of ordinary people did not penetrate.

While the striking longshoremen fought with fists and rocks and brickbats against guns and poison gas, the employers and [506] their agents worked assiduously to start the plot that would get rid of the man whom they assumed to be the leader and against whom the utmost hatred was now concentrated. They notified now the Department of Immigration, not that he was a British agent, but that he was a notorious Communist named Henry Harvey, and that Henry Harvey had created disturbances here, there and everywhere, and was as mysterious and fleeting as these other pseudonyms will turn out to be under whom he is now designated, but unfortunately the Immigration Department had a passport or a card of identification of Henry Harvey with his thumbprint on it and, alas, it turned out to be not the thumbprint of Harry Bridges and that collapsed.

So then he was claimed to be a certain Communist named Kentfield, and I see now from what Mr. McMillan says that that is abandoned.

And then he was claimed to be a certain Communist named Rossi, and we see that we still have the ectoplasm of that charge at least. But best of all is this, that they had some belief or knowledge or suspicion that there existed a man some place in the United States—God knows where—named Harvey Dorgan who was a Communist, and seizing upon the fact that Harry Bridges' mother's name was Dorgan, that was it—he was Harry Dorgan. And so a demand was made to the Immigration Department now that Harry Bridges be kicked out of the country as a Communist. And the Immigration Department made a conscientious [507] survey of the situation, and in 1936 they brought Harry Renton

Bridges in before an official of the Immigration Departent and swore him to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and asked him then and there if he was then or ever had been a member of the Communist Party, and he said, "I am not and I have not." They sent to Australia and they brought up all the records that they could find out about him there, to such an extent that the chief of police said it looked like a recommendation for a man for a very good position, and after they got through with it, they notified a Congressional inquiry board, because such dignity had this man, not for himself but his representation, had assumed, it had gone back to the United States government that there was no proof of any such thing.

But the diligence of these gentlemen was not to be so easily disappointed. By this time the longshore strike was under process of settlement. The President of the United States appointed a committee headed by the Catholic archbishop of the diocese of San Francisco, and after hearings had been had, the committee recommended certain changes in the situation on the waterfront, and that being by now supported by the whole background of public opinion of the City and County of San Francisco, as the Judge said, as the struggle was now written in granite, the concessions were all made, wages went up, hours were shortened, loads were reduced, and, the greatest innovation of [508] all put in, the hiring hall, and the hiring hall enters directly into this matter, as I shall show, as the testimony develops. The hiring hall meant this:

that when men were wanted to unload a ship, the stevedores went to this hiring hall, which is maintained by the union, and a call was put in by the hiring hall: "Send," let us say, "20 stevedores to Pier 36." And the 20 men in order of seniority who were entitled to the work went down and went to work, and the other men sat there or stayed at home until the call came in to them. Prior to that time early in the morning every man in San Francisco engaged in that occupation had to go down to the docks, wait to see if a ship came in, and then stand half in hope and half in despair, while the sturdiest and the strongest were selected by the gang boss to do the unloading, or, worse, while the men who paid part of the miserable fee back to the gang boss were selected to do the work. That was the system known as the shape-up.

These things all being granted, the strike ended. It was the longest and bloodiest strike in California history. It lasted 85 days. In one two-day fight, two stevedores were killed and 400 wounded. The strike cost the waterfront employers of the City and County of San Francisco two billion dollars, being chiefly the difference what they had been accustomed to keep themselves and what they now had to pay to the men for the work—two billion dollars —and that will give you some basis upon which you can estimate the importance of the people that [509] they employed, this Harper Knowles, Doran and Keegan, to thrust them in their activity.

The Court: We have reached 4:00 o'clock, Mr. Hallinan. I should like to discuss several matters with counsel at the conclusion of today's proceedings in the absence of the jury.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we have reached the adjournment period, it now being 4:00 o'clock, and I again repeat to you, under no conditions discuss this matter with any person or persons. You are not to form or express an opinion on this case until it is finally submitted to you for decision. As I indicated at the outset, our court day commences at 10:00 o'clock. We have our 12:00 o'clock to 2:00 o'clock noon period, and we adjourn as promptly as we can at 4:00 o'clock. I realize many of you ladies and gentlemen have long journeys. You have your home duties and the like; so we adjourn at 4:00 o'clock.

One added note: I advised you earlier in the day that if anyone attempted to intrude himself or herself upon your thinking, that is, by any attempt to bring to your notice any external matters that might bear upon your ultimate judgment in this case, that you report immediately to this Court, to Mr. Mitchell of the Court, if the Court is not available. I mean by that, the intrusion of any written matter, telephonic communications or the like to your home. It is my hope and purpose that this jury remain inviolate and untrammeled by any external force or forces or any person, and I think without my dilating on the [510] matter, you know precisely what I have in mind. I do not believe in my brief career I have been more painstaking with a jury, to the end that we obtain a fair cross section. Now, I believe we have discharged that obligation and a great deal rests on you, an awful lot rests on you, and I know that you will recognize your obligation to the Government and to the defendants. This case is not a case of one day's duration or two days' nor a week. As I indicated to you, it may well run into many weeks. Our estimate is pure speculation at this time. The Government says six to eight weeks. Let us say eight weeks for the purpose of illustration. During that time many events, many incidents, many occurrences may obtain, and I ask you under your oath and in every fine tradition of our jury system under our Constitution, that you keep that oath inviolate.

Tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock You may retire.

(The jury thereupon retired from the courtroom.)

The Court: Is it stipulated the jurors are absent?

Mr. Hallinan: So stipulated.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: There are no jurors in the courtroom. I noticed during the course of the remarks of Mr. Hallinan in his opening statement that, at the later stages, you were prone to interrupt, Mr. Donohue, and then you desisted and remained seated.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I anticipated that you decided at that time to [511] enter an objection.

Mr. Donohue: I did. Your Honor.

The Court: And then took it upon yourself to refrain.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Will you tell the Court precisely what you have in mind? I assume you desire a definition of the issues.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: What have you in mind?

Mr. Donohue: It seems to me, if Your Honor pleases,——

The Court: It is still noisy here. You might use the microphone.

Mr. Donohue: I would be ashamed to have to use that microphone. I am big enough to be able to speak so I may be heard. I am not quite accustomed to the acoustics of this room, but I think I will be soon so accustomed.

I have in mind, if Your Honor please, that Mr. Hallinan by indirection is doing what he has been told by the Court he may not do directly, and that is to call to the attention of this jury the fact that there has been a prior administrative hearing with respect or looking to the deportation of Mr. Bridges. Those matters are wholly different from the question at issue, the rules are different, the charges different, the proof is different, and while I listened with a great deal of interest to the recitation of Mr. Hallinan, particularly interested in the historical allusions that he makes, I respectfully [512] say to Your Honor that thus far I have seen no statement at all, have heard no statement by Mr.

Hallinan, which could be considered in the nature of a statement to this jury of what he for the defendant expects to prove by way of answer to the simple perjurious allegation in the indictment, and while such a recitation might conceivably go on forever, I think its scope should be defined.

The Court: I am going to have a definition of it at this juncture.

Mr. McMillan, do you have anything to say? You have lived with this proceeding on the motions to dismiss, long since past, when this Court heard great oratory echo and reecho off these walls. This is merely a repetition of the motion to dismiss. Mr. Resner, Mr. Andersen and his colleagues argued this matter at length. I take the position now that, one, these earlier proceedings are in no wise determinative of the issue at bar.

Mr. Hallinan: I concede that, Your Honor. I do not mean that.

The Court: I want to define my own thinking on the matter. I may be obtuse. It may be it is late in the afternoon, and so help me, it may be your convincing manner and mode of presentation belie my thinking, because I felt I was retracing my steps to matters that I had long since passed upon.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, might I suggest this: You will [513] find now in the case—we might as well be frank with each other——

The Court: We have to be frank.

Mr. Hallinan: Every one of the witnesses, or practically every one of the witnesses who takes the witness stand, is going to be confronted with either something he did say or he did not say in those preceding matters. Now, I understand your position on it. I do not think the contention that those things are res judicata or anything like that—pardon me, once in jeopardy. I have always contended that has not constituted previous jeopardy. And I am not even going to mention the result of those things. But the fact that the witnesses took the stand and testified on them both enables me to know what the situation is, and those witnesses are going to be on this witness stand. [514]

Now, we have to—it is impossible to have the jury in the course of cross-examination and the suggestions of interest made to the witnesses on the stand without having some background of understanding of what would motivate it. Now, Judge, You know all about it.

The Court: No.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I mean, you have heard the motion to dismiss, so you have the preceding history. That is what I mean. So you can see why a witness might come in and perjure himself. And what strings might lead up from the controversies between Mr. Bridges and other people.

The Court: No. Now, on cross-examination, let us assume John Doe is on the stand, you have had a transcript of the proceedings before Judge Sears or Judge Rowe or Judge Black—as it may appear. You are laying the foundation for impeachment in the interrogation of that witness in an orderly way. Now, what has happened thus far with the jury,—it isn't prejudicial, in my opinion, because I will erase it, I think, in one fell swoop—but I think that we are going to retry; perhaps, by indirection, many matters that are long since historical. This case——

Mr. Hallinan: I will promise you I will not endeavor to do that.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, this case involves the alleged false swearing of Mr. Bridges before Judge Foley. It alleges [515] the unlawful concert of action of Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt. Now, that is the issue at bar. I have ruled that the question of jeopardy, former acquittal and res adjudicata were out of the case. In colloquial expression.

Mr. Hallinan: I accept that.

The Court: That they are not binding. I gave the matter great thought. I heard Mr. Resner argue it at length. I heard his colleagues, Mr. Norman Leonard—an extremely able young man—argue the law here for hours. I took the matter under submission, I gave it mature consideration; I ruled against it. Now I hold as a matter of law that these matters are moot, irrelevant and immaterial, and I am going to consistently, persistently tell the jury so. Now, how far you may go in an opening statement concerning the narrative background with respect to Mr. Bridges' benign influence on the waterfront will not affect the ultimate issue at bar. "Did Mr. Bridges swear falsely?" I full well recognize; many people in this jurisdiction feel that he has had a benign influence on that waterfront, that he has done certain things for the working people there; other people feel directly to the contrary. And I think we had an exposition of that from our jury, in selecting these people. In a very forthright manner. Some said that they were prejudiced, others said that they had an open mind.

Now, to take us back into the gory days of the bloody warfare on that waterfront and raise matters of hysteria and [516] inflammatory matter before this jury is not going to answer this case, in my humble opinion.

Mr. Hallinan: Could I ask Your Honor one thing, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I think that this will change your view upon that. It is the rule that where either an accusation or a defense sounds in conspiracy, that any facts which tend to establish the conspiracy may be introduced in evidence and may be stated in advance in an opening statement; that the scope of the entire inquiry is greatly widened. The prosecution charges a conspiracy on the part of these three defendants to defraud the government. We charge, and we will sustain, a conspiracy on the part of the witnesses produced by the government to destroy Harry Bridges. Now there is the basis under which all of this becomes relevant. I don't care anything about the previous transactions, of previous hearings.

The Court: Well, I think, coming to the elemental question that I addressed to you before the recess, let us for the purpose of only our instant discussion, and without admitting that it is relevant at all to claim this monstrous growth of lush origin that you refer to,—of tropical origin—let us assume that for the moment; how or in what manner has this monstrous conspiracy so overcome Mr. Bridges as to cause him, allegedly, in the year 1945 to swear falsely before His Honor Thomas [517] Foley?

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, there are two elements here, two items. First, Mr. Bridges testified before Judge Foley that he was not a Communist.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: All right. Now, that is supposed to be a piece of perjury. A whole host of witnesses are going to take the witness stand and testify he was a Communist. I won't ask you, because I know that it would be offensive to suggest it, that Your Honor would not think of foreclosing us, as the Government is entitled to show there was a conspiracy to commit the one perjury, that we could not show there was a conspiracy to commit the other perjury. But I am going to show to this Court and to this jury, so that Your Honor feels that at the end of this case you will feel it conclusively, you yourself,—because we are as much interested in assuring you as the jury—that there exists a conspiracy of witnesses to take the witness stand and swear to a falsehool, namely, that Harry Bridges was or is a member of the Communist Party.

Now, they are entitled to show the perjury on the one hand and the conspiracy from which it resulted. We are entitled to show the conspiracy on the other hand and the perjury resulting from it. That is the only point. As I say, I know that the mere suggestion is enough to turn Your Honor's mind in that direction. In other words, you will not question—I don't say [518] that it may not sound fantastic. I do not say that it, maybe, sounds unreasonable, because I concede it does. I concede it sounds unreasonable. I concede it sounds almost unbelievable. And I assure you, Your Honor, that I have been in the case only three weeks, and I know nothing about it. I am infinitely shocked by what I have learned of this case. We will show conclusively that a conspiracy now exists between the witnesses who take the stand and persons in the background of those witnesses who are directing, coaching and instructing them, a conspiracy which has its roots in the hatred incited against Harry Bridges from that strike back in 1934, and that has persisted, and which is the thing that is persuading each of these witnesses to take the stand and testify falsely.

Now, suppose, Your Honor, we have something like this: A man is a member of some organization with whom he afterwards falls into difficulty and it is intended to destroy him. How? By convicting him of murder, having him hanged. The defense shows a conspiracy among the witnesses to take the stand and falsely swear to facts that will send that man to the gallows. Why, that has been done many times, and it has been proved in courts many times, and we are entitled to show it. And I know you don't question that. I assume that all Your Honor does——

The Court: I assume from the trend of your opening statement that you sought to elicit before this jury and to demonstrate before the jury that all of these administrative matters [519] ended in the results which obtained therein, without dilating upon the results. That was your purpose, then, as I gathered. It is my purpose to discuss this, to determine our state of mind.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: To get our frank expressions. Your purpose was to go behind the Court's ruling with respect to my firm belief that the doctrine of res adjudicata is not applicable here. And that there is no estoppal against the Government as a matter of fact, as a matter of law. The gentlemen preceding you argued entrapment, that the Government entrapped Mr. Bridges into this alleged false swearing—upon what theory entrapment rested I do not know. It was a novel thing for me to hear. But all conceivable matters have been presented to me. Now, I hope to, and will, God willing, limit the issue in this case to what I believe to be the essentials.

Mr. Hallinan: We won't quarrel with that, Judge.

The Court: I am never inclined to, nor will I, foreclose a defendant from presenting a fair defense. If, as you say, there is a conspiracy here on the part of witnesses, 125 in number, it is quite a large conspiracy with many spokes, no doubt.

Mr. Hallinan: But you won't, and Your Honor would not, question my right to present that, would you?

The Court: Mr. Donohue, may I hear from you? Mr. [520] McMillan, I think I have your thinking on it.

Mr. McMillan: Yes, Your Honor. I would just like to add one thing.

The Court: This is an important discussion.

Mr. McMillan: I am very well aware,—I was here and heard all the motions and I read all the motions and read all the briefs. Now, in short, Your Honor has already determined the law of this case. You have written an opinion in the matter. Your Honor has determined the law of this case. Now, what counsel is doing, he is seeking in a historical way, rehearsing everything that took place upon the waterfront, all about the life of Mr. Bridges and so forth,—none of which could be received in evidence. It could give a general history, and so forth, of Mr. Bridges. But what a great man that he is here, upon what meat this cedar has fed that he has grown so great, he can bring in character witnesses who can testify here. But all this laudatory statement that he has made here would never be introduced in evidence. Now, what he is doing, he is anticipating a defense. He is not making a statement of facts, he is stating that the time—The proper time to go ahead and attack the motives of witnesses is when the witnesses take the stand and there, upon cross examination, attack their credibility. Now, he is stating that a conspiracy existed. If a conspiracy existed, he could state that very simply, charge that conspiracy and that in furtherance of the conspiracy they [521] did thus and so. But to start in as he has there and give us the whole history of the waterfront—we have here all kinds of poisonous plants and weeds growing here in this courtroom, and there are nuts, bolts and rocks and everything else being tossed around this courtroom and around this jury. And if he proceeds to throw enough of those, and these plants keep growing around here, I don't know—I don't know but what there may very well be inflammatory matter there as far as the jury is concerned. And he can not in the trial of this case——

The Court: That is the point I am making in my own mind. In the trial of the case Mr. Hallinan could not assume in the wildest stretches of a ruling, to introduce in support of this statement the evidentiary matter which is now in part crept before the jury. However, I believe my admonition will tend to deflect any improper notion they may have. Mr. Donohue, may I hear from you on this subject?

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, of course I don't want at this juncture to disclose too much of our case. I am frank to say to Your Honor, however, that my distinguished adversary has mentioned a great many names, the historical importance of which is known to me. I have no thought of calling them as witnesses. And therefore I can say to Your Honor that many of the premises upon which his argumentative opening statement were made will not be supported by fact. Of course, I deny any conspiracy on the part of the witnesses we shall call to testify, [522] but I say to Your Honor, as I said at the very outset, while I know you will allow a reasonable latitude to counsel in making an opening statement, my distinguished colleague, Mr. McMillan, has succinctly stated it when he said no one of these matters he is now discussing would he be permitted to prove. I am sure in the light of what Your Honor has said, if not in the light of the observations of Mr. McMillan and myself, Mr. Hallinan tomorrow, perhaps, will come closer to following the rule and stating to us what he expects to prove by his defense.

Mr. Hallinan: Could I say one final thing, Judge? Do me the charity of supposing that I will try to try the case fairly and properly. I have no desire to introduce extraneous matters or say anything that isn't proper. A lawyer who works with a case and knows what the things are that confront him, who has gone into evidence at great length, and who has evolved a theory upon it, might assume to know the line which he is driving at. The Court might not see that immediately. I know that Your Honor is sufficiently experienced in such matters that you would give a wide range, that you would concede to an attorney the right even to be wrong in his theory, but still the right to develop it. Now, I am willing to state to this jury that I make no point of any previous finding by these administrative bodies or by the Supreme Court or anyone else for the purposes of this motion; though we will address things on that later to you, Judge. I don't even wish to mention the results [523] of them. But I say this, and I think Your Honor has my position clearly in mind: I think you have expressed it as clearly as I can myself. Suppose that, as I said before, a conspiracy existed among certain persons to destroy another person by sending him to prison or by causing him to be executed. Those witnesses came in, suppose, and swore falsely that the man had been guilty of some crime. I don't care whether it is murder, perjury, fraud or whatever it may be. And suppose those persons were all actuated and bound together by some hatred of that defendant and some desire to destroy him. Then a court not only would permit inquiry into it, but the court, solicitous of its own honor, would insure that there was a proper inquiry into it, so that an injustice wouldn't be done, so that some innocent man might not be sent to prison upon a concocted story.

Now, the mere fact that the witnesses, as they are presented, are presented by officers of the Government, does not mean anything because they could deceive the government officers as well as anyone else. Your Honor raises your eyebrows at the suggestion of 125 witnesses. They are there.

The Court: Well, not with any more reality than you do when you say it is fantastic.

Mr. Hallinan: I see; I say that. It is fantastic. But still, what things have you experienced in your life that happen in courts that were fantastic and still were true? And with these people, Your Honor, we can point to previous records. [524] They have testified already. It isn't any invention. Now, counsel says that they don't intend to use certain of them. I assure you that the testimony of those witnesses will be brought before the Court properly and before the jury. And our entire position is this: They charge a conspiracy to commit a crime, to wit: false swearing, of fraud by these three gentlemen. We charge a conspiracy to commit a crime, to wit: to commit perjury in this court so as to cause the ruin of those three gentlemen.

We do not say that they haven't the right to inquire into that, whatever may be said about matters of past moment, res adjudicata, and so forth. We give them the right. But in God's name, haven't we got the right to show the conspiracy to destroy them? Haven't we the right to show that these people are taking the stand, are themselves a conspiracy and a false and fraudulent and criminal one? And I assure you, Judge Harris, that you will feel as convinced of it by the end of this case as anyone else and you will concede, too, that it is fantastic but true. And all I want, all we ask here, —we don't want any rulings that will promise us or assist us; we don't want any more than what the law allows us. But we ask that, and we ask not to be limited by a narrow closing, an artificial stricture, of proof, where the law has clearly and expressly said that where a conspiracy, where a prosecution or a defense sounds in conspiracy, wide scope should be given to prove it [525] and to argue it.

Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please Your Honor, the conspiracy to which he refers is the most illogical thing that I have ever heard of. How could men conspire together to get a man in a case of this kind? The issue here is simple. It is a single issue. Fundamentally it is this: that false statements were made in order to obtain citizenship in a naturalization proceeding. Now, how could they conspire, anyone, to get Mr. Bridges, for example, to go over to the City Hall and make a false statement?

Mr. Hallinan: That is assuming he is guilty.

Mr. McMillan: Unless they conspired together to hypnotize him and put him under a spell and take him over there to make a false statement. What he is thinking of is another thing; his reference is with reference to a trial for Communism or something. Now, all these matters he speaks of, I repeat, those are rules of evidence—attack upon credibility of witnesses as they arise. The difficulty with his opening statement, may it please Your Honor, is that it is purely argumentative; secondarily,——

The Court: I hold, gentlemen, as a matter of law, that the bulk of the opening statement thus far is immaterial to any rationalization of the charges at bar. I agree with counsel for the government that matters of interrogation of witnesses may be gone into; certainly impeachment may be indulged in to [526] your heart's content, Mr. Hallinan. You may cross-examine without limitation on your part. I believe in latitude on cross-examination. But to have this Court sit while you dilate upon matters that pertain to waterfront problems, trade union problems, employer-employee relationships, is to degenerate this case into a hearing far divorced from an indictment which is before me.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I ask this, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, counsel in making the statement that how could a conspiracy induce Mr. Bridges to go over and take the oath, and so forth, assumes that the statements were false, that he was not a Communist. And yet will he say that we can not show a conspiracy to put witnesses on the stand, and that the conspiracy has the purpose of committing perjury and saying that he was a Communist? We don't say that there was a conspiracy——

The Court: Would you, for the purpose of that theory, delineate when the conspiracy commenced, the agents immediately associated in the conspiracy, whether there were one or several?

Mr. Hallinan: Or a hundred.

The Court: Or a hundred. When did it commence?

Mr. Hallinan: In 1934.

The Court: 1934.

Mr. Hallinan: And its activities, Judge,—There are three [527] men here on trial whose future happiness, the happiness of their families, the happiness of a great many people whom they represent, depends upon. I don't have the power by a few statements made to a jury to change the effect of the evidence that will be introduced. But I have the right to delineate to the jury what our theory is and what we will attempt to prove; and nobody's hurt by giving us a little leeway and crediting me with some common sense in—Now, if I should say to this jury that I will prove a conspiracy of this kind and at the end of it they say, "He has lied to us and he has deceived us," is that going to help my client? I say I will prove the conspiracy to put perjured testimony on the stand, to say that Mr. Bridges was a Communist.

Now, there is the thing that I am attacking.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, no one in this courtroom, and certainly not the Court, disputes your common sense. Now, I think where our problem becomes unwieldly, if it is unwieldly, is due to a situation wherein you are presently anticipating the calling on the part of the Government of a number of witnesses who may or may not be called. Now, bear in mind, I reiterate again, I do not know the trend of the Government's witnesses; I do not know the names or the identity or the personnel of the various gentlemen who are going to take this stand —125 or 1 in number. Now, I think, Mr. Hallinan, that you are anticipating much of the Government's case; you are indulging [528] in speculation on speculation. And in addition, creating an atmospheric quantity at this stage designed to prejudice and inflame the jury in connection with any sage, considered judgment they may have on the evidentiary matters. Now, that is my judgment.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, may I say this?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I am not relying upon what the prosecution produces. I know what the prosecution will produce. But I am counting also on what we will produce. The evidence will be competent, it will go to the credibility, the purpose and the motive of the witnesses who will be produced here, and to the assertion by the prosecution that Harry Bridges was or is a Communist. Directly! Directly! It is the kind of evidence that not to offer to the Court would be criminal.

Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please Your Honor, there is a time and place for everything, and a trial must be orderly. Now, to get up and under the guise of an opening statement, make what should be, we will say, a beautiful, eloquent closing argument by counsel, and get before this jury, although counsel says, "I am not going to tell what the findings were,"—but he has spent an hour rehearsing all these proceedings and exuding all these poisonous matters, and of course the jury will be very curious; "I wonder what did happen in those proceedings. Where there is some smoke there must be some fire." [529]

Now you can't go ahead and make an attack upon witnesses in advance. You can't start in and make this attack under a guise of an opening statement, because here is what would take place. If you throw enough mud at every one of these witnesses before they take the stand, in the hope that some of it will stick, why, the jurors will look at all of these witnesses when they take the stand, one right after another, after Mr. Hallinan makes the statement,—they will look at them to see if they haven't got horns. Now——

Mr. Hallinan: They will.

Mr. McMillan: Now, the time for him to make the attack upon the witnesses is after he has testified and after they have testified on cross-examination, to attack their credibility. But not in advance.

Mr. Hallinan: Wouldn't it be nice if the defense lawyers, in the position that Your Honor has often occupied,—because Your Honor never was a prosecutor—wouldn't it be nice if the defense lawyers were limited in their manner of conducting their defense by what the prosecution wishes to direct? Now, I see Your Honor's entire position; I see Your Honor's entire position. I know you don't want to have extraneous matters in. I won't bring them in.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I am loath to interrupt a lawyer in the course of a statement. I think, and unless it be a very, very material interruption, that it is unfair as a rule. [530] Both of you men, Mr. McMillan, Mr. Donohue, you and your associate, are skilled men. And dealing with skilled men, I always feel very comfortable about it. I feel that we haven't that ineptitude that sometimes attaches to a trial. I say that to you frankly. I feel very comfortable about this trial; all the men are skilled men. And when I rule, I rule with some consideration given to the pleadings, to the law, to the issue. I hold, as I reiterate, that all of these administrative matters are moot, irrelevant and immaterial.

I hold that with respect to those matters you may for purposes of cross-examination surely refer to the transcript for the purpose of impeachment and the like. I hold that any reference to this jury at this stage of the proceeding will tend to prejudice, rather than clarify, the issue. I of course am at a loss presently to indicate to you how we may delimit your presentation at this time. I am loath, as I say, to constantly entertain objections. Mr. Donohue is very gracious and was gentleman enough to be seated. I indicated, because it was then a quarter of four, that I thought we then might thrash the matter out. I assume that you will adhere to my ruling. That is my ruling and I assume it will be accepted with the finality that sometimes attaches to my rulings.

Mr. Hallinan: I have no—Any ruling Your Honor has made I have no quarrel with. I think you have been very fair and very proper. [531]

The Court: I feel that this case is important, certainly to your clients. It is probably as important a case as you have ever tried in your career.

Mr. Hallinan: The most.

The Court: It is probably an important case to the United States Government, no doubt. We have marshalled here some of the finest talent, I suppose, on the Coast, as well as elsewhere. I hope that I will be able to define these issues with whatever little talent I have, and whatever energy at my command; and I feel that my ruling now is correct. I know that tomorrow morning when you approach the matter of this opening statement you will be guided accordingly. I say to you, let this evidence unfold. You are not foreclosed from full, clear and sweeping cross-examination. You are not foreclosed from resort to the transcripts. No doubt you have studied them very carefully, as you know how to study transcripts.

Mr. Hallinan: In three weeks that many transcripts (indicating).

The Court: You have the benefit, of course, of associate counsel—the old firm no doubt are helping a little bit?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes—who made the motions that Your Honor treated with contempt.

The Court: I am satisfied, knowing how zealous Messrs. Resner, Andersen, Gladstein and Sawyer were in behalf of Mr. Bridges,—I am satisfied they are shoulder to shoulder with you. [532] But be that as it may, I feel you are well equipped to proceed, and tomorrow morning I hope that you adhere to my ruling.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, Your Honor, I would ask you to give one thought, Your Honor, during the night,—just one thought to this, and make your limitation based upon that. And that is, I know that you concede to us the right to show that a conspiracy of the witnesses produced by the Government exists to commit perjury on the witness stand by claiming falsely that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party.

The Court: If such a conspiracy exists, I adopt your terminology—it is one of the most fantastic defenses that I have had presented to me.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, but you will see how true it is.

The Court: To say that 125 witnesses have conspired over a period of many, many years is somewhat fantastic, but——

Mr. Hallinan: Do you know who said it, Judge? The Supreme Court of the United States.

The Court: This is not a matter in which the Supreme Court had anything to do. This matter has never been reviewed by the Supreme Court. The supreme Court has never heard any of the witnesses.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, it has.

The Court: That will be present in this case, so far as I presently know.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, but you are wrong in that. [533]

The Court: So far as I presently know. I am not bound by the assertions, by the pronouncements nor by the opinion of any member or members of the Supreme Court. We are trying this case on an indictment concerning which we have had no review. Now, it may well be, to quote from the Justices, for whom I have the highest regard,—but at the same time, it is wholly irrelevant to this proceeding, as I see it.

Mr. Hallinan: But what I am saying is this: Your Honor finds fantastic what the Supreme Court found to be the fact.

The Court: I adopt your phraseology.

Mr. Hallinan: That a conspiracy existed between these people to testify falsely against this man. The same conspiracy is now producing witnesses on the stand, and they will again testify falsely. And if they do not produce the witnesses, then we will show the production of the witnesses to testify falsely. We will show the conspiracy independently of their witnesses.

The Court: That may be, that may be your province—that may be your province. It may be anticipating matters now. We may be pretrying it.

Mr. McMillan: Yes. Not only anticipating matters, because if he makes this showing of which he speaks, I have no doubt Your Honor at the conclusion of this trial will instruct the United States Attorney to present the matter to the grand jury to have them indicted for conspiracy. And if he would continue [534] this inflammatory speech before the jury, I suppose the jury would wonder why you do not stop these proceedings and have an investigation made to indict all these people.

The Court: Well, for the immediate purposes, then, Mr. Hallinan, I shall sustain objections interposed to that type of presentation at this stage of the proceedings.

Mr. MacInnis: May I make a suggestion.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, Your Honor, I would like to call to your attention another facet of the case, involving largely the defendant Harry Bridges, but involving to a lesser extent defendants Robertson and Schmidt, whom I represent. There is a blanket allegation in the indictment which Your Honor has many times read.

The Court: I have read it.

Mr. MacInnis: It was read this afternoon by Mr. McMillan to the jury. That blanket allegation supplements what is charged about Harry Bridges at the time he was naturalized before Judge Foley. And that blanket allegation, even though it can be offered in one sentence, either by Mr. McMillan or out of the lips of the indictment, is that from 1933 onward, continuously, up to the present time, Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. The plea of not guilty by Harry Bridges puts into issue every allegation in the indictment. That one, too. [535]

Now, Mr. McMillan has the right either to make a complete opening statement, telling the jury what he will prove by what witnesses and in what fashion, or he may choose to adopt the manner he assumed today, merely to read from the indictment and tell the jury that he will prove the case to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt.

The defense, however, is not to be strictured because brevity seems the best strategy for the prosecution at this time. If Harry Bridges is charged with being a Communist, a member of the Communist Party, continuously from 1933 up to the present time, we have a right to inquire—you must inquire and the jury must listen, to evidence concerning what this man did from 1933 continuously up to the present time. And everything he did, everything affecting the problems which will naturally be discussed in this case, bears upon the truth or falsity of that charge. Whether he was or was not a Communist. That is not a problem that you could decide as a judge or that a jury could decide by itself, by any formula. You won't find in the case books any definition of what a Communist is. You can't say; that the Government must say he is and the defendant must say he isn't—and that is all there is to it.

The Court: Well, the Government claims the co-defendants are likewise——

Mr. MacInnis: I am going to come to that in a moment. We are told by the Government that there is some secret kind of [536] understanding between people by which a man can be a member of the Communist Party and still conceal that from the so-called rank and file members of the Communist Party. We are to assume from that that the man doesn't have to have a membership card or any of the ordinary incidentals that attach themselves to a man's membership in any organization. [536-A]

So I say again, under the evidence, what will be the test of whether this man was or was not, whether he is or is not, a member of the Communist Party? It will be the sum total of all of the acts of his life; it will be the sum total of all these acts.

The Court: I disagree with you, counsel. I cannot see that the sum total of all of a man's life should become, as a composite, the criteria of whether he be a member of a party or any particular party, or whether he be a Communist.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, that we will both understand that I don't mean by that his private life, his life at home, his meals, his hours of leisure. We don't mean that at all. Those parts of his life which have to do with political activities which may or may not under a given set of facts, which may or may not under the cricumstances presented, constitute a finding, or the basis for a finding, of membership in the Communist Party. Those things will come into evidence, and if the government says in effect, "We will show you that the man did this, he did that, and he did something else, and that he is a member of the Communist Party because of it," the defendant on the other hand would have a right to outline all of these activities and to show that in spite of them, there was no membership in the Communist Party.

Now you mentioned the other defendants. We learned today for the first time out of the lips of Mr. McMillan that Mr. [537] Robertson and Mr. Schmidt are accused of being members of the Communist Party. Up to the time that brief statement was made today, we were completely in the dark as to what these charges might be involving Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt. We knew that they were alleged to have conspired falsely to conceal the fact of Harry Bridges' alleged membership in the Communist Party, but other than that we were told nothing. Now we are told by Mr. McMillan without any delineation of proposed evidence, "We will show you that Robertson and Schmidt were members of the Communist Party." When? We are not told that.

The Court: I assume that he will place witnesses on the stand to that effect.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. Now in the indictment these men are charged with conspiring. When? At a time to the Grand Jurors unknown. At places to the Grand Jurors unknown. Now merely because the prosecution, perhaps necessarily, adopts language of such mystery, esoteric words that mean nothing now, that doesn't mean that the defense cannot, as Mr. Hallinan said, lay all of its cards on the table right now. We have a right to show this court and to demonstrate to the jury that Bridges, Robertson and Schmidt, from 1933 up to the present time, were never members of the Communist Party. We have a right to show all of their political activities. We have a right to show those things which might constitute, in the expression [538] of an opinion by a judge, or by a prosecutor, affiliation, negotiations, doing business with members of the Communist Party. And we have a right to distinguish for the court and for the jury the dividing line, showing that while they did certain things, as Mr. Hallinan has suggested, they were still not members of the Communist Party. Now it seems to me that your Honor would never foreclose the defense from showing completely and unequivocally and definitely that these men——

The Court: That has not been Mr. Hallinan's opening statement.

Mr. MacInnis: I am merely adding to the position.

The Court: That is a far cry from Mr. Hallinan's opening statement. Anything you said now was a far cry from it.

Mr. MacInnis: It is merely a different facet from the same historical outline.

The Court: Different as night from day.

Mr. MacInnis: It is offering your Honor another different reason for the reception of the same evidence, because the outline is the same in either event.

The Court: No, no.

Mr. MacInnis: And both reasons are——

The Court: No, the pigments used by Mr. Hallinan on the canvas are altogether different from the general mosaic that we seek to paint at the present time.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, we wouldn't hesitate to change a [539] pigment if it would come within the purview of your Honor's ruling.

The Court: Counsel, I have made my ruling and that is going to be the rule tomorrow morning. I should rather not have to interrupt Mr. Hallinan constantly, but if that trend of opening statement is made, I shall sustain objections to such matter as shall be regarded as irrelevant and immaterial. I think we have reached a late period, and we may weary otherwise. Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until tomorrow morning, Friday, November 18, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock.) [540]

Friday Morning Session, November 18, 1949

The Clerk: The case of United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Is it stipulated that the jurors are present, gentlemen?

Mr. McMillan: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: Before Mr. Hallinan launches into the balance of his opening statement, I desire to address the jury quite briefly. (My reason in waiting, ladies and gentlemen, is not because of my impatience at all with people coming in and out but because it is difficult to hear and I will wait until the audience is settled.)

To reiterate, before Mr. Hallinan launches into the balance of his opening statement, it is my desire to acquaint you in a more specific sense, rather than general sense, with the province of an opening statement. The Government, through Mr. McMillan, read to you an outline of the Government's case. That is a general outline of what they expect to prove. An opening statement is distinguished from a closing argument in the very nature of things, for the very obvious reason that in an opening statement presented by the defense, it is impossible to conceive all of the eventualities of the litigation in terms of the witnesses to be produced, the nature of their testimony and [541] the like. I therefore ask you to have in mind that primary distinction between the opening statement and the closing statement. When the evidence is unfolded, when the day is done, when the examination, both direct and the cross-examination, are over, when all of the witnesses, plaintiff, government and defendant, have been heard, both direct, defense and in rebuttal, then the closing arguments are had. The closing arguments perforce must be confined to the issues and must be confined to the testimony. Now, although latitude is allowed in the course of argument, the opening statement or closing argument, the courts are wary——

(Mr. Marshal, I left word with the custodian last week that a sign be placed in the alley or areaway, that loud and unusual noises be refrained and abstained from. May I have a sign posted down there? It is extremely difficult to conduct an important case.)

The courts are wary, apprehensive and diligent in avoiding the consequences of what may be regarded as inflammatory matter. Can you hear me all right?

A Juror: This window is up. It is really difficult.

The Clerk: May I close the window?

The Court: I realize that. My note of impatience is not with the conduct of business but it is one of the situation of the courtroom itself. We have problems here and we have to do the best we can. I would appreciate, Mr. Mitchell, if you [542] would see that they would carry out that slight suggestion. I say it with great humility.

The Clerk: I will see that it is done today.

The Court: The courts are wary, as I said, not repeating myself, but merely to bring you up to date with what we had to say before we were interrupted, the courts are wary to protect the record and protect jurors in the introduction of extraneous and inflammatory matter. Inflammatory matter may be of that character which can not be erased from the minds of the jury, notwithstanding any admonition given by the court. Usually a court will admonish with respect to the alleged misconduct of counsel during the course of the trial one or more counsel. One counsel or the other may say, "We regard that as misconduct and we ask the Court to admonish the jury to disregard it." You may hear that, and you may hear the Court in response to that request grant it and give that admonition, a statement more or less general or specific, that you are to disregard the statements of counsel and seek to erase the same from your minds.

Now, erasing matter from your mind again presents psychological and psychiatric features. To erase matters obnoxious or noxious or inflammatory from your minds is sometimes highly impossible and improbable. Therefore it is the province of the Court—not only province but duty—to interrupt an argument when the Court feels that counsel is indulging in matters that [543] are far removed from the issue. The issue, as I announced during the course of your examination, is one confined within the indictment: Did Mr. Bridges, acting in concert with the alleged co-conspirators, swear falsely on the date mentioned in that did he testify untruthfully when he was asked as to his being a Communist? He said, "No."

Now, it is difficult for me to anticipate precisely what Mr. Hallinan has in mind with the balance of his opening statement. I said to him last evening, and I repeat now for the record, that I believe there has been no prejudice thus far attached to anything that was said. I asked Mr. Hallinan to confine himself to the issue involved, not to engage in a closing argument, for the reason that the witnesses have not been heard. It is impossible, if not improbable, that all the witnesses referred to by Mr. Hallinan will be called here.

I might supplement what I say by telling you that counsel must confine their remarks to the issue of the case, the applicable law, the pertinent evidence, and legitimate inferences which may be drawn from the evidence. That would apply to an opening statement or a closing statement or a closing argument.

Now, an opening statement in the very nature of things contemplates an outline of what is expected to be proved, a mere outline, without filling in the parts of the mosaic, the parts of the painting. Mr. Hallinan adopted my particular terminology when he said that the province of an opening [544] statement is to channelize the evidence that you may better understand it and to orient yourselves to the case at bar. Equally it applies to the Court. It gives me an opportunity to orient myself to the issue.

Now, with that general statement in mind, I ask Mr. Hallinan to proceed, having in mind the limitations under which I desire the opening statement to be made. What I have to say, of course, ladies and gentlemen, is no reflection on Mr. Hallinan at all in connection with anything that was said. I think you understand the general nature of it.

Mr. Hallinan: Entirely. And I might say I have since last night discarded much of what I intended to say in deference to Your Honor. I am sorry to create any impression in your mind that I may be going beyond what is fair, because certainly very fair to everybody in this case. The thing is, of course, I feel differently on it. I offer the matter but I am not trying to be obstinate about it.

We will be relieved from further difficulty, I think, by the fact that the transcript of what the prosecution said it was going to prove has been written up, and I will confine myself to matters, to a large extent, that are discussed in that transcript, and which counsel says he is going to prove to you, and which I tell you he is not going to prove to you, and I will tell you why he is not going to prove it to you, and there [545] won't be any question in anybody's mind that this case revolves around a charge of conspiracy, made by the prosecution, in which they charge that Harry Bridges and his co-defendants falsely, under oath, stated that he was not a Communist, and we will show you to a moral certainty and beyond any reasonable doubt that the actual conspiracy is a conspiracy of people who will appear before you and swear falsely under oath that he was a Communist, and there is the entire issue and, of course, inquiry must be made as to why people do those things. They are entitled to show why Harry Bridges should have sworn falsely to get his citizenship. They would be entitled to show why Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt collaborated with him in that design. We are entitled to show that the witnesses who take the stand here and say he is a Comumnist are liars and perjurers and we are entitled to show why they nevertheless take the stand and so assert. Now, I will narrow everything down to that question. I might say this: I stated to the jury yesterday that we would show—and when I say "we will show," my friends, unless I qualify it by saying that "I believe we will show" or "We will probably show," or "I think we can show," or "That it will emanate from us," I mean we will show it conclusively from the prosecution and its witnesses themselves, and from things that they can not deny, and they can not take back, and they can not challenge, because while the results of previous hearings can not be discussed in front of the jury, the fact that they [546] have occurred puts both prosecution and defense into channels, as the Court suggests, from which they can not remove themselves now. So we know what the story is.

Now, I have told you that they started off by saying that Mr. Bridges was a certain Communist, a sailor named Harold Harvey, and that that being disproved by finding Mr. Harvey's passport with a thumbprint on it, somebody then shifted over that he was another Communist name Canfield.

Mr. Donohue: I am sorry, Mr. Hallinan. I think I must object. I am certain that no part of this historical recitation which Mr. Hallinan began yesterday is within the purview of Your Honor's instructions given to him late yesterday afternoon, and for that reason I object to that line of argument.

The Court: Specifically, what have you to object to as to this last assertion?

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Hallinan is now suggesting, if Your Honor please, that in the first instance, as he stated, without coming to the conclusion which was reached that there were other prior proceedings involving the same issues or the same charge as is here under discussion, that is not true.

The Court: No, he said prior proceedings which he would not advert to excepting the testimony of the witnesses.

Mr. Donohue: And then he follows by suggesting at one time someone charged Mr. Bridges with having been a Communist. [547]

Mr. Hallinan: I am getting up to the genesis of the Harry Dorgan name and to show the beginning and the truth of it to direct the jury's attention to that matter.

The Court: I have no doubt what Mr. Hallinan has in mind, but I suppose that he proposes to show by his cross-examination he is going to develop some of these matters.

Mr. Hallinan: Correct, Your Honor, and unless you know it in advance, unless the jury knows it in advance, they won't know what we are talking about and then every few minutes we will have to stop and explain what the purpose of the question is.

The Court: I will have to indulge myself to this extent, Mr. Hallinan, to abide at the present time in what I regard is your regard for my limitation of the argument at this juncture.

Mr. Hallinan: I will do that. They told you they were going to show you that this gentleman had a Communist Party ticket, card or application issued under the name of Harry Dorgan and will show you the genesis of this Harry Dorgan fable which went through the names that I have indicated, including that of Rossi. And the ridiculous part is the remainder of that man's name was Angelo J. Rossi. Somebody had used the name of the mayor of San Francisco, probably from some of these eastern sources, whence these gentlemen emanate, as being a member of the Communist Party. But finally, to get down to the Dorgan story, and to show you how much merit there is to that, [548] in 1925 a convention of a rival labor organization was held in Seattle, at which it was attempted then to blacken, to defame

Harry Bridges, and a man named Paul Scharrenberg, a rival union leader, got up on the floor of that convention and claimed that he had in his possession a book of the Communist Party issued to Harry Dorgan, and that Harry Dorgan was in reality Harry Bridges. And the conclusive proof of that was that Harry Bridges' mother's maiden name was Dorgan, and Mr. Scharrenberg paid $500 to what he described as an inside spy to get him that book. But, alas, the spy had sold a dozen books under that name or other names to various persons interested, describing and pretending that Harry Dorgan was Harry Bridges and this was his book.

Now, from the records of the Immigration Service itself you will learn this, that in addition to the effort to get Bridges by these witnesses, by pretending that he was Harry Dorgan, a Communist, if there was a Harry Dorgan, a Communist, they also said that he had left the country illegally, gone to Canada, and returned without having gone through the forms that an alien was required to do, and a great hullaballoo, hue and cry ensued upon that, and then it was discovered—and that is not our testimony; it is the Immigration Department's testimony under oath—that having discovered the man who had gone to Canada and disported himself, as the Immigration Department puts it, capitalizing on the notoriety of Bridges, they discovered [549] it was not Bridges at all, but some man who, relying upon somewhat of a similarity of face and figure to our hero here, capitalized upon it in Canada and had a good time around in the labor unions before returning to the United States. So there is all sorts of matters of that kind, impersonations of Bridges, people who think they saw Bridges, people who five years ago identify him as the man they saw at a particular place.

Now, Mr. McMillan says that they will bring into this trial certain labor leaders, former associates of Harry Bridges. Unfortunately they will, because the labor movement, as you may have all observed, at times in its career turns back on itself and rends and destroys itself and engages in internecine quarrels that destroy its utility.

Mr. McMillan: If Your Honor please, is that a statement of what they expect to prove?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, certainly.

Mr. McMillan: It seems to me that it is an argumentative statement.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, it is not. We are entitled to show the quarrels between these labor unions as modifying and explaining the witnesses who take the stand.

The Court: I will interrupt you momentarily, Mr. Hallinan, to admonish the jury and admonish you that we are not trying warfare or alleged warfare between any union or any group and the like. This case involves Mr. Harry Bridges, Mr. Robertson [550] and Mr. Schmidt. Witnesses will be produced here. Now, the general trend of this opening statement is purely speculative, so far as the Court is concerned. It appears to be a blanket assertion of an attempt on Mr. Hallinan's part to discredit all the witnesses produced by the government in one fell swoop. I am not going to limit you but, Mr. Hallinan, I say to you again it is not serving any particular purpose to the Court—it may to the jury, but I doubt it—to have these blanket assertions made. I think in the final analysis you should reserve your closing argument to the close of this case, realizing your extreme eloquence. At the present time, may I suggest that you give an outline of what you have in mind?

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, Your Honor; but Your Honor has very accurately defined the purpose. Every witness that the prosecution will produce will be impeached in advance by the interest, the motive and his prior conduct to Harry Bridges, and that is all I want to tell the jury. In other words, I want the jury to look at these witnesses as they take the stand and not be deceived, but reserve judgment as to whether we will not show those things.

I suppose if I deceive this jury, or if I say something that I can not prove to the extent that I have promised to prove it, then my credit with the jury and the credit of the entire defense lapses. And I am willing that that should be so. Now, I can't see how I could be more sincere than that. And I [551] will also say this, Your Honor, that if the Reporter takes down the statements that I am making, at the end of this case the jury, yourself and the prosecutors will admit that every word of it has been properly introduced in evidence.

Now, I should not, and I know you will not force me to be called upon to disclose the exact fashion of that.

We have heard from the gazettes, which is the common source of most of our information, that counsel has some surprises for the defense. We are not going to allow our western hospitality to be outdone by the Lochinvars from the East, and I will tell counsel that we have some surprises, a box of surprises.

Mr. McMillan: That is not appropriate to an opening statement.

Mr. Hallinan: I am explaining to the Court. This is an opening statement.

Mr. McMillan: This is an argumentative statement that would be very eloquent in a closing argument.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I want to tell you in advance so you will not be misled. You do not want to mislead us and I wouldn't want to mislead you. I want to tell you that we have a trunk of surprises.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, what you have to say is argumentative, anticipatory.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, Your Honor. I think, Your Honor, what has happened is the gentlemen on my left got together last [552] night and resolved that about every other sentence I uttered they would get up and make some objection. All right, I don't want to quarrel with that.

Mr. McMillan: That is not an opening statement either, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: There is one sentence—three intervals of objection, so we will go on to the fourth. This source of witnesses that counsel has told you he is going to produce here, comes very close to the matter that I am now going to discuss with you. I have said that a certain company union had existed on the waterfront and was replaced by an American Federation of Labor union, and then the American Federation of Labor assigned a certain committee called the Committee for Industrial Organization under John L. Lewis to organize industries on a total basis. We all know prior to that time most unions were local craft unions, rather loosely amalgamated, and they were not industrial unions. But the new union, under the NRA matter, the CIO, the Committee of Industrial Organization, became very active and very successful and finally some difficulty—we won't inquire into that unless it be considered argumentative—caused the American Federation of Labor to quarrel with the CIO and ultimately to expel them. The CIO was then considered what is called a left-wing organization, democratic, with no discriminations against anybody for race, religious belief or political belief, and it was called by the A. F. of L. Communistic. [553]

And Harry Bridges, who was then an officer of the A. F. of L., was expelled from the Union as Communistic, because he encouraged the amalgamation of the Longshoremen with the CIO. There again, a great——

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, we are obliged—patience has always been a very predominant feature in my nature, but I can't let these matters go by.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Getting away from that point of it and coming directly to a witness who will be brought in here, and to two other witnesses who will be the agents of that particular witness, the difficulty as to what master organization these unions would associate with being resolved by the longshoremen, the ILWU, in favor of the Committee for Industrial Organization, by an enormous vote of the Industrial Organization; by an enormous vote that union left the American Federation of Labor and associated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. A number of unions along the Pacific Coast engaged in maritime and longshore work had been amalgamated for some years in a federation called the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. The longshore workers' union was the largest of the——

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor again, I object to this historical matter. I can't for the life of me see at any stage of this case where this historical situation [554] would be admissible.

Mr. Hallinan: If counsel would give me five minutes, I will show him in an instant and I will define one of his witnesses for him within the five minutes.

Mr. McMillan: Well, may it please your Honor, the difficulty about this whole matter is, it is historical and it is argumentative: it properly belongs in an argument, not an opening statement. In an opening statement it is not intended to take a shotgun——

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, an organization of sailors on the Pacific Coast, a member of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, was controlled by a man who will appear before you. His name is Harry Lundeberg, one of the most remarkable of the witnesses that will be produced. He is like a character from Jack London, a typical bucko mate, with a reputation for violence and ferocity as wide as the Seven Seas—a man who has been arrested for brawling and assaults in half the courts of the world. Dominating this union with an iron hand, he burned the ballots that were taken——

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please——

Mr. Hallinan: ——by his union concerning the Federation——

Mr. McMillan: Just one moment.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. You want to [555] talk?

Mr. McMillan: I want to make an objection, Mr. Hallinan. You as a lawyer, with your wide experience, know that you have no such statements to prove in this court.

The Court: This—I again repeat another admonition to the jury, that what Mr. Hallinan has to say is in reality that type of matter that may be reserved for closing argument, if the facts demonstrate it. This wild anticipation of the Government's case is to my mind novel; I have never experienced it before in these courts, and I am naturally indulgent toward counsel on both sides, to the end that this case be heard fairly, impartially and that we have all the evidence before us. But I think, Mr. Hallinan, that these excorations and vituperative matter bearing upon Mr. Lundeberg and others has no place at the present time.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Mr. McMillan: May I interrupt, just to give a good example? He has stated Mr. Lundeberg has been arrested in every port——

The Court: I noticed that. I noticed that. All parts of the world. And I will instruct the jury to disregard that statement.

Mr. McMillan: Well, the point that I had——

The Court: I was hopeful that we might get into the evidentiary matter, have the case under way. I am not going to foreclose Government counsel or defense counsel from the [556] widest argument at the close of this case. I am not going to foreclose them on time.

Mr. McMillan: Yes.

The Court: I never have. I assure you, Mr. Hallinan, that I will give you ample time, as well as your colleague, Mr. MacInnis, to argue the matter from its fullest picture. But at the present time I say again to you, with the mild degree of patience that I command, that you are going far afield from any opening statement that I have ever heard in this court or any other court.

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, what I wished to point out definitely is this: Those statements with reference to arrest; now, Mr. Hallinan is a skilled lawyer, and knows that if that witness takes the stand and he seeks to impeach that witness, the only question that he could ask him is, "Have you ever been convicted of a felony?"

The Court: I understand.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't intend to prove it by that witness; I will prove it by one of your own witnesses. One of his own, his other witnesses. Of course, what they want me to do is tell them precisely what we have, and what we are going to confront some of the—I almost used an adjective again—some of the people that they are going to put on the stand. But I don't intend to do that. As far as I can, I want to acquaint the Court and the jury with the outline of [557] what we have to say, without disclosing, without uncovering, our truckload of surprises in exchange for their concealing the few that they have promised us. That is all. But I will prove it by another witness of yours.

Now, when Bridges and his union left the American Federation of Labor and went over to the CIO, they incurred and he incurred the hatred and animosity and the antagonism of Harry Lundeberg, and another character as formidable, at least, Dave Beck of the Teamsters Union; and other men who were heads of the American Federation of Labor unions, disturbed and upset by the decrease in their power and their income from the defection of these unions to the ILWU. And these people who will be witnesses here and who will have groomed and instructed witnesses who will appear here, by no means confine themselves to mere oratory or testimony on the witness stand. We will show you in impeachment of them, and getting right down to the impeachment, as counsel insists, that they not only employed a known thug and murderer to kill Harry Bridges,—we will prove that out of their witnesses—but that they sent two men, including another of their witnesses, to New Orleans, and did in fact kill and murder some poor man down there who was an organizer for the CIO; that that is the kind of people they are; and that the perjury that they will commit upon the witness stand is only dessert to the heavy meal they would be willing to serve out to those who [558] are opposed to them.

Now, I will say no more about that, because I don't want to transgress upon the order of the Court, and I want to bring this to a conclusion, and I will do so as rapidly as I may be permitted. Of course, the more interruption, I suppose the more difficulty I will have to conclude rapidly.

In all the machinations of these conspirators,—Now, Lundeberg and Beck and the employer groups that I have mentioned amalgamated together for the time being, disregarding their mutual conflicts, to strike at the common enemy. And Harper Knowles, Doyle, the other stool pigeons were ably augmented by the goon squads, the killers and the perjurers, under the control of Mr. Lundeberg and Mr. Beck. And fuel was added to their fire and their pretense is somewhat justified by what I say, the open-handed manner in which the longshore workers and warehousemen's union refused to witch-hunt on Communists or expel them from the union or to disassociate from them or treat them with contempt or anything else—granting to them the same right of political faith that they advocated for themselves.

But Mr. Bridges never took any position, and he never did one single thing, and he could not have done one single thing, except as he was instructed by the union to do; and they will not be able to produce one word, one resolution, one order executed by this union in accordance with the [559] philosophy or the dictates or the orders of anybody, Communist Party, Communist officials, Harry Bridges, or anybody else except the rank and file of the International Longshore Workers and Warehousemen's Union.

The next category of people that counsel says will take the stand and testify here are certain Government officials. Now, it is not to be supposed that people of the power and strength of Mr. Bridges' enemies could not enlist certain Government officials in their activities. And they did, to a considerable extent. But let me say this right now for the jury, that any mention that is made of the activity of the Government officials in that connection does not mean the United States Government as a whole, or does not mean the majority of the officials or any officials other than the ones designated, because at every juncture of his career, when his safety and his happiness were threatened, some fine, upstanding, granite-honest American official,—and usually in a high place—leaned down and lifted Harry Bridges and delivered him from the coils——

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please——

Mr. Hallinan: ——of the conspiracy that had wound around him.

Mr. McMillan: Just a moment, counsel, I want——

Mr. Hallinan: So we are not making any criticism——

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please, that is also part [560] of a closing argument. It is purely argumentative.

The Court: Yes, objection sustained.

Mr. McMillan: It is quite eloquent, but——

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: The strength and extent to which these people were willing to go may be learned from the fact that as early as 1936 they caused a warrant for Mr. Bridges' arrest on a deportation inquiry to be issued by the Secretary of Labor. The result of that deportation inquiry I am not going to go into, but the fact that one existed is of the utmost importance, and is one of the things that the jury will have to take into consideration in analyzing what the witnesses are saying. And I will presently explain to you why.

The United States House of Representatives passed as against Harry Bridges the only bill of attainder ever passed in the United States, and——

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, if your Honor please, that is argumentative. He is not in some conference now.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. McMillan: Counsel has been indicting everybody. I think he, as Edmund Burke says,—you can't indict a whole nation.

Mr. Hallinan: You are trying to indict a large part of it, the whole labor movement.

Mr. McMillan: Beg pardon? [561]

Mr. McMillan: You are trying to indict a large part of it, the whole labor movement.

You will find that this indictment is confined to three persons.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, what I should have done is have some little pest along with me so I wouldn't have the burden of quarreling with people. Now, Mr. Donohue sits elegantly by and urbanely surveys this, while Mr. McMillan, who was very friendly——

Mr. Donohue: Well, I think it is about time, if your Honor please,——

The Court: Yes, I think it is about time for the Court to say a few words. Mr. Hallinan,——

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, did you take cognizance of the oratory that Mr. McMillan just engaged in, in stating you cannot indict—quoting Edmund Burke, and so forth?

The Court: I am going to direct my attention to your characterization concerning Mr. Donohue, his urbane manner in sitting there, and so forth. This is no courtroom wherein to indulge yourself, Mr. Hallinan, in these general characterizations that sometimes have room or harbor in other tribunals.

This is a most serious matter. I have treated it as a serious matter. The Government will, and I hope you do. We are not going to get any place in the trial of this case by any such characterizations or personalities [562] indulged in. If you desire to indulge yourself in that direction, I suggest you do it elsewhere.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I apologize for it, your Honor. I didn't mean——

The Court: There is no apology necessary.

Mr. Hallinan: I will not fall into that again, your Honor.

The Court: There is no apology necessary to the Court, because I do not deal in apologies; I deal in more stringent matters. Now, I say to you, with every bit of sincerity that [illegible] have, that we continue this case in an orderly way. I indicated at the threshold, when we empaneled this jury, that your clients would receive a fair trial. They will continue to get a fair trial. The Government is entitled to a fair trial, and the Government will get a fair trial. Now, these unfortunate characterizations may be part and parcel of your particular manner of presentation—sometimes we cultivate things over the years. But I say to you, leave those characterizations outside the courtroom door. That is all.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, your Honor, I might crave indulgence upon the natural exasperation that happens to a person when he is constantly interrupted, and that is all. That is all that it amounts to.

The Court: I will willingly agree to that extent. As our Circuit Court said in the Fredericks Case, United States [563] of America v. Fredericks, wherein we agree that there is always some give and take in the trial of a case. The trial of a case to a certain extent is a combat. There is give and take. But there are extreme limitations to the give and take in the trial of a case. Now, Mr. Hallinan knows the limitations as well as I do—just as well, if not better. And I am asking Mr. Hallinan now, without my again reiterating, not to indulge yourself further.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, your Honor. And of course I apologize to Mr. McMillan. We have been friends for years, and we have barked at each other once or twice before.

Mr. McMillan: You don't have to apologize, Mr. Hallinan; I have reached the age where it is not necessary to apologize to me for anything.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, now, we will get into the opposite thing and we will be lauding and extolling each other to where it is even worse, because when people quarrel with each other and then exchange courtesies——

Now, to discuss the activities of certain Government officials in this, as to point the complete destruction of any case that the prosecution could even attempt to put on. In 1935, as I informed you, Paul Scharrenberg at a convention in Seattle, charged that Harry Bridges was a Communist and a book had been issued to him under the name of Harry Dorgan. And Harry Bridges employed counsel and filed an action for [564] libel against Mr. Scharrenberg.

In 1937 Mr. Bridges attended a convention in Seattle, and agents of the Immigration Department dictographed his hotel room and tapped his telephone wire. And that being discovered was made a matter of such public record that it cannot be disputed, because Mr. Bridges and his union forthwith communicated with the United States Government protesting what, whether right or wrong, they called an infringement of his liberties, of his constitutional rights. The papers ran great articles upon it, and it was widely broadcast everywhere, and letters of indignation and protest rained upon the responsible parties.

Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please your Honor,—

The Court: I waited for an objection. I think in the absence of the prosecution noting an objection, the Court will intrude itself. There is no question involved in this case of wire-tapping. I take it from assurances given to me on the motion to dismiss, there will be no effort made on the part of the Government to introduce any evidence as a result of any unlawful enterprise?

Mr. Donohue: I renew that assurance.

The Court: You renew that assurance?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained, the jury is admonished to disregard the statement, of any kind, character [565] or description, bearing upon that matter.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, might I be heard on that?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I be heard on that? These people pretend that Harry Bridges had himself elected to the central committee of the Communist Party, and put his safety at the risk of every bum who came along, every stool pigeon, every liar, when he knew all along that twenty-four hours a day he was under constant surveillance, for the last fifteen years, by the efficient operators of the United States Government—that his wires were tapped, that he was spied upon, that pictures were taken of him. Now, that is my purpose, Judge.

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please, we object to that.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, as early as 1936 there had been introduced into Harry Bridges' union and into his personal office as his private secretary a woman employed by the Waterfront Employers Association, and she was also the mistress of Mr. Harry Lundeberg. And at that time Mr. Bridges——

Mr. McMillan: Object to these statements, may it please your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: The same purpose, your Honor.

Mr. McMillan: I can't understand why counsel feels that he is obliged to lug in a mistress here and there.

Mr. Hallinan: We didn't lug her in; they sent her in. [566] We want to show your Honor this is a complete—And it just amounts to this:——

The Court: Now, this is not an opening statement, Mr. Hallinan, either traditionally or in any concept that I have ever heard of. I have already stated my position.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, aside from any general matter, such as I have——

The Court: And an opening statement, if I may amplify one step further, is not a sounding board wherein you may give vent to the external and immaterial matters that have existed over a period of many, many years. I think it rather an extreme situation that reference be made to this woman at this juncture, without any evidence before this Court or jury. You might well in the same breath condemn, indict, destroy, burn at the stake, any person in the City and County of San Francisco, by a bland statement. Now, you gentlemen are asking for a fair trial, the essentials of constitutional rights. And I think you had better——

Mr. Hallinan: Did your Honor see the headlines in today's papers, which said that the Government was going to prove not only that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party but had been elected to high office in it? What concern was there made for reservation——

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor has instructed the jury not to read the papers. [567]

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, am I entirely obtuse in the trial of this case? Or have we descended into another strata of judicial process? I admonished this jury categorically, unequivocally, with every bit of vigor that I have,—which vigor is expending itself in my colloquy with you—that you are not to read the newspapers (addressing the jury) under any conditions. And this Court, mindful of the admonition to you, does not indulge himself in the reading of the newspapers. Now, Mr. Hallinan indirectly has given you part of what the headlines are, which is a direct reflection upon this Court's admonition to you.

Mr. Hallinan,——

Mr. Hallinan: Your honor, all the paper did was repeat what counsel said to the jury yesterday. Now, they said that they would show that in conformity with Communist Party plans of keeping secret the membership of persons prominently identified, that membership cards issued to the defendant were issued in the name of Harry Bridges, that he was some kind of a secret, hidden conspirational sort of member; that he was elected under some sort of secret and guilty idea. Now, they can come out and say that in an opening statement and try to blacken these gentlemen before anything starts. But because we mention some woman, without revealing her name at all, but who we suppose and expect is going to be a witness here, and who if we haven't——[568]

The Court: No. Now, Mr. Hallinan,——

Mr. Hallinan: We will produce the evidence on it.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, let us pause momentarily and analyze just what we say. You characterized wholesale all of these witnesses as perjurers, low people, characterized them with vile, vituperative terms. 125 in number. I do not know at the present time the identity of any witness about to be called for the United States Government, and I dare say that in large part you do not. Now, I think it highly unfair to this Court, indulgent as I have been with you, to continue on that line or that particular vein.

Mr. Hallinan: All right, your Honor.

The Court: I can't say any more.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will drop that.

Now, you must remember—and this will be shown to you—that from that time up to the present, aside from inferring any impropriety upon them, because let's say that they were properly in there, every one of them, and that nothing wrong should be said about them—Harry Bridges knew that every instant of his life was an open book, that he lived in a goldfish bowl; that he was spied upon, observed, seen, that his friends, his family, everybody connected with him were questioned and interrogated by able and diligent representatives of the Government. So that unless he were insane, he could not or would not do the things that these gentlemen [569] so blandly say they are going to show you he did.

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, that is purely argumentative again. There is no difference there than in saying that a man could not have committed this crime because he is too stupid; he wouldn't know how to commit it. Now, he is saying Mr. Bridges, because he was being watched all the while by these "bums" and "stool pigeons," and the scum of the earth, and he knew that, that he wouldn't have done these things. That is purely argumentative.

The Court: We will take the morning recess, gentlemen. I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [570]

The Court: Is it stipulated that the jurors are present, together with the four alternate jurors?

Mr. McMillan: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Throughout the progress of the trial, may we have that same stipulation of counsel without the necessity of my repeating the same?

Mr. McMillan: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Thank you.

Mr. Hallinan: The motives of the witnesses who will testify, whether they are Communists, ex-Communists, rival union leaders or government agents, are equally open to inquiry by the jury. Bridges was possessed of a faculty that may do him more harm in these matters than all his serious philosophy. In the year 1941 a convention was held in New York City and the espionage activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation witnesses reached ridiculous proportions, that is to say, there were four or five men constantly following him. If he went into a hotel lobby, a young man would be looking through a hole cut in a newspaper.

Mr. McMillan: I object to that.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: This is all proper, Your Honor, I submit. Can't we show the activities and motives of the witnesses who are agents of the government? Are they exempt? [571]

The Court: I do not know that they are being produced. The matter at this stage of the proceedings is irrelevant and immaterial, and I sustain the objection, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. McMillan: We do not even know that he is going to bring in that newspaper.

Mr. Hallinan: Ridicule is a very dangerous instrument. People's pride is a sensitive part of their organization. Harry Bridges gave two articles, one to a New York newspaper and the other to a magazine, the New Yorker, which in 1941 described all the boyish workings of the FBI in this case, and excited thereby additional hatred for him in the ranks of an organization that, of course, takes itself seriously.

Mr. McMillan: If Your Honor please, we are obliged to object again. The newspaper articles that he speaks of would be self-serving as a legal proposition.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, it all goes to show the knowledge of the espionage and furthermore, the giving of an amusing article——

The Court: Is it your present theory that the FBI were part and parcel of this conspiracy?

Mr. Hallinan: I will say so. We will show that scores of them have for years been following this man interviewing his clients, his friends, berating witnesses, threatening them, doing all sorts of them, trying to build up a case.

The Court: You reserve your comment concerning them until [572] you finish your cross-examination and argue the matter to the jury. At this time it is irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I do not want to argue the points and I do not want to take exceptions on a thing that might be sort of neutral, but I certainly feel that I am being very closely restricted in this matter.

The Court: An opening statement, in the very nature of things, is given in a restricted sense.

Mr. Hallinan: Then let us get to the next category and root of their false and fraudulent charge, and I hope that these gentlemen are not entitled to the instant protection that Mr. McMillan affords the government agents. They will produce here, they tell us, ex-members of the Communist Party who will testify to certain things. And there are such witnesses. The most fantastic of all that will be produced, to name a few of them, they have Benjamin Kiplau, who occupied most of his life as a labor spy. There was Manning Johnson, a negro, who was raised by the Communist Party from a cafeteria busboy to some sort of organizer and is now qualified as a government witness. There is Louis Budenz who deserted a somewhat impecunious position on a Communist newspaper and returned or went into the Roman Catholic church and is now——

Mr. McMillan: Just a moment.

Mr. Hallinan: We are entitled to talk about these people, Your Honor. [573]

Mr. McMillan: There is nothing said in our opening statement as to who the witnesses will be.

Mr. Hallinan: I know who they are. They produced some of these people before the grand jury. We are entitled to discuss them and warn the jury what is coming, to inform them, to have them look at them with inquisitive eyes. We do not have to keep quiet about every witness that they are going to put on. If we had such a witness that they knew of, they could characterize him, tell about his testimony, why he would be biased or motivated. That goes right to the credibility of the witness. We can test all of that on cross-examination. I think if anything is proper on an opening statement, that is. All they want to do, Judge, is sort of write out an opening statement for the defense and say, "You can say this and no further."

The Court: What you propose to do is perfectly plain to me, Mr. Hallinan, and that is to assassinate in advance every witness who might take this stand without any evidence before this Court of the general characterizations and vituperations.

Mr. Hallinan: All right, and that is just what I say, Your Honor.

The Court: That procedure may be extant or it may be the procedure in some other courts. It has never been the procedure in the federal courts. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Hallinan: I will have to enter an exception.

The Court: You may enter an exception, yes, sir. [574]

Mr. Hallinan: I want to make a statement. I want to introduce evidence. I want to make a statement now as to the character of these witnesses.

The Court: You can make your offer of proof in the absence of the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Now, we will show you—and we only know it from the statement of this gentleman on the opening statement, and I daresay he will permit me to comment on that—that there is an organization called the Communist Party apparently. I do not know, but he says there is, and that it has some sort of central organization called the Central Committee, did you call it? The National Central Committee? That is what you call it, and so far as I can learn, they have elections every two years, is that correct?

Mr. McMillan: I do not know. We are only concerned about the election in which Mr. Bridges participated.

Mr. Hallinan: Could you tell us, so I could get something, the number of persons who comprise that board?

Mr. McMillan: May it please Your Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: I will withdraw the question.

Mr. McMillan: He is making an opening statement; I am not answering questions.

Mr. Hallinan: We are going to be shown, then, by these gentlemen that for two years this Mr. Harry Bridges, who has [575] been so in terror of being deported and now in terror of being sent to jail, who testified under oath in 1937 that he was not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, who testified under oath in 1939 that he was not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, and who testified under oath in 1941 that he is not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, who testified under oath in 1945 that he is not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, that some fellow, whom he does not know, and it is going to come out here, Mr. McMillan tells us, will testify that this man had placed his safety and his happiness in the safekeeping of numerous persons, whose names he does not even know, elected officials of a party back in New York.

Mr. McMillan: ——To say that Mr. Bridges does not even know this man. He may know him.

Mr. Hallinan: Their first chance we will have to find out who he even is is when he takes the stand, the first of the box of surprises.

As about everything I say seems to offend and upset somebody, I had better conclude as rapidly as possible lest I upset and offend the Court and jury and do my clients more harm than good. I have told the jury that we would prove this conspiracy that I mentioned, and you will understand that persons may be members of the conspiracy who did not participate in its formation but who endure it and embrace it during the course of [576] its progress, and that people who initially started the conspiracy may drop out of it, be no longer interested in its purposes, and it is still the same conspiracy. We will show you that these people whom I have mentioned have come into this conspiracy since its inception. The original shipowners of the Pacific Coast have withdrawn from it so completely and thoroughly that the one thing that they would want less than anything else is to have Harry Bridges deported, and we will produce evidence to show you that, because they have found him an honest, reliable labor leader with whom they can deal, whose word is good, and whose integrity is rock-bound.

Mr. McMillan: We object to that, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: I think we are entitled to show the character of the defendant.

Mr. McMillan: You have the right to show character.

Mr. Hallinan: I think you will conceed us that one thing.

Mr. McMillan: In the trial of this case, as far as he wishes, he may show the character of the defendant or bring in character witnesses who will testify to his truth, honesty and integrity.

The Court: I assume that that is what Mr. Hallinan says he is going to do.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: However, Mr. Bridges has made the mistake of [577] not taking the $50,000 that was offered to him back in 1934 to throw the strike and go on back to Australia——

Mr. McMillan: That is objected to.

Mr. Hallinan: We will show that.

The Court: The objection is sustained and the jury is instructed to disregard the statement.

Mr. Hallinan: Because, embracing some sort of philosophy that fate is inevitable and that no precautions could ward off all evil, he has plodded along on his same path that he started out on way back in 1933, a lonely and solitary figure, who can not trust the members of his family, his friends, associates or anyone else.

Mr. McMillan: I object to that, if Your Honor please. It appears to be a beautiful peroration coming along in favor effusively of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Hallinan: I do not see how that persistent——

The Court: Mr. Hallinan has about reached the end of his opening statement, I assume. Probably this is a fitting time to speak of those matters.

Mr. Hallinan: He embarked upon a dangerous enterprise which revivified and directly brought to a head this conspiracy as you now see it, and that is, that partly to preserve their own living standards from the competition of cheaper labor, at the behest of the Pacific Coast Shipowners and Canners and partly from a humane intent to aid others less frightened than [578] those associated with them——

Mr. McMillan: These observations, if it please Your Honor, are no part of an opening statement and this is purely argumentative.

Mr. Hallinan: The merest use of a preposition or an adjective is supposed to do something. In other words, the bar is to be so stilted in what it says, beaten into such forms and cliches that a man is restricted by the limitations of some gentleman who thinks that any word consisting of more than two syllables is inflammatory and overelegant or argumentative or something. I do not think, Your Honor, a trial has to be such a dull and dry thing that we are limited in the very words we use.

The Court: The trial does not have to be a dull and dry thing. But it has to be a decent thing in a judicial atmosphere, and that is what I intend to conduct.

Mr. Hallinan: I do not say it should not, and we have not shown any other disposition at all. I am now talking about Mr. McMillan's objections.

The Court: Have you concluded your opening statement?

Mr. Hallinan: Not quite.

The Court: Proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: The International Longshore Workers Union went down to Hawaii and organized the disorganized and exploited workers there, and they drew down upon themselves and upon [579] Bridges anew the malice, hatred and revenge that has flowered this conspiracy anew of the powerful feudal five companies of the New Hawaii, and that is the immediate cause of what is now confronting us. The situation there was the renewal of about what had happened in San Francisco—poison gas and clubs for the workers and a storing up of the——

Mr. McMillan: If it please Your Honor;——

Mr. Hallinan: This is not ancient history; this happened within the last year.

Mr. McMillan: The poison gas, rocks, stones——

The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. McMillan.

Mr. Hallinan: The agents of those organizations stirred up anew the conspiracy, revived it, revitalized it, and now, four years after Harry Bridges swore under oath in the Superior Court that he was not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, a perjury charge comes on for trial before you ladies and gentlemen, and we will show by the witnesses for the prosecution that the express and avowed reason for the institution that was to break the strike in Hawaii, and so said Tom Clark publicly, the Attorney General of the United States, and we will show you that that was the exact and only purpose of fomenting this persecution.

My opening statement has been criticized by admirable judges. The trial procedure may invoke criticism by jurors and even spectators. The sources of inquiry here cover a period of [580] many years. Whether it sounds fantastic or not, there were 125 witnesses. The preparation for the proper trial of such case would consume months. The testimony of all people in previous matters must be read over. I assume, Your Honor, that I should not mention any decision of any court no matter how relevant I consider it to be. I am not going to transgress on your patience.

The Court: We have already discussed those matters at length, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: These 125 people have testified under oath in numerous matters. The so-called ex-members of the Communist Party have run from New York to Hawaii to San Francisco to Louisiana —any place where they could pick up a few honest dollars of government treasury compensation testifying against Communists here, labor leaders here, school teachers there, willing to say anything that would bring them a few dollars, typical of the kind of people that come up in circumstances and periods such as we are going through now ready for a few dollars, for fame or what they call fame, to keep themselves in the limelight, to swear any man's life away for a hundred dollars. They are perjurers of the worst kind—one of them who will come and hear the very tightest oaths of the Communist Party, the very soul of this sort of thing, hired informers, spies, turncoats, the very swill of humanity, these ex-Communists, experts who have now turned upon their old comrades and [581] associations, and finding the pickings more profitable in the safe environment of the government's protectorate, will come in here and swear any man's life away whether they ever saw him before or not.

Mr. McMillan: If Your Honor please, if this is not an argument after all the evidence is in, I do not know what I am talking about.

Mr. Hallinan: If I may finish one paragraph, I will do so.

Mr. McMillan: Can you make it in a paragraph?

Mr. Hallinan: In one paragraph and I won't even make it long.

The Court: It is unnecessary for me to admonish the jury again to disregard these statements.

Mr. Hallinan: As I said, I was apologizing for the manner in which we are going to have to try the case. I have been in the case three weeks. Mr. MacInnis, less than two. We have not been able to adequately prepare the case. A motion for a continuance was made—I always say that to excuse our own faults——

Mr. McMillan: This I object to.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, you know better than that.

Mr. Hallinan: I am not going to say anything criticizing anyone except myself.

The Court: The motion was denied, and you know the reasons underlying it. [582]

Mr. Hallinan: I do not question it, Your Honor, and I was going to say that the Court calendar and the preparation of the trial was such that the Court could not grant the motion. That is certainly not criticizing anyone, but I certainly should be entitled to say to the jury the reason why we have to paw through innumerable documents instead of having them in order ready to examine witnesses as they come up, ~~and~~ why we will probably have to ask Your Honor on occasion if we can defer to an afternoon session or the next morning with cross-examination of witnesses that may be produced. That is all that I was going to say about that. [583]

I don't want the jury to think that Mr. MacInnis or I are negligent or that we haven't prepared, as far as may be done, because we have. We have worked very hard in the two and three weeks that we have had. I only say that as explaining why we will not be able to immediately pick up a document and may impose upon your patience by having to fix through and find such impeaching records as we have.

Now, from my paragraph, if I may. We will ask the jury to reserve judgment until the entire case is submitted, as the Court will direct you; because when the flower that is going to bloom in here from the roots of this conspiracy first presents itself, the first shoots may seem fair and decent enough. But if you continue to examine it, it will grow again, noxious, fetid, horrible, as it expands. Keep looking at it. Turn upon it the light of the search for truth, and it will wither before your eyes. You may have to hold your noses.

The Court: Will the Government call your first witness?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May it please the Court, on behalf of the defendants Robertson and Schmidt, because we still don't know anything about the character of the case which is to be brought against them, we would like to ask leave to reserve an opening statement until the prosecution has been presented against these two men. Will that be your Honor's ruling? [584]

The Court: You may reserve your opening statement. Mr. Hallinan assumes to know all of the witnesses, you assume to know none of the witnesses!

Mr. MacInnis: I will be very glad to answer the comment of your Honor. I had hoped that one of the Government prosecutors, in making an opening statement, would tell us for the first time the reason for the inclusion of Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt in this case. The indictment which your Honor has read to the jury says that at a time to the Grand Jurors unknown, and with persons to the Grand Jurors unknown, they went into a conspiracy. We don't know yet what that time was, who those persons are. We are told, for the first time yesterday, by Mr. McMillan; and these two men, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt, are now accused, although the indictment doesn't show that, of being members of the Communist Party. The matter of Harry Bridges is a matter of open history, to anyone in San Francisco. It is easy to find out people who would have an animus against him. Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt are not so fortunate that a quick endeavor will disclose persons who might testify against them. So that is my answer to your Honor's observation.

The Court: All right. Your statement may be reserved, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Lloyd H. Garner.

The Clerk: Call Mr. Lloyd Garner. [585]

LLOYD H. GARNER

called for the Government; sworn.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Will you state your full name, Mr. Garner?

A. Lloyd H. Garner.

Q. And where do you live?

A. Los Angeles.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Naturalization examiner.

Q. How long have you been associated with the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization?

A. About nine years.

Q. Are you now employed by that Bureau in the City of Los Angeles? A. Yes, I am.

Q. And how long have you been there in Los Angeles?

A. A year and a half in Los Angeles.

Q. And prior to going to Los Angeles, where were you employed?

A. With the Bureau in San Francisco.

Q. And when you say "the Bureau," you refer to the Bureau of Immigration?

A. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Q. When were you first employed by the Bureau of Immigration in the City of San Francisco? [586]

A. From April, 1941.

Q. And that employment here continued for how long? A. Until about April, 1948.

Q. Mr. Garner, do you know Mr. Harry Bridges?

A. I have seen him, met him.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom?

A. Yes, I see him here.

Q. Would you indicate to the Court and to the jurors where he is in the courtroom.

A. Mr. Bridges is sitting at the table at my left, at the far corner of the table, in the left corner.

Q. Do you know the gentleman who is seated to Mr. Bridges' left?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Mr. Bridges' left—Mr. Schmidt.

Q. Do you know Mr. J. R. Robertson?

A. Mr. Robertson is seated on Mr. Bridges' right hand, with the exception of one man between.

Q. Would you step down from the witness chair and touch Mr. Robertson on the shoulder.

A. (Putting on glasses and leaving witness stand) According to my recollection, I would say this is Mr. Robertson (indicating).

Mr. Donohue: May the record show, identifying the distinguished counsel, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I am glad I am neither Mr. Harvey, Mr. [587] Canfield, Mr. Dorgan, nor Mr. Rossi, at any rate.

Mr. Donohue: Will you resume the witness stand.

(Witness resumes witness stand.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue). On how many occasions have you seen Mr. Bridges?

A. Only on two occasions.

Q. And on how many occasions have you seen Mr. Schmidt?

A. Two occasions, the same occasions.

Q. And Mr. Robertson?

A. The same two occasions.

Q. Can you tell us now the date on which each of those two occasions occurred?

A. Yes. I saw Mr. Bridges on three occasions. The first time was when he came to the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in San Francisco, in June of 1945, to submit his application, to file a petition for naturalization. The second time was the first part of August, 1945, when I conducted the hearing for—to file the petition for naturalization.

Q. And where was that hearing conducted?

A. That was in the City Hall in San Francisco.

Q. In what part of the City Hall?

A. In the office of the deputy County Clerk, the naturalization office.

Q. And the third occasion when you saw Mr. Bridges?

A. The third occasion was in September, 1945, in the courtroom, [588] Superior Court in San Francisco.

Q. And when was the first occasion on which you saw Mr. Henry Schmidt?

A. I first saw Mr. Schmidt on the day the petition was filed. That would be in August, 1945.

Q. And when you say "petition," you refer to the petition of Mr. Bridges for naturalization?

A. For naturalization.

Q. And when did you see Mr. Schmidt the second time?

A. In the courtroom, Superior Court in San Francisco, in September, 1945.

Q. And on each of the occasions when you saw Mr. Schmidt, was he in company with Mr. Bridges?

A. Yes, they were together.

Q. And when did you see Mr. J. R. Roberison?

A. The first time on the morning in August when

Mr. Bridges appeared in the City Hall at San Francisco to file his petition for naturalization.

Q. And was Mr. Robertson at that time with Mr. Bridges and with Mr. Schmidt? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did you see Mr. Robertson on the second occasion?

A. In the Superior Court in San Francisco on the morning of the naturalization hearing, in September, 1945.

Q. And on that occasion also was Mr. Robertson with both Mr. [589] Bridges and Mr. Schmidt?

A. They were all present in the court at that time.

Q. I hand you what I shall ask the reporter to mark as Government's for identification No. 1 (handing to clerk).

The Court: So ordered.

The Clerk: Marked Government's 1 for identification.

> (Application to file petition for naturalization was marked Government's Exhibit 1 for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you look at this and tell, if you can, whether you can identify it. (Handing to witness).

A. I identify this document as the application to file a petition for naturalization.

Mr. MacInnis: May we see the document?

Mr. Donohue: I am very sorry.

Mr. MacInnis: May I see it, please?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: Yes. I hope you will forgive me. I am sorry.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, indeed I will. Thank you (examining).

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, may I be excused at this time?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Garner, when and where did you first see that document (handing to witness)?

A. This document first came to my attention when it was presented over the information desk or counter in the Appraiser's [590] Building in the office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in June—June 23, 1945.

Q. Now, what, if anything, did you do with respect to that document?

A. Nothing other than accept it. It was submitted as an application to file a petition. It so happened that although my usual duties do not take me in the information desk, I was relieving the clerk that day temporarily, and Mr. Bridges presented it while I happened to be on duty in there.

Q. And is it your present recollection that on the 23rd of June 1945, you received that across the information desk from Mr. Bridges personally?

A. That is my recollection, yes, sir.

Q. What if anything did you do subsequently with respect to that document?

A. I did nothing further with it then, other than place it in the basket for such documents for processing in the usual channels.

Q. And then did there come a time later when that document came back into your personal possession? A. Yes.

Q. When was that?

A. It was on the morning that Mr. Bridges and his witnesses appeared in the office of the County Clerk in the City Hall at San Francisco to file his petition for citizenship. [591]

Q. Can you tell us when that morning was, the date?

A. It was in August of 1945. I recollect the date as being somewhere around the 8th of August.

Q. And when Mr. Bridges and his two witnesses came to your office, did you then take physical possession of that document?

A. Yes, I had it in my possession at that time.

Q. And then what did you do with respect to Mr. Bridges and his witnesses and that document?

A. I conducted the preliminary examination, using this document as a base for my questioning.

Q. Now, I am sure that you are wholly familiar with the process of conducting a preliminary examination. Perhaps his Honor is not, and I am sure the members of the jury are not. Would you tell us exactly what you did, what you characterize as conducting a preliminary examination?

A. With the application before me, I called Mr. Bridges, the applicant, into my presence in the examination room, swore him to tell the truth in connection with the proceeding, and undertook then to verify the information as it is set down in the application.

Q. And how do you go about doing that?

A. I did that by reading the questions that appear on the application and asking for his responses. And the responses as he gave them were checked against the questions asked on [592] the application form.

Q. And those, what appear to be penciled check marks against each question, were they put there by you and at that time?

A. They were put there by me at the time I asked the questions, yes, sir.

Q. Is there anything on that application, Mr. Garner, which would indicate by whom that application was prepared?

A. On page 2 of the application, question No. 35, "Did you yourself fill out this form?" The typewritten answer is "Yes," and the document is signed "Harry Renton Bridges."

Q. Now, after having checked Mr. Bridges' answers as you have indicated, what did you further do?

A. After I had completed the examination of Mr. Bridges, then I called for his two witnesses. I asked him to leave the examination room and the witnesses or persons whom he offered as witnesses in his behalf came into my presence in the room.

The Court: Have you reached a convenient time, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: I was just about to suggest it.

The Court: All right, we have reached the noon hour, ladies and gentlemen, and may I again admonish you not to discuss the case with any person or persons, not to form nor express an opinion thereon until this matter is finally submitted to you. We will resume, then, at two o'clock this afternoon.

(Thereupon, a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [593]

Friday, November 18, 1949, 2:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: The case of United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Lloyd Garner, heretofore sworn.

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Garner, directing your attention again to the date that you state as about the 8th of August, you saw Mr. Henry Schmidt in some portion of the City Hall Building? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where directly or exactly was it that you had this conversation with Mr. Schmidt after Mr. Bridges had left the room?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. In the portion of the Deputy County Clerk's office on the third floor of the City Hall, San Francisco, the room that was set aside for the use of the naturalization deputy there. We used a portion of the room as a hearing room.

Mr. Donohue: At this time, if Your Honor please, may I ask the Clerk to mark as Government's for identification No. 2 this document?

The Court: So ordered.

(A document was thereupon marked United States Exhibit No. 2 for identification.) [594]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Garner, I hand you what has been marked by the Clerk as Government's No. 2 for identification and ask you to tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury if you can identify that document.

A. Yes, this document is a petition for naturalization filed in the Superior Court of the State of California by Harry Renton Bridges. It is the document or a copy of the document that was filed at that time.

Q. Is that a copy of an original which was filed with the Court?

A. Yes, this is a triplicate. The petition is typed in three parts, the original, duplicate and triplicate. This is the triplicate, with part of the original petition.

Q. And where is that triplicate portion of that petition now?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. That becomes a part of the file of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Francisco.

Q. And did you bring that document to the Court today from the files of that service?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Did there come a time when you had that particular piece of paper which is now in your hand, in your hand before?

A. Yes, sir, the first time was on the 8th of August, 1945, at which time the petition was filed. We had the preliminary examination; following the examination the petition was typed and filed.

Q. Where was that petition typed and filed, if you know? [595]

A. In the room of the Deputy County Clerk, Naturalization Department of the City Hall, San Francisco.

Q. Is that document signed?

A. The document is signed at the bottom on the face by Harry Renton Bridges.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the time and place on the 8th day of August, 1945, when you conducted an examination which you have described as a preliminary examination of the defendant Henry Schmidt, did you have that document in your hand which is now in your hand?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you make any notations on that piece of paper?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Yes, I made notations on the reverse of this paper.

Q. Will you tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury just what you did, what was said or by Mr. Schmidt on this occasion?

A. Mr. Schmidt appeared as a witness on behalf of the applicant, Mr. Bridges. I swore him in the usual manner to tell the truth, all the statements to be made by him under oath.

Q. And when you say you swore him, do you mean you swore the defendant Henry Schmidt?

A. I swore the witness Henry Schmidt, the defendant here. Then I proceeded to inquire of him as to his qualifications as a witness.

Q. What questions did you ask him which would qualify him as a [596] witness?

A. I asked him where he was born—first name and his address and his occupation, and I asked him where he was born.

Q. And he made answer?

A. He answered he was born in Germany. I asked him then whether he was a naturalized citizen. He said he was, and he offered to me in proof of that a naturalization certificate issued in his own name through the United States District Court in San Francisco under date of July 11th, 1927, certificate No. 2,588,949, according to the record I made at that time.

I then asked him if he was acquainted with the applicant, Harry Bridges. He said he was.

I asked him how long he had known Mr. Bridges. He told me he had known him since about 1932 or 1933.

I asked him then about how often he saw the applicant Mr. Bridges. He stated that he saw him on an average of at least once a month or oftener.

I asked him under what circumstances he usually saw the applicant, whether in business or socially. He replied in business, that they were both officers or officials of the same union, the ILWU.

I then asked him whether he was a Communist or a member of the Communist Party. He said he was not.

Q. When you say you asked him whether he was a member of the Communist Party and he said that he was not, do you mean that [597] you asked Mr. Schmidt if he, Mr. Schmidt, was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I was speaking about Mr. Schmidt, the witness. My questions were all directed to him as a witness. I asked him personally whether he was.

Q. His answer was what?

A. No. The answer was in the negative, that he was not. I asked him whether the applicant was a member of the Communist Party and he answered negatively at that time.

Q. By the applicant, you mean the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. You mean the defendant Harry Bridges here. At that time there was no petition. He was merely an applicant to file a petition.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Was there any further questioning of Mr. Schmidt as a qualifying witness?

A. Yes, I asked him whether in his opinion the applicant, Mr. Bridges, was attached to the principles of the Constitution and qualified for citizenship, and he said he believed so. He gave me the impression that that was his understanding.

I asked him whether the applicant, Mr. Bridges, had been out of the United States during the period of his acquaintance. He said no, he did not know of any such—he gave me the impression he did not know of any absenses. [598]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think, your Honor, the witness should state what his recollection may be as to the conversation, and not what impression he now says he has, four years after the event.

The Court: Yes, that observation is well taken, counsel.

Mr. Donohue: I quite agree with you.

Q. Would you just confine, in so far as you possibly can under his Honor's directions, your answer to the recollection of what the witness actually said, Mr. Garner. What is your best recollection of what the witness Schmidt said with respect to the question as to whether or not he believed that Mr. Bridges, the applicant, was devoted to the Constitution of the United States?

A. That he was.

Q. Then you asked him further with respect to whether or not to his knowledge Mr. Bridges had been out of the United States?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. That was my next question.

Q. To that what answer did he make?

A. The response was "No." I then asked him whether the applicant, Mr. Bridges, had been arrested, and he stated that he had not been. I then asked him, I asked Mr. Schmidt, the witness, as to himself, whether he had been arrested, and he stated he had not. And I asked him whether he had been out of the United States since his naturalization, and he [599] stated that he had been in Mexico and Canada, but only for brief periods.

Q. Have you told us in so far as you can recall the extent of the examination of Mr. Schmidt?

A. That, so far as I recall, is all of the questioning of the witness Mr. Schmidt.

Q. And did I understand you to say that at the time that you conducted this preliminary examination of Mr. Schmidt that neither Mr. Bridges nor Mr. Robertson were present? A. That is true.

Q. Now, what followed upon your completion of your examination of Mr. Schmidt?

A. I undertook examination of the second witness, one Paul Schnurr, who sat in the room during this period. And the first question to him, after I had sworn him in the same manner I had sworn the witness Schmidt,——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. If I may interrupt, unless I misunderstand the trend of the testimony, it would appear that this gentleman is now estopped to tell us that a different person was present. As I understood his testimony this morning, subject to whatever impression your Honor has, he said that he met Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson for the first—at least, Mr. Robertson—for the first time on this day in the office of which he spoke. Now he says that he questioned a witness named Schnurr. I think that unless this is cross-examination [600] of the Government's witness, that the original answer must stand.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

Mr. MacInnis: May I inquire, your Honor, for my own purposes, what the testimony before has been?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor wishes, I shall be glad to——

The Court: What purpose is that going to serve? Isn't the situation here that Mr. Paul Schnurr appeared and then thereafter, by reason of unfitness, departed?

Mr. Donohue: By reason of his inability to qualify.

The Court: Yes. The objection is overruled, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: The point of the objection, your Honor, was merely so that we would know the chronological order of these events. I understood him to testify——

The Court: Take the chronology as you go along, Mr. Witness.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): May I ask you, in order to clarify the record, when Mr. Bridges came to this office to which you make reference, with Mr. Schmidt on the 8th day of August, by whom was he accompanied when you first saw Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Bridges?

A. I can't state as to all the persons present.

Q. Well, may I ask you this, then: Who came with him, other than Mr. Schmidt, to appear as a qualifying witness for Mr. Bridges? [601]

A. As soon as I had finished the examination of the applicant Mr. Bridges and asked for his witnesses, he presented Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Paul Schnurr.

Q. And in order that the time element may be determined, was Mr. Robertson there at that time?

A. He was not.

Q. When was it, with reference to that time, when you first met Mr. Schnurr and Mr. Schmidt, that Mr. Robertson appeared in your office?

A. Subsequent to my examination of Mr. Schmidt and immediately after I started the examination of Mr. Schnurr and disqualified him. I called for another witness and Mr. Robertson came in.

Q. Now, under his Honor's ruling, would you state to his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what occurred between you and Mr. Schnurr?

A. I asked—I had already sworn Mr. Schnurr as a witness. I examined him and asked him where he was born. He told me in Germany. I asked him whether he was a naturalized citizen and he said no, he was a citizen through his father by derivation. He offered me a certificate of citizenship in evidence. I examined the certificate. It was made to Mathias Schnurr, had been issued by the probate court of Belmont County, Ohio, on December 28, 1900. He volunteered the information that it related to his father, that he was a derivative citizen [602] through that naturalization. I asked him then for further proof of his relationship to the naturalized person, and his birth date, in order to qualify him as a derivative citizen. He said he had no such evidence or documents to establish those facts. I told him that without definite evidence of his citizenship I could not accept him as a witness in that matter.

Q. And how long thereafter was it until Mr. Robertson appeared in your office for the purpose of qualifying as a witness for Mr. Bridges in his naturalization application?

A. It was immediately following. I stepped to the door of the hearing room, where Mr. Bridges and his attorney, other members of his party were waiting outside, called Mr. Gladstein, his attorney, and explained the situation to him, that the case was going to have to go over to another day or, if possible, he could substitute a witness who was qualified. After a conversation outside of my presence with—I presume——

Q. Well, no, don't presume. Just tell us what you recall.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. After a conversation outside of my presence, he returned with Mr. Robertson and said that he thought Mr. Robertson could qualify as being a native-born citizen.

Q. Now would you tell us the conversation or examination you had of Mr. Robertson?

A. I swore Mr. Robertson in, and had him seated, asked him where he was born. He told me he was born in Texas. I asked [603] him if he had ever lived outside of the United States. He said he had not. I deduced from that that he was a citizen of the United States by birth, and I accepted him as being eligible as a citizen to testify. I then asked him about how long he had known the applicant, Mr. Bridges. He testified that he had known him since about 1934. I asked him how frequently he had seen the applicant in the past few years, and he said that he had seen him on an average of about weekly or thereabouts. I asked him in what connection he usually saw the applicant, whether business or socially, and he said that they were both officers of the same organization, the union, ILWU. He saw him in connection with his work there. I asked him then whether he was a member of the Communist Party and he said he was not. I asked him whether the applicant, Mr. Bridges, was a member of the Communist Party, and he said he was not. I asked him whether in his opinion the applicant was qualified for citizenship, that is, attached to the principles of the Constitution as required by law, and he said he was.

I asked him if the applicant, Mr. Bridges, had been out of the United States at any time during his acquaintance, and he said he had not. I asked him whether the applicant, Mr. Bridges, had been arrested at any time during his acquaintanceship, and he said he had not. And I asked him if—that is, I asked the witness if he personally had been arrested. He said he had not. And I [604] asked him whether he had been out of the United States at any time, and he said that he had made brief trips out of the United States but for no extended length of time. That concluded my examination of that witness.

Q. And now may I ask you, Mr. Garner, what was the purpose of your examination of the witnesses Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think that is asking the witness to testify as to a conclusion of law.

Mr. Donohue: No, he has a certain——

The Court: Overruled, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I think a witness, your Honor, may not state the purpose for which he had a conversation.

The Court: The objection is overruled. He may answer.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was your purpose in asking the questions you have testified to of both the witness Henry Schmidt and the witness J. R. Robertson?

A. The purpose was to fulfil the duties imposed upon me by law as a naturalization examiner, to test the qualifications of the applicant and the witnesses in a naturalization proceeding. [605]

Q. And it was your duty at that time to test both the qualifications of the applicant for naturalization and of his qualifying witnesses?

A. That is true.

Q. Upon having completed your examination of the witnesses, what did you next do with respect to the application which you have identified?

A. I excused the witnesses from the hearing room and handed the petition form, of which this is the triplicate, together with the application form which I previously held, noted as Government's Exhibit No. 1, I believe, for identification, handed these documents to the deputy clerk of the court, who was present in the room, or in an adjoining portion of it, for the purpose of having the petition typed preparatory to signing it. I had nothing further to do with it. That was the official duty of the clerk.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. As I recall, I had concluded my duties. I left the hearing room, left the building.

Q. What did you next see, with respect to the two documents and their purpose, defendant Mr. Bridges?

A. I next saw the defendant Mr. Bridges in the courtroom of the Superior Court in San Francisco on the morning of the naturalization hearing.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the date of that [606] hearing?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. The date, as I recall, was on or about September 17th, 1945.

Q. At that time was either the defendant Henry Schmidt or the defendant J. R. Robertson with Mr. Bridges?

A. They were both present in the courtroom, yes.

Q. Can you tell us who the presiding judge was on that occasion, if you happen to know?

A. As I recall, it was the Hon. Thomas Foley.

Q. Did you have occasion at that time to ask of the defendant Henry Schmidt or of the defendant J. R. Robertson any question or questions?

A. Yes, they were both there for the purpose of acting as qualifying witnesses, and I did examine them as to their statutory qualifications.

Q. And did you ask any question or questions of the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. I conducted the examination of him or cross-examination, it may be, in the court.

Q. Are you able to tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury whether or not at any time during the proceedings you are now describing you asked the defendant Harry Bridges any question with respect to his membership or non-membership in the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: If it please the Court, Mr. Donohue has indicated to me that he has an official copy of the transcript, [607] which I think would be the best evidence.

The Court: I think Mr. Donohue is entitled to present his case in his own way. The objection is overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, if he asks for a conversation he may not direct the attention of the witness to a part of the conversation merely by a leading question.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you remember the question, Mr. Garner?

A. Will you state the question again, please?

(Question read.)

A. Yes, I asked the questions relative to that point.

Q. What answer was made, if you can tell us?

A. I asked him whether he is now or has been a member of the Communist Party and he replied in the negative, that he is not and had not been.

Q. Now, you have indicated that over and above asking questions of the defendant Bridges you asked certain qualifying questions of the defendants Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, true?

A. That is true.

Q. You were in court during the entire proceeding involving the application for the naturalization of Harry Bridges?

A. I was present in court during the whole proceeding.

Q. Can you tell us whether or not prior to the time when you asked the questions of the three defendants here whether or not [608] each of these defendants was sworn in that courtroom?

A. Yes, each had been sworn by the Clerk of the Court.

Q. And that swearing took place before you asked the question and received the answer you have just testified with respect to?

A. That is true.

Q. Did you remain in the court after the proceeding had been completed for any length of time?

A. Not for any great length of time. After the proceeding was completed, my work being done, I departed.

Q. Were you present in the courtroom of the Hon. Thomas M. Foley when the oath of citizenship was given to Mr. Bridges?

A. That is part of the proceeding. I was present during that period.

Q. Then you were present when Mr. Bridges' application for citizenship was granted?

A. I was.

Q. And the oath of allegiance was taken by him?

A. It was.

Mr. Donohue: Will Your Honor indulge me for just a moment, please?

At this time, if Your Honor please, I offer in evidence what has heretofore been marked as United States No. 1 for identification and United States No. 2 for identification.

The Court: In evidence?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: In evidence, if Your Honor please. [609]

The Court: It may be marked in evidence and each of them may be marked appropriately by the Clerk.

(United States Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 for identification were thereupon received in evidence.)

Mr. Donohue: As they are lengthy documents, if Your Honor please, I do not wish at this time to ask Your Honor's permission to read them in their entirety to the jury, but there is one question and answer contained in what has been marked now Government's in evidence No. 1 which I should like permission from Your Honor to read to the jury.

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. Donohue: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, with respect to what has been marked as United States in evidence No. 1, which has been identified by the witness as an application for a certificate of arrival and a preliminary form for petition for naturalization, which bears the signature "Harry Renton Bridges, 601 Montgomery Street, San Francisco," and on page 1 thereof, on the printed form appears the question No. 7: "My mother's maiden name was——," and filled in in answer thereto "Julia Dorgan."

At this time I have no further questions of the witness, if Your Honor please.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Garner, will you tell us, please whether or not I heard you correctly this morning when you told [610] us that on a day in August of the year 1945 Harry Bridges was met by you, that you asked him some questions that you then questioned the two witnesses, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. This afternoon you altered that statement somewhat by telling us that there was first brought into your office, that is, the office that you were allowed to use in the County Clerk's office, a man named Schnurr, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you refreshed your memory in some fashion since this morning?

A. Not in the least, sir.

Q. You have not looked at any document and you have not consulted any person as to what the facts may be, is that true?

A. None whatever. That is true.

Q. So that any testimony which you give in this matter is based entirely upon your own memory? A. That is true.

Q. Not amplified from any source, is that true?

A. That is true with the exception of the document I have used, the petition form, on which I have certain notations as to dates, et cetera.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Where did you say this petition was filed by Harry Bridges, the petition for his admission to citizenship? [611]

A. On August 8, 1945.

Q. And the hearing was had some time later, is that right?

A. The court hearing was had in September, yes.

Q. Now, I noticed that in giving answers to the questions put to you by the government prosecutor that you apparently were able to answer as to certain conversations or interrogations that you had with these men without looking at any notes? A. That is right.

Q. In other words, have you kept all of these matters in your memory for four years which have ensued?

A. I have been conversant with the case for a number of years, that is true.

Q. How many years, Mr. Garner?

A. Since 1945.

Q. Were you employed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service before that time?

A. Yes, I have been in the service since 1941.

Q. Had you heard anything about this case before the events of 1945 upon which you have given testimony today?

A. There was no such case. This case was not in existence before that.

Q. You had never heard of Harry Bridges before that date?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I have read the newspapers, I presume. I knew who Harry Bridges was, but there was no petition for citizenship until the day he brought the application into the office. [612]

Q. The case was a new matter, is that true?

A. New so far as I was concerned, yes, sir.

Q. You have brought us, you say, the entire triplicate copy of the official petition for naturalization, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I have in my hand a piece of paper, which I shall show you in a moment as soon as I show it to the government prosecutor, and it purports to be a copy taken from the files of the Court in which the hearing was, and it is quite a bit longer than the piece of paper that you bring here. Can you tell us whether that looks like a copy (handing a document to the witness)?

A. It appears to be a typewritten copy of the same thing.

Q. The same thing?

A. Of the petition which is on file, probably on file in the Clerk's office. This is headed "Original to be retained by Clerk of the Court." The copy you have is a triplicate.

Q. What you have brought us here, as I see now, is a piece of paper bearing this seal, not of the court where this petition was filed, if I may direct it to your attention, but a signature of Mr. Barber, one of the men connected with the Immigration Service.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, my distinguished adversary knows, because the witness told him, that this was a triplicate copy of a petition which was kept in the files of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. He testified he [613] brought it here to court today from those files, and in order that they may not make objection, following the rules of the Court, we have had it certified and sealed by Mr. Barber, who is the Director of Immigration for the City of San Francisco. It is improper cross-examination, and improper questioning, and I object to it.

The Court: The witness might explain it in the light of any questions asked.

Mr. MacInnis: I should think so. It is an incomplete copy, Your Honor. It has only about half of the things that are in the petition.

Mr. Donohue: I object to his stating, if Your Honor please, that it is an incomplete petition.

The Court: Allow the witness to answer that. I think he is thoroughly conversant with the records.

The Witness: I think the explanation of it would be that your typewritten copy naturally takes more space than the small type on the printed document. You will find by comparison they cover the same things, perhaps. I have not verified it, but it appears that way.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Is it your testimony under oath that the document that you brought today representing the copy retained by the Immigration Service is exactly the same document as the other sheaf of papers handed to you?

A. I am afraid I do not understand the nature of your question. [614]

Q. May I have the documents a moment?

A. Surely.

Q. I call your attention to the part "Statement of Applicant" and the part "Statement of Witnesses."

A. Yes. Do you desire explanation of that, counsel?

Q. Is that the same as the material on this page?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, should counsel not have his paper that he has produced marked as an exhibit so that the record will be straight here?

Mr. MacInnis: I plan to offer it in evidence, Your Honor, naturally.

The Court: You may mark it at the present time for identification.

The Witness: The difference is that the typewritten copy you have is the copy of the original which is on file in the Clerk's office of the Superior Court, San Francisco.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, it is a true copy.

The Witness: The copy I have is the same thing with the exception that on the reverse it does not contain the oath of allegiance and the material following which you have. In lieu of that, we have a reference here to the court hearing and the examination, but the petition itself is and the affidavit of the witnesses are identical.

Mr. MacInnis: That is precisely the point, Your Honor. So the record will be complete as to what was done in reference to [615] that petition, may we offer the copy taken from the files of the Court in which the hearing was had, which contains all of the documents filed at that moment?

The Court: They may be marked.

The Clerk: In evidence, Your Honor?

Mr. Donohue: May we object, Your Honor, to his offering in evidence at this time.

The Court: What is the purpose of your objection?

Mr. Donohue: I think the proper time for the defendant to offer evidence is when he puts on his case.

Mr. MacInnis: We can discuss these matters.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to its being marked for identification.

The Court: Is there any dispute concerning the document at all?

Mr. Donohue: None in the world.

The Court: Can there be any dispute?

Mr. Donohue: No, sir.

The Court: If so, I will order the original from the Superior Court.

Mr. Donohue: No. I withdraw my objection.

The Court: And can any purpose be served?

Mr. Donohue: No. I withdraw my objection.

The Court: It may be marked.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

(Document referred to was thereupon received in evidence [616] and marked Defendant's Exhibit A.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You told us a moment ago, Mr. Garner, that the reason that you were able to testify from memory to the conversations you say you had with Mr. Bridges, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt is because you have been following this case since that date, is that true?

A. That is true [616-A]

Q. In other words, you have devoted some attention to the matter?

A. From time to time, yes, sir.

Q. And for that reason your memory is good?

A. That's right.

Q. And although you can tell us literally word for word a conversation you say you had in an office with these men in 1945, this morning when asked to identify Mr. Robertson you walked over and put your hand on the shoulder of one of the attorneys. True? A. True.

Q. Now, by the way, are you a lawyer in the Government service?

A. I am a member of the California bar.

Q. Yes. And you have been a lawyer for a number of years A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your title in the Immigration and Naturalization Service is what?

A. Naturalization Examiner.

Q. And your duties are not purely ministerial, you are not just a man who receives papers for filing; but you have some discretionary powers, don't you? A. I think so.

Q. Yes. In other words, you examine witnesses, you conduct inquiries, and you make conclusions of your own? [617] A. Right, sir.

Q. Which become the conclusions of the Immigration Service, is that true?

A. I presume so.

Q. And you acted in your official capacity in the matter of the petition for citizenship of Harry Renton Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. And in fact, you appeared in court before his Honor Judge Thomas Foley as the Government's representative, did you not?

A. I did.

Q. Did you make any investigation into the truth of the things which you say were said to you by these men in the inquisition conducted in the office? A. I did not.

The Court: You refer to that as an "inquisition" or a "hearing"? What is the ordinary description given to that?

The Witness: "Preliminary examination," Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: The word "inquisition"——

The Court: That has a connotation, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: That has no odious connotation.

The Court: All right.

8 — Mr. MacInnis: Whether your Honor finds that word repugnant or not,——

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: I don't find it repugnant; I didn't want any [618] connotation to be drawn or inferred from it, that is all. It is a rather unusual term.

Mr. MacInnis: I hadn't attached any significance to it, and when I use pointed phrases I think your Honor will recognize them.

The Court: Well, I sometimes do and I sometimes do not. But at least as to that we have an understanding that you are not using it in any unfavorable connotation.

Mr. MacInnis: I hadn't intended any. Certainly this man was conducting the duties of his office.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read me the last question, before we get involved in this discussion on semantics?

(Question and answer read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In other words, although you were a hearing officer of the Immigration Service with discretionary duties and the duties to make an investigation, you will tell us now that you accepted the truth of what these men said, is that right?

A. In a measure it is right; it is not my duty to make investigations.

Q. If a man applying for citizenship comes before you as a hearing officer, and you determine either from evidence in your possession or from suspicion that the man may not be telling the truth, there are official ways in which you [619] can act, isn't that so? A. That is true.

Q. In this case you took no such action?

A. That is not true.

Q. What action did you take?

A. The application and petition filed, the triplicate copy of which we have here, was referred back to my office, and with the recommendation that a proper investigation be made.

Q. Was such an investigation made?

A. I presume it was.

Q. Well, if you please,——

A. I didn't make it myself.

Q. If you please, will you tell us whether or not you were informed as to the result of the investigation?

A. All I know is that at the time I took it into court, I was informed to present the matter to the Court.

Q. You were not requested to put in any objection to the petition for citizenship by Mr. Bridges, were you? A. I was not.

Q. Did you make any objection?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell the trial court that you were satisfied?

A. I did not. I told the trial court that I had no further evidence to offer.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Donohue, may I please have the official [620] copy of the transcript? Thank you very much. And, Mr. Donohue, on behalf of the Government, you will stipulate that this is a true and correct copy of all of the proceedings had before his Honor Judge Foley on the occasion which we now discuss?

Mr. Donohue: Perhaps I can obviate the necessity of that stipulation, if your Honor please, by doing what I purposed to do when the witness had been—his cross-examination had been completed. That is, to introduce in evidence as Government's in evidence No. 3 a certified and authenticated copy of the transcript of the testimony taken at the hearing in question.

The Court: It may be received and marked appropriately in evidence No. 3.

Mr. Donohue: And when the examination is concluded, I would ask permission from your Honor to read certain portions of it to the jury.

The Court: You may.

The Clerk: Marked Government's No. 3 in evidence.

(The transcript was marked Government's Exhibit 3 in evidence.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I will defer the matter of this document for just a moment, Mr. Garner. When you sent the matter of the application of Harry Renton Bridges to your superiors in the Immigration Service for further investigation, you knew who Bridges was, didn't you? [621]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew of the history of the previous hearings before your department, did you not? A. By hearsay, yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. You had those in mind when you questioned Harry Bridges, did you not?

A. Vaguely, perhaps; I wasn't too familiar with it.

Q. Yes. You knew that as early as 1937, Harry Bridges himself made a request of Madam Perkins, who was then the Secretary of Labor, and asked that a hearing be had on his status?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please; in the first place, I fail to see its materiality. In the second place, it is not proper cross-examination. In the third place, obviously this witness wouldn't know.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, rather than argue, and also since I don't think I am required to disclose the purpose of all the questions, I will hand your Honor a note upon what I believe to be the basis of these questions. I think it is highly proper.

The Court: We will take the matter up at recess.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I think the cross-examiner may not be required to disclose the purpose to the other side during cross-examination. I have that in mind. Does your Honor [622] wish to take a recess now?

The Court: Well, we may pursue the matter

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

then and go to another field in the examination now.

Mr. MacInnis: I will return to that matter, then, with your Honor's permission, a little later.

Q. Now, you told us this morning that on the day that Harry Renton Bridges, J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt met with you in an office in the City Hall, you already had in your possession the petition of Harry Bridges for citizenship, is that true?

A. You refer to August in 1945?

Q. Whatever date you say it was. I certainly don't know what the date was.

A. I didn't have a petition in my custody or control at the time that we first met, at the time of the preliminary examination. There was no petition in existence at that time; there was merely an application to file a petition.

Q. Did you have that application in your possession at that time?

A. I had that. It is introduced in evidence.

Q. Now, did the application contain substantially the same things as the petition later contained?

A. Yes, the application as to page 3 thereof was the basis for the petition.

Q. The application as to page 3? [623]

A. The application is known as a N-400 in our parlance—page 3 of the application is the basis for the petition.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. And it was on this application that you proceeded to do those procedural things that were necessary to the petition, coming on for hearing?

A. That is true.

Q. And by the way, in this application, which is now introduced as Government's Exhibit No. 1 in this case——

Mr. Donohue: No, I am sorry; I think it is Government's Exhibit No. 2.

Mr. MacInnis: This says 1 here.

Mr. Donohue: This says 2, and I think this is the petition.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, this says "Application" and this says "Petition." It seems to me this is the petition. You see?

Mr. Donohue: That's right. I am sorry.

Mr. MacInnis: You concede?

Mr. Donohue: I just didn't want you to get into error.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sure you will correct me if you find me to get into error. You concede that the petition, as I suggested, is Exhibit No. 2?

Mr. Donohue: Correct.

Mr. MacInnis: And that the application is Exhibit No. 1; true? [624]

Mr. Donohue: Correct.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In this application the applicant, Harry Bridges, not only filled in the forms in which there are questions in small print, with relatively limited space for the answer, but he attached one, two and a half typewritten pages about his own background, is that true?

A. I presume it is true; if it is part of the document.

Q. Well, Mr. Garner, a few moments ago you said that your memory was so good on these matters that you could tell us from memory alone what these men said.

A. I have no idea who attached it.

Q. Pardon me?

A. I have no idea who attached it, counsel. When I received it, it was attached.

Q. And the part that was attached bore the signature of Harry Renton Bridges?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, in the materials that were attached, in the very application that you have before you, was the history of the deportation proceeding had against Harry Bridges in 1939; true?

A. Possible.

Q. Possible! (Handing document to witness.) That is the matter that you said you may have had vaguely in your mind?

A. Yes, I see that it is attached there. I hadn't thought about it in that connection. [625]

Q. It is not only there, it is not only possibly there, it is there? A. It is there.

Q. You read this matter, did you not?

A. I read it previously, yes, sir.

Q. That was part of your duty to read it, wasn't it? A. That's right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. And this entire application, or a copy of it, was sent on to your superiors, was it not?

A. Well, it was sent on through official channels. I presume my superiors saw it.

Q. Yes. You did the ordinary thing that you would do in any naturalization matter, did you not?

A. Well, at the time it was submitted, it went through channels, of course.

Q. In other words, in his application, which the applicant Harry Renton Bridges had presented to you, and which, as you say, you had in your possession, the day you talked to these three men, and asked the questions which you say are now engraved on your memory so that you need not refresh your memory, you had this before you:

> "In 1938 I was arrested in Baltimore, Maryland, on a charge of being subject to deportation. My case was tried in 1939 at Angel Island before Dean James M. Landis. He found and held that the charges against me were [626] untrue and recommended that the warrant of arrest be canceled. The Secretary of Labor accepted this recommendation and ordered the proceedings dismissed and the warrant of arrest canceled. In 1941 I was again arrested in San Francisco under a warrant charging me with being subject to deportation. I was tried before Judge Charles Sears, whose adverse recommendations were rejected by the > United States Board of Immigration Appeals. This Board found that the charges against me were untrue and that they should be dismissed. However, Attorney General Biddle overruled the Board's decision. I brought habeas corpus proceedings in the Federal Court, and these proceedings have just been terminated with a decision of the United States Supreme Court on June 18, 1945, reversing the lower court, because it refused to hold my deportation invalid, and granting a writ of habeas corpus."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

You had read that, hadn't you? A. I had.

Q. And you understood it when you read it, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You understood that in 1939 Harry Bridges had been charged with being subject to deportation upon the allegation that he was a Communist; you knew that, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. And you knew that the court found that that was not so, [627] true?

A. I knew the history as it is set out there, yes.

Q. Yes. And you knew that in 1941 he was charged with being subject to deportation upon the identical charge, and that the United States Supreme Court had held that there was no evidence to show that he was a Communist?

A. That is true.

Q. Yes. You had all those things before you on the day that you had this discussion with these three men, which you now can give us verbatim from your position in the witness chair?

A. (No audible response.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest a recess, your Honor?

The Court: Well, yes, we will take the recess. Mr. Mitchell, will you enclose that in an envelope, please. I will take it with me to chambers.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor?

The Court: I will take this message with me to chambers and consider it in chambers and return it to the clerk of the court.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, it is unnecessary; because there is something else that has been brought into evidence. The point has already been answered upon the last questions. That is exactly what I was pointing out in the note.

The Court: This note becomes moot, then? [628]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: All right.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon recess. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any circumstances nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [628-A]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did I understand you to tell us within the last hour that when the petition of Harry Renton Bridges was presented to you that you made notes upon the back as to the conversations you had with the three men?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I made the notations on the back of the triplicate copy of the form before there was a petition typed.

Q. Is that the form that you brought here today?

A. That is the form that was offered in evidence.

Q. And anything that is written upon that form constitutes the notes that you made at that time?

A. That is true.

Q. Is it fair to say that those were the only notes you made?

A. Yes, that is the only notes that were made at that time.

Q. So that your memory of the questions put to these men and the answers they gave is bolstered by the notes that you made at that very time?

A. In so far as the notes go, yes, sir.

Q. And the notes are the only memorial, so far as your mind is concerned, as to what was said at that time?

A. I have no other source of notations, that is right.

Q. Handing you Government's Exhibit No. 2, I will ask you, please, to look at the back of it, the place where you took these notes and point out to us where you made a note as to one of the facts that you tell us occurred, the fact that you allege that you asked Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt whether they were [629] members of the Communist Party. Can you point to that?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. There are no notations to that examination. The only thing I have on this is that both witnesses are members of the same union, the ILWU.

Q. Yes.

Q. In other words, you have come here to court today to give testimony about an event that happened more than four years ago. You first tell us that you made notes at the time so that these important matters would not escape your memory. You tell us you asked these two men, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt, whether or not they were members of the Communist Party, and you haven't got the slightest note that would refresh your memory one way or the other on that, have you?

A. No notes on there as to the petitioner either.

Q. No, you haven't any note as to whether you asked them that question? A. That is right.

Q. We know that Judge Foley put the question to Mr. Bridges during the hearing, but as to this conversation——

A. I put the question to the petitioner myself at the hearing.

Q. At the time when you tell us now—I am speaking now about these talks that you had with the three men—at the time when you were alone with each of the men respectively, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And it is true that nowhere upon this document which is the [630] only notation, the only memorial of the whole thing, does there appear any reference to these questions which you say you put to Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt?

A. That is true. There is no space on there to make such notations.

Q. No space on the paper and hence you did not make the notes. You had some other paper, I suppose, at the time? Pardon me?

A. I presume I did. I had other paper, yes.

Q. Was that an important question that you say you asked them?

A. Yes, of course, it was material.

Q. But you made no notations of it?

A. I only had to be satisfied in my own mind.

Q. Were you satisfied in your own mind?

A. I accepted the testimony they offered.

Q. In other words, Mr. Garner, having in mind, of course, that you were doing just what an official in your position would ordinarily do with any witnesses, you were satisfied with the answers that they give you, true?

A. I had no evidence to contradict it.

Q. And you had no feeling about them and no suspicion about Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt at that time after they gave you the answers, is that true?

A. Well, my feeling in the matter, I do not know that it was material, except as you will note I continued the whole thing for investigation. [631]

Q. Did you accept their answers as they gave them to you? That is what I am trying to find out now.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I did not pursue the inquiry any further, yes. I accepted it as they gave it.

Q. If that is true, Mr. Garner, why did you write in the bottom of the portion devoted to the witnesses Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt the following: "Your recommendation: Investigate loyalty and attachment to Constitution and police report."

A. Because I wanted further investigation made on it.

Q. So you did not accept their statements. You caused an investigation to be made even as you indicated earlier this afternoon, right?

A. I do not know that I follow you. That is true that I did continue it for investigation.

Q. And as you said before, these papers or copies of them went to your superiors in the Immigration Service and an investigation was conducted?

A. I presume that is true, yes, sir.

Q. The investigation was on your recommendation, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir, I expect it was.

Q. You know it was, don't you?

A. I say I know it was, yes.

Q. In fact, it says here that "recommendation of preliminary examiner, investigate loyalty and attachment to Constitution," so that you not only accepted what these men said but you had [632] an investigation, and after that investigation did you receive any order from your superiors in the Immigration Department?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I heard nothing from it further until I was assigned to attend the court hearing.

Q. You do not have the feeling that somebody merely slipped up and did not perform the investigation, do you?

A. You mean now or at that time?

Q. At that time.

A. No, I felt that they had conducted an investigation.

Q. Your superiors from whom you received orders did not tell you to oppose the naturalization of Harry Bridges, did they? A. No.

Q. They did not tell you that you should not accept the statements of Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Robertson, did they?

A. I do not recall that they gave me any instructions as to that.

Q. You know that the investigation was made, do you not? A. Only by hearsay.

Q. That is the only way anyone in a large department could understand what was done to follow up any procedural matter, isn't that true?

A. That is true.

Q. And what instructions did you receive upon the date of the hearing in the Bridges naturalization case?

A. The instructions I received then were to present the facts [633] to the court.

Q. And that you did? A. That I did.

Q. By the way, since you wrote down your own impressions about Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt, that impression being that their loyalty should be investigated when they told you that they believed that Harry Bridges was not a member of the Communist Party, did you probe the matter further?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask them how did they know?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not ask that question at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you interested?

A. I was only interested to get their reaction.

Q. Whatever their reaction was and whatever investigation followed it, you received no orders to probe further into the matter?

A. Personally, no, sir.

Q. On the day when these three men were interviewed by you in your office, was any change made in the application of Harry Renton Bridges for citizenship? By the application I mean Government's Exhibit 1.

A. There may have been minor corrections made to it.

Q. What kind, do you remember? [634]

A. They appear on the face of the document. As I recall, there were very few corrections.

Q. When the petition was filed, was any change made in the petition? A. No, sir.

Q. None at all?

A. The petition was signed as it was typed.

Q. No change at all was made on it?

A. There was not.

Q. Pardon me?

A. To the best of my recollection, that is true.

Q. Well, I show you the extent of your recollection on that point (handing to witness); change was made by scratching out the name——

A. Sorry, sir; that is not a part of the petition that I had in mind. I thought you were talking about the face of the petition. That part does not constitute a part of the original petition itself. That is my notes. That document. The signature of Harry Renton Bridges at the base of the page there constitutes the full petition for citizenship, plus the affidavits of the witnesses on the reverse.

Q. You mean to say that this is not the original document?

A. It is so stipulated, isn't it, that is the triplicate?

Q. I don't understand what you mean, then, when you say that part of this is not the petition.

A. The notes themselves, my notes, are not a part of the petition for citizenship.

Q. I am not speaking of your notes; I am speaking about the change in the names of witnesses—Mr. Robertson in place of Mr. Schnurr.

A. There is ~~no~~ such change in the petition itself, if counsel will note. The affidavit at the top there, it is signed without any corrections or alterations. I refer to Exhibit 2.

Q. Well, now, was the same correction made upon the application, which is Exhibit No. 1 of the Government?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Oh, yes, the application form was amended as changed. [636]

Q. So that we will all understand just the purpose of these questions, this is what happened, isn't it: Harry Renton Bridges filed an ordinary application on your forms, that is, the forms of your department, that he be permitted citizenship, is that right?

A. He be permitted to file a petition, yes, sir.

Q. Yes. And the two witnesses who were named in the original application, were Mr. Schmidt, who is Mr. Henry Schmidt, sitting here as a defendant, and a man named Schnurr; is that true?

A. That is true.

Q. And on the petition in that part that you say concerns only the witnesses, the name of Mr. Schnurr, Paul Schnurr, is scratched out and the name of J. R. Robertson inserted in its place?

A. That is true.

Q. And you have given us the reason; you said that this Mr. Schnurr came in and his answers didn't satisfy you, or his credentials were not perfect so far as his own citizenship was concerned, correct? A. That's right.

Q. So you raised the question and you suggested that some other witness would have to qualify?

A. That's right.

Q. And upon that notice, upon your decision, Mr. Robertson was brought in, isn't that true? [637]

A. That is true.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. And then for the first time Mr. Robertson became a person to whom you asked questions in this matter? A. That is true.

Q. Do you know what this case is about, generally, the case that we are now trying, Mr. Garner?

A. Generally, yes, sir.

Q. Yes. You understand that Mr. Robertson, considering him alone for just a moment, is accused by the Grand Jury, by the United States Government, of entering into a conspiracy to conceal guilty knowledge that he had about Bridges' membership in the Communist Party? You understand that?

A. I understand.

Q. You understand that he is charged with agreeing with other people to swear falsely in the matter, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you tell us now that it is true, that which we have always known to be true, that the only reason Robertson's name appears there is that he was substituted for Mr. Paul Schnurr because of your decision on Schnurr's disqualification, isn't that right? A. That's right.

Q. He was brought into the matter with the passage of one or two minutes and as a substitute witness, wasn't he, this man who was accused of conspiring to conceal these matters for some time; right? [638] A. Right.

Q. Have you ever discussed this case with any of the representatives of the Government?

A. To some extent, yes.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Have you been told that any person who would have been brought into the room at that time would have found himself now indicted in the case?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, speaking, as we were, about the duties of your office, you were of course a lawyer and a hearing officer as well, in the Immigration Service, is that true?

A. That is true.

Q. And you told us your duties are discretionary; in other words, you have illustrated that you made a discretionary decision in the matter of this witness, Paul Schnurr? A. That's right.

Q. You decided he was not a person who could at that moment qualify, and you told him, told them they would have to get a substitute witness, true?

A. That is true.

Q. And the duties of your office in addition to your training as a lawyer are duties which require experience and skill, [639] true?

A. That's right.

Q. And you want to know that the persons who talk to you and answer your probing questions are the persons they represent themselves to be, true?

A. True.

Q. And with the memory that you ascribe to yourself, without any notes about these conversations, it is still true that when asked by the Government prosecutor to identify Mr. Robertson, you walked over and placed your hand near the shoulder of Mr. Hallinan? I beg your pardon?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Are you stating a fact or asking me a question?

Q. Both. Is that true? Is it not?

A. That is true.

Q. Now, to come to a point from which I had digressed a few minutes before the recess, you told me, I believe, in response to a question which I put to you that when you were before his Honor Judge Thomas Foley, you at no time expressed yourself as being satisfied with the witnesses; is that true?

A. I had in mind by that that I was satisfied with the case. I was presenting the facts to the court without a recommendation. It wasn't up to me to be satisfied or anything else.

Q. Pardon ~~me.~~ Did you wish to say something else?

A. As I say, I was starting to say; I merely apprised the [640] court that I had no further evidence to offer.

Q. Have you since the hearing in this matter—I mean, the Bridges naturalization hearing—read over the transcript of evidence at any time?

A. Yes, I have seen it.

Q. Did you see it today? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen it fairly recently?

A. Sometime within the week.

Q. So that you know generally its contents?

A. Generally, yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. It is fair to say, I suppose, that you read it over so that you would know what you were talking about on the witness stand?

A. I presume so. You could make that conclusion.

Q. You tell us that you didn't at any time say that the witnesses were satisfactory?

A. No, I didn't say that. I didn't know you were referring to the witnesses; I thought you were referring to the conclusion of the case, whether I was satisfied with the case.

Q. Well, the conclusion of the case was this, wasn't it: that his Honor Judge Foley granted citizenship to Harry Renton Bridges?

A. That's right.

Q. That was the order of the court? [641]

A. That's right.

Q. And the oath of citizenship was thereupon administered to Mr. Bridges?

A. That's right.

Q. And that was a hearing in which you participated as a representative of the United States Government, is that true? A. That is true.

Q. I will ask you if this colloquy took place between you as the lawyer conducting the examination and Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt as persons questioned by you before Judge Foley——

Mr. MacInnnis: Do you have a copy so you can follow?

Mr. Donohue: No. That's quite all right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

Q. Referring to page 2, I believe page 1 is merely the cover, your Honor, of this document—this document, by the way, is Government's Exhibit No. 3 in the case. Questions put by you to Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt:

> "Mr. Garner: Harry Renton Bridges, J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt."

That was an announcement you made, introducing the three persons to the Court. Question by you:

> "The witnesses are both citizens of the United States?" [642]
> Answers: "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."
> Question by you: "You each have known the petitioner for the last five years or longer?"
> "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."
>
> By you: "And you know him to be a resident of this county at this time?"
> "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."
>
> By you: "Do you each vouch for his loyalty to the United States?"
> "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."
>
> Your question: "Do you recommend him as a person of good moral character?"
> "Mr. Robertson: Yes." "Mr. Schmidt: Yes."

"Do you recommend him to this court for citizenship?"

"Mr. Robertson: I do." "Mr. Schmidt: I do."

Your observation: "These witnesses are satisfactory, your Honor."

Correct?

A. Correct, sir.

Q. Now, the last observation of yours, which I have just read you, was made on September 17, 1945, about a month or more after the three men had appeared in your office and were questioned by you; true? A. True.

Q. And at the time you questioned Mr. Robertson and Mr. [643] Schmidt, your impression was such that you recommended that their loyalty to the Constitution be investigated; correct?

A. That is true.

Q. And after such investigation as may have been had, you were then directed to proceed with the case? A. That's right.

Q. So that when called upon, or when it became your duty to assist the Court by making a comment concerning these men, you had in mind the entire situation, including your original reaction, didn't you?

A. I did, but in making the recommendation, I was following the custom of the court,

Q. Yes. And what you said was, "These witnesses are satisfactory, you Honor": after their loyalty had been checked—true?

A. True. But if I may interpolate there, it was the understanding of the Court that the witnesses were satisfactory procedurally as to the qualifications to act as witnesses.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest, your Honor, that this gentleman's self-serving statement as to what may have been in the mind of his Honor Judge Foley is no explanatory answer here. I suggest it be stricken.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, the question was asked of him by the Court. He must have had in mind what the Court had in mind or he couldn't have made an answer to it. [644]

Mr. MacInnis: There is no question by the Court, Mr. Donohue. I think I had better give you a copy of this so you can follow it, because——

Mr. Donohue: Let me have my own.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, you don't have it any more. It is now in evidence and it now belongs to the Court and jury, so I will give you the typewritten copy. That way you will then be able to see what questions were put and what questions were not put by the Court, and so forth.

Mr. Donohue: Thank you. I still object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: Is there a question before the witness? I assumed he answered it. Did you answer the question?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: I think he answered the question.

Mr. MacInnis: I think he had, your Honor.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Now, Mr. Garner, after questioning these witnesses, I mean, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt, and indicating your satisfaction with them to his Honor Judge Foley, you then proceeded to interrogate the applicant himself, Mr. Bridges, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. And you asked him a complete range of questions, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You asked all the questions which occurred to your mind [645] to be proper at that time?

A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. And again, either in asking those questions or in making such preparation that day that would enable you to follow the trend of your own mind, you thought about the entire Bridges case, did you not?

A. Oh, I presume it was vaguely in the back of my mind, yes, sir. [645-A]

Q. Well, when Harry Bridges himself, forgetting for the moment the witnesses Robertson and Schmidt, whose reactions and whose reactions in your mind have we discussed, did you make any recommendation concerning Bridges when he filed the petition?

A. Only such as are generally noted there. My notation is not as to any particular one or two of the parties, persons there. It says as to the case.

Q. You have already stated this, that you knew about the previous history and the previous attempts to accuse Harry Bridges of being a Communist and you knew of the contents of his application, Government's Exhibit 1, which was already in your possession, true? A. True.

Q. And a general investigation was had after the day these three men appeared in your office—and I mean an investigation of Mr. Robertson, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Harry Bridges—so that you received some order from your superiors with reference to the case, didn't you? A. Of course.

Q. And whatever that order may have been, it was not an order commanding you to resist Mr. Harry Bridges' application for citizenship, was it?

A. That is true.

Q. However, you had certain thoughts in your mind about Bridges based upon his background with the Immigration Service, [646] didn't you?

A. It covers a wide range. I had certain thoughts, undoubtedly.

Q. Yes, I am about to read your thoughts, Mr. Garner, as you expressed them at that time, not as you might express them today. In fact, before His Honor Judge Foley on the 17th of September of 1945 you had in your possession an affidavit by a lady who was formerly married to Mr. Bridges, a person inimical to him, who made new accusations against him to the end that he was a Communist, didn't you? A. An affidavit, yes, sir.

Q. You had it in your hand, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you presented it to Judge Foley, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. So the entire matter was again aired before our Superior Court with the government participating: true?

A. It was not introduced in evidence.

Q. You say that the matter was not considered?

A. I say it was not introduced in evidence.

Q. I will come to that in just a moment, Mr. Garner. After the entire matter was discussed, Judge Foley made his order admitting Harry Renton Bridges to citizenship, did he not?

A. He did.

Q. Tell me whether or not this was the colloquy that you had between you, questions by you, answers by Mr. Bridges, except [647] where I mention the Court:

> Your question: "Where do you live, Mr. Bridges?
> "Answer: No. 14 Graystone Terrace, San Francisco.
> "Question: Your occupation?
> "Answer: Union official at the present time.
> "Question: Where were you born?
> "Answer: Melbourne, Australia.
> "Question: How long have you been in the United States?
> "Answer: All told, I would say from 1920. That includes the years I went to sea on American ships.
> "Question: Your home has been here since then continuously?
> "Answer: Yes.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

"Question: In the United States? Your home has been in the United States since 1920?

"Answer: Since 1923 ashore and two or three years before that sailing on American ships.

"Question: You are married?

"Answer: I am.

"Question: You have one child?

"Answer: Yes, that is right.

"Question: Have you ever been arrested for anything at all?

"Answer: On one occasion.

"Question: When was that, please?

"Answer: 1921 in New Orleans.

"Question: What was the charge?

"Answer: Picketing. [648]

"Question: And the outcome, what was it? A fine or imprisonment?

"Answer: Neither. I was kept in the county jail overnight, or substation and released the next morning without being held or booked. I was arrested for deportation on a couple of occasions. I forgot to mention that.

"Question (By you): Outside of the deportation cases, that is the only criminal offense with which you have been charged?

"Answer: Would that include traffic violations?

"Question: Have you ever been arrested on traffic violations?

"Answer: Yes. Well, not—I was arrested once for an automobile accident.

"The Court (Judge Foley): I might say deportation proceedings have been held not to be criminal proceedings.

"The Witness: I was arrested for an automobile accident in December, 1946, in Los Angeles, and held in the police station for a few hours, and eventually released on bail, and the charge—I forgot what the charge was. But anyway, a little boy was killed, and the case was dismissed later as an unavoidable accident.

"Mr. Garner (Yourself): The case was dismissed, then, against you?

"Answer: That is right. [649]

"Question: Mr. Bridges, do you believe in the form of government we have in the United States at the present time?"

His answer (turning to defendant): I do.

Your question: "Do you know what the highest law in the United States is?"

His answer (turning to defendant): The Constitution of the United States.

Your question: "The Constitution divides the form of government into three branches. Can you tell me why we have three branches of government?"

His answer (turning to defendant): "To prevent the concentration of power in the hands of any one branch."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Your question: "Do you believe in that principle of the Constitution?

"Answer: I certainly do.

"Question: Can the Congress of the United States make laws for the entire—for instance, for the various states, for the states as individual states?

"Answer: No, not necessarily. Congress has certain delegated powers. Congress can not make law that governs all the states, but certain states' rights are reserved by the states.

Your question: "Under the Constitution of the United States there is a provision that no property can be taken for the [650] public use without compensation. Do you believe in that principle of government?

"Answer: I do.

"Question: Do you believe in the private ownership of property?

"Answer: I do.

"Question: Do you believe in the private ownership of the means of production of wealth and property?"

His answer (turning to defendant Bridges): I believe in private ownership, but I also believe in some regulation.

"Question: Do you believe in the private ownership of railroads and mines and other public utilities, like the telegraph companies?

"Answer: I do, right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

"Question: Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to any organization that advocated the overthrow of the government by force and violence?

"Answer: No.

"Question: Do you now, or have you ever, belonged to the Communist Party in the United States?

"Answer: I have not; I do not.

"Question: And have you belonged to any organizations that are affiliated with the Communist Party?

"Answer: I have belonged to organizations that have been accused of affiliation [651] with it."

"The Court (Judge Foley): Q. In your mind is there any ground for the accusation?

"Answer: None at all. I mean, your Honor, certain labor organizations have been accused."

The Court (In the person of Judge Foley): "Well, of course, Mr. Bridges, we are all cognizant of the history of your petition for citizenship and the deportation proceedings. They have all become a part of this proceeding and involve the question. One of the main questions was the question of your affiliation with any organization that in any way advocated the overthrow of this government by force or violence. Now, 'affiliation' is a pretty broad word, and one of the questions was at the time of making the application, 'Were you ever a member?'

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "I know you are, and your counsel, Mr. Gladstein, is very familiar with those cases. Now, your testimony is that you do not now, or ever have been, ever affiliated with any organization that advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence?
> "Answer: That is right."

I might say in reference to one of those documents that you introduced or brought here today, a part of which was read by the government prosecutor, that part involving the maiden name of Mr. Bridges' mother as being Dorgan, that at this proceeding you then asked this question of Mr. Bridges: [652]

> "Q. Have you ever been known, or used, any other name at any time? Answer: No.
> "Mr. Garner: If the Court please, I have no further evidence. I have an affidavit which was received by the Department on Friday of last week. I have had no opportunity to make any investigation of it. I merely offer it for what it is worth."

And the text then shows that you handed it to the Court.

Q. True? A. True.

> Mr. MacInnis: "The Court: This is an affidavit of Agnes Bridges. Is that Mrs. Bridges?
> "The Witness: My wife, yes, sir.
> "Mr. Garner: It contains certain statements there that——

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "The Court: Well, I think this—I don't think that this affidavit can be used as substantive evidence.
> "Mr. Garner: I am not offering it as evidence."

Q. Did you say that? A. That is right.

Q. In other words, your notions of the contents of this paper was such that you did not even attempt to offer it into evidence to enlighten the Court or for any other purpose. The Court then read the affidavit, didn't he?

The Witness: I think he did. [653]

Q. You are sure he did, aren't you?

A. I do not know what transpired through his mind. I know he looked at it.

> Mr. MacInnis: Because the Court then said this: "But, however, the information in it can be used as a basis for questioning the Petitioner, if you see fit to.
> "Mr. Garner: It sets out there that he has been known under another name. I have asked him that and he has denied it."

The Court (Then addressing Mr. Bridges, I think): Is that correct?

The Witness: I think the context so shows.

Mr. MacInnis: "It states here that meetings of the Communist Party were held at 3249½ Harrison Street, in which you presided at those meetings. Is that correct?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

"His Answer: No, never, your Honor.

"Question: It further states that the said Harry Bridges deeming the hiding place for his Communist membership party book unsafe where it was hidden in said bathroom under the linoleum, then with his knife over the lintel of a door leading from the kitchen of said home to a rear porch made a slit back of said lintel, and between the plaster, so that the membership book could be hidden therein.

"That is incorrect, is it?

"Answer: That is right. It is true I searched my house [654] many times, your Honor, because I was afraid that at certain times when things were pretty hectic that someone would try to plant things there. But at no time was there any incident like that, nor does it have any substance at all, and it is an incorrect statement.

The Court, Question: "It states further that your affiant during the summer of 1934 and during the 1934 strike went to the State of Oregon for a time on a visit to relatives. That upon her return your affiant was instructed by said Harry Bridges, through one Kasperson or Gasperson, to remove said Communist membership book in the Communist Party from its hiding place over the aforesaid door to a place of safety, as he had been informed that someone was going out to get it.

"Is that statement correct?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

And his answer: "That name came up in my trial at Angel Island when counsel for the government introduced a book in evidence merely for identification, because it had been used as the basis for a warrant issued against me. But they stated at that time they were not offering it in evidence, because they had no connection between the alleged book and myself. I know they sold that book, and they sold it for $500 a copy. That is the origin of that book."

"The Court (Judge Foley): Do you wish to look at that affidavit, Mr. Gladstein?" [655]

He was Mr. Bridges' counsel in that hearing. Handing it, then, so the record shows, to him.

"Mr. Garner: Question: You deny that you ever used any other name than Bridges?

"Answer: No, never any other name at all.

"Mr. Gladstein: May I say we have just concluded a trial before Judge Deasy in which the applicant was the plaintiff in a divorce action, and it is rather significant that his wife testified during the course of that trial, as evidence of her faithfulness and loyalty to him, and of her having been a good wife, that she had made affidavits stating truthfully that the charges against Mr. Bridges that he had been a Communist were wholly false, and it is true that she had made such affidavits.

"The Court (Judge Foley): She so testified in the divorce case?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "Mr. Gladstein: Yes. There is an affidavit in which she deposes and states that certain testimony given by a man named Lundeberg during the second deportation trial, accusing Mr. Bridges of being a Communist, was wholly false.
> "I suppose your Honor knows the old adage that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

Do you remember that? A. I do.

Q. And that it was brought out subject to investigation that the [656] person who had made that affidavit had herself sworn a few days earlier in the court of Judge Deasy that all of the charges against Harry Bridges were false and that she knew them to be false, true?

A. I knew nothing about it at the time, other than what the affidavit said.

Q. You mean——

A. That affidavit came into my possession the morning of the hearing.

Q. Really?

A. It was received by the Department on the Friday previous.

Q. That is what you say. The Department received it on the Friday before the hearing and you say now that your interest in this matter was so slight that you did not pursue the ordinary sources for gaining information?

A. I am not saying that.

Q. Of course not.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I am saying I did not ask for a continuance of the case, that is all.

Q. In fact, you thought it of no importance at all because the Dorgan name was an old story to you, just as it was in that affidavit, isn't that right?

A. You mean that it had been brought out before as specified there, yes.

Q. It had been brought out before. [657]

A. I had no further evidence in the matter. Nothing to present to the Court.

Q. And it has specifically been found to be a lie, hadn't it?

A. That I am not prepared to say: I do not know, as to that.

Q. Let me ask you this: In his answers at that hearing, when Harry Bridges said that something happened at the Angel Island hearing, you understood as an immigration official that referred to the year 1939, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you know that in 1939 the Dean of the Harvard Law School, Dean Landis, was appointed by the President, I presume, to preside over the deportation hearing of Mr. Bridges?

A. I was aware of the history of the case.

Q. And you know that in that hearing there was an alleged book in the name of Harry Dorgan which the government did not even pretend could be used in evidence? You know that, too, don't you?

A. That is true.

Q. So the Dorgan story was brought up and found false way back in 1939, true?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Yes, I guess that is true.

The Court: We have reached the 4:00 o'clock recess period, counsel. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the adjournment until next Monday at 10:30 or 11:00 o'clock.

The Clerk: May I suggest 11:00, your [658] Honor?

The Court: We have several matters on the calendar Monday morning that need and require attention on the part of the Court. Accordingly, this case will stand regularly adjourned until next Monday at 11:00 o'clock — not 10:00 o'clock — 11:00 o'clock next Monday, and in the interim I again admonish you, as I have in the past, not to discuss the case with any person or persons and not to form or express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you for decision.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to Monday, November, 21, 1949, at 11:00 o'clock a.m.) [659]

The Clerk: The case of the United States of America vs. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed, counsel.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Lloyd H. Garner, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, Mr. Garner, you told us yesterday, or Friday rather, all of those things which came into your mind as having transpired four years ago when you took part in the naturalization proceedings of Harry Bridges, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when I asked you if you indicated to his Honor Judge Foley that you, as a representative of the government, were satisfied with the proceedings, you told us now, that all you did was apprise the court that you had no further evidence to offer, is that true?

A. I believe I so testified. I may have misunderstood your question as to what you meant by satisfied. I think I did use that term.

Q. With reference to the possibility of your misunderstanding me, Mr. Garner, we both understand that you are a lawyer, don't we? [660]

A. That is right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. And that you are hearing officer of the Immigration Department of the United States?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are skilled and trained in your particular occupation, are you not? A. I think so.

Q. And you are familiar with the decision law in respect of these matters, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with the regulations of your department? A. Yes.

Q. So that there is little chance for you misunderstanding me on any particular work, is there?

A. (No oral response.)

Q. Let me ask you this: You said precisely as follows: I merely apprised the court that I had no further evidence to offer: True? You said that on Friday last, didn't you?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Actually his Honor Judge Foley turned to you and asked you if the government of the United States had any objections to the admission of Harry Bridges to citizenship, and your reply was, "No objections, your Honor"?

A. Yes, I think that is true.

Q. Now, as to the meaning of that phrase, if I understand it, [661] in your work with the Department of Immigration or the Immigration and Naturalization Service, as it may be called, the Bureau rarely recommends prospective persons to citizenship, isn't that true?

A. No, that is not true.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Does the Bureau make adverse findings on occasion? A. If the facts warrant, yes.

Q. In other words, if the Bureau—and by the Bureau I mean the entire Immigration Department—from its records and its research—decides that a person has not told the truth about himself or that he is not a proper candidate for citizenship, an adverse recommendation is made to the trial judge, true?

A. If there is substantial evidence, yes, anything of an adverse nature to present.

Q. And in this case when that question was put to you, you, the representative of our government, said, "No objections"?

A. That is right, I did.

Q. And when you made that reply, Mr. Garner, you had it in your mind, and you had previously studied all of the history of this case, had you not?

A. Well, I was familiar with it.

Q. You were familiar with the lengthy hearing held here at Angel Island in 1939; true?

A. I had no part in it, only as hearsay.

Q. You read it though, did you not? [662]

A. I read excerpts from it.

Q. And you read the opinion of Dean Landis of Harvard, did you not?

A. No, I do not know that I ever read his opinion.

Q. You knew what the result was, however?

A. I knew that there was a finding that the man was not deportable.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Yes, that he was not a member of the Communist Party, to be specific?

A. No, I do not know that.

Q. You said you did Friday.

A. I said that I know that there was a finding that he was not deportable, that they had not established that he was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Have you discussed this matter with any persons representing the government, over the weekend? A. No, I have not.

Q. You have not talked with anybody about your testimony?

A. Not about my testimony, no, sir.

Q. Nothing about this case either?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you knew, of course, that the 1941 hearing against Harry Bridges had resulted as you indicated Friday in an opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States?

A. Yes, I know what the Supreme Court held there. [663]

Q. You read that opinion, too?

A. I do not know that I have ever read the opinion. I have read excerpts from it. I know about what they held.

Q. And you knew they held that Harry Bridges was not a Communist? A. No.

Q. For our better understanding, Mr. Garner, on some of the matters which you testified Friday, let me hearken back to one or two parts of your testimony. You told us that when Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt came into your office in the City Hall you had a conversation with them in which you asked them certain questions, which you purported to narrate from the witness stand, true?

A. Yes.

Q. And you told the jury further that, although more than four years had passed since you interviewed those two men, that you had no notes as to the contents of the conversation and no other independent memoranda; true?

A. That is true.

Q. So that you offered us your negative memory alone, is that true? A. That is right.

Q. When these men were in your office individually, as you told us, did you ask them the same questions that you later put to them when they were on the witness stand in Judge Foley's court? [664]

A. To some extent, yes, not exactly.

Q. Did you ask them substantially the same questions?

A. I did not ask them substantially the same questions on the witness stand in court that I did in the private hearing, no.

Q. You did not? A. No.

Q. You asked Bridges substantially the same questions in court as you had asked him in the room, did you not?

A. To a great extent, yes, I did. [665]

Q. But when one looks at the transcript of the hearing, which we have already read to you, it is found that you don't claim to have asked either Mr. Robertson or Mr. Schmidt two particular questions: One, are you a member of the Communist Party, and the other question, have you ever been arrested? You didn't put those questions to them in court, did you?

A. Not in the court hearing, no, sir.

Q. Well, in your duties and in the course of them, as a naturalization officer, you interview many people at one time, do you not? I should say in the course of one day.

A. In the course of my duties I do, yes.

Q. And the day upon which you first spoke with Mr. Robertson and Schmidt was an ordinary day, was it not?

A. Well, I don't know that it was an ordinary day; I only had that one case that day.

Q. You talked to no other people, no other witnesses on that day?

A. Had no other petitions or applications for hearing that day.

Q. How about the day that Mr. Bridges went to court before His Honor Judge Foley? Were there other persons admitted to citizenship at the same time?

A. As I remember, there was a group of people of 15 to 20.

Q. And they were all admitted to citizenship, were they? A. I think they were, yes.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Did you ask all those people the same questions that you had [666] put to these three men?

A. Yes.

Q. You asked every one basically the same questions?

A. As to—you are referring as to the witnesses?

Q. Yes.

A. As to the witnesses, they were all asked identical questions.

Q. And in your private interviews with those witnesses, were they asked the same questions?

A. If the nature of the case so indicated, yes.

Q. In other words, there is no statute or directive of your department which impels you to ask of the prospective witnesses for any applicant, any person who applies for citizenship, such questions as you now tell us, based on your memory alone, you put to Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt?

A. Only the law itself.

Q. What law is that?

A. There is no regulation. I am referring to Section 705, I think, of the Nationality Act, which makes it a duty of an examiner to determine whether a person is a member of a subversive organization.

Q. Yes. And when you saw these three men, it was only two months beyond the date upon which the Supreme Court of the United States had made its designation in the Harry Bridges matter?

A. I think you are right, approximately. [667]

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. And you had seen at least excerpts from that decision, too?

A. Yes. If I hadn't, I heard about the decision. I don't know that I had read it, but I had heard of it, yes.

Q. Well, didn't you have the whole file of the Harry Bridges matter before you?

A. Not the deportation file, no, sir.

Q. You didn't? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now, don't all of these files bear the same number in the Immigration Service?

A. No, sir.

Q. They don't? A. They do not.

Q. Well, isn't it true that so far as the files of the Court itself are concerned, the 1939 hearing and the 1941 hearing bear the same number?

A. You are speaking of the deportation hearing?

Q. Yes.

A. With which I had nothing to do. I am referring to my knowledge of the naturalization hearing. It bears a different number.

Q. And you say that the statute directs you to ask these questions of the three men, although two months before, the Supreme Court of the United States had made its opinion holding that under the evidence Harry Bridges was not a Communist and holding [668] further that there was no evidence showing that the Communist Party had any direction to overthrow the government. You knew that, didn't you?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. Yes, I knew the outcome of that decision.

Mr. MacInnis: I have shown Mr. Donohue a photostatic copy of the decision to which I referred. May it be marked for identification, Your Honor?

The Court: It may be marked solely for identification.

(Thereupon, photostatic copy of Supreme Court decision referred to above was marked Defendant's Exhibit B for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, I show you the exhibit that is now called Defendant's B for identification, the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States. Does that appear to be the document concerning which you told us that you had read excerpts?

Mr. Donohue: I must object at this time, if Your Honor please. The witness in the first place had said that he has never read the opinion, though he had seen excerpts, which would make it impossible for him to identify what has been marked for identification as a photostatic copy of an opinion of the Supreme Court. I object on the further ground that as the witness has himself stated, the proceeding resulting in that opinion was a deportation proceeding which is so foreign from either the application for naturalization handled by the [669] witness or this proceeding as to make it wholly inadmissible.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. MacInnis: It appears to me that this man was a representative of the government in the naturalization proceeding involving Harry Bridges. The proceeding was not an ex parte proceeding, it was not one in which the applicant merely filed papers and made a statement without opposition before our Superior Court. Mr. Garner tells us he interviewed these men and that he sent the matter back to his superiors for investigation. Whatever information was then sent to Mr. Garner, he was not requested to oppose the proceeding. So the government was a party to that proceeding. Now, the government in this case claims that these men conspired to defraud the government. Now, for that reason, any knowledge that this man had, as the government's representative at that time, would be very pertinent to show us whether or not the government could possibly have been defrauded, after the many investigations which it had conducted. And it would also to the interest of the witness, the knowledge of the witness, the possible bias of the witness, the motivation of the witness in giving a certain answer or answers involving the remarkable memory that he attributes to himself here.

The Court: The objection is sustained. I have taken the position on the part of the Court that I have instructed the [670] jury consistently and persistently that the deportation proceedings and results thereof as well as the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States of America, has no binding effect upon the issues involved in this case.

Mr. MacInnis: We do not claim it has.

The Court: Accordingly the objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest, Your Honor, we don't claim that the opinion is binding upon Your Honor or upon the jury.

The Court: Nor upon the jury.

Mr. MacInnis: Of ~~course not~~. Because that would be in derogation of Your Honor's ruling. But this is cross-examination of a government witness, who is a government officer. Now, if this man,—I think Your Honor will bear with me—performed his duties as conscientiously as we must deem he did, he must have read that decision. And if he read that decision, it was part of the background in everything that he did in this case, and questions upon that would become very pertinent.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, Mr. Garner, having before you the document which you say you didn't read in full, but which was a decision of the Supreme Court two months before you saw these men, isn't this true, that your state of mind was that you respected that decision and were not interested in any particular inquiry? Is that the fact?

A. I respected the decision undoubtedly. But whether your [671] statement that I was not interested in the facts—that is not true. I was interested as an examiner there of determining whether there was anything of an adverse nature to present to the naturalization court:

Q. Yes. Well, here is the thought that I am trying to express to you, Mr. Garner, however ineffectually. You were a hearing officer of the Immigration Service. The Immigration Service was a party to the Bridges case. The case represented by that decision, isn't that true, the case is entitled Bridges against Wixon? I believe Wixon is the name of the director of your service, isn't that true?

A. At that time he was the director, yes, sir.

Q. Yes. And despite the recent nature of that decision, these three men came before you and you nevertheless put all the old questions to them, and although they all gave answers which of themselves would excite no suspicion, you wrote down upon the back of the petition, which would be Government's Exhibit 2 in this case, "Investigate loyalty and attachment to Constitution;" true?

A. I wrote it down on the date of my hearing, yes. I don't know what had transpired before the date of the hearing. I don't know what had transpired between the time of the decision, let us say, and the date of that hearing.

Q. Exactly. In other words, the only thing that you could have possibly interested yourself in would have been matters taking [672] place within that narrow island of time, between what would have been June of 1945 and August of 1945, when you talked to those men, because everything else you were satisfied had been determined, isn't that right?

A. I knew that it had been determined that the Government had not sufficient evidence to show that those men were members of the Communist Party or that the defendant was.

Q. And the only reason that you put down on your notes, which is the only material available to me now for inspection, was this, about the two witnesses: "Both witnesses work with applicant on ILWU." You put that right next to the line, "Investigate loyalty and attachment to Constitution."?

A. That's right.

Q. And yet you knew, as a citizen and as a lawyer employed by our government, that that very year the ILWU had been decorated by our government for meritorious service during the war?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that.

The Court: The objection is sustained. The jury is instructed to disregard the statement, and the implications contained therein.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest it might go to the knowledge of the witness, Your Honor.

Q. Well, that is the reason that you put on this application, "Investigate loyalty and attachment to the Constitution," and then in a parentheses "Both witnesses work with applicant on [673] ILWU;" true?

A. The reason I put it there was because I expected the investigation to be brought down to date.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Well, now, was it brought down to date?

A. At the time I went into court it was down to date on that time, yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive a communication from your associates or superiors in the Immigration Service?

A. I have received many of them. What do you refer to?

Q. At this time, in response?

A. As to what?

Q. Mr. Garner, can it be that you misunderstand that we are talking about this matter, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt?

A. I understand that; you asked if I had received a communication.

Q. Did you receive any communication about these men whom you had asked be investigated?

A. No, sir.

Q. None at all?

A. I don't recall any communication I ever received about them.

Q. Did you receive any communication directing you to take any position or to refrain from taking any position in the matter of the application of Harry Bridges for citizenship?

A. Yes. [674]

Q. When did you receive that communication?

A. On the morning of the hearing, on September 17th.

Q. Is that communication in the possession of these gentlemen who are the government counsel here?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I received oral instructions or communications on it.

Q. Oh, the matter was not one which permitted any written correspondence?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, to the form of the question and to its substance.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: On what ground, may I ask Your Honor, so that I may be guided in the phrasing of the next question?

The Court: You asked him whether he had had any written instruction, and the implication contained in your question was such that communication would not bear the written memorial. That was the implication I got.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, yes, I will reframe it, then.

The Court: Yes, I think you should. [675]

Q. Now, Mr. Garner, you tell us that in this matter upon which you had requested that an investigation be made, you received no written communication from anybody, either associated with you in the Immigration Service or superior to you?

A. I had no written instructions, no.

Q. And any instruction you received was oral only? A. That is right.

Q. Given you person to person or by telephone?

A. Conveyed to me through channels, through my immediate superior.

Q. Through what channels? You say this was oral, Mr. Garner?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. The instruction I received was from my immediate superior, orally.

Q. And he did not tell you to make any objection, did he?

A. He didn't tell me that. He told me not to make any objection, if that is what you mean.

Q. Yes. Did he tell you that a further investigation was going to be made of Harry Bridges nonetheless? A. He did not.

Q. He did not tell you that. Now, here is something that comes to my mind based on your memory alone. As we have said many times before, you told his Honor and the jury on Friday last that in the case of Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt both you put this question: "Have you ever been arrested?" And each of those men said, "No"; true? [676] A. Yes.

Q. Isn't this the fact, Mr. Garner, that Mr. Schmidt admitted to you that he had been arrested for picketing during the 1934 strike, a matter of public record, isn't that true?

A. I have no notations on that. I do not recall that he told me that.

Q. You have no notations on asking this man about being a member of the Communist Party, either, have you? A. No.

Q. And you have no notations about the arrest?

A. If they had testified that they were, I would have had a notation on it.

Q. Do you think that Mr. Schmidt in a matter of that importance would attempt to deceive you and thus spoil the whole naturalization process for his friend?

A. No, I do not think so. My experience with that is he may have known also that the court is not interested in arrests outside of the five year period that the law specifies.

Q. Did you tell him that?

A. I do not know that I did.

Q. You gave us the complete conversation the other day. Do you want to amend it now?

A. I didn't give you the complete conversation. Many things transpired, of course, in the course of the hearing, naturally.

Q. I am speaking about the private conversation you had with [677] each of these men alone, with you in the room. A. That is right.

Q. Did you say to them, "Now, don't tell me about anything that took place more than five years ago"?

A. No, I do not know that I did. But I have frequently indicated in the course of an examination that the court is interested in matters within the statutory period.

Q. You have indicated that to whom, Mr. Garner?

A. I mean in the course of my usual conduct, my examination.

Q. How would they know what you said to other people with whom you have dealt in your lifetime?

A. They wouldn't know that.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Why do you tell us that?

A. However, if they had given me any adverse answers I would have made notations of the fact.

Q. You knew that Henry Schmidt had testified in the 1941 Bridges case and that all of his background was revealed, and that he had freely admitted then, as he does always, that he was arrested once for picketing in 1934? You knew that?

A. Yes, I knew it.

Q. Just to clarify what appears to be a difference of opinion at the moment, is this the case: If a man who is applying for citizenship, any man, comes in and is interviewed by you in the usual way, and then brings in his two witnesses, whom you talk to respectively, you probably ask each person if he has [678] ever been arrested, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And, depending upon his answer, you had a police checkup, don't you.

A. If I am suspicious of it, yes. If it is necessary, I will ask for a police report.

Q. In other words, you ask for and obtain a police report so that any discrepancy would be revealed, is that true? A. That is true.

Q. In this case I take it you did not deem it necessary to ask for any police report?

A. No, I did not request a police report in this case.

Q. And you made no request of anybody to that end? A. That is right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Mr. Garner, where is that exhibit? Why do you tell us that when here in your own handwriting—— A. Other than this.

Q. Here is a request for a police report (handing document to the witness).

A. I did not ask them anything specific other than is contained in here.

Q. Read it. What does it say?

A. I know that. I have testified to that.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, you may not be familiar with the rule that is somewhat traditional in these courts with respect [679] to exhibiting documents to the witness, and so forth. You might do that through the clerk, and I suggest that during the course of the examination of all witnesses—this applies to the government as well as to the defense counsel—I ask you to stand at the rostrum or immediately adjacent thereto.

Mr. MacInnis: That is perfectly all right with me, your Honor. I did not know I was violating any tradition of the court.

The Court: I should have announced it at the outset.

Mr. MacInnis: And be assured I do not intend to invoke any quarrel with the court. Our burden is difficult enough in this case.

Q. Now, Mr. Garner, having in mind what you just told me the jury under oath——

A. I have already——

Q. Pardon me—that you made no request for any police report, what do you say now when I show you your own handwriting in which you wrote down after your investigation, "Police Report."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

A. I have already testified that I asked for a further investigation. That indicates "Investigate loyalty, attachment and police report."

Q. You think that is a good explanation, do you?

A. That is what I had in mind at the time I made the notation.

Q. Isn't it fair, Mr. Garner, to assume that if you wrote down the request "Police Report" along with your notation "Investigate [680] loyalty and attachment to constitution," that you would have received a police report, either you or persons working with you in the Immigration Service?

A. As a matter of fact, this investigation called for, and the recommendation was as to the petitioner, not as to the witnesses particularly.

Q. Mr. Garner, read the line where those marks appear, and you will see that they refer only to the witnesses and not to the applicant, isn't that true?

A. No, that is not correct. It may be that it is printed below that, it is true, but in the course of our duties it refers to the case. Then we make it refer to whether it is to one, the other, or both.

Q. Do you mean in the course of your duties you can make any word apply to anything you choose when the occasion demands?

(Mr. Mitchell, will you get the document for me, please?)

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. When you wrote the words "Police Report" upon this paper, it was idle because you did not receive any police report, is that it?

A. No, I wouldn't say that.

Q. What would you say?

A. I would say that the police report was requested. I did not request it myself, because the application there went back to the office and it was taken care of. I did not do those things myself. [681]

Q. If a police report was requested, in the ordinary course it would have been obtained, would it not? A. It doubtless was.

Q. And if you found that someone had lied to you in the interim of time that passed between the date the petition was filed and the date you went to court with Mr. Robertson, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Bridges, you would at least have looked into the matter, wouldn't you?

A. As a matter of fact, I would say that there was no police report obtained as to the witnesses. It was as to the petitioner himself.

Q. In other words, these are just meaningless words that you wrote down?

A. No, they are not meaningless words. It was Mr. Bridges' petition that the court was interested in.

Q. Isn't this the fact, that when you asked Mr. Robertson if he was arrested, he told you that he was not only arrested in New Orleans for attempting to organize a union there, but that his skull was fractured, his kidney punctured, and five of his ribs broken at the same time; he told you that, didn't he?

A. I do not have any recollection of that personal history, no, sir.

Q. Would you say that you could not possibly be wrong on this recollection that you attempt to give us about a conversation four years ago upon which you made no notes? [682]

A. I can't be wrong, counsel, on things that were material, that I considered material to the case.

Q. We are not asking you, in all respect to yourself, what you consider material. Is it your answer that you could not be wrong in these things?

A. I would not go so far as to hold myself impervious of error, no.

Q. So that each of these men who were, to say the least, interviewed by you as witnesses for a very controversial person, Mr. Harry Bridges, whom the government had twice attempted to deport, would have held his fate so lightly that they would have taken a chance on deceiving you on a couple of minor arrests?

Mr. Donohue: I object.

The Court: Objection sustained upon the ground it is argumentative.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Garner, did you testify before the Grand Jury in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Did you give the same testimony that you have given here? A. I think so.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask the government prosecutor if a copy of this witness' testimony before the Grand Jury is available?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, he knows better than that. [683]

Mr. MacInnis: I do not know whether this gentleman knows what I know about anything, your Honor, and if there is a possibility of any contrary statement, it certainly would not surprise me, in view of this testimony, if the defense should be allowed to see that document.

The Court: The request is denied. The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: For the record we make a formal request that we be allowed to inspect the testimony previously given by this man, a government lawyer, before the Grand Jury which has indicated the three defendants.

The Court: The request is made of record.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Have you had any correspondence with your superiors or your associates of the Department of Immigration following the date you went in court with Harry Bridges on his naturalization proceeding? I mean correspondence affecting this matter, the matter of Harry Bridges?

A. I do not understand what you mean by correspondence. Do you mean have I made any reports to them?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Let me put it this way: Did you receive any further directives or requests from your associates or superiors after the day in September when you appeared in court with Harry Bridges? And I mean by that the 17th of September, 1945.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you deliver any further reports about this man? [684]

A. Only in the course of my duties immediately following the hearing I reported the outcome of the hearing.

Q. That was all? A. That was all.

Q. And you have not taken part in this case in any way since then?

A. I do not follow you. Of course, I have talked with my superiors about it from time to time. The thing comes up occasionally, naturally.

Q. When first, according to your best memory, did the matter of Harry Bridges come up for discussion after September 17, 1945?

A. I think about the spring of 1949.

Q. About the spring of 1949 and not until then?

A. I do not recall anyway any discussion about it until then.

Q. Who first spoke to you about it?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. These are all incidents that occurred subsequent to his participation in the naturalization proceeding. They could in no wise reflect upon what he did or said at that time.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. MacInnis: They reflect, your Honor, however, upon the testimony which he has given us here, because, of course, he testified here following the spring of 1949. It would go to his knowledge, his interest and the like.

The Court: The objection is sustained, counsel. I [685] cannot see that it would aid or help the court or jury in making a determination.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Garner, before I finish this transcript, there are one or two more questions of a different nature I would like to put to you. When you asked the question of Mr. Harry Bridges, either in your office, if you did, or at the hearing before Judge Foley, "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party of the United States," you knew exactly what the question meant, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you were a lawyer; you were an official of the government and one familiar with the Bridges cases? A. Yes.

Q. And you knew by that question, and you intended to imply by your asking of it, and in your interrogation as to whether or not he was ever actually a member of a certain political party which you then named, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. You knew that the question did not imply any mere association. You knew that, didn't you?

A. I asked him pertaining to membership, yes.

Q. You knew that the previous decisions had held that the fact that Mr. Bridges had frankly done business with Communists and with people of any creed who could assist him in [686] the labor movement, you know that that was not a matter involved in the case?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You asked Harry Bridges this question both in court and possibly in the private session in your office: "Have you ever been known by any other names," did you not? [686A]

Q. And by that question you had in mind the names with which he had been accused of using, did you not?

A. I may have had that in mind, with other things.

Q. Yes. In other words, you knew that in 1934, going back that far, he had been accused by the Immigration Department of using the name of Canfield?

Mr. Donohue: If it please Your Honor, I object to this line of questioning. The best way to find out what the witness had in his mind when he asked the question is to ask him that question—not try to tell him what he had in mind.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest, Your Honor, that if I followed the kind directions of Mr. Donohue, I would not get answers very favorable.

Mr. Donohue: You would follow the rule if you did.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, you knew that in 1934 and 1935 charges had been brought against Harry Bridges and that he was cleared before the Immigration Department?

Mr. Donohue: I object to this, if the Court please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: It was brought up Friday without objection, and this witness has already given answers upon the subject.

Mr. Donohue: I object upon the ground of redundancy.

Mr. MacInnis: It is hardly redundant, because I asked him on one subject last Friday, when he told us he knew that the charge of using the name "Harry Dorgan" had been brought up [687] before and had been found to be false.

Q. You knew also that the charge of using the name of Rossi in the Communist Party had been brought up before and had been found to be false, in the Landis decision?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, having in mind the knowledge that you had in putting these questions to Harry Bridges, you did know this, that before Dean Landis in 1939, when Harry Bridges was a witness under oath, the question was put to him, "Are you a member of the Communist Party?" and he said, "No"; you knew that, don't you, or didn't you?

Mr. Donohue: I object again, if Your Honor please, on the same ground.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this is preliminary to one question which I think the Court will perceive in a moment. I have one or two preliminary questions, and I think the point will be entirely demonstrable in a moment.

The Court: The objection is sustained, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And you knew that in 1941 Harry Bridges, while under oath, had been asked, "Are you a member of the Communist Party?" and he had again answered, "No"?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Objection sustained. [688]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And as a lawyer, Mr. Garner, you knew when you asked Harry Bridges the question before His Honor Judge Foley, "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" that if he had answered "Yes," he would have been indicted for perjury, because he had previously answered "No," under oath and the courts had found that he was correct. You knew that, didn't you?

Mr. Donohue: I object, Your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor; is the objection sustained?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: As to all parts of the question?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: All parts and the whole thereof.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, is this true, Mr. Garner, that whichever answer Harry Bridges had given in court when you put the question to him, either "Yes" or "No," he would have found himself charged with false swearing?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I have reached a point, I believe, on page 11 of the previous hearing, Your Honor, parts we were reading on Friday last about the naturalization proceeding of Harry Bridges. I am sorry, I hadn't quite reached that point. [689]

Q. We had reached a point when we discussed the fact that you handed an affidavit to His Honor, Judge Foley. We were reading the comments of the attorneys.

> "The Court: Well, her statement as to the veracity of Lundeberg's testimony would not be of any use. But if she impeached herself——" and then there was apparently an interruption. Now, you knew what that meant, didn't you?

A. Yes, I knew the purport of it.

Q. Yes. You knew that the Immigration Service had produced as a witness against Harry Bridges an old enemy of his, Harry Lundeberg, did you not?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the form of the question, as well as to the substance of it.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And the lawyer then replied:

> "Yes, she did, as a matter of fact, and her counsel offered no testimony on her part to show she had been a good wife. Now, the significance in the action was merely this, that while she gave the affidavit at the time, that affidavit was not admissible in evidence, and when she was asked to testify in the case, to merely testify as to what she had been willing to put in the affidavit, she said she wouldn't walk into a courtroom and testify to it. Judge Deasy considered that an element of lack of conjugal cooperation. That was the only point in that case." [690]

You understood that was in reference to the divorce case of Mr. Bridges, did you not?

A. That was what was being talked about.

> Q. "There have been two questions that would be regarded as significant in this application. One is whether Mr. Bridges' political and ideological views and activities during his life here would qualify him or bar him from citizenship; and the other is whether he has acted as a man of good moral behavior. As I understand it, the government today takes no position——"

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

and then The Court, Judge Foley, interrupting:

> "Well, I think maybe you'd better let the government express their views."

The Government was yourself in that hearing, true? A. That's right.

Q. And then Mr. Gladstein:

> "Yes, Your Honor."

Then the Court again:

> "However, I will say this, the examination prescribed by the law, the examination of an applicant, provides that he shall be questioned as to the relationship of the individual in the United States to the government, national, state and local, and the rights and privileges drawn from that relationship, and also the duties and responsibilities which arise from it." [691]

Then Mr. Gladstein:

> "Yes, Your Honor."

Then the Court again:

> "These questions have been directed to that part of the law that prescribes that part of an examination of an applicant."

And then question:

> "Do you know when the Constitution of the United States was formally adopted?"

And the answer: "The actual date?"

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Then the question. "Yes."

> "Answer: I don't, Your Honor. It was some one, two or three years after it was ratified."

And then the Court:

> "It was adopted on September 17, 1787. This is the 158th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution described by William Gladstone as the most remarkable work known to him in modern times and to have ever been produced by the human intellect. So today is a memorable occasion. You also realize that by taking citizenship you have certain duties and responsibilities that go with American citizenship?"

Then the witness (Mr. Bridges): "Yes."

Then the question from the Court:

> "That you have become a partner in the great American Commonwealth of people?" [692]
>
> "I do, Your Honor."

Question by the judge:

> "And that means in the future every action of yours, whether it be in your work in labor service or business or finance, it is to redound to the general welfare of everybody."

And then Mr. Bridges:

> "I have had a chance to learn that, Your Honor."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "The Court: And you subscribe to that and are willing to conduct yourself according to that pattern in the future?"

And the answer: "Wholeheartedly."
Then the Court:

> "Do you have any further questions?"

And then Mr. Garner:

> "The Government has no further questions."

Then the Court:

> "Well, do you have any objection?"

Then Mr. Garner:

> "No objection, Your Honor."

And the Court: "Now, Mr. Gladstein."
And he said:

> "I simply think now, Your Honor, in view of the fact that the Government takes the position it has no objection, and in view of the thorough investigation that this case has had over the course of years, I believe that the applicant has more than qualified himself on the record for citizenship." [693]

And the Court, Judge Foley:

> "I think now in view of the long history of this case I will now accord the applicant, Mr. Bridges, an opportunity to make a statement for himself, if he would like to."

The lawyer said: "Thank you, Your Honor."

And then the witness Mr. Bridges said this:

"Well, Your Honor, I am not going to make a speech."

The Court:

"Well, just make any statement you like."

And then Mr. Bridges said this to the Court:

"I think I have possibly had more opportunity and I think more good reason to recognize and appreciate that citizenship is a priceless possession and privilege than most people who apply for it, and if I am awarded citizenship it will really be the result of a 17-year attempt to prevent citizenship. However, all during the time, it seemed to me that eventually the machinery of government and the governmental forms would operate the way I believe they will operate, and confer upon me the privileges of citizenship. I know the freedoms and particularly those freedoms that go with citizenship and the laws that govern citizenship and the nation, and it is certainly my intention to cherish those privileges and to apply them in such a way that I hope they will apply to more people than they do [694] now, and to apply them in such a way that the government and its institutions will be strengthened instead of weakened."

And His Honor, Judge Foley, in response to what Mr. Bridges said, made this remark:

> "I will say this, that anyone who has had such a struggle for citizenship as this applicant has had should make one of our best citizens, in view of that long struggle."

Correct? Is that what the Court said?

A. You have the transcript.

Q. Yes. That is what Mr. Bridges said and that is what the Court said at that time, is that true? A. That's right.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, may I inquire, if the Court please, of Mr. Donohue: Do you have the judgment of the Court at that time?

Mr. Donohue: Yes. In order to facilitate the procedure, if Your Honor please, may I ask the Clerk at this time to mark as U. S. Exhibit for identification number——

The Clerk: 4.

Mr. Donohue: 4. And may I then offer it in evidence as U. S. Exhibit No. 4?

Mr. MacInnis: No objection.

Mr. Donohue: It is a certified, authenticated copy of a copy of the judgment of the Superior Court.

The Court: May I see it, Mr. Clerk? [695]

The Clerk: Yes, Your Honor (handing to Court).

Marked 4 in evidence.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: You wish to have that marked in evidence?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, if I may. I offer it now in evidence.

The Court: It may be marked in evidence.

(Thereupon certified copy of judgment of Superior Court was received in evidence and marked United States Exhibit No. 4.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Garner, without presenting this document to you, for your inspection again, you are familiar with it?

A. Yes, I have seen it.

Q. It is a certified copy of the action of the Superior Court of the State of California on the 17th of September of 1945? In granting citizenship to a number of persons—I think 18 or 19 in number; and the third of those persons is Harry Renton Bridges, is that correct?

A. Yes, I have seen that. It appears that way. But I didn't—I have never seen it previously. It is a matter of court record there and it is not a matter of the Immigration file.

Q. Yes. And the judgment of the court was this, in respect of all those persons: They were all foreign to this proceeding except Mr. Bridges?

A. They were all admitted to citizenship at that time.

Q. Yes. This was the Court's judgment:

"Upon consideration of the petitions for naturalization [696] listed below on lines 1 to

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> 18, inclusive, the affidavits in support thereof and testimony taken in open court and the Court having found that each of the petitioners so listed herein intends to reside permanently in the United States, had in all respects complied with the naturalization laws of the United States in each such case applicable, and was entitled to be admitted a citizen, and each of such petitioners having taken the oath of allegiance required by the naturalization laws and regulations, it is hereby ordered that each of such petitioners be and hereby is admitted to become a citizen of the United States of America. By the Court this 17th day of September, 1945; Thomas M. Foley, Judge."

You have read that before?

A. I have seen it before, yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask that Mr. Mitchell hand this to His Honor? In reference to this exhibit, I wish to make a very serious statement, Your Honor. Because of it, we object to the taking of any evidence in this case against Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt.

The Court: I will hear the argument in the absence of the jury. I suppose it is a legal argument?

Mr. MacInnis: It is one that can be said in one sentence, Your Honor, without argument. [697]

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Upon the ground that any evidence attempted to be presented against Mr. Robertson or Mr. Schmidt in this case would constitute an attempt collaterally to impeach the judgment of a court of record.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: I have no further questions of the witness at this time.

Mr. Donohue: May we proceed with redirect examination of the witness?

The Court: Yes.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Garner, you have been asked a series of questions by Mr. MacInnis concerning an affidavit executed by Agnes Bridges, and which came into your possession on the morning of this hearing.

Mr. Donohue: With Your Honor's permission, may I ask the Clerk to mark it only United States for identification No. 5?

(Thereupon affidavit of Agnes Bridges was marked United States Exhibit No. 5 for identification.)

Mr. Donohue: Would you hand it to the witness?

(United States Exhibit No. 5 handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Just tell us whether or not this, which has been marked for identification

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

No. 5 is the affidavit [698] concerning which Mr. MacInnis has been questioning you?

A. Yes, this is the affidavit which has been referred to.

Mr. MacInnis: It now being noon, Your Honor, I suggest that we take the recess. Here is an affidavit that we would like to read.

The Court: Yes, I think that would be a good suggestion for the noon hour. You might go over that document. Have you any other documents that you desire to reoffer?

Mr. Donohue: At this time, no, Your Honor.

The Court: If you have, you might show them to counsel.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we have reached the noon hour, and may I suggest to you, as I have in the past, not to discuss this case with any person or persons, not to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [699]

Monday, November 21, 1949, at 2:00 o'Clock

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I should like to say that I did not understand Mr. Donohue was going on with respect to this affidavit, but they were obviously trying to keep me from the small right of cross-examination. I did not understand that

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. MacInnis had finished his cross-examination and I had some on behalf of the defendant Bridges.

The Court: There was some noise and I didn't hear you.

Mr. Hallinan: I said Mr. MacInnis apparently concluded his cross-examination but I did not hear what he said, and then Mr. Donohue got up and had an affidavit, which he showed Mr. MacInnis, and I did not understand that he was taking up redirect examination, because I have some questions to ask myself. I might suggest, too, your Honor, in order to save time, hereafter where an objection is made or an offer of proof or an exception taken that it be deemed to be done by all of the defendants without the necessity of each separate attorney getting up and saying, "I participate in that motion," unless the defendant gets up and designates that he does not want to be included in it, if that is agreeable to the court.

The Court: I have no objection.

Mr. Hallinan: I might make another suggestion, your Honor, that I think might save some vexation and annoyance on the matter of presenting documents to the witness. The rule [700] that your Honor cited is a difficult one, and time is given a witness—not this witness, but certain witnesses might have time to reflect upon an answer if they have much time. Now, I know Mr. MacInnis won't take umbrage at my saying this: He made a sort of a clatter in getting up there with his document.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: He was at least dramatic in his approach.

Mr. Hallinan: I noticed on at least three occasions before that Mr. Donohue had presented documents to the witness and had done it in so quiet and urbane a fashion as not to cause comment.

The Court: We will say quiet, not urbane.

Mr. Hallinan: He is a Washingtonian. If that is not urbane I do not know what is. That is a big city.

The Court: That word "urbane" seems to have nettled you a little.

Mr. Hallinan: No, your Honor. I like it. I consider myself urbane. All it means is a city man. I am a San Franciscan. Mr. Donohue, yourself and all of us are.

The Court: Let us get down to procedure. The procedure that I announced——

Mr. Hallinan: I was going to suggest that we present the documents and then if there is some difficulty on it your Honor for the first time invoked that rule, because it is not within the printed rules—— [701]

The Court: The rule as I announced will be brought into full play in this case, Mr. Hallinan, for I am fearful, one, that the documents, valuable as they are, may be lost or otherwise misplaced. The responsibility is a grave one in a case like this. Some of these documents are of long standing.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Mitchell is responsible for them. I am sure we will not be handicapped in dispatching the matter to the witness and thereupon examining him on the document.

Mr. Hallinan: I hate to see poor Ed Mitchell jumping up and sitting down. But I do not press the matter; I merely make the suggestion, and if the court has another idea it is all right with me.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Garner, as was suggested by Mr. MacInnis, you handled this matter with some thoroughness and not merely in a perfunctory fashion, isn't that correct?

A. You are referring, sir, to the filing of the petition, the naturalization petition?

Q. All the matters that you testified to.

A. Yes, all of that was done in an official capacity.

Q. As also suggested, your capacity was not merely a clerical one, but you were an administrative officer and endowed with a certain amount of discretion and judgment in the matter, isn't that correct? A. That is true.

Q. You were charged with determining in advance for yourself [702] whether or not Mr. Bridges should be admitted to citizenship at that time; that is right, isn't it?

A. I had nothing to do with whether he was admitted. I had to determine whether the department would make any exception.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. Don't you think that is just quibbling, Mr. Garner?

A. It is the court's duty to admit them.

Q. But then it is your duty to determine whether any protest should be lodged with the court, if you want to make it so specific as that?

A. Yes, that is right. That is the extent of my duties.

Q. In other words, the duty of presenting such objection as may exist in the court devolved upon you?

A. I do not think I would even go that far, quite. It is my duty to make a recommendation to my superiors as to what I think should be done.

Q. In this case, how long had you been working on the Bridges' application before you appeared in Judge Foley's court?

A. Matter of about five or six weeks.

Q. Prior to his application and the reference of the matter to you, had you had any interest in the prior proceedings against Harry Bridges?

A. None whatever.

Q. Had you made any study or investigation before Mr. Bridges' application came into your hands?

A. No, not what you would call any study of it. I was a little [703] bit aware of what had happened by hearsay. Having had no part in it, I knew nothing further than that.

Q. As part of your duties as government attorney, Mr. MacInnis asked you and, as you answered, it is your duty to keep abreast of the current decisions touching such matters as immigration, is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I do not think there is any such evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: All right, I will ask him the question in another way. [704]

Q. Is it your custom as an attorney for the government to keep abreast of the current decisions of the Supreme and Circuit Court of Appeals relating to immigration matters?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please; his custom in prior matters is not in issue. The question is what he did in this instance.

Mr. Hallinan: That would help bring out what he did here, what resulted when the ordinary course of events has been followed.

The Court: I remark and I reiterate, Mr. Hallinan, as I did with your colleague, Mr. MacInnis, that there is no issue with respect to the deportation proceedings before this Court, there is no issue upon which the Supreme Court decision would be controlling as a matter of fact or as a matter of law. Now, what this man may have done with respect to matters of prior consequence would not aid or determine any issue in this case.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, Your Honor, we will still have to go ahead and offer such evidence, attempt to adduce such matters, on cross-examination,

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

as we may feel advised. And while, of course, we are bound by the rulings of the Court, we can not afford to fall into the folly of refraining from asking questions which we deem proper, and having a ruling upon them, so as to preserve a correct record. Now, I understand that an objection was made to the last ruling, but I have heard no ruling on it. [705]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, from the time that the Bridges application came into your possession, I assume that you procured some files or records in your department and made a study of them bearing upon his eligibility to citizenship, did you? A. I did not.

Q. When did you read the parts of the Supreme Court decision that you mentioned?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): When did you read the portions of Dean Landis' findings that you have mentioned?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, this goes to the interest and activity of the witness.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: And Your Honor will remember that there is a serious question of credibility involved in that this defendant supplies something that is entirely missing from anybody else in the prosecution's case, that is, the question of whether or not the co-defendants were ever questioned concerning affiliation or membership in the Communist Party. A very serious question of this witness' credibility in that. And we are entitled to explore that to the farthest limits.

If I may be allowed, Your Honor, to very briefly argue this [706] matter, I would like to do. That is the question of the extent to which cross-examination is permitted to go, in questing into the credibility or interest of a witness. Now, Your Honor, to cite from the chief authority on the matter—that is Wharton's Criminal Evidence, volume 3 in the 11th Edition—there is this language, and I am abstracting certain portions of it:

> "Now the defendant has a right on cross-examination of a witness for the prosecution to draw out from him evidence which tends to contradict material evidence which has been given by another witness for the prosecution. A witness may be cross-examined as to any matter tending to impeach his testimony in chief. The cross-examination can elicit from him anything tending to contradict, weaken, modify, or explain his testimony on direct examination or anything which tends to affect his credibility."

May I suggest, Your Honor, that the jury might consider that a witness such as this has had his credibility weakened by saying that he did not read so important a matter touching it. But now, to pursue, Your Honor——

The Court: I have already instructed the jury——

Mr. Hallinan: We are not concerned, Your Honor, about the decision. That is not what we are concerned with. We are concerned about the effect upon this gentleman's thinking, so as to cast grave doubt upon whether or not he asked those questions, [707] whether he did not himself believe that that matter was now closed.

Now, say, for instance, Your Honor, that this witness said this: "I asked these questions as to whether or not these men were members of the Communist Party." But on cross-examination he would say, "I had no interest in that question. I considered it a closed question." Wouldn't that bear on his credibility as to whether he asked the questions or not? That is the point that we make. Now, if I may be allowed to pursue this, Your Honor:

> "Although a witness may not be cross-examined as to collateral, immaterial, irrelevant or incompetent matters merely for the purpose of impeaching him by cross-examination or of eliciting something at which to direct contradictory evidence, or of affording an opportunity subsequently to discredit him, thereby prejudicing the jury against him, he may be cross-examined as to collateral matters which tend to affect his credibility for impeachment purposes, to test his veracity or credibility subject to the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Evidence relevant to the question of credibility is in no sense collateral since it goes to the weighing of his testimony. So that great latitude should be allowed in cross-examination upon matters bearing upon the witness' credibility. Any cross-examination which serves substantial justice by permitting an insight into the credibility of the witness is perfectly permissible. Inasmuch as the jurors are the sole judges of the credibility of the witness, any matter which will properly assist the jurors in forming a correct judgment from all the facts ought to be shown in evidence. The witness may therefore be asked any question which will test his veracity or affect his credibility, even though it is on a collateral matter. Specific acts tending to discredit it may be inquired into on such cross-examination, although the transaction inquired about must be one which bears directly upon the present veracity of the witness. Neither a witness nor a party may shut off such cross-examination by his mere testimony or admission that the witness made false statements inconsistent with his testimony at the trial. The cross-examiner has the right to prove by his adversary's witness what inconsistent statements were made, not only in general, but in every material detail, since the more specific and substantial the contradictory statement is, the less credible is the testimony of the witness. Thus a prior written statement made by a witness to the prosecuting attorney which is contradictory to his direct testimony may be used for cross-examination to test his credibility. The right of cross-examination as to such statement is not affected by the fact that the cross-examining party has attempted to prove such statements to some [709] extent in its main case. Now, a witness may also be cross-examined as to conduct inconsistent with his testimony, for the purpose of laying a foundation for impeachment. Thus the witness may be cross-examined as to whether he made a disclosure of the facts testified to on a previous occasion when he had an opportunity to speak and it was his duty to speak. It is elementary that a witness who upon direct examination denies making statements relevant to the issue may be cross-examined with respect to conduct on his part inconsistent with this denial, such as his failure to deny such matter at a prior trial. So a witness may be asked where he does not claim his privilege against revealing confidential communication, whether in giving his statement to the prosecuting attorney, he disclosed important facts to which he testified at the trial."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

And finally:

> "Questions as to the sincerity and motive of witness. Great latitude should be allowed in cross-examining a witness to ascertain his disposition to speak truthfully. Thus a witness may be cross-examined to test his candor or sincerity. He may also be cross-examined as to his motives or as to any fact showing motive, and may be compelled to answer such question. A great or wide latitude and range are permitted to the cross-examiner with regard to a witness' motives, The inquiry as to motive may concern either the witness' [710] desire to aid or injure another or his wish to benefit himself. It is held proper to discredit a witness by his own admissions in cross-examination as to prior inconsistent statements."

And this is important, Your Honor, and a modification that a great many lawyers do not know:

> "Without calling his attention to the time, place, cricumstance and persons present."

You know that, except when it is direct impeachment.

Now, this case, Your Honor, we want to show the motive of this witness as part of the procedure that we outlined in the opening statement. I want to show that this witness is actually, himself, part of that conspiracy to destroy Harry Bridges, and the only way we can show it, Your Honor—when

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

I tried to tell that to you and the jury in an opening statement, you said I could show it by cross-examination, but I could not show it in the opening statement.

The Court: Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: If it please Your Honor——

The Court: What you have read is from Wharton's Criminal Practice, is it?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, yes.

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases Your Honor, I have no quarrel with Mr. Wharton and generally, of course, what he says is the law. [711]

The Court: Will you speak just a little louder?

Mr. Donohue: We had anticipated, if Your Honor pleases, that this question would arise and I think perhaps at this time it might be well if Your Honor would excuse the jury and let us define for Your Honor, as we find it in the authorities, the limits of cross-examination. I think it is a question of law that ought to be argued in the absence of the jury.

The Court: All right.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, during the discussion of legal matters from time to time, we have occasion to excuse the jurors, until a definition is reached with respect to the limitations in the presentation. Accordingly, you may retire until called. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

(Whereupon the jury left the courtroom, and the following proceedings were had without the presence of the jury:)

The Court: Mr. Reporter, would you read the last few questions?

(Record read.)

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest, Your Honor—just to clear our position on that—we claim that this gentleman, this witness, did not ask the two witnesses the questions that he said he asked. So we are impeaching his credibility. To do so, we want to show his motives, his interest, what he did that he should not have done, and what he failed to do that he should [712] have done.

The Court: You claim that he did not ask the particular questions which he testified to?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, yes.

The Court: All of them?

Mr. Hallinan: The two very important ones, that he asked these two co-defendants if they were members of the Communist Party. Very important. Your Honor will see that presently because here is why—suppose these two men were members of the Communist Party; that would not estop them from, or lay any blame upon them for, saying that Mr. Bridges was not, especially if they knew that he was not. That it has never been claimed in the indictment or anywhere else that any such question was ever put to them. But now if those witnesses get on the witness stand and should say, "I am a Communist and have been all along, a member of the Communist Party, and I wasn't asked that question, but I did say that Mr. Bridges was not or that he was eligible for citizenship," then they have undermined him now by coming in and cutting the ground from under their feet and saying to the jury, "Here they lied to this man on a question of their own citizenship," and it is a very important card in the prosecution's case, as Your Honor will see when the evidence finally develops. Now, I think we are entitled to go into his credibility just as much as any other witness who will come on.

The Court: You claim, then, that the question pointing to the witness with respect to reading Dean Landis' decision has some materiality upon that phase of it?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, exactly, my only point being this——

The Court: What relevancy would that have? You anticipate my question.

Mr. Hallinan: I will tell you what it is. He is a lawyer. He reads a decision. In his opinion that decision forecloses further contention that Bridges is a member of the Communist Party.

The Court: Right here let us pause. How could that decision in any manner foreclose subsequent inquiry as we have at bar or subsequent inquiry by this witness in a naturalization proceeding? Pro forma questions are asked. Those formalities are engaged in, I would say, through routine process. That process is asked as a matter of routine, whether a man is a Communist, whether he has an intention to overthrow the government, and the like.

Mr. Hallinan: Let me suggest this. The questions of fact, the reasonableness or unreasonableness we are argue to the jury.

The Court: Yes, but if the witness did not ask those questions I assume he would be derelict in his duty.

Mr. Hallinan: What would you think he would be if he did not ask the questions but nevertheless took the witness [714] stand and testified that he did? He would not only be derelict in his duty, he would be part of a criminal conspiracy? Now, we are not taking this gentleman at his own asserted value. We are asserting here that he is lying, that he is not telling the truth.

The Court: You assert that he is one of the 125?

Mr. Hallinan: Correct.

The Court: All right. I want a definition. Now, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases your Honor, on the general subject of the extent to which cross-examination may be had of witnesses, I would ask your Honor to consider the case of the United States vs. Klass and another, decided February 11, 1948, and reported in 166 Federal Reporter, 2d Series.

Mr. Hallinan: What page?

Mr. Donohue: I shall quote from page 376.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: What was the citation again?

Mr. Donohue: United States vs. Klass, 166 Federal 2d, page 373.

Mr. Hallinan: Could we have the district from which that comes?

Mr. Donohue: The third circuit. Quoting from page 376 of that opinion:

> "Insofar as the extent of cross-examination is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the [715] trial court, the learned trial judge properly ruled that the testimony with which we are now concerned was inadmissible for the purpose of attacking the credibility of the appellants. There is, indeed, a conflict as to whether acts of misconduct not resulting in conviction are the proper subject of cross-examination to impeach a witness."

citing a number of cases from the various circuits and the United States Supreme Court:

> "* * * 'we believe the rule with respect to impeachment for former conviction, as generally applied by federal courts in criminal cases, to be that it is only conviction for felony or misdemeanors amounting to crimen falsi which are admissible to impeach a witness' credibility.' This reflects the true purpose of impeaching evidence, to disclose the personal turpitude of the witness and his insensibility to the obligations of his oath to speak the truth. Coulston > vs. United States, 10 Cir., 1931, 51 F. 2d 178, 180. There is no reason why the standard should be less exacting where no conviction is involved."

In the case of Smith vs. the United States, cited at 10 Federal Reporter, 2d Series, at page 787, this being an opinion from the Ninth Circuit dated February 23, 1926, and reading therefrom from page 788: [716]

> "Upon rebuttal, the prosecution called two witnesses, one of whom, in answer to the question whether he knew that the accused was engaged in any other business than that to which he had testified, testified that he did, and that his business was selling drugs. The other witness, in answer to a similar question, testified that the plaintiff in error was engaged in the business of selling narcotics. To these questions objection was interposed that the testimony was irrelevant, not proper cross-examination, and that to ask the questions was misconduct on the part of the United States attorney. In charging the jury the court instructed them that the rebuttal evidence as to the occupation of the plaintiff in error was to be regarded only as affecting his credibility.
> "We think the admission of that testimony was error for which the judgment must be reversed. When the plaintiff in error offered himself as a witness, he subjected himself to > the rules applicable to all witnesses, and he was subject to cross-examination as to any matter which he had testified to on his direct examination, or which was germane thereto. To impeach his testimony he might properly have been asked whether he had been convicted of a crime, and, if he denied that he had been convicted, it would have been permissible [717] to produce the record in rebuttal.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "But here he was cross-examined as to a matter collateral to the subject under inquiry. While being tried on a charge of selling narcotics at a time and place specified, he was asked whether or not he had been engaged in the business of selling narcotics. His denial that he had been in that business should have ended the inquiry. The prosecution was bound by the reply. Bullard v. United States, 245 F. 837, 158 C.C.A. 177.; Fisk v. United States (C.C.A) 279 F. 12, 17. Otherwise, the jury will be required to determine the preponderance of the evidence in relation to collateral matters, instead of confining their consideration to the real question in controversy."

I take it, if your Honor pleases, if the purpose of the last question which was asked of the witness is to impeach his credibility as a witness, that it may not be done under the rule. Certainly the question is not germane, and I most respectfully say to your Honor that insofar as it would appear that in the federal court the extent of cross-examination is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the court, and in the light of the fact that your Honor has repeatedly stated that the matters which are the subject matter of these questions on cross-examination are not properly at issue before this court, I most definitely say to your Honor that [718] the objection to the question at issue should be sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: May I be heard a moment in rebuttal, your Honor? I will give you that citation that I just read from, which is Wharton's Criminal Evidence, Volume 3, 11th Edition, Section 1306, et seq, up to 1356. Now, your Honor, I want to read you one short paragraph from a decision of Dean Landis, James M. Landis. Now, while James M. Landis is not a judge of a court and while, of course, his opinion is not binding upon the court, still he is the dean of Harvard Law College and he is an eminent lawyer. Here was his comment on the scope of the examination on the hearing he conducted. This is only preliminary.

> "Due to the fact that the defense sounded in conspiracy, the range of cross-examination and defense testimony was made much broader than would have normally been the case. This, however, is the normal concomitant of any attempt to prove conspiracy either by way of prosecution or defense. See one Wigmore Evidence 370."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Now, if I might be permitted to assign a judgment to some of your Honor's comment on the case, we charge a conspiracy, and I admitted it sounded fantastic, and you conceded that as I expressed it it sounded fantastic. But that does not make it unprovable or incredible. Now, I have seen many cases in which the defense were striving to keep out all kinds of [719] evidence to prove alleged criminal conspiracies on their part, but I have never seen such activities exercised by officers of the law to prevent the showing of a criminal conspiracy by the witnesses produced upon them. They are entitled to no such protection, Judge. You may not, at the close of this case, although I think you will—I think at the close of this case you will see that every intendment that I made in the opening argument has been fulfilled, and every promise I have made has been filled—I think you will—I think when you see the evidence you will be shocked. But suppose you do not. Suppose at the end of the case you think it is as fantastic as you probably now think it is. Suppose you think it is unproved. What will the twelve people in that box think? That is the question the court must address himself to, not limited down so as to bring it within the range of what you will say, "This is as far as I would go in believing a thing like that." You would have to say, "How far would the ordinary person go in sifting these things?" It may be ridiculous, it may be fantastic. And yet there it is. It is up to the jurors to pass upon it. Yes, as I say, I think we will convince your Honor, too. That is all we ask, to extend the scope of the cross-examination so as to attack the credibility of the witnesses, who seem to be only casual witnesses, who seem to be here only to provide a document but who, in reality, are here to supply a vital defect in the case that the prosecution has [720] worked out in this matter. All we ask is now a special favor, not any consideration at all beyond the narrow limits that the law allows us.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, there is one further authority which I think is pertinent and that I would like to call to your Honor's attention. It is the case of Coulston vs. the United States, cited at 61 Federal 2d, page 178. I am reading to your Honor at page 180 thereof as follows. This case, by the way, came out of the Tenth Circuit decided June 29, 1931.

> "In the civil law, and very early in the common law, evidence of other crimes was admitted on the theory that a person who has committed one crime is apt to commit another. The inference is so slight, the unfairness to the defendant so manifest, the difficulty and delay attendant upon trying several cases at one time so great, and the confusion of the jury so likely, that for more than two hundred years it has been the rule that evidence of other crimes is not admissible."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "If the defendant takes the witness stand, a different rule comes into play. He steps out of his character as a defendant, for the moment, and takes on the role of a witness, and as such becomes subject to cross-examination in the same manner and to the [721] same extent as any other witness. The rules of evidence in criminal cases may not, in the same jurisdiction, be the same as the evidentiary rules in civil cases, sections 858 and 914 of the Revised Statutes (title 28, U.S.C. par. 631, 724 (28 USCA par. 631, 724)) having no application to criminal cases. In criminal cases, the competency of witnesses is determined by the common law of the jurisdiction as it existed when the states was admitted into the Union."

citing Neal vs. The United States, 1 Fed. 2d page 637, subject to such changes as may be brought about by judicial authority or congressional enactment.

> "In criminal cases, there may therefore be differences arising from variations in the common law in the different jurisdictions at the time of their admission into the Union. It may however be said that, subject to possible variants so arising, it is well settled in criminal cases in the federal courts that cross-examination must be confined to the subjects of the direct examination."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

citing a number of opinions from the circuit courts and from the Supreme Court.

> "that the credibility of a defendant who has testified may be impeached in the same manner and to the same extent as any other witness, and no further," [722] citing a number of authorities.

> "questions asked on cross-examination for the purposes of impeachment should be confined to acts or conduct which reflect upon his integrity or truthfulness, or so 'pertain to his personal turpitude, such as to indicate such moral depravity or degeneracy on his part as would likely render him insensible to the obligations of an oath to speak the truth'; when such a question is asked and answered, the inquiry is ended; the government is bound by the answer in that it may not, on rebuttal, offer countervailing proof. To this latter rule, there is one exception: In criminal cases a witness may be asked, for purposes of impeachment, whether he has been convicted of a felony, infamous crime, petit larceny, or a crime involving moral turpitude, and on rebuttal the record of such conviction is admissible."
> "A witness may not be asked if he has been accused or arrested for a crime, for the sufficient reason that it calls for hearsay evidence, and because accusation carries no implication of guilt."

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> "Tested by these rules, the questions asked on cross-examination of the defendant were improper."

And so I most respectfully say again to your Honor that for several reasons the questions asked of the witness on cross-examination [723] are objectionable.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, one short addition to what I have said, because there are questions I want to ask this witness about his activities in this case, and his knowledge of activities of other persons involved in it as bearing upon his interest.

The Court: What do you have in mind in that respect, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: To show that he was cognizant of wire-tapping, illegal invasions of this man's privacy, that he was part of it, that he either actively participated in it or did nothing to stop it. Now, if I may read from what Dean Landis said in this matter, "scope of the inquiry at the hearing"——

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: This is a matter of law.

Mr. Donohue: Would you excuse me for just a moment?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, surely.

Mr. Donohue: I would like to address myself to the question of fact and not the matter of law. You suggested to the court a moment ago a fact, and I know Mr. Hallinan knows that this witness has no such knowledge of any of the matters he just addressed himself to your Honor about.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Hallinan: I have never heard of the witness until he took the stand yesterday. I never heard of him before.

Mr. Donohue: Then why do you say he knew something about [724] wire tapping?

Mr. Hallinan: I want to ask him about it.

The Court: Mr. Reporter, read the statement of Mr. Hallinan.

(Record read.)

Mr. Donohue: Now he says he never heard of this gentleman until yesterday.

Mr. Hallinan: I never saw the witness, and yet I will show—I never heard his name, and yet I will show he knew this man's privacy was illegally invaded. He can't get away from saying he knew about it. And yet I never heard his name before. This matter of trying to say to counsel, "How do you know these things? Hand your proof over to the prosecution. Let them pass upon it. Let us go over this and see if you are going to be permitted to show those things." That is a novel form of trying a case, as far as I am concerned. What is the harm of asking the witness? How does anyone know what this witness knows? I know certain facts which I think I can force this witness to admit as to criminal activity. I may not be able to, but I am sure that does not stop me from attempting to.

May I cite another point of law—not questions of fact. They won't even tell us the names of the witnesses they have. We do not know who they are.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

They have carefully concealed them. We are told of surprises they have. We are challenged [725] at every step. What is the purpose of it? "Vainly is the net spread in sight of the bird." If we tell them our purposes we might as well keep our mouths shut. I have had judges ask, "What is the purpose of that question?" And you know as soon as you tell them you might as well not ask the question. The witness is alarmed and he will try to cover up. Merely because a man is a lawyer and a member of a government staff does not foreclose cross-examination. If I may go on to a legal point, it is a short one. Here is another statement of Dean Landis':

> "On the other hand, evidence that officials of the Department of Labor who are engaged in the preparation of this case had offered improper inducements to witnesses to testify in this proceeding would be admissible under strict common law principles even if all those witnesses were never called by the government," citing Allen v. United States, 164 U. S., 17 Howard, and so forth—three cases.

> "The admissibility of such evidence rests upon the ground that a party's fraud in the preparation and presentation of this case is some evidence for concluding that the case is a weak or unfounded one. The extent of the inference to be drawn from such evidence does > not apply itself necessarily to any specific fact in the clause that operates indefinitely, [726] though strongly, against the whole mass of alleged facts constituting this case."

1 Wigmore, Evidence Section 278.

> "A second ground upon which the relevancy of improper inducements to witnesses can be projected stems from the connection that may be shown to exist between the offerers of the inducement and the officials connected with the preparation and presentation of the case. Relevancy here exists irrespective of whether the witnesses had been called to the stand."

16 Northeastern at 32.

> "The degree of connection that must be shown to exist between the offerers of the inducements and the officials conducting the case depends not upon any technical ground of agency but rather upon finding the existence of actual moral connivance between them."

citing three other cases. [727]

Mr. Hallinan: Now, to explain particularly this matter and to come directly to it, here is a piece of language that Your Honor might ponder. And it is a short paragraph:

> "For more than a decade, powerful economic and social forces have combined with public and private agencies to seek the deportation of

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

> Harry Bridges, who came to this country in 1920 from Australia. Emerging from the Pacific Coast maritime strike of 1934 as a recognized labor leader in that area, Bridges incurred the hatred and hostility of those whose interests coincided directly or indirectly with the vicious and inhumane practices toward longshoremen (144 Fed. 2d. 927) that Bridges was combating. His personal viewpoint on certain matters also antagonized many people of more conservative leanings. Agitation for his deportation arose. Industrial and farming organizations, veterans' groups, city police departments and private undercover agents all joined in an unremitting effort to deport him on the ground that he was connected with organizations dedicated to the overthrow of the government of the United States by force and violence."

Now listen to this next sentence, Judge:

> "Wire-tapping, searches and seizures without warrants and other forms of invasion of the right of privacy have been widely employed in this deportation drive."

And, Your Honor, concluding, that language that I just read [728] is from the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States upon this identical case; that is, the last deportation proceeding. That is the decision that was handed down in 1945.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Now, the Supreme Court had all these days and days of evidence before it. It had a transcript of testimony, Your Honor, that occupied three or four feet on the shelf of their library. It saw these things and it recognized them. You have had one day, and you can't foreclose yourself—suppose we were trying the case before you without a jury at all. Why, you would listen to all this. You might say, "I start out not believing it. It seems incredible that the United States officials should stoop so low." And I said to you, Judge, that United States officials also stooped down from high positions to protect this man against that sort of thing, as we expect you to stoop down to protect him. But if you close your mind to it and say, "I won't listen to it, it isn't so, there is such a thing as a witch and I don't believe that 50 people came in here and testified that a person was a witch, if there were no such thing"—why, where would we get off? We can't talk just to the jury alone. We appeal to you to open your mind and listen to what we have to say. If it is fantastic, wrong or faulty, all right. You waste some of your time and some of your effort and some of your attention. But if it is true, then you prevent a great injustice, and that is what I want to do, and I know you well enough and I have known you long enough to feel we can trust in your [729] sincerity and desire to do justice here.

The Court: No injustice will be perpetrated either to the government or the defendant. I think you are perfectly aware of that. And by the mere bland assertion, Mr. Hallinan, that the whole world has entered into a conspiracy against this man, I am not going to relax the elemental rules of evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't ask you to, I just ask you to hold to them.

The Court: I will hold to the lines, I will hold right to the line on the evidentiary matters. I will hold right to the line in the exercise of a sound discretion, and I have made the announcement to the jury, I have announced to the jury and to your predecessors—lawyers—that these matters of prior consequence had no legal bearing upon this matter. Now, what would it serve this case to pry into all of these prior matters, the determinations therein, legal, extrajudicial or however it appear? It would not be binding upon the jury or the Court as a factual matter. Now, to say that this man, to paraphrase or adopt your reasoning, did not ask Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt whether or not they were Communists, and to say that the government did not include that reference in the indictment—perforce there was no reason to include it in the indictment, as a matter of charging part—and it would probably be immaterial if the Government did. But be that as it may. How and in what manner would this attempt to cross-examine on your part, bearing upon [730] Judge Sears, Judge Landis or any other eminent jurist, or hearing officer,—how would that have any particular bearing upon the answer to that particular question? Now, I realize the latitude on cross-examination, but I realize in addition that we must keep this case within the ken or that rule. Accordingly I sustain the objection.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I make another suggestion, Your Honor, and I am—I won't argue on the objection. I might say this: It seems to me that some suggestion or talk or feeling has come to you that what we expect to rely upon are the previous decisions or that we expect to evade the rule that you have already made and which I agree with you on, that those do not constitute former jeopardy——

The Court: I say you may well agree with me on it in principle, but you are constantly trying to erode it.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, there is the difficulty and I see the initial one. That is what you think. You think that here we have agreed with you that these matters are not former jeopardy, that they do not constitute former jeopardy, and they do not constitute a defense to this charge. And I say, I agree with you. I agree that that is so. Now, however, these decisions have a bearing upon other phases of the case. For instance, the credibility of the witnesses. I have pointed out to you the witness saying, "I am a lawyer, I read this decision of the Supreme Court." I want to ask him, "Didn't that make you [731] believe that you are concluded on this inquiry?" I nevertheless inquired. All right.

Now, Your Honor says, "Well, that is an attempt to get in indirectly what I told you you couldn't get in directly." But that isn't it. Isn't this so: However harmful and however improper a piece of evidence may be when put in one channel, it may be perfectly proper and received when it comes in in another way?

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, without interrupting you, let us assume that the witness testified on a prior proceeding, and let us assume that you have solid grounds for impeachment, or attempted impeachment of that witness by the records in the prior proceeding. No doubt counsel for the Government would not have any serious objection for you laying the foundation for that.

Mr. Hallinan: It would be too bad if he would; that would be a rather primitive privilege we were granted, I would say.

The Court: Now, we will just take that primitive notion as to that phase of the matter. You make the bland assertion that this witness on the stand, Mr. Garner, has in some manner, at some place unidentified,——

Mr. Hallinan: "To the grand jury unknown."

The Court: ——joined a conspiracy. When he joined the conspiracy, of course, is problematical, speculative and wholly in the limbo of uncertainty. He has joined in it some time. This unwholesome conspiracy that started in 1934, is that the [732] date? Or thereabouts. And that this chain of co-conspirators that is gained and augmented in force and number, until now it reached the proportions of 125 people, all of them, all of them are out of step with Harry Bridges.

Now, to ask this Court to relax the vigilance which is traditional under the rules of evidence as I learned them, and as I think we both learned them together, would be in my opinion to broaden the scope to a point of unheralded dominion, and to a point wherein there would result, prejudice to the prosecution as well as to the defendants at bar. I think——

Mr. Hallinan: I will simply have to take the position, Your Honor, that I consider very much in error your position, and I will have to continue to ask the questions and build a record and ask such questions as I may deem advised, and I say that you have no right to make your mind up as to whether a conspiracy of these witnesses exists or does not exist; that that is something direct to the jury.

The Court: You ask me to relax the rules of evidence upon that basis, and I say to you that I am not going to relax the elemental rules of evidence that apply on cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Why, I have read off the rules, Your Honor, and it is not a question of asking you to relax them, it is a question of whether you will restrict them and whether you will put a new circle around the rules of evidence and say that [733] certain questions that are proper to be asked may not be asked. That is the point. It isn't a question of asking you to relax them, it is a question of protesting against an improper stricture of the rules of evidence.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, you have my ruling. You may call the jurors.

Mr. Hallinan: It is now five minutes to three, Your Honor.

The Court: We might take a recess. Five minute recess.

(Recess.)

(The jury reentered the courtroom, assumed their position in the jurybox and the following occurred in the presence of the jury:)

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you.

Q: Now, Mr. Garner, I suppose it would be a fair conclusion that if you did not read all the decision of the Supreme Court, at least you read most of it, is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. That question is——

Mr. Hallinan: It is preliminary.

Mr. Donohue: ——not in conformity with the ruling which Your Honor made just a few minutes ago.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, did you read that portion of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which [734] charged the federal agents with illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: This goes to his participation.

The Court: The objection is sustained that it is not in conformity with the ruling, Mr. Hallinan, and is an attempt to bring before the jury matters in obviation of my ruling. I admonish the jury to disregard any implications in the question.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Have you any independent knowledge—now, aside from any designation of any court—have you any independent knowledge of your own or information from any person in the government's employ that at any time during the course of this proceeding or of the previous—We will withdraw that—the course of this proceeding, any wire-tapping was done on Harry Bridges' telephone?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, and now suggest to Your Honor that it would appear from the fact that Mr. Hallinan has intentionally asked three questions, all in my judgment contrary to the ruling of this Court, that he is doing exactly what he said he would do, and that is, despite Your Honor's ruling, he would continue to ask these questions for the purpose of preserving some kind of record. I ask that he be admonished at this time not to continue this line of questioning.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Hallinan: May I be heard in that, Your Honor? As I [735] understand it,——

The Court: Just a moment, Mr. Hallinan. The objection is sustained, the jury is admonished to disregard it.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, this does not relate to any hearing, this means presently and now. I want to know if this gentleman indulged in any illegal activity in connection with procuring a verdict in this case.

The Court: You had it in a two-way thrust before.

Mr. Hallinan: I withdrew that. I said I withdrew that.

The Court: You may answer the question.

Mr. Hallinan: I withdrew that. Might I have the question read?

(Previous stion read.)

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to the question as to this proceeding, Your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I understand, Your Honor, he is bound by an answer on the collateral matter of that type.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, just so long as I am allowed to move my feet. When I get bound like that, I don't know the extent of the binding, but I hope I can, at the conclusion of the questioning be permitted to walk out of the court. I didn't know what is meant by being "bound" by the matter.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

I asked the gentleman, as a matter of testing his interest in the case, that.

The Court: You may answer the question. [736]

A. I have no knowledge of any wire-tapping in this case.

Q. This case. In other words, it is now your testimony that you have received no information at all from within the government, employees or agents, that is, as regards this case, that is, the case that we are now trying,—Harry Bridges' wires were tapped, is that right?

A. That's right. I have no such information or knowledge.

Q. Have you information that around the time that he was admitted to citizenship, that is, shortly prior to that time and up to the time that he was admitted to citizenship, his wires were so tapped?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You have information, however, that in each of the two previous deportation matters——

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that is obviously——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me; permit me to finish my question.

Mr. Paisley: I know what your question was.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, you haven't any right to anticipate that.

Q. Mr. Witness would you answer this question:——

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Hallinan: I think I am permitted to finish my question without interruption by counsel. Here counsel is saying that he can guess into my mind——

Mr. Paisley: No guesswork, Your Honor. [737]

Mr. Hallinan: If he would, he would blush.

Q. Now, I want to ask this question: 'You do have information that the government indulged in illegal wire-tapping upon the two previous——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, counsel.

Q. (Continuing): ——two previous deportation proceedings, have you not?

Mr. Paisley: If Your Honor please, if this is not contempt of court, I have never seen it in my career.

Mr. Hallinan: That is the first time I have ever heard counsel make a statement,—I ask the jury be admonished——

The Court: The objection is sustained, the jury is admonished to disregard any implications contained in the question. I have heretofore——

Mr. Hallinan: I have asked Your Honor to ask the jury to disregard the statement that counsel just made. It is a highly, improper statement.

The Court: The statement made by counsel may well be within the realm of his province to make. I shall not instruct the jury to disregard his statement.

Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception, if the Court please.

The Court: And I say to you, Mr. Hallinan, your persistent conduct along this line, studied as it appears to be, may well eventuate in the situation that counsel refers to.

Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception to that statement of [738] the Court and ask that the jury be instructed to ignore it.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Q. Now, did you yourself, in the period preceding, that is, looking toward, the deportation of Harry Bridges, and during that time—not at the present—receive any information from any federal officer or agency that Harry Bridges' wires were being illegally tapped?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Have you at any time throughout the origin of the proceedings against Harry Bridges, that is, back in 1937 or '8 up to the present time, that is, up to today, made any protest of any kind to any agent of the government or any attorney of the government that there was or had been illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you at any time in the course of your connection with this case state to any official or agent of the government that you would not be a party to an illegal effort to injure this man?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please, and I again ask Your Honor to admonish counsel to confine his [739] cross-examination to that well established rule of law to which Your Honor invited his attention just a few moments ago.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): In your study, whatever study you did make, of the Landis decision, you learned that 62 witnesses had been presented by the government against Harry Bridges and that Dean Landis had rejected all of them as liars and perjurers, didn't you find that out?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question and again state to Your Honor that Mr. Hallinan's deliberate and repeated questions, which he knows as a lawyer are beyond the scope of that limitation defined by Your Honor, is highly contemptuous of the decision of this Court.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, that is a highly improper statement for counsel to make, and that puts the defendant and his counsel in an invidious light with the jury. Now, we have the right to ask that question. I am entitled to inquire into this gentleman's mind and what his attitude is toward such findings and such statements as that.

The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: And I might ask you this, Your Honor—

The Court: It is an attempt to circumvent the ruling of this Court and place before this jury by indirection matters that have been ruled out, matters that are immaterial, that are [740] irrelevant.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, we have had no ruling upon any such question as that at all. There has been nothing said in that matter.

The Court: We spent, before the recess period, at least 45 minutes in discussion.

Mr. Hallinan: What it amounts to, Your Honor, is rendering it almost impossible to find out—This witness has now a shield of objections thrown around him that prevents the defense from finding out what his real interest in the case is.

The Court: That observation is uncalled for, unwarranted, purely gratuitous, and part of a studied plan.

Mr. Hallinan: Now I ask that Your Honor— Pardon me. I enter an objection to that statement and I ask that the jury be instructed to ignore it.

The Court: The objection is not well taken.

Mr. Hallinan: And I except to the Court's refusal to so instruct the jury.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, getting away from these two proceedings that seem to involve me in so much criticism, you do know this, that 60 witnesses, different from those that testified before Landis, testified before Sears and that Sears rejected all but one of them as liars and perjurers; isn't that right, Mr. Witness?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: I again object——

Mr. Hallinan: Might I be heard on this, Your Honor? [741]

Mr. Donohue: ——and I again ask Your Honor to instruct counsel that he confine his questions to the limitations set by Your Honor just a few minutes ago, and suggest to Your Honor that his failure to do so is only a deliberate and purposeful plan on his part to call to the attention of the jury matters which as a matter of law Your Honor has said may not be properly called to their attention.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I be heard on this, Your Honor? Might I have this to say on the question? Now, a man is known by the company he keeps, and if a witness takes the stand and will admit that he knows that there has been a conspiracy of persons to commit perjury and to tell lies about Mr. Bridges, and that then he thereafter enters into an almost identical sort of proceeding, isn't that something to test the credibility of the witness? Suppose, for instance, Your Honor, that a witness comes in in an ordinary case, not this case at all, let's say, but a civil case. And suppose he takes a certain position. Couldn't he be asked, "Now, don't you know that 20 or 30 persons conspired together to defraud the opposite party in this by testifying falsely and they were so found by the Court?" Now, he says, "Yes, I know that." Then isn't it proper to then ask him what is his attitude toward that, whether he takes the position that he is now engaged in the same occuption, and whether he is not assisting and collaborating with those people to do that sort of thing? By putting the witness on the [742] stand, they open him to that. We told him in advance what our position was. There is no reason why—And if Your Honor will bear with me, one thing further: You have commented, yourself, on the 124 witnesses. I have made an effort now to show 122 of them. I can't show it all in one question. I have to bring them in one at a time. I have to bring them in by witnesses as they are put on. I can't do it all by one piece of evidence, but I am entitled to show it. I am entitled to show the whole thing and to find out whether or not this gentleman is in contact with them, whether he has talked to those people, whether he bases any statement he has made upon anything that any such person told him. Now, there is a great delicacy about it. I don't know why. I don't know why, if witnesses in other matters testified falsely, there should be any protection around them. What is the objection to showing that? If he could show—let me say this: If we could show that this witness or any other witness produced any such witnesses, knowing that they would testify falsely, or suspecting or believing they would, or having put on witnesses of one kind in one case, produced a similar type of witnesses in another type of case, that would come right within the language I cited to Your Honor from Dean Landis, affecting the whole status of the government's case. [743]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to identify this. I want to mark for identification a copy of the findings and the conclusion of the trial examiner in the original proceedings taken in 1939 in which Dean James M. Landis presided. I want them marked for identification as the defendant's exhibit next in order.

The Court: They may be marked for identification.

> (The findings referred to were thereupon marked Defendant's Exhibit C for identification.)

Mr. Hallinan: Would you show that to the witness, please?

Q. Do you recognize that document that you have just been shown?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Is that the decision that you testified you read some portion of?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: We now offer that decision in evidence, if the court please, as the defendant's exhibit next in order.

Mr. Donohue: I object to that, if your Honor please.

The Court: Objection sustained.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Hallinan: We have it marked for identification? [744]

The Clerk: It is marked C for identification.

Mr. Hallinan: We now offer in evidence, if the court please, defendant's exhibit B for identification, being the decision of the United States Supreme Court, which the gentleman said he read parts of.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I want to ask specific questions of this witness from those documents, and I want to make an offer of proof with respect to them, and in view of the solicitude that the jury might be prejudiced by them, I suggest that that might be done outside of the presence of the jury.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you feel any prejudice or ill-will against Harry Bridges?

A. Presently, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. A. I do not.

Q. Have you in the past? A. I have not.

Q. Why did you modify it by asking "Presently?"

A. I want to know what the trend of your question is.

Q. You have not felt any in the past?

A. I have not.

Q. Have you heard any resentment expressed by any members of your office or offiicals of the government arising from any [745] charges of conspiracy made by Mr. Bridges against them?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. That is not a proper question.

Mr. Paisley: He may answer for himself, your Honor, but I do not suppose he can answer for others.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, counsel's objection that he may answer for himself—I asked him if he heard any such statement. He could only hear them personally.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you participate in any discussions with other members of your office or your staff or of any agents of the government in which resentment was expressed against Harry Bridges because he had on several occasions and in sworn pleadings accused any of those persons of a conspiracy to injure him? A. No, sir.

Q. You never participated in any such discussion? A. I never have.

Q. Did you ever hear that subject discussed in your presence? A. No, sir.

Q. You received no instructions from anybody based upon that matter? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know from any of the documents you read that [746] that defense had been made in the past by Harry Bridges? A. No, sir.

Q. You never knew that he charged any such conspiracy, is that right? A. That is right.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Q. After the hearing before Judge Foley, did you receive a letter from an attorney representing Mr. Bridges at that time asking for a copy of the affidavit of Agnes Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, suppose he did? What is the materiality of that question and the answers he expects to get as to the issues in this case?

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you show the witness that letter?

Mr. Donohue: May we have it marked for identification?

(Letter asking for copy of affidavit of Agnes Bridges was thereupon marked Defendant's Exhibit D for identification.)

The Court: So ordered.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You wrote that letter, didn't you? A. I did.

Mr. Hallinan: That, your Honor, is in answer to the letter that was written to this witness asking for the copy of the affidavit, and I expect if you rule that improper, you would rule this.

The Court: Have you seen the letter?

Mr. Donohue: I have seen the letter. It is not in [747] evidence. It is marked for identification. I do not think it ought to be further pressed by Mr. Hallinan.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Hallinan: I am just calling the attention of the court to it so that he may know what it is. He may look at it if he wishes. I am going to offer it into evidence.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: We offer in evidence the document marked Defendant's Exhibit D for identification.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You considered the affidavit of Agnes Bridges a confidential document, did you not?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor, as immaterial. What difference does it make how he considered the affidavit? It is utterly immaterial.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You did, however, turn that affidavit over to the prosecuting forces in this case, didn't you?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection. I do not see that it makes any difference.

The Court: I do not see the materiality. The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Prior to the deportation proceedings, which were tried in 1939 before Dean M. Landis, did you personally have anything to do with installing a wire-tapping [748] device in Harry Bridges' room in the Hotel Multnomah in Portland?

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I object to it on the same ground that your Honor has sustained us on, I was about to say, a hundred times, and to show how ridiculous it is——

Mr. Hallinan: I object to an argument in the presence of the jury on a question of fact.

The Court: You had your argument. I will let counsel argue a bit here.

Mr. Paisley: To show how ridiculous or how uninformed or insincere the remarks of counsel are. I am told this witness did not come with the government until 1941.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't know.

The Court: He so testified.

Mr. Hallinan: I want an answer to the question, if the court please.

The Court: Did you enter an objection, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes, certainly.

The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you personally in the year 1941 have any part, or did you participate in any wire tapping of a telephone in Harry Bridges' room in a hotel in New York City?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. That presumes, your Honor, that that occurred. Counsel is thereby attempting to testify that such an occurrence took place, it seems to me. [749]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you personally

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

have any contact with any persons, employees of the United States government engaged in tapping of telephone wires of Harry Bridges in a hotel in New York in 1941?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection on the same grounds.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I have a moment? That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Garner, did any information contrary to the information contained in the affidavit about which Mr. MacInnis inquired of you come to your attention from any source other than the statement made by Mr. Gladstein at the heating before Judge Foley?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I object to it as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for hearsay, and not binding on the defendant.

The Court: What is the purpose of that question, counsel?

Mr. Donohue: Mr. MacInnis read to the jury, if your Honor pleases, that portion of the record of the proceedings before Judge Foley in which Mr. Gladstein made a certain comment about an affidavit which stated facts contrary to the facts stated in this affidavit, and I ask him now whether he had any information concerning that prior affidavit except such as came to his attention by Mr. Gladstein's statement made in [750] the proceeding before Judge Foley.

(Testimony of Lloyd H. Garner.)

The Court: Aren't you calling for hearsay, counsel? I think you are. I will sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Then may I ask you whether or not at that hearing any person other than Mr. Gladstein made a statement that Agnes Bridges had retracted the subject matter of this affidavit?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for hearsay and not binding on the defendants.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We may have another question, if your Honor will detain the witness.

Recross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Garner, you heard, of course, the reading of the proceedings had before his Honor Judge Foley in which you participated as a representative of the government, did you not? A. I did.

Q. I would like to call to your attention and to the attention of his Honor Judge Harris, because this is a mixed question of fact and law, as I perceive it, the following remark of his Honor Judge Foley: [751]

"The Court: ——

reading from page 6 of what is the government's exhibit 3 in this case——

> "—— Well, of course, Mr. Bridges, we are all cognizant of the history of your petition for citizenship and the deportation proceedings. They have all become a part of this proceeding and that involved the question——"

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, this is recross-examination, and it seems to me that it should be limited to that. Otherwise we will be here until next year.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, if I may be heard on that.

Mr. Paisley: It has been read once.

Mr. MacInnis: I am amazed that the lawyer for the government objecting to the reading of their own exhibit, something they have offered.

Mr. Paisley: We object to it being read twice, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: The point is, your Honor, the exhibit was mentioned by the government just a moment ago which certainly offers to the threshold for mentioning the same document again, but having read this portion is calling that portion to your Honor's attention, we now offer on behalf of the defendants Robertson and Schmidt the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States into evidence upon the ground that there was specifically made in the language of Judge Foley, [752] a part of the very naturalization proceeding which is implicit in the transcript brought here by the government.

Mr. Donohue: We object to it, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: We make the same offer with respect to the exhibit now marked for identification on behalf of the defense, being the opinion of Dean Landis in the 1939 attempt to deport Harry Bridges.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: That is all.

Mr. Hallinan: As I understand it, your Honor, there are questions, as I said, I wanted to ask this witness out of those two opinions and I suggested, since I didn't want to make it appear even that I was transgressing upon the court's ruling, that this witness would be further cross-examined in the absence of the jury. Isn't that the rule that you made? Isn't that what you said would be done? Otherwise what I want to do is ask specific questions now out of those two documents and ask him whether those are parts of the things that he said he read in them. I do not want to seem to be showing bad faith. I could probably ask them before the jury and allow objections to be sustained, but I do not want to entrench even on the spirit of the court's ruling.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, it has always been my [753] understanding that once counsel understands the court's ruling as to allowing testimony, he cannot stand up before the court and repeatedly ask the same questions over again.

The Court: I know of no such rule that would permit Mr. Hallinan to adopt that course of procedure or practice.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest this, your Honor: If not then, I would have to ask them in the presence of the jury, and then that is going to excite some argument. I want to ask the witness now—I want to read off portions of the decisions of the Supreme Court and Judge Landis' decision and ask him if those were parts that he read before he asked these two defendants whether or not they were members of the Communist Party. I want to ask him the specific things because he says he does not believe he read them all, that he read excerpts from them. I want to find out what those excerpts were and whether those excerpts would bear upon the probability as that he then asked those other questions. I have to, to be consistent, ask those questions. If you wish, I will go ahead and ask them in the presence of the jury, unless you will tell me now, if you wish, that I will not be permitted to ask any such questions, and then I will just make an offer of proof and let it go at that.

The Court: Counsel, thus far you have not had much regard for my rulings, whether I made them formally or informally, in the presence of the jury or in the absence of the jury. [754] It is a sort of a travesty at this late stage again to tell me about it. Do you have an objection to it, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: I certainly do, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: There isn't any question, your Honor, to which an objection could be made.

The Court: I thought there was.

Mr. Hallinan: I will make this statement, without discussing what the matter is: I now ask leave to question this witness as to each separate paragraph in defendant's exhibit B for identification and defendant's exhibit C for identification and to ask this witness as to each separate paragraph whether or not he read that paragraph, and thereupon to question the witness further as to the bearing such reading had upon his determinations in the matter of the naturalization proceedings, and to question him with reference to them as to his credibility and ask the questions that he states he put to the three defendants.

Mr. Paisley: I not only object to that procedure and that question, your Honor, but I must object to counsel continually standing before this bar and disregarding the rulings of this court on this line of testimony. He has been told a dozen times that what went on in those prior proceedings had nothing to do with the simple issue in this case. He stands here repeatedly showing his utter contempt of your Honor's [755] rulings.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, that is prejudicial misconduct. I assign it as such. I ask that the jury be instructed to ignore it. I now ask for a mistrial upon that statement. There is something coming from an officer of the government, a direct charge against another officer of the court who is trying to do his duty, just as much as your Honor is trying to do yours so he is trying to do his, and to have him come up and stand up and accuse me of misconduct because I do what I conscientiously believe I am not only permitted to do but obligated and bound to do. Now, I offer to make the statement in the absence of the jury. I offered to put it in such fashion that there could be no question of any prejudice, if any could exist at all, if the jury were that easy to prejudice, and I assign the making of that statement by counsel as misconduct and I now ask for a mistrial in this case, your Honor.

The Court: Motion for mistrial is denied.

Mr. Hallinan: Then I will ask that the jury be asked to ignore that statement of counsel, that it be stricken from the record.

The Court: The request is denied and the motion is denied.

Mr. Hallinan: Then I enter an exception to the ruling upon that motion.

The Court: You may have an exception, Mr. Hallinan. [756]

Mr. Hallinan: My understanding of your Honor's ruling is I will not be permitted to ask those questions either in the presence of the jury or outside the presence of the jury.

The Court: You may ask them outside the presence of the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I asked the court at the beginning of this colloquy. There is the exact thing. I came up and asked the court if I could be permitted to cross-examine the witness further out of the presence of the jury and explain in advance before I concluded the cross-examination what that purpose was, and even when I stand up and ask that, that the jury now be excused for that, counsel gets up and makes the objections. I certainly gathered the imprission your ruling was I could not ask them outside the presence of the jury, so I said therefore I will have to make the offer now.

The Court: You may make them outside the presence of the jury. Call the next Witness.

Mr. Donohue: Call John H. Schomaker.

Mr. Hallinan: Will the witness be here?

The Court: He will be here. I instruct the witness to remain during the whole of these proceedings until released by respective counsel and by stipulation.

Mr. Hallinan: Why not excuse the jury? It is ten minutes to four. We can ask a large amount of them by that time and probably finish them up in the morning. Let the jury come at [757] half past ten and we won't have transgressed upon their time.

Mr. McMillan: May it please the court, why is it necessary to ask these questions before the jury or in the absence of the jury? From what he has already stated, it is apparent now that it would be violative of your Honor's rulings in this case, and also violative of the law of this case which your Honor has laid down in your decision and repeatedly ruled upon in this case. It is apparent now that the matter that he wants to question about is absolutely improper and violative of your Honor's ruling. Why ask any questions outside the presence of the jury or in the presence of the jury when that so obviously appears?

Mr. Hallinan: They may be improper. Your Honor may sustain objections to them and would be perfectly correct in that, but I have to ask them to preserve them in the record, don't I? What other way have I to go about that?

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, on an offer of proof it must appear, first, that the offer is made in good faith, and it must appear that the offer of proof is not violative of the ruling of the court.

Mr. Hallinan: I certainly will not go to the prosecution for any examples of good faith in this proceeding, when I want to make the offer. I do not care when it is made or how it is made, and if the court will not permit me—I thought the court had already ruled I could ask the questions. [758] Why all this colloquy?

The Court: Outside the presence of the jury. Do you have the next witness?

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

The Court: Let him be sworn. [758A]

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

called on behalf of the United States; sworn.

Q. (By the Clerk): Will you state your full name to the Court and jury, please?

A. Schomaker, John H. Schomaker.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, where do you live?

A. At 698 Menlo Oaks Drive, Menlo Park.

Q. How long have you lived at Menlo Park?

A. About 14 months.

Q. Prior to your taking up residence at Menlo Park, where did you live?

A. Well, I lived in Palo Alto.

Q. And can you tell us during what period of time you lived in Palo Alto?

A. Well, lived there, I would say, about nine months.

Q. When did you first come to the State of California to live? A. About 1922.

Q. And to what part of the state did you come?

A. To Mare Island, California.

Q. And from where did you come to the State of California? A. From Portland, Oregon.

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Schomaker?

A. I was born in southern Illinois, in a little mining town, O'Fallon, it was, in southern Illinois.

Q. And in what year?

A. That was February 2, 1903.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And how long did you continue to live in O'Fallon, Illinois?

A. Well, up to 1922, the end of '21.

Q. Before you left O'Fallon, and during the time when you were living there, what was your occupation, if any?

A. Well, after I left school, I went in the coal mines.

Q. When did you leave school?

A. In about 19—either 1919 or 1920.

Q. And how far had you gone in school when you left? A. Through high school.

Q. How long did you continue to work in the coal mines in Illinois?

A. Well, I worked from that period, 19—whatever it was on, 1919 or 1920—the early part that is, of 1920, up until 1922.

Q. And then you came to the West?

A. I did, yes.

Q. And where did you go in 1922?

A. Well, like all young guys that want to see the country, I just traveled around. I guess you would call it just bumming the country.

Q. And in 1922 did you join some organization?

A. In 1922?

Q. Yes.

A. No—I joined the United Mine Workers when I went to work in [760] the mines—that is, the United Mine Workers of America.

Q. And you remained a member of the United

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mine Workers union while you were working in the coal mines? A. I did, yes.

Q. Did there come a time when you joined the Marine Corps? A. I did.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, your Honor, and ask the answer be stricken out.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): When did you join the Marine Corps, if you did? A. In July, 1922.

Q. And how long did you remain a member of the United States Marine Corps?

A. Well, until my discharge in 1925, in August.

Q. Did you continue thereafter as a member of the Marine Corps Reserve?

A. Then, before I was discharged, I joined the Marine Corps Reserve and served four years.

Q. Now, after your discharge from active duty in the Marine Corps in 1925, where did you go to live? A. I went to Santa Barbara.

Q. And what was your occupation while you were in Santa Barbara? [761]

A. Hod carrier.

Q. And while you were a hod carrier at Santa Barbara, did you belong to any union?

A. I belonged to the Hod Carriers' Union, the International of Hod Carriers.

Q. When did you leave Santa Barbara?

A. It was in the middle of 1926.

Q. And where did you go?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, I toured the western states again—through most of the western states.

Q. And can you recall when it was that you came back to California?

A. I came back—that winter I came back.

Q. The winter of——? A. 1926.

Q. '26. And what occupation did you take then?

A. Well, I spent the winter here in San Francisco, and then in the spring I went to Palo Alto and got a job in the Veterans Hospital there.

Q. What kind of work were you doing in the Veterans Hospital?

A. Well; I worked as a guard and as an attendant and as a gardener.

Q. Can you tell us how long you remained employed at the Veterans Hospital at Palo Alto?

A. Well, from 1927, and I quit in 1928, and I attended one term [762] in the St. Ignatius College. Then I went back again in the winter and stayed there again until 1933.

Q. So you were there five or six years at the Veterans Hospital?

A. Yes, I guess it was five or six years.

Q. Now, while you were employed at the Veterans Hospital, were you a member of any union?

A. I joined the Federal Workers, I think it was—some kind of a federal union, anyway, of the government employees.

Q. Union of Federal Employes?

A. I think it was.

Q. Now, when you left the Veterans Hospital at Palo Alto, what was your next occupation and where?

A. Well, I came to San Francisco and went to work on the waterfront.

Q. What year, do you recall, was it when you came to San Francisco?

A. Well, it was '33—October of 1933.

Q. And what kind of work did you engage in on the waterfront?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Did he say in October, 1933? Was that the answer? Might I have that read?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): When was it you came to work? A. It was in October of 1933.

Q. October of 1933.

Mr. Hallinan: Thanks. [763]

Q. And what kind of work did you engage in on the waterfront?

A. Well, regular longshore work when I could get a job.

Q. Did there come a time when, you became a member of a union while you were engaged in that kind of work? A. There was.

Q. And about when was it?

A. Well, I joined the ILA in, I think, November, 1933.

Q. And how long did you continue as a member of the ILA or the International Longshoremen's Association?

A. Well, I was a member continuously of the

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

ILA, and when they swung over to the ILWU, I continued as a member.

Q. Do you recall when the change came and the ILA became the ILWU?

A. That was in July of 1937.

Q. And you continued a member of the ILWU until when?

A. Well, until the war, 1943; I went into the Navy Seabees.

Q. In 1943? A. Yes.

Q. And how long did you remain in the naval service after you went in in 1943?

A. Well, I was discharged in June, 1945.

Q. And you returned here to California, San Francisco?

A. I returned to California, San Mateo, and I went back to work on the 'front as a longshoreman.

Q. Then you returned to your longshoreman's duty in 1945, after [764] your discharge from the Navy? A. That's right.

Q. Were you at that time a member of the ILWU?

A. Certainly. I was a member of the ILWU.

Q. Did there come a time when you stopped doing work as a longshoreman?

A. Well, when I come back, I was suffering from a sinus condition, so I went and saw the union attorney—union doctor, Dr. Lagan, and he give me a sick withdrawal, saying that as soon as the sinus condition had cleared up, why, allowed me to come back to work on the 'front.

Q. Then when—this was in 1945?

A. That was in September, 1945.

Q. Then in September of 1945 you were on a withdrawal, sick status from the ILWU?

A. In 1945 was I——?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I still am, for that matter.

Q. Then, to your knowledge, are you today a member of the ILWU?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I am, yes.

Q. You have never been notified to the contrary?

A. Well, not yet, no.

Q. Now, when you left San Francisco and gave up your work as a longshoreman, what kind of work did you then take up?

A. Well, I went back to packing a hod. Which I am doing now. [765]

Q. You had been a hod carrier before?

A. And I am a hod carrier now, yes.

Q. And where are you employed as a hod carrier? A. In San Mateo County.

Q. Are you a member of a union today?

A. I am a member of the Hod Carriers International.

Q. And how long have you been a member of that union?

A. Oh, from September, 1945, up until the present time.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, are you a married man?

A. I am.

Q. Are you living with your wife?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I certainly am.

Q. Do you have a family?

A. Two children, yes.

Q. And you are living with your wife and two children? A. I am.

Q. And at the address you gave us when you first took the stand?

A. That's right, Menlo Oaks Drive.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, during the period of time when you were working on the waterfront, and were a member of first the ILA and then the ILWU, did you ever occupy any position in the union?

A. Well, I did, yes.

Q. Would you tell us about when, to your best recollection, and what the position was? [766]

A. Well, I was a business agent of the ILWU from 1937, Steptember, '37, until September, '38.

Q. Now, over and above the period of time during which you acted as its business agent, did you occupy any other official position?

A. No, I wouldn't say an official position. I had—I was a member of the various committees.

Q. Would you indicate generally the nature of the committee upon which you served for either or both of these organizations?

A. Well, I served on the publicity committee for quite a number of years—as chairman of the publicity committee. There was three members, and the one who received the highest number of votes generally was the chairman, so I was the chairman.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

And during the '36 and '37 strike, I was the chairman of the joint publicity committee of the Bay Area.

Mr. Hallinan: What? Pardon me? I didn't——

Mr. Donohue: "Joint publicity committee of the Bay Area."

A. (Continuing): And that carried on all the publicity for all the maritime unions, and subsequently in the following years I was—I don't remember the exact dates, but I was the publicity chairman for the local of the Longshore Union. And I also was on the editorial board of the Voice of the Federation, which was the official organ of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, which comprised all the maritime unions. And I also was the member of the Longshore Labor Relations Board, which carried on [767] industrial relations with the employers. Now, the number of years—I know it was at least two years, and I was a member of that board when I went into the labor—into the Longshore—Labor Relations Committee. And besides being a delegate to the various conventions.

Q. Did you represent your union as a delegate to various conventions? A. I did, yes.

Q. At where?

A. Union conventions, that is——

Q. Pardon? A. Trade union conventions.

Q. Yes. Trade union conventions.

A. And you mean state conventions, held in the State of California?

A. That is A. F. of L. conventions.

Q. Yes. Mr. Schomaker, did there come a time when you became a member of the Communist Party? A. Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out, object to it first. I will ask it go out first, so I may have an opportunity to object.

The Court: All right; you may have it go out.

Mr. Hallinan: I object to it as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; also that it is calling for the conclusion and [768] opinion of the witness. Now, the witness may state the steps he took and if I may be heard on that, your Honor, I have the cases pretty squarely in point in matters—and other matters of a similar nature, and it might be well if we are advised on the law of it before it goes too far.

Mr. Donohue: May I suggest, if counsel is to be heard on this question of law, it might be an opportune time to excuse the jury?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all right, surely.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we have now reached a period after 4:00 o'clock and I admonish you by reason of the fact that we will take our recess or adjournment until tomorrow morning, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until the matter is finally submitted to you for decision. You may now retire.

(Whereupon the jury left the room, and the following proceedings were had outside the presence of the jury:)

The Court: Are all the jurors absent from the courtroom?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: Is it so stipulated?

Mr. Donohue: It appears so, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: I just want to read the Court one—are these your matters?

Mr. Donohue: Thank you. [769]

Mr. Hallinan: I just wanted to read the Court one excerpt from Rogers, on expert testimony, the Third Edition, and it cites certain cases. Now, it will be probably important, because I imagine that there will be questions addressed not only to whether the person himself is a member of the Communist Party, but also as to whether other persons are. Here is the language:

> "Further illustrative of the conclustory testimony ——" and that means testimony that is barred as being conclusions of the witness—conclusory testimony——

> "are statements by partners that another man is a member of the partnership. A witness may testify to facts which it is contended constitute the partnership relation between certain persons, but not to an opinion as to the existence of the relation, which is a question of law."

I think, addressing—it cites two cases, Healey v. Hintermann, and Mack v. Mayhew. The first of them is a 1924 case, in 260 Southwest, and the second from 86 South.

The Court: The book itself is Rogers?

Mr. Hallinan: Rogers on Expert Testimony, Third Edition, page 24. And my point is simply this, Judge, that whether or not a person is a member of a particular organization or faith or race or anything of that kind is necessarily a conclusion of the witness. And the person can adduce the testimony upon which a court or a jury could base a conclusion, but can not itself express an opinion or conclusion on it. [770]

The Court: Counsel?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, whether or not a partnership relationship exists between A and B is obviously a question of law, and I find no quarrel with the statement of law which says that a partner, either A or B, may not create a partnership by his own testimony that such a thing exists. But certainly this witness is entitled to answer, to this Court and before this jury, whether or not he is or is not a member of any organization. No one should know better than he. We may ask him or my friend might ask him what did he do in order that he attained the status which he ascribes to himself. But certainly the member of any organization is qualified to tell the Court and the jury whether he is or is not a member of that organization. I most respectfully say it is a proper question.

Mr. Hallinan: I would suggest only this, your Honor, that counsel has put the cart before the horse, that the question should be asked what he did, which might indicate or from which it might be concluded that he was a member. He can not be asked for the opinion and conclusion and then asked, "Well, what is your reason for saying that?"

The Court: Have you referred to several of those cases in the instructions prepared?

Mr. Donohue: I am not familiar with it, your Honor.

The Court: May I have those citations again?

Do you have any citations, Mr. Donohue? [771]

Mr. Donohue: None at the moment, if your Honor please. We are prepared to give them to your Honor.

The Court: Are there any offers at this time of any kind in the light of the record? Any offers of proof?

Mr. Hallinan: What is that?

The Court: I should like to meet with counsel at 9:30 in the morning or thereabouts.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

The Court: To discuss some of these legal matters.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you want to have, instead of asking the witness those questions, make it in the form of an offer of proof?

The Court: Counsel, you have guided your own destiny pretty well with respect to what you have done thus far.

Mr. Hallinan: All right.

The Court: Without asking much assistance on my part, I have tried to make the ruling, but unfortunately you have seen fit to depart from them, consistently and persistently. I think we will meet at 9:30 and discuss the matter.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

The Court: We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:30 in chambers, otherwise for court at 10:00 o'clock.

> (Thereupon an adjournment was taken in the matter until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow in chambers and 10:00 o'clock in court, Tuesday, November 22, 1949.) [772]

November 22, 1949, 9:30 o'Clock A.M.

> (The following proceedings were had outside of the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: The case of United States of America vs. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Are counsel present?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: In this matter there are several phases to be referred to. Particularly the Court has been concerned about the events of recent days, and in particular I refer to the course of conduct of Mr. Vincent Hallinan representing the defendant Mr. Harry Bridges. The record of the events which I am about to refer to presents a series of acts of misbehavior on the part of Vincent Hallinan which, if allowed to continue without comment on my part or official judicial action, might well disrupt the orderly processes of this trial. I might parenthetically ask counsel if it can be stipulated now that all the jurors are absent from the courtroom. I observe they are not here in the box. I desire to have that stipulation.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: So stipulated.

The Court: I should not like to have further interruptions, Mr. Mitchell. In addition, Mr. Vincent Hallinan, by his studied, persistent and inflammatory course of conduct in flouting the [773] authority and orders of the Court has attempted to impair the effectiveness of this Court as an instrument of the judicial process. That he was wilfully attempting to evade the rulings and orders of the Court is manifest from the record of the proceedings of the trial, all of which occurred in my presence.

Yesterday afternoon, Monday, November 21st, it became quite apparent to the Court that Vincent Hallinan, would, unless prevented by prompt and firm judicial action, run unbridled and roughshod in the further progress of this trial. I was prompted then and there to make the order and findings which I am now about to make. However, to the end that I review coldly and dispassionately the transcript in the more pleasant environment of my chambers rather than attempt precipitous conduct, I read and reread and studied the transcript of the Court's proceedings from the very inception of the trial until the close of the proceedings, and I so read until the very early morning hours.

As I read and continued to read, coldly, dispassionately, my path became clearer and the course of my judicial conduct became manifest. The primary obligation imposed upon this Court or any Court worthy of the name is to maintain the orderly processes of the law and the due and proper administration of justice. These federal courts represent a bulwark of our democracy and respect for them must be maintained by the judicial officers charged with that responsibility. I say to you, Mr. Hallinan, long after the case of United States v. Harry Bridges [774] has become judicial history, long after this Court has gone to whatever happy reward judges may have, these courts will remain as beacons in our judicial system, wherein, we hope, expect and pray that the rights of men may be adjudicated without regard for station in life or race, color or creed.

However, there is an anomaly apparent throughout the country today and exemplified, perhaps, in some of our more recent trials, in that those who cry so earnestly for protection under the mantle and cloak of our Constitution of the United States would at the same time destroy and seek to destroy every vestige of decency and judicial goodness and sanctity inherent in the federal judicial system. If I permitted this matter to go on unheeded, it would in my opinion, represent a tragic commentary on our system, orderly as it is, in the administration of justice. My present task is not a pleasant one, and I approach it with a degree of care and a detached judicial aloofness.

Accordingly, to the end that there shall be no mistake hereafter in the record concerning my views and the conclusions I reach, I shall review the record as the basis for an order and certificate of contempt required under Title 18, Section 401, paragraph 1. [775]

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, before you proceed further might I make a motion at this time, if not made now, I assume it will be waived? Now until you enter——

The Court: Before you interrupt me, I desire to conclude my remarks. Then you may make them.

Mr. Hallinan: But before any order is made——

The Court: I am not making the order at the present juncture. You may reserve your comments.

Mr. Hallinan: I mean before the final findings are made, before you announce any findings, there is a legal motion that I would like to make.

The Court: Yes. Under Title 18, Section 401, subsection 1 and Rule 42, of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Adverting to the proceedings on Thursday, November 17, 1949, it became apparent to the Court that defense counsel, Vincent Hallinan, was not making an opening statement in any judicial sense, but was using it as a medium and sounding board for dragging in before the jury irrelevant, incompetent and inflammatory matter, with the studied and avowed purpose of prejudicing this prosecution in the light of events, incidents and characters, having no place in the proceeding before the jury. Hopeful that I might define the responsibilities of counsel both for prosecution and defense and the Court, we engaged in a lengthy discussion in the absence of the jury, attempting to avoid any further conduct on Mr. Hallinan's part in the [776] future, to the end that the trial proceed in an orderly judicial fashion.

Now, from time to time, Mr. Reporter, I shall make reference to page and line in the transcript, and if by chance I am inarticulate or you fail to understand me, may I ask that you halt and I will give you the exact page and line.

The Reporter: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: We start our journey through the transcript at page 528, line 24, wherein the Court said in part:

> "Now, I think, Mr. Hallinan, that you are anticipating much of the Government's case; you are indulging in speculation on speculation. And in addition, creating an atmospheric quantity at this stage designed to prejudice and inflame the jury in connection with any sage, considered judgment they may have on the evidentiary matters. Now, that is my judgment."

At page 529, line 16, Mr. McMillan made his position clear on behalf of the Government. I shall not read it into the record, the excerpt from his comment, but it may be found at page 529, line 16, to and including page 530, line 9.

At page 530, after additional colloquy between Court and counsel, the Court:

> "Mr. Hallinan, I am loth to interrupt a lawyer in the course of a statement. I think, and unless it be a very, very material interruption that it is unfair as a rule." [777]

I then spoke of your skill as well as the skill of the prosecution counsel. And I meant what I said. And I said further,

> "And dealing with skilled men, I always feel very comfortable about it. I feel that we haven't the ineptitude that sometimes attaches to a trial. I say that to you frankly."

I then was hopeful, perhaps naively so, that you would heed my ruling and my orders. My comment appears further at page 531, lines 1 to and including lines 22; and even a casual reading or listening to what I had to say would tend to convince or lead one to believe that my rule was firm and that my orders clear. Mr. Hallinan, page 531, line 23:

> "Mr. Hallinan: I have no (and then several dashes). Any ruling your Honor has made I have no quarrel with. I think you have been very fair and very proper."

At page 532, again counsel, Court—Court, counsel comments. Mr. Hallinan referred to the fact that he had only three weeks to prepare.

> "The Court: You have the benefit, of course, of associate counsel—the old firm no doubt are helping a little bit?
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: Yes;"——

this was in an undertone, a sort of an aside or stage whisper, but the Reporter captured it.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Yes—who made the motions that your Honor treated with contempt."

That was only a few moments before that, Mr. Hallinan had stated [778] he was in complete accord with the Court's rulings on the preliminary motion, that he felt my rule on the question of res adjudicata, estoppel, prior adjudication, was correct, and that they were correct. And I believe the written opinion which I have rendered and which is on file memorializes my views in that respect, subject to any views that may be had hereafter in any court of competent jurisdiction on appeal, if there be an appeal.

We now turn to page 535, wherein the Court again was very clear as to what my rule was; what it would be.

> "The Court: Well, for the immediate purposes, then, Mr. Hallinan, I shall sustain objections interposed to that type of presentation at this stage of the proceedings."

We were then trying to adjust ourselves in the light of Mr. Hallinan's rather broad, somewhat intemperate views of an opening statement. I was attempting to bring him down to date so that the following morning we might proceed in an orderly fashion before the jury.

More discussion, Mr. MacInnis made some comments, much matter gone over. And then the Court, at page 540, after the lengthy colloquy, the exchange of views, the sifting and resifting of matters that counsel had in mind.

> "The Court: Counsel, I have made my ruling and that is going to be the rule tomorrow morning." [779]
> "Counsel—" speaking to Mr. Hallinan—"I have made my ruling and that is going to be the rule tomorrow morning."

I was then referring to the matter of the continuity of the opening statement to be addressed to the jury the following court day.

The following morning, having contented myself, and with the reassurance from Mr. Hallinan that he would refrain from the avenues which he had been traveling in the opening statement, unbridled as he was, I had occasion to talk to the jury. They were called in, and at page 541 I spoke to the jury for probably ten or fifteen minutes, somewhat colloquially, but yet I believe aptly, and I told the jury the province of the opening statement. I distinguished between the opening statement and the closing arguments. I spoke of inflammatory matter and prejudice. I spoke of admonitions and the request for admonitions, so that the jurors might fully understand the proceedings. Those remarks occupy considerable comment in the transcript and at page 545, in the presence of the jury, at line 5, I said:

> "Now, with that general statement in mind, I ask Mr. Hallinan to proceed, having in mind the limitations under which I desire the opening statement to be made."

Mr. Hallinan, who was in entire accord, further said:

> "I might say I have since last night discarded much of what I intended to say in deference to your Honor. I am sorry to create any impression in your mind that I may be going [780] beyond what is fair, because certainly you do not deserve such treatment. You have been very fair to everybody in this case."

We then settled down, hopefully expecting that some recognition would be given to the Court's orders, which I had so painstakingly and carefully prepared and made, in the exercise of the discretion which I regarded as sound, and which I now regard as sound. However, it was not long until Mr. Hallinan, unbridled again, lapsed into a violation of the orders. At page 550 the Court had occasion to sustain an objection interposed by Mr. McMillan to matters that should not have been brought in on an opening statement and to matters which should not have been brought before the jury. At page 554, line 5, Mr. McMillan, a patient man, a man whom I have known for many years for his extreme patience, orderly conduct and forbearance, said:

> "Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, we are obliged——"

and a pause——

> "Patience has always been a very predominant feature in my nature, but I can't let these matters go by.
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained."

I shall not attempt to advert to the long dissertation on Mr. Hallinan's part that had to do with some internal warfare between the CIO and the AFL. I had already admonished Mr. Hallinan that we were not concerned with this internal [781] warfare and we were not trying any labor union or unions.

Again, at page 555, line 5, Mr. McMillan:

> "Well, may it please your Honor, the difficulty about this whole matter is, it is historical and it is argumentative; it properly belongs in an argument, not an opening statement. In an opening statement it is not intended to take a shotgun——"
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Now, an organization of sailors on the Pacific Coast, a member of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, was controlled by a man who will appear before you. His name is Harry Lundeberg, one of the most remarkable of the witnesses that will be produced. He is like a character from Jack London, a typical bucko mate, with a reputation for violence and ferocity as wide as the Seven Seas, a man who has been arrested for brawling and assaults in half the courts of the world. Dominating this union with an iron hand, he burned the ballots that were taken——"

"Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please——

"Mr. Hallinan: ——by his union concerning the federation——

"Mr. McMillan: Just one moment.

"Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. You want to talk?

"Mr. McMillan: I want to make an objection, Mr. Hallinan. You as a lawyer, with your wide experience, know that you have on such statements to prove in this court. [782]

"The Court: This—I again repeat another admonition to the jury, that what Mr. Hallinan has to say is in reality that type of matter that may be reserved for closing argument, if the facts demonstrate it. This wild anticipation of the Government's case is to my mind novel; I have never experienced it before in these courts, and I am naturally indulgent toward counsel on both sides, to the end that this case be heard fairly and impartially and that we have all the evidence before us. But I think, Mr. Hallinan, that these excoriations and vituperative matter bearing upon Mr. Lundeberg and others has no place at the present time.

"Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

"Mr. McMillan: May I interrupt, just to give a good example? He has stated Mr. Lundeberg has been arrested in every port——

"The Court: I noticed that. I noticed that. All parts of the world. And I will instruct the jury to disregard that statement."

Only a few seconds or minutes after, page 558, Mr. Hallinan again lunged or launched into the same demeanor, same conduct, persistent, studied as it was. 561, again, we find at line 4. Reference was to the prior page, 560. The Court sustained an objection.

"The Court: Objection sustained.

"The prior reference by counsel, Mr. Hallinan, was to the [783] Government agents.

"Mr. McMillan: It is quite eloquent, but——

"The Court: The objection is sustained.

"Mr. Hallinan: The strength and extent to which these people were willing to go may be learned from the fact that as early as 1936 they caused a warrant for Mr. Bridges' arrest on a deportation inquiry to be issued by the Secretary of Labor. The result of that deportation inquiry I am not going to go into, but the fact that one existed is one of the utmost importance and is one of the things that the jury will have to take into consideration in analyzing what the witnesses are saying. And I will presently explain to you why. The United States House of Representatives passed against Harry Bridges the only bill of attainder ever passed in the United States, and——"

"Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, if your Honor please, that is argumentative. He is not in some conference now.

"The Court: Objection sustained.

"Mr. McMillan: Counsel has been indicting everybody. I think he, as Edmond Burke says—you can't indict a whole nation."

Then at 562, Mr. Hallinan, line 5: [784]

Now he has stooped to the level of personalities and indulged himself adequately at the expense of the Government counsel:

"Mr. Hallinan: Of course, what I should have done is have some little pest along with me so I wouldn't have the burden of quarreling with people. Now, Mr. Donohue sits elegantly by and urbanely surveys this, while Mr. McMillan, who is very friendly——

"Mr. Donohue: ——"

Mr. Donohue finally came to the surface.

"Well, I think it is about time, if your Honor please."

Up to this moment he had been sitting by and Mr. McMillan was carrying the brunt.

"The Court: Yes, I think it is about time for the Court to say a few words. Mr. Hallinan——

"Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, did you take cognizance of the oratory that Mr. McMillan just engaged in, in stating you cannot indict —quoting Edmund Burke, and so forth?

"The Court: I am going to direct my attention to your characterization concerning Mr. Donohue, his urbane manner in sitting there, and so forth. This is no courtroom wherein to indulge yourself, Mr. Hallinan, in these general characterizations that sometimes have room or harbor [785] in other tribunals. This is a most serious matter. I have treated it as a serious matter. The Government will, and I hope you do. We are not going to get any place in the trial of this case by any such characterization or personalities indulged in. If you desire to indulge yourself in that direction, I suggest you do it elsewhere.

"Mr. Hallinan: Well, I apologize for it, your Honor. I didn't mean——

"The Court: There is no apology necessary.

"Mr. Hallinan: I will not fall into that again, your Honor.

"The Court: There is no apology necessary to the Court, because I do not deal in apologies. I deal in more stringent matters."

Here the warning started to come. The dawn is breaking on what inevitably results this morning.

At 565, no sooner had I concluded my remarks, the ink was not dry on the reporter's pen, 565, line 2, Mr. Hallinan again in one of the flights which so characterize the alleged opening statement:

"In 1937 Mr. Bridges attended a convention in Seattle, and agents of the Immigration Department dictographed his hotel room and tapped his telephone wire. And that being discovered was made a matter of such [786] public record that it cannot be disputed, because Mr. Bridges and his union forthwith communicated with the United States Government protesting what, whether right or wrong, they called an infringement of his liberties, of his constitutional rights. The papers ran great articles upon it, and it was widely broadcast everywhere, and letters of indignation and protest rained upon the responsible parties."

"Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please your Honor——

"The Court: I waited for an objection. I think in the absence of the prosecution noting an objection, the Court will intrude itself. There is no question involved in this case of wire-tapping. I take it from assurances given to me on the motion to dismiss, there will be no effort made on the part of the Government to introduce any evidence as to the result of any unlawful enterprise?

"Mr. Donohue: I renew that assurance.

"The Court: You renew that assurance?

"Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor."

He rose to renew his assurance again to the Court.

> "The Court: The objection is sustained. The jury is admonished to disregard the statement, of any kind, character or description, bearing upon that matter."

Quiet prevailed for one page of the transcript, and at page 567 again the barrage of interruptions. [787]

Reference was made to the alleged mistress of Harry Lundeberg. At this juncture Mr. Hallinan was stooping to an all-time low. Page 566, line 15:

> "Now, as early as 1936 there had been introduced into Harry Bridges' union and into his personal office as his private secretary a woman employed by the Waterfront Employers Association, and she was also the mistress of Mr. Harry Lundeberg. And at that time Mr. Bridges"——

And then Mr. McMillan:

> "Object to these statements, may it please your Honor.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: The same purpose, your Honor."
>
> "Mr. McMillan: I can't understand why counsel feels that he is obliged to lug in a mistress here and there.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: We didn't lug her in; they sent her in."

Page 567:

> "We want to show your Honor this is a complete"——

and there is a break in the thought. Then the Court:

> "The Court: Now, this is not an opening statement, Mr. Hallinan, either traditionally or in any concept that I have ever heard of. I have already stated my position."
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: Now, aside from any general matter, [788] such as I have"——
> "The Court: And an opening statement, if I may amplify one step further, is not a sounding board wherein you may give vent to the external and immaterial matters that have existed over a period of many, many years. I think it rather an extreme situation that reference be made to this woman at this juncture, without any evidence before this Court or jury. You might well in the same breath condemn, indict, destroy, burn at the stake, any person in the City and County of San Francisco, by a bland statement. Now, you gentlemen are asking for a fair trial, the essentials of constitutional rights. And I think you had better"——

Then Mr. Hallinan interrupted.

By reference to the headlines in the paper, again transcending, bridging, the orders made by the Court with reference to news articles.

The Court again: "Mr. Hallinan, am I entirely obtuse in the trial of this case? Or have we descended into another strata of judicial process? I admonished this jury categorically, unequivocally, with every bit of vigor I have,—which vigor is expending itself in my colloquy with you—that you are not to read the newspapers (addressing the jury) under any conditions. And this Court, mindful of the admonition to you, does not indulge [789] himself in the reading of the newspapers. Now, Mr. Hallinan indirectly has given you part of what the headlines are, which is a direct reflection upon this Court's admonition to you."

Quiet again prevailed for another page of transcript. At page 569, line 1, an objection was interposed. The Court:

> "Mr. Hallinan, let us pause momentarily and analyze just what we say. You characterized wholesale all of these witnesses as perjurers, low people, characterized them with vile, vituperative terms, 125 in number. I do not know at the present time the identity of any witness about to be called for the United States Government, and I dare say that in large part you do not. Now, I think it highly unfair to this Court, indulgent as I have been with you, to continue on that line or that particular vein."
> "Mr. Hallinan: All right, your Honor."
>
> "The Court: I can't say any more."
> "Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will drop that."

The transcript would seem to indicate a strain at that moment—the feeling was growing. The Court's patience was being exacted.

Several pages without interruption—perhaps that dull sort of a trial that Mr. Hallinan enjoys to remain away from; characterization was made that the Court should not indulge in [790] a dull trial. So that seemingly it became him to create some mild degree of excitement. At page 571, line 22, or line 11, Mr. Hallinan:

> "The motives of the witnesses who will testify, whether they are Communists, ex-Communists, rival union leaders or Government agents, are equally open to inquiry by the jury. Bridges was possessed of a faculty that may do him more harm in these matters than all his serious philosophy."

Then he adverted to the espionage activities of the FBI in New York City. He then concluded his remarks:

> "If he (Mr. Bridges) went into a hotel lobby, a young man would be looking through a hole cut in a newspaper.
> "Mr. McMillan: I object to that.
>
> "The Court: Sustained."

Then page 574, the Court, again responding to an objection urged by Mr. McMillan, and to matters that were incompetent and irrelevant. The Court, addressing myself to Mr. Hallinan:

> "The Court: What you propose to do is perfectly plain to me, Mr. Hallinan, and that is to assassinate in advance every witness who might take this stand without any evidence before this Court of the general characterizations and vituperations."

I shall not pause to read many matters which otherwise [791] might be adverted to, by reason of the limitations of time.

I pause, however, at page 577, line 25. Mr. Hallinan, still launching forward in his discussion, or so-called "opening statement":

> "However, Mr. Bridges has made the mistake of not taking the $50,000 that was offered to him back in 1934 to throw the strike and go back to Australia——
>
> "Mr. McMillan: That is objected to.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: We will show that.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained and the jury is instructed to disregard the statement."

Page 580, referring to the powerful feudal Five Companies of Hawaii, Mr. Hallinan stated:

> "The situation there was the renewal of about what had happened in San Francisco—poison gas and clubs for the workers and a storing up of the"——

And then there was an interruption.

> "Mr. McMillan: If it please your Honor,——

> "Mr. Hallinan: This is not ancient history; this happened within the last year.
>
> "Mr. McMillan: The poison gas, rocks, stones——
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. McMillan."

At page 582, line 5, Mr. McMillan again interrupted:

> "If your Honor please, if this is not an argument after all the evidence is in, I do not know what I am [792] talking about.
> "Mr. Hallinan: If I may finish one paragraph, I will do so."

Then the Court, after all this colloquy:

> "It is unnecessary for me to admonish the jury again to disregard these statements."

Then we come to the first witness; this barrage had only died in its echoes off the walls and its reverberations through the courtroom, when Mr. Lloyd Garner took the stand. There is a very significant mention of a date at the very threshold of his testimony, and this date may prove, and is, a focal point around which my comments hereafter hinge.

Page 586, line 24, Mr. Donohue examining the witness:

> "When were you first employed by the Bureau of Immigration in the City of San Francisco?
> "A. From April 1941.

> "Q. And that employment here continued for how long?
> "A. Until about April 1948."

Now, mark you, for the record,—from April 1941 he was employed in the San Francisco office of the Bureau of Immigration in the City of San Francisco. Bearing that date in mind, we examined painstakingly, carefully, assiduously, the transcript. What do we find? The same tactics, the same studied performance, the same desire to introduce irrelevant, incompetent and inflammatory matters before the jury. [793]

Page 705, line 10. This is during the course of the examination of Mr. Lloyd Garner. "Mr. Hallinan had launched into a dissertation upon the deportation proceedings. I have not counted the number of times, but I dare say the record is replete with my rule that the deportation proceedings had no bearing in fact or in law upon this trial or any part thereof; and the record is replete with Mr. Hallinan's acquiescence as a matter of law. Yet we find his transgressions":

> "The Court: I remark and I reiterate, Mr. Hallinan, as I did with your colleague, Mr. MacInnis, that there is no issue with respect to the deportation proceedings before this Court, there is no issue upon which the Supreme Court decision would be controlling as a matter of fact or as a matter of law. Now, what this man may have done with respect to matters of prior con> sequence would not aid or determine any issue in this case."

By "this man" I referred to Mr. Garner.

We now attempt—and I sought to find it, if I could, before reaching a determination—to find Mr. Hallinan's good faith. Good faith—with respect to his conduct in his asking the questions; because behind these matters and behind the pages of transcript, in making a determination of this character, we must perforce look for good faith or the absence of good faith. So I sought it, if it did exist.

At page 706, line 17, Mr. Hallinan, adverting to the [794] credibility of Mr. Garner:

> "And your Honor will remember that there is a serious question of credibility involved in that this defendant supplies something that is entirely missing from anybody else in the prosecution's case—that is, the question of whether or not the co-defendants were ever questioned concerning affiliation or membership in the Communist Party. A very serious question of this witness' credibility in that. And we are entitled to explore that to the farthest limits."

He referred to the examination conducted by Mr. Garner in the preliminary sense of the co-defendants, Messrs. Schmidt and Robertson. In that Mr. Hallinan then took the position, and now takes the position, no doubt, that the question was not addressed to them concerning their Communist affiliation or membership.

Page 706, line 17, Mr. Hallinan takes the position that he is entitled to examine the witness Garner concerning the Supreme Court decision and the Landis decision, because a serious question has arisen concerning the witness' credibility; that is, whether the co-defendants, Schmidt and Robertson, were ever questioned concerning affiliation or membership in the Party, the Communist Party.

Without any further or more exacting examination, it must be apparent, as it was to me last evening and as it is now, that there is a complete lack of good faith, fair [795] dealing, on Mr. Hallinan's part in attempting to lug in or haul by the ears the Supreme Court decision or Mr. Landis' decision. For—and I mark for the record—neither Mr. Schmidt nor Mr. Robertson were involved in the prior proceedings. They were not identified therein in any manner, and questions addressed to the prior record would not be proper under any theory concerning Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt. So, where is the good faith in asking the questions?

Also, I examined page 713, at line 14, wherein Mr. Hallinan made what I regarded as a rather unusual statement, if not amazing. Page 713, line 14, again addressing himself to Messrs. Robertson and Schmidt, in seeking to seize upon a theory wherein he might haul in paragraphs from the opinion of the Chief Justice or the Supreme Court, and from Mr. Landis, and have those paragraphs culled and capsuled, so that the jury might have them. 713, line 14:

"Mr. Hallinan: But now if those witnesses > get on the witness stand and should say, 'I am a Communist and have been all along, a member of the Communist Party, and I wasn't asked that question, but I did say that Mr. Bridges was not or that he was eligible for citizenship,' then they have undermined him now by coming in and cutting the ground from under their feet and saying to the jury, 'Here they lied to this man on a question of their own citizenship,' and it is a very important [796] card in the prosecution's case, as your Honor will see when the evidence finally develops."

The same persistent theory, the same persistent apparent lack of good faith.

Then we advert to page 730, all the time in the questions seeking good faith; what is Mr. Hallinan attempting to do? Page 730, line 9. At page 729 there had been a dissertation about the wire-tapping episodes, a reference to Dean Landis' opinion, a reference to the Supreme Court decision. Then at page 730, again I reiterate my rule, so there would be no misunderstanding about it, so that it would deeply embed itself in Mr. Hallinan's mind, so that there could be no mistake about it to any person in the courtroom or to counsel or to the jurors or to any other person. The Court:

> "I will hold to the lines, I will hold right to the line on the evidentiary matters. I will hold right to the line in the exercise of a sound discretion, and I have made the announcement to the jury, I have announced to the jury and to your predecessors—lawyers"—(I meant by that Messrs. Gladstein, Resner, Andersen and Sawyer and others) "that these matters of prior consequence had no legal bearing upon this matter. Now, what would it serve this case to pry into all of these prior matters, the determination therein, legal, extra-judicial or however it appear? It would not be binding upon the jury or the Court as a factual matter." [797]

Next at page 734, line 24, Mr. Hallinan, addressing his questions now to Mr. Garner, cross-examining. The record is riddled with objections. 734, line 24, Mr. Hallinan, addressing himself to Mr. Garner:

"Now, did you read that portion of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which charged the Federal agents with illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

"Mr. Hallinan: This goes to his participation"—— speaking of Garner's participation. Mindful, Mr. Garner came into the Government service in 1941. Bear that factor in mind through all this discussion.

"The Court: The objection is sustained that it is not in conformity with the ruling, Mr. Hallinan, and is an attempt to bring before the jury matters in obviation of my ruling. I admonish the jury to disregard any implications in the question."

We now turn to page 738. The strain of the proceedings became a little more apparent—tempers a little more raw. 737, Mr. Paisley is first heard. Page 737, from lines 12 to 25, there is a colloquy between Mr. Paisley and Mr. Hallinan.

"Mr. Hallinan: ~~I think~~ I am permitted to finish my question without interruption by counsel," and so forth. [798]

"Mr. Paisley: No guesswork, your Honor.

"Mr. Hallinan: If he would, he would blush." Referring to Mr. Paisley. Then the question:

"Now, I want to ask this question: You do have information that the Government indulged in illegal wire-tapping upon the two previous"——

Mr. Paisley—mildly, Southern drawl, temperate:

"Just a moment, counsel."

Then the question, continuing:

"——two previous deportation proceedings, have you not?

"Mr. Paisley: If your Honor please, if this is not contempt of court, I have never seen it in my career.

"Mr. Hallinan: That is the first time I have ever heard counsel make a statement—I ask the jury be admonished——

> "The Court: The objection is sustained, the jury is admonished to disregard any implications contained in the question. I have heretofore"——

I was interrupted by Mr. Hallinan.

> "Mr. Hallinan: I have asked your Honor to ask the jury to disregard the statement that counsel just made. It is a highly improper statement.
> "The Court: The statement made by counsel may well be within the realm of his province to make. I shall not instruct the jury to disregard his statement. [799]
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception, if the Court please."

And then the Court; this is the first indication on my part, I say, that I had reached or was about to reach the extreme ends of my patience:

> "And I say to you, Mr. Hallinan, your persistent conduct along this line, studied as it appears to be, may well eventuate in the situation that counsel refers to." [799-A]
> "Mr. Hallinan: We enter an exception to that statement:
>
> "The Court: The objection is overruled.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: Very well."

Now, that colloquy was no sooner over, the Court's admonition was still echoing, when Mr. Hallinan asked the following question of Mr. Garner:

"Now, did you yourself in the period preceding, that is, looking toward the deportation of Harry Bridges, and during that time—not at the present time—receive any information from any federal official or agency that Harry Bridges' wires were being illegally tapped?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

"The Court: Sustained."

Bear in mind, again, keep it ever present in mind, that Mr. Garner, on the testimony before the Court, first came into the government service in 1941. Mr. Hallinan pounding through again:

"Have you at any time throughout the origin of the proceedings"—now bear in mind the origin of the proceedings against Harry Bridges, back in 1937 or 1938, up to the present time, that is, up to today—"made any protest of any kind to any agent of the government or any attorney of the government that there was or has been an illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges? [800]

"Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

"The Court: Sustained.

"Mr. Hallinan: Did you at any time in the course of your connection with this case state to any official or agent of the Government that you would not be a party to an illegal effort to injure this man?

"Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if

> Your Honor please, and again I ask Your Honor to admonish counsel to confine his cross-examination to the well-established rule of law to which Your Honor invited his best attention.
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: Very well."

Mr. Hallinan, again driving through, notwithstanding the objections and the ruling of the Court, made manifestly clear, again by Mr. Hallinan:

> "In your study, whatever study you did make of the Landis position, you learned that 62 witnesses had been presented by the Government against Harry Bridges, and that Dean Landis had rejected all of them as liars and perjurers? Didn't you find that out?
> "Mr. Donohue: I object to the question and again state to Your Honor that Mr. Hallinan's deliberate and repeated questions, which he knows as a lawyer are beyond the scope of the limitation defined by Your Honor, is highly contemptuous of the decision of this Court. [801]
>
> "The Court: ——"

I responded, I suppose, rather feebly by this time.

> "The Court: It is an attempt to circumvent the ruling of this Court and place before this jury by indirection matters that have been ruled out, matters that are immaterial and that are irrelevant.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, we have no ruling upon any such question as that. There has been nothing said in that matter."

I was rather astounded and somewhat taken aback. I said:

> "That has been before the recess period, at least 45 minutes in discussion.
> "Mr. Hallinan: What it amounts to, Your Honor, is rendering it almost impossible to find out. This witness has now a seal of objections thrown around him that prevents the defense from finding out what his real interest in the case is."

Now the thread is drawn closely. Now the web is woven. Now Mr. Hallinan's adroitness is being felt. He is completely dethroning this witness. He is stabbing him in the back.

> "The Court: That observation is uncalled for, unwarranted, purely gratuitous and part of a studied plan.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Now, I ask Your Honor—pardon me—I enter an objection to that statement and I ask that the jury be instructed to ignore it. [802]
>
> "The objection is not well taken, Mr. Hallinan.
> "Mr. Hallinan: And I except to the Court's refusal to so instruct the jury."

Now, up to this juncture and including a review of the record thus far, it appeared to me manifestly clear that the questions were not asked in good faith, that the wholesale barrage and attack made upon witnesses in advance was not made in good faith, that it represented merely an attempt to besmirch and belittle the witnesses without any basis for an excursion or departure into the prior deportation proceedings, without any basis in fact or in law for a departure into or an inquiry with reference to the Landis decision or any other decision in the prior deportation proceedings, including, of course, the Supreme Court decision. The questions, the manner, the deportment and the decorum represented, in the opinion of the Court, a studied plan to destroy in advance the effectiveness and the asserted truthfulness of the witness placed upon the stand by the bland assertion that somewhere, some time, he might have been associated with an alleged conspiracy, which, of course, Mr. Hallinan has referred to as somewhat fantastic.

At page 748, again in my quest for good faith, again naively I thought I might find it some place, at 748, line 23, this question, as I recall, was presented vigorously, in a commanding voice. This was addressed to Mr. Lloyd Garner, then on the stand on cross-examination: [803]

> "Q. Prior to the deportation proceedings, which were tried—tried"——

Now let us take the key word, tried. In 1939, if the deportation proceedings were tried in 1939, it follows as the night the day that the subject matter of the inquiry addressed to Mr. Garner had long since preceded 1939——

> "were tried in 1939 before Dean Landis, did you personally (and here is the vice—now we find the vice)—did you personally have anything to do with installing a wire-tapping device in Harry Bridges' room in the Hotel Multnomah in Portland?"

Again I say for the record, and so that our mental equanimity may not be disturbed, that Mr. Lloyd Garner first came into the government service in April, 1941. Where is the good faith? Where are the dulcet tones of tying this man into an alleged conspiracy?

At 749, Mr. Paisley,—he comes to the front again——

> "Your Honor, I object to it on the same ground that Your Honor has sustained us on, I was about to say a hundred times, and to show how ridiculous it is.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: I object to an argument in the presence of the jury on a question of fact."

I think even Mr. Hallinan must have smiled at that comment.

> "The Court: You had your argument. I will let counsel argue a bit here. [804]
> "Mr. Paisley: To show how ridiculous——"

and there are three key words in what Mr. Paisley said——

> "ridiculous or how uninformed or insincere the remarks of counsel are, I am told this witness did not come with the government until 1941."

If there be any inaccuracy in Mr. Paisley's statement, it is with reference to the fact that he was told. He heard it. It came out of the mouth of the witness on the direct examination. It was in this courtroom for all to hear.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't know."

Mr. Hallinan doesn't know when Mr. Garner came with the government service, and yet at page 587 of the transcript, as I already adverted to, Mr. Garner stated categorically that he came with the service in 1941, and up to the time of this colloquy and up to the time of this misconduct, no one in this courtroom ventured to suggest that Mr. Garner did not come in the government service prior to that time.

> Continuing—"Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't know.
>
> "The Court: He so testified.
> "Mr. Hallinan: I want an answer to the question, if the Court please.
>
> "The Court: Did you enter an objection, counsel?
>
> "Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes, certainly.
> "The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. Hallinan."

Notwithstanding that, he questioned again Mr. Garner, driving [805] him now, in the vernacular, with rights and lefts, trying to destroy him, to beat him to the ground, beat him over the head, stab him in the back.

> "Mr. Hallinan: Did you personally in the year 1941 have any part, or did you participate in any wire-tapping of a telephone in Harry Bridges' room in a hotel in New York City?"

Here is Mr. Lloyd Garner, the mild-mannered deputy, an administrative officer of the United States Government, whom Mr. Hallinan has translated into an alleged nefarious trafficker in installing dictographs in hotel rooms in New York City. Absurd, preposterous.

> "Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. That presumes, Your Honor, that occurred. Counsel is thereby attempting to testify that such an occurrence took place, it seems to me.
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: Did you personally have any contact with any persons employed, employees of the United States Government, engaged in the tapping of telephone wires of Harry Bridges in a hotel in New York City in 1941?"

A persistent, studied continuity of conduct, not bordering on contempt, but contemptuous in every form and degree.

> "Mr. Paisley: Same objection on the same ground.

> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
> "Mr. Hallinan: Might I have a moment? That is all." [806]

Mr. Donohue then took up redirect examination having to do, as I recall, with an affidavit of the wife or former wife of the defendant Harry Bridges. I think it was finally ruled out on the ground of hearsay. However that may be, it becomes unimportant to the instant discussion.

At page 754 Mr. Hallinan, dissembling with the Court, seeking to justify a non-existent reason for his course of studied conduct, seeking to jettison the witness,

> "Mr. Hallinan (Referring to Garner): I want to ask the witness now, I want to read off portions of the decision of the Supreme Court and Judge Landis' decision and ask him if those were the parts that he read before he asked these two defendants whether or not they were members of the Communist Party. I want to ask him the specific things because he says he does not believe he read them all, that he read excerpts from them."

It is needless for me to reiterate, to repeat or to restate that there is no reason, logically or in law, for the attempted excursion of Mr. Hallinan into the recesses of the past records on deportation looking toward the ferreting out of the truth of Mr. Garner's testimony in and with respect to the two defendants, co-defendants, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Robertson. That is manifestly clear.

"The Court——"

after Mr. Hallinan's wheedling and somewhat dissembling, said he wanted a ruling from me. He now wanted [807] a ruling. We have now reached page 755 and he was asking me to rule. Up to this point I had ruled persistently with continuity and with some degree of grave thoroughness.

> "The Court: Counsel, thus far you have not had much regard for my rulings whether I made them formally or informally, in the presence of the jury or in the absence of the jury."

At page 755 I continued:

> "It is a sort of travesty at this late stage again to tell me about it. Do you have an objection to it, counsel?
>
> "Mr. Paisley: I certainly do, Your Honor.
>
> "The Court: The objection is sustained.
>
> "Mr. Hallinan: There isn't any question, Your Honor, to which an objection should be made."

I thought there was.

Page 755, line 19, Mr. Paisley again, I suppose somewhat amazed with reference to our western type of practice.

> "Mr. Paisley: I not only object to that procedure and that question, Your Honor, but I must object to counsel continually standing before this bar and disregarding the rulings of this Court on this line of testimony. He has been told a dozen times that what went on in these prior proceedings had nothing to do with the simple issues in this case. He stands here repeatedly showing his utter contempt of Your Honor's rulings." [808]

Mr. Hallinan at this juncture asked for a mistrial, which I promptly denied. Page 756, line 17. Then there were matters of an asserted offer of proof by Mr. Hallinan on page 758, which came as a sort of anticlimax or an epilogue, if you please, to the little drama that I have so carefully read.

We will now take a recess.

(Recess.) [809]

The Court: The basic rules upon which the Court predicates its findings and the ultimate judgment herein are Rule 42 of Criminal Procedure, labeled and captioned "Criminal Contempt," subdivision (a) of Rule 42:

> "A criminal contempt may be punished as summary, if the judge certifies that he saw or heard the conduct constituting the contempt and that it was committed in the actual presence of the court. The order of contempt shall recite the facts and shall be signed by the judge and entered of record."

Under Title 18, the new Title 18 of U. S. Code, crimes and criminal procedure, Section 401, captioned "Contempts, Constituting Crimes. Power of Court."

> "A court of the United States shall have power to punish by fine or imprisonment at its discretion such contempt of its authority, and none other, as, (1) misbehavior of any person in its presence or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice."

Section 402, the last part of the last paragraph, states that in proceedings under Section 401, punishment may be meted out in conformity with the prevailing usages at law.

I need not make more specific findings than I have already made in the course of my narrative discussion of the transcript. I have found therein——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, your Honor. You promised me [810] an opportunity to make a legal objection before a finding was made, so if you are about to pronounce a finding, I would like to make that objection for the purposes of the record.

The Court: What is the nature of your objection? Because I contemplate, so that you may be guided accordingly, the preparation of a formal order in conformity with Rule 42.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, I understand.

The Court: And a formal certificate.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, I understand. But before that——

The Court: There will be nothing precipitous about it.

Mr. Hallinan: I see. Well, when does your Honor contemplate doing that? I mean, at the termination of this case, or sometime during the——

The Court: I intend to have the order and the certificate prepared as promptly as circumstances will permit.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, then, your Honor. I want to make this motion and objection on it, and this is the proper time to do it. I want to ask the Court first to disqualify himself from proceeding further upon this matter.

Now, your Honor will understand that we have two elements involved in a matter of this kind. One is the defendants whom we represent in the matter, and the other is my personal self. And of course, this motion now applies to the matter relating to my personal self. And under the circumstances, of course, your Honor should not make a finding upon the [811] matter and should not make any certificate of any judgment. But your Honor should take the matters that you have read off, and which I assure you do not constitute contempt in any part, and transfer it to another judge, for the reason,—and if your Honor will not concede this and stipulate to it, then I will ask to be sworn and make a formal motion of the matter—that within the last three years your Honor appeared as a witness in a case in which I was sued by your close and intimate friend, Eugene Aureguy, in which he sued me for the sum of $10,000. And your Honor will remember you appeared in the Superior Court as a witness and testified in his behalf. And your Honor will also remember that prior to that time you endeavored privately in your chambers, as a justice in the city courts, to persuade me to deliver Mr. Aureguy $10,000 which he claimed.

The Court: That is false and untrue.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, well, I will ask to be sworn and I will ask your Honor to be sworn in this. I am going to make a motion—I say, if your Honor won't stipulate to it, then I want to make a formal motion. And that after that time, your Honor, that you have constantly—although prior to that time our relations were very good, and you employed me to try cases for you that were rather difficult—but subsequent to that time, your personal hatred and dislike for me has been quite obvious. Now, I certainly did not carry any [812] resentment at that attitude into this court. You were welcome to have what attitude toward me you pleased, until my personal safety is concerned, in a thing like this. And I assumed and proposed that any such dealing as you had against me would under no circumstances enter into your conduct and determination in this case, and I do not say it has. But now as regards this personal matter, in which my own well-being and my own safety is concerned, I think your Honor should be magnanimous enough not to pursue a mean or spiteful feeling or advantage that you have on me, placed as I am in such an inferior position in this respect, but should deliver the matter to some judge who has no feeling one way or the other and permit him to make a finding. Do you think that would be the sporting, the proper and just thing?

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I say to you as a man and as a judge that I have no rancor or ill-will toward you or against you.

Mr. Hallinan: Did you ever make the statement that you were going to get me?

The Court: I made no such statement of any kind, character or description, and I am not going to be examined by you. I merely state for the record that in the course of conduct of this trial I will stand on the record and my deportment and my conduct with respect to my fairness toward you and fairness toward the defendants. I made no [813] such statement of any kind, character or description. If you believed that in any sense I was disqualified or I would entertain any matters that you now bring to bear in this record, and that you now conceive at this time out of whole cloth, then I say to you, Mr. Hallinan, you should have made that known long since and prior to the trial.

Mr. Hallinan: No, because, as I say, they did not enter into the matter. I did not intend to make my personal quarrel with you, or your personal quarrel with me, rather——

The Court: I have no personal quarrel.

Mr. Hallinan: You did, your Honor. You did within the three years last past in the Superior Court against me on behalf of Eugene Aureguy, who I think you will concede is a close and intimate friend of yours, is he not?

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, the motion to transfer the cause is denied.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, may I be permitted to make a formal motion? If your Honor will not disqualify yourself, will you give me time in which to prepare an affidavit in which I will recite the matters I am now saying, and then if I recite them improperly or untruly, there would be all sorts of hazardous consequences. I am perfectly prepared to take the stand now and testify or furnish an affidavit setting them forth.

The Court: The motion is denied. [814]

Mr. Hallinan: I want to make another motion, your Honor, and this one now relates to the case, and I think the slightest reflection will convince your Honor of its force or validity. I now move to disqualify you from further participation in this case and to ask you either to declare a mistrial, or, better yet, substitute another judge, because the statements you have made in reading out this document that you went through, or the record that you went through, having in it every intendment of vigor and intemperance, shows that you prejudged the case of the defendants. You have said that the attempt to show that a Government witness was a part of the conspiracy, which is an essential part of the defendants' case, is preposterous. You have characterized him as "this quiet gentleman," and you accept, without question of the possibility of impeachment, his statement that he took no part in the case until 1941. You desire to preclude the defendant from establishing that that witness is capable of telling an untruth upon the stand. As far as other statements concerning whether or not a woman was the mistress of an enemy of Mr. Bridges, you called that "descending to a new low." How do you know if she was a mistress or not, the mistress of another man who is the enemy of Mr. Bridges? You have disqualified yourself upon the statements that you have read off this morning completely.

Now, if your Honor will not do that, which you should do, now you have found a place where your duty is clear, you will [815] concede, I think, that the defendants are entitled to be tried not only before a fair and impartial jury but a fair and impartial judge. You are supposed to be a thirteenth juror here. You are not supposed to have your mind made up as to who is right or who is wrong or what witnesses are telling the truth or what witnesses are immune from impeachment or above impeachment merely because they are Government witnesses. So I ask you now to disqualify yourself, to substitute another judge, or to declare a mistrial, and if the Court will not do it, then this afternoon I will prepare and file a formal motion to that effect.

The Court: The motions, all and singular, are denied.

Mr. Hallinan: Will your Honor grant us leave—I will do it without that. I will file a formal motion this afternoon addressed to you.

The Court: The matter of the presentation of the certificate and the order I request be prepared. We will proceed this afternoon. We have the jury available now?

The Clerk: Yes, your Honor, the jury is still in the jury room.

The Court: Bring them in. Call Mr. Schomaker.

(The jury was thereupon brought into the courtroom.)

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, in view of the motions that were made just before the jury came in and my statement that we would file a formal motion to the same effect at two o'clock [816] I would ask that no further proceedings be taken between this time and two o'clock, the jury being excused until then so that there be no contention or possible contention that there is any sort of waiver of our right to proceed in the direction that I indicated.

The Court: Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: I see no reason at all, if your Honor please, for complying with the request just stated by Mr. Hallinan. I think this case should proceed as your Honor intends it to proceed in an orderly fashion.

The Court: That was my intention. Accordingly, call the witness.

The Clerk: Call Mr. Schomacher.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

recalled; previously sworn.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

Mr. Donohue: If it please your Honor, the last question which was asked of the witness just before adjournment yesterday and to which objection was made by counsel, and upon which your Honor had not yet ruled, was the question: "Mr. Schomaker did there come a time when you became a member of the Communist Party?"

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

I most earnestly suggest to your Honor whether or not [817] the witness was a member of that organization is a matter which could only be peculiarly within his own knowledge.

The Court: Counsel, I looked into the matter last evening and examined the authorities, and I have concluded under the decision of United States v. Marzini the question is proper. I do not have the citation before me. It is on my desk.

Mr. Donohue: I have it here, if your Honor please.

The Court: You might supply the citation to Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Donohue: The case of Marzini v. the United States is found in 168 Fed. Rep., 2nd Series.

The Court: Paragraph 8.

Mr. Donohue: Paragraph 8.

Mr. Hallinan: What page, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Page 140.

The Court: Paragraph 8 reads that questions of this character are admissible in this type of proceeding.

Mr. Hallinan: My objection was, if I may repeat the objection then to the question being asked, that it is not the best evidence, that the records of the party itself would be the best evidence, or some such formal indication. But this is calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness on an ultimate fact and invading the province of the jury.

The Court: The objection is overruled. [818]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Direct Examination
(Resumed)

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, did there come a time when you became a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, sir. Will it be understood, then, the question being repeated, the entire objection precedes this?

The Court: Yes, the objection may run to this continuity of examination along this general line, and Mr. MacInnis joins in that objection.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: We made a stipulation that the Court concurred in, that any objection, motion or exception that was made should be made on behalf of all the defendants without specifying that, that if it were desired by counsel, that no exception or objection be made by any particular defendant, that that would be so indicated.

The Court: The Court will recognize that stipulation. That escaped my memory, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Under his Honor's directions, Mr. Schomaker, you may now answer the question.

A. Well, there definitely came a time when I became a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Will you tell his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury from your best recollection what that time was?

A. Well, to the best of my recollection it was the winter of [819] 1931, that is, the fall, the early fall or winter of 1931.

Q. May I ask where you were employed at the time you became a member of the Communist Party?

A. I was employed at the Veterans Hospital in Palo Alto.

Q. Where you had been employed some years prior to that time? A. That is right.

Q. Will you tell us the circumstances under which you became a member? What did you do in order that you should subsequently become a member?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as not binding on the defendants, things done between other persons, under the rule described as res inter aliasacta, being hearsay and not binding upon these defendants.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did you do in order that you might become a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, I signed an application blank.

Q. Where did you sign that application blank?

A. In San Francisco here.

Q. Do you recall specifically a building or place in San Francisco where you signed the application?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. I ask the statement that he signed an application blank be stricken out as stating a conclusion of the witness as to what the nature of some document was that he signed. [820]

The Court: Ask him to describe the document.

what it was, the context, what it said on it, and so forth.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we have the statement that it was an application blank stricken?

The Court: It may be stricken.

Mr. Donohue: I may say to your Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: Do you have the document?

Mr. Donohue: —— Mr. Hallinan just a few minutes ago objected to the witness stating as a conclusion of his that he had joined the Communist Party, and now for the purpose of making every step which he took, in order that he may justify that conclusion, it seems a bit strange that Mr. Hallinan now sees fit to object.

Mr. Hallinan: I have seen stranger things in this court than I have ever seen in my life before, and that there should be a few more would not be astonishing.

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

Q. Would you tell to his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the circumstances under which you signed what you have called an application?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. By counsel repeating the question, the necessity arises of repeating the objection. I think the proper procedure is to have the reporter read the question.

The Court: Yes. Read the question. [821]

(Question read as follows: "Q. Do you recall specifically a building or place in San Francisco where you signed the application?")

The Court: I think it was suggested by the Court that the paper he signed be described.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, I have that recollection on the subject. What did it look like?

Mr. Donohue: I will be glad to ask that question.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, can you describe for us the document which you signed, what it looked like?

Mr. Hallinan: I make the same objection, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, no proper foundation, and not the best evidence, and matters done between other persons when the defendants were not present.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Will you answer the question, Mr. Schomaker? Describe the document that you signed.

A. I didn't sign it—I mean, I signed it, but first I had to make it out. It asked your name, where you were employed, the number of workers employed there, and whether or not you belonged to a trade union.

Q. Was there any printed matter on that document?

A. There was an official insignia of the Communist Party of the United States.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that that be [822] stricken out as the opinion and conclusion of the witness, if the Court please, and not responsive to the question.

The Court: Motion denied.

Mr. Hallinan: He described it as an official insignia.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: We asked him to describe it to the best of his recollection, what was on it.

Mr. Hallinan: How it appeared, the context of it.

The Court: If he recalls, let him answer.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How else may you describe it, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, it had an official insignia of the Communist Party of the United States and it so plainly stated.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I move to strike that out, if the Court please, as stating an opinion and conclusion of the witness as to whether it was an official insignia of the Communist Party of the United States.

The Court: Motion denied.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Was there any other printed matter on it that you recall?

A. There was—stated this was the application blank to membership in the Communist Party of the U.S.A., and, as I said, it asked your name and the other things which I have stated, and finally it had "Proposed by" with a blank, proposed by two persons who would sign it, and also the name which you would assume when you entered the Communist Party. [823]

Q. Were you given any instructions at that time with respect to the use of a name other than your own as a party member?

A. No, not at that particular time I wasn't, no.

Q. What did you do with that application after you signed it?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. The same objection, if Your Honor please, not binding on the defendants. They weren't present. Hearsay, res inter alia acta.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did you do with that document after you signed it?

A. Well, I received——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me a minute, if you please, sir. By the repetition of the question, Your Honor, again I must repeat the objection. I think that the Reporter should reread the question.

The Court: All right. You have the question in mind, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: No, I haven't. I don't know what it is all about.

The Court: All right, Mr. Reporter, will you read the question?

(Record read.)

A. Well, since I was in a public meeting it was a meeting called for the unemployed and they were asking if anyone present wished to join the Communist Party. They passed out the blanks, [824] I filled it in and signed it.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. I ask that be stricken out, Your Honor, as not responsive. He was asked what he did with the application. He has described matters that happened some place where the defendants were not present. He speaks about people making requests of others to join the Communist Party.

That is not binding, that is hearsay. I ask the answer be stricken out.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor pleases, that this witness ought to be permitted to testify to matters which obviously are peculiarly within his own knowledge, and which are necessary for the witness to testify to in order that we may understand his subsequent testimony. And I think he ought to be permitted to do so without these constant and unnecessary interruptions by Mr. Hallinan.

The Court: Let me have the last question and last answer, Mr. Reporter. I may have missed part of it.

(Record read.)

The Court: The motion is granted. Mr. Schomaker, may I ask you in answering or responding to questions by Mr. Donohue that you attempt to confine your answer to the specific question. It may be difficult on occasion, but I wish you would adhere to that practice. That may obviate some of the objections.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did you do with the application after [825] you signed it?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please; incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, not binding on the defendant, res inter alia acta.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What is the question?

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I turned it in to the person who gave it to me.

Q. Did there come a time subsequently when you heard something from that application which you had filed?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, both as to what he heard and whether it was in response to any application.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes, I got a response to it.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And what was that response?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as calling for hearsay.

The Court: Overruled.

A. What was the response? Why, I was told to enroll in a school and attend a school for a period of three weeks.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I ask that be stricken out as hearsay, a statement made by some person to him who is not connected with the defendant, and we don't know—that is certainly [826] hearsay. I ask it be stricken out.

The Court: Overruled. The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What school was it which you attended?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, Your Honor —not binding on the defendants, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. It was called the Beginners School for Communist Party Members.

Q. And where was that school conducted or held?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please; incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, not binding on the defendants.

The Court: Overruled.

A. If I recall correctly, it was 1178 Market St.

Q. Here in the City of San Francisco?

A. San Francisco.

Q. And how long did you attend that school?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I attended for the—to complete the course.

Q. Did there come a time when you received from the Communist Party a membership card or book issued to you?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment, sir. I object to this, Your Honor, as not the best evidence. And furthermore, calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, both as to what the [827] book was, by whom it was issued, and furthermore, it is not binding upon the defendants. It is matters done between other persons outside their presence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes, I was issued a book, a Communist Party book.

Mr. Hallinan: Ask that be stricken as stating an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Motion denied.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did there come a time subsequently, Mr. Schomaker, when you occupied any official position in the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: We object to that, if the Court please, furthermore, as being not the best evidence, that the record of the Communist Party itself should prove that, that it is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness upon a matter of expert testimony, at least.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, I may say in observation thereto that no one should know better than Mr. Hallinan that the Communist Party is very careful about permitting such records being kept.

Mr. Hallinan: I never heard anything about the Communist Party until I entered this case. I know nothing about it. You flatter me if you think that.

Mr. Donohue: I don't mean that.

Mr. Hallinan: I can tell you all about the Jesuit School and [828] St. Ignatius and things of that kind you may not be familiar with. I know nothing whatever about the Communist Party.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

Mr. Donohue: Will you read the question to the witness?

(Record read.)

A. I occupied various official positions in the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us what positions you did in fact occupy?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please; no proper foundation, not the best evidence and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: And may I at this time, if Your Honor please, ask Your Honor to instruct Mr. Hallinan as counsel for the defense to occupy the proper place in the courtroom? I don't think he should be standing here next to me, interfering with my examination of the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't want to interfere with your examination, but where there are numerous——

The Court: I can't see that it interferes with you. If he feels a desire to stand there, I have no objection.

Mr. Hallinan: It is only to save time. It is much more——

The Court: I have no desire to request him to be seated. There are matters—— [829]

Mr. Hallinan: I will keep out of his way, if it annoys or vexes him.

Mr. Donohue: It doesn't annoy me.

Mr. Hallinan: But if I stand here, it saves jumping up.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us those positions, Mr. Schomaker?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me just a moment, Mr. Schomaker. Same objection, if the Court please.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker:)

Incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for his opinion and conclusion, and not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, I was unit organizer. I was—also handled what they call the Department of Agitation and Propaganda. I was the section organizer, and I also was a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party.

Q. Now, will you tell us what your duties were as unit organizer of the Communist Party?

A. Well——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment, sir. Object to that if the Court please, upon the same grounds; it calls for his opinion and conclusion, it is not binding upon the defendants, and is not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, the unit organizer is the same as the chairman of a group, and a unit was generally a small group, between seven and [830] ten members. And his duties were to—he was a contact man between the small group and the section. He brought back all the information or decisions that were made, he reported on the activity of the unit to the section, and in return he brought back the duties and assignments that were given to the unit, and he kept the unit members lined up, and the various other small duties which may arise, as in any small group which is organized for a specific purpose.

Q. And what were your duties as agitation and propaganda director?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please: calling for the opinion and conclusion, not binding upon the defendants, not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, an agitation and propaganda director was generally a person who, his duties were to take care of any meetings or to write any propaganda, and to take care of any of the publications, that is, to have them distributed properly and to give them any news if necessary. So, in other words, you were a reporter and you were a distributor, besides organizing meetings.

Q. And did you carry out those functions as agitation and propaganda director?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled. [831]

A. I did.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And what were your duties as a member of the District Committee?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: Calling for the opinion and conclusion.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, the District Committee member, the same as an executive board of a corporation or a company or a trade union, the same thing.

Q. Then you were a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party? A. I was.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask the answer be stricken out so I may make the objection.

The Court: The motion is granted to strike.

Mr. Hallinan: All right. We make the objection it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for hearsay and a conclusion of the witness, and not binding on the defendant.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, would you answer the question, Mr. Schomaker? Were you a member of the District Committee?

A. I was, yes. [832]

Q. And what was the province of the District Committee?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was the District Committee?

A. Well, the District Committee was, since this was District 13 of the Communist Party, it comprised California and I think parts of Arizona and Nevada. As I recall correctly. I think portions of Arizona and Nevada. And their job, as I say, was the same as an executive board—took up higher matters, made decisions and passed them on, and so on. In other words, direct the policy of the Communist Party for California.

Q. Then it is your testimony that you were a member of the executive board of the Communist Party which had jurisdiction over California, parts of Arizona and Nevada? A. That's right.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask the answer be stricken out so I may make the objection, if the Court please.

The Court: The motion is granted; you may enter the objection.

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, calling for his opinion and conclusion, not binding on the defendants, not the best evidence.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Then it is your testimony, Mr. Schomaker, that you were a member of the executive committee of—— [833]

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. By repeating the question, then I have to repeat the objection. I don't know why——

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, but, then, if you ask the question again, I have to make the objection again or the Court will hold that I have waived it.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Reporter, would you reread it?

Mr. Hallinan: It should be read to the witness, if he can't remember it.

The Court: (Nodding in assent.)

(Previous question read.)

A. That's right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How long did you continue as a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Same objection,

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)
calling for his opinion and conclusion, not the best evidence.

The Court: Objection is overruled.

A. I would say the latter part of '39 and the first part of 1940.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, do you know the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. Do I know Harry Bridges?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, I would know Harry Bridges—his wife Agnes used to call him "Bill." That must be the same person, I guess.

Q. Do you see the man whom you knew as "Harry Bridges" sitting [834] in the courtroom?

A. He is—sitting right there behind Mr. Hallinan. I can't see him for Mr. Hallinan.

Q. You know Mr. Hallinan?

A. No, I don't. Never had the pleasure—Yes, pardon me, I did. I met him once.

Q. And you know Mr. Bridges?

A. I do, yes.

Q. Do you know the defendant Henry Schmidt?

A. I do.

Q. Can you point him out in the courtroom?

A. Sitting over there at the end of the table.

Q. And do you know Mr. J. R. Robertson?

A. I do.

Q. Will you point him out to us?

A. He is sitting right behind Mr. McMillan (indicating).

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. McMillan: May the record show, counsel, that the witness has identified the defendants?

Mr. Hallinan: I don't know what the record shows.

Mr. McMillan: Well, will you stipulate that he has identified these defendants?

Mr. Hallinan: I suggest this, Mr. McMillan, that I am not too sure of the fairness of the prosecution. I will therefore request you kindly not to ask the defendants or their counsel to make any statements or to introduce any evidence against [835] themselves.

Mr. McMillan: I see. The ordinary stipulations that take place between counsel during trials——

Mr. Hallinan: I have never before, for instance, in a court, heard an attorney get up and move the court that his opponent should be declared guilty of contempt of court. I have never seen that before. I am not going to consider that there is anything ordinary or commonplace about this case. I will make no stipulation at all in the matter, so kindly don't ask for it.

Mr. McMillan: Well, we will not do it.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, will you please walk across and put your hand on Mr. Harry Bridges' shoulder, if you can identify him?

A. Certainly.

(Thereupon the witness left the witness stand, proceeded to a position behind the defendant Harry Bridges and put his hand upon Mr. Bridges' shoulder.)

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. (Continuing): This is Mr. Harry Bridges.

Q. And now will you identify Mr. Henry Schmidt? A. This is Mr. Henry Schmidt.

Q. And Mr. J. R. Robertson?

A. Mr. J. R. Robertson (indicating).

Q. Will you resume your seat on the stand, please?

(The witness resumed witness stand.) [836]

Mr. McMillan: Now, may it please your Honor, may the record show that the witness has identified all three defendants?

The Court: The record may so show.

Mr. Donohue: May we take the usual recess at this time, if your Honor please?

The Court: You may.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the matters of legal concern arose this morning, and we have a note of apology to make to you for your long absence from the courtroom. I desire to readmonish you concerning this trial. You may recall, at the outset, that I asked all of you under oath not to read any newspaper accounts of the trial. You agreed you would not. And I took you at your word. And you agreed also with me that you would not listen to any comment or commentators on the air. I asked you particularly at this stage of the proceeding, and at all stages in fact, not to engage in that type of conduct. In addition, I desire to readmonish you, which I have done persistently and consistently, not to discuss the case with any person or persons, not to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial; not to form nor express an opinion on this case until it is finally submitted to you for your ultimate decision.

We will resume, ladies and gentlemen, at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon. 2:15 p.m. this afternoon.

(Thereupon a recess was taken to 2:15 o'clock p.m.) [837]

November 22, 1949, 2:15 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, at this time I file a motion and certificate and an affidavit on the contempt proceeding with your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: At this time, if your Honor pleases, I would like to be heard.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I understand that a contempt proceeding is a matter between the Court and counsel. I think it invidious enough that opposing counsel should get up and try to have an opponent put in contempt of court. As I say, it is something I have never heard of before; and then that they should get up and defend the thing and make an argument on it seems to me to be out of the bounds of all decency, all propriety and all sportsmanship.

Mr. Donohue: If it please your Honor,——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. If I may be permitted to say this,——

Mr. Donohue: You have been permitted to talk for a week.

Mr. Hallinan: The Court has plenty of power, plenty of force, and you do not need to add anything to it whenever Mr. Donohue may wish to add. I want to present my motion.

Mr. Donohue: May I be heard? [838]

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases your Honor, this counsel this morning in this court told your Honor, and I quote from the record,——

The Court: State the page, please.

Mr. Donohue: Page 816 of the record, beginning at the end of line 7:

"So I ask you now to disqualify yourself and substitute another judge or to declare a mistrial, and if the Court will not do it, then this afternoon I will prepare and file a formal motion to that effect."

Now, of course, if your Honor pleases, Mr. Hallinan knows or should know that he would have no right to file such a motion to the effect as he stated this morning his motion would take, because Mr. Hallinan knows or should have known that if he had any basis upon which he may move to disqualify your Honor from the trial of this case, that the rules provide the time when such motion may be filed. Mr. Hallinan has been practicing law too long not to know that if he alleges any misconduct or prejudice on the part of the Court during the progress of the trial, that the forum with which that prejudice or that bias on the part of the Court should be heard is in the appellate court upon appeal, should there be an appeal in the instant case. Now, instead of carrying out what he said this morning he would do, Mr. Hallinan comes into court this [839] afternoon and asks your Honor to permit him to file a motion, not to disqualify your Honor in the instant case of United States v. Bridges and others, but in which Mr. Hallinan asks your Honor to further disqualify himself from further proceedings in the matter of a pending citation for contempt, and attached to this Mr. Hallinan includes a certificate that the motion and the affidavit in support thereof is filed in good faith, and I challenge that statement to your Honor. I say that this motion, this certificate, and this affidavit is not filed in good faith. And I say it, if your Honor pleases, because no one ought to know better than Mr. Hallinan himself that your Honor and your Honor alone is the forum which can consider his contemptuous conduct, and I say that to your Honor because I cite to your Honor the case of In Re Hallinan in which Mr. Hallinan himself was found guilty of like contemptuous conduct before a state court in this jurisdiction. [840]

The Court: What is that, 72 Cal.——

Mr. Donohue: That is 126 California Appellate Reports, if your Honor please, reading from page 128. I am sorry—reading, if your Honor please, from the bottom of page 129:

"In other words, as aptly stated by our Supreme Court, in Otis v. Superior Court, supra, 'Every court is the exclusive judge of its own contempt.'"

Mr. Hallinan knows that. In addition, if your Honor please, Mr. Hallinan brings here, hands us a copy, and asks the clerk of this court to accept and be filed a scurrilous and scandalous affidavit, which is impertinent and contemptuous on its face. And I most respectfully say to your Honor that there must be some rights to which the United States Government is entitled. There must be some right to which the people of the United States are entitled.

The United States came into this court before your Honor on Monday of last week, after careful preparation, to prepare and present to your Honor and this jury the case of the United States of America v. Harry Bridges and others. We expected to present that case with dignity to the United States, carefully safeguarding the rights of these three defendants. And I most respectfully observe to your Honor that while the contemptible and contemputuous conduct of Mr. Hallinan, who has roamed this courtroom since Monday of last week like a mad dog, disregarding the rights of everyone, including your Honor—I say, if your Honor please, that the integrity of the courts of the United States require of your Honor at [[illegible]] this time that action be taken that we not be subjected to this kind of conduct in the future.

I earnestly say to your Honor that this affidavit ought not to be filed; there is no authority for it.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, that is just pouring kerosene upon a fire already lit. The first time that I came into collision with the Court was this morning. I had no notice or supposition that the Court intended any such tirade or action as took place today. And I was surprised and shocked, as a great many other people. But do you contend this: Mr. Donohue, with all your talk about fairness and the courts, that I should be judged and tried upon a matter of that kind by a personal enemy?

Mr. Donohue: I say, Mr. Hallinan, as a lawyer, particularly as one——

Mr. Hallinan: I asked you that one question.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, because you have already been tried and convicted of the same thing, and you ought to know what the law is.

Mr. Hallinan: Whenever I have come into—in a matter that I think—Withdraw that.

Whenever I have come into a position where my rights are invaded, or more particularly, where the rights of my clients are invaded, I have done what I could to assert and defend them. Now, in my younger days, when I was less cautious [842] than I am now—because you will find before you are through, Mr. Donohue, that I have not exceeded the bounds of propriety in this case—why, sometimes my youthful intemperance might have run away with me and I went a little further than I might have gone. Others, warm-blooded people, have succumbed to the same difficulty. And counsel cites a matter there—I don't know just particularly what it is—I think it was a matter in which I was trying to break up the jury-fixing system in the Superior Court. (To the Court.) You helped me at that time. That is when we were friends. You were out and testified, and you could have been cited for contempt, just as I was.

But in this presentation—Since that time, unfortunately, our relationship has degenerated into a position where you obviously entertain such a personal rancor and hatred for me that you can no longer discuss the matter reasonably. And——

The Court: Mr. Hallinan——

Mr. Hallinan: And why should a judge who entertains a personal malice for a man descend to trying him on the matter? Now, here the record speaks for itself.

Mr. Donohue: If it please your Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: If you will please not interrupt me. I allowed you to talk all the way through. Now I will ask——

Mr. Donohue: I shall not pardon you.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask the gentleman be asked to step back [843] from the lectern, if the Court please, while I am standing here.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I stand on the record in this trial. I stand on your own encomiums of pleasure, judicial and lawyerlike satisfaction, that you have had. First, with my rather painstaking examination of the jury. I said for the record, I say to you now, that in my career on the bench—going back to 1941, and then latterly in this Court, since 1946—I never tried so hard, with so much sincerity of purpose at my command to accord a defendant or defendants a fair and impartial trial. I say to your client, Mr. Harry Bridges, sitting there, as I have said to other defendants, that I sit right at that counsel table. When you said that I never prosecuted in my career, you are correct; I defended all my life.

Mr. Hallinan: I never said that.

The Court: You said I never prosecuted in my career. I am not going to indulge in colloquy with you.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't remember making such a remark or statement. I am merely talking about this bitterness you have.

The Court: I sit at the counsel table for defense —not only in one case but in every case. And the United States Attorney will tell you that.

I helped select a jury in the trial of this case that I [844] thought I would like to be tried before. When I look in those faces, I look through those eyes, I look at the recesses of the brain, I say to myself, "George Harris, would you like to be tried by twelve people in their frame of mind?" When you gentlemen finally said you were satisfied, I felt satisfied. I have felt that that jury was fair, clean, democratic, represented a proper cross-section of this community, and I felt perfectly at ease and comfortable in examining my own conscience, and I have a conscience, that Mr. Bridges, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt would get a fair and impartial trial. And I say to you, Vincent Hallinan, you, your colleague, Mr. MacInnis—an able young fellow, a man of ability—that you would have had no trouble in this case, but you saw fit to take the reins, ride rough-shod over my orders, impugn the integrity of the Court. I say no more. I think you know in your own heart, your own conscience, as you stand there, that everything you have said this morning is false, untrue, unfair, and scurrilous. Man to man, in an alley or in a courtroom, you couldn't look me in the eye and say that.

Mr. Hallinan: Let me put it—Let me file an affidavit making the charge, and charge me with perjury, sir.

The Court: You will not file the affidavit.

Mr. Hallinan: Then we will try it out.

The Court: You will not file any affidavit before me, Mr. Vincent Hallinan. [845]

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I will file it with the clerk upstairs, your Honor. I am entitled to my rights in this court, too, and I am entitled to not be tried by a personal enemy on a contempt proceeding.

The Court: It will be stricken from the files.

Mr. Hallinan: You haven't read the affidavit, have you? I haven't filed it yet. The charges——

Mr. Donohue: The Court says you may not file the affidavit.

Mr. Hallinan: The charges I have made are of such a nature that your Honor should answer them, in some way, and simply not pass them over.

The Court: I think the world at large will consider that I need not ever make any response to you, Mr. Vincent Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Uh-huh. Well, I have your Honor's own testimony in two other cases to support the affidavit, so that I don't think you could well contradict them.

The Court: All right, sir. I have heretofore made my formal findings in this matter——

Mr. Hallinan: Well, before you do that, I offer now for the record a motion to disqualify you from proceeding further in the contempt proceeding. I offer for the record a certificate of counsel that it is taken in good faith for the purposes of the record, and I offer for the purposes of the [846] record my own affidavit charging you not with relation to the Harry Bridges case, understand——

Mr. Donohue: I object to this.

Mr. Hallinan: ——but as to myself personally.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to this man——

Mr. Hallinan: With personal bias, rancor and prejudice. Might I finish my sentences without this—— [846-A]

Mr. Hallinan: Might I finish my sentences without this man yelling in my ear? He objects to me standing here and then he has the effrontery to come up and stand here. I don't know who he is trying to tempt. At an earlier day, your Honor, the temptation would be acceded to. But, as I say, I am getting more urbane as I get older.

The Court: They tell me, Mr. Hallinan, perhaps when we grow older we become a little more temperate.

Mr. Hallinan: It does not seem so to me. I do, your Honor, but others do not.

The Court: I believe so.

Mr. Hallinan: I hope so.

The Court: I think so. Let us have the degree of harmony which I think I am entitled to. This is not a pleasant task, Mr. Hallinan, to the Court, as you know.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't think that. If I thought you were acting judiciously and calmly and I had done something improper, I would be the last one to say anything. Just like in the matter counsel cited here. If the Court decided I was in contempt, I had no quarrel with him. That was Judge Ward. I have been friendly since. I have never said a word to him or against him. But this is a different situation.

The Court: All right, sir. I have heretofore made my formal findings in this matter under Title 18, Section 401 and Rule 42 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure; and I specifically [847] find that Vincent Hallinan's contemptuous conduct and misbehavior in the presence of the Court obstructed the administration of justice. It is therefore adjudged that Vincent Hallinan has been found guilty of contempt of court for misconduct committed in the presence of the Court and in the course of this judicial proceeding, to wit, United States of America v. Harry Bridges. It is adjudged that you, Vincent Hallinan, be and you are hereby committed to the custody of the Attorney General or his authorized representative for imprisonment for the term and period of six months. The defendant is remanded to custody.

It is my further order that the defendant named be stricken from the roll of lawyers of this federal court. Mr. United States Attorney, I request that your formal order that I must sign be prepared so I may sign it today in conformity with the rule.

Mr. Donohue: It will be prepared at once, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we, in the interest of the defendants, who also have some stake in this matter, ask for a stay until the termination of the case? Now, your Honor, there is something that you have asserted, your Honor, there is something that you have asserted, the fairness that you have towards these defendants. Here is a man on trial, the most serious thing that could happen to him. I have been in the case three [848] weeks representing him. It is a difficult thing. It is impossible ~~that~~ anybody should now prepare and adequately continue the matter, and I now ask your Honor, since you have asserted what a fair trial you are going to give him and how fairly you feel, and as I am not going to evade the processes of the Court, escape from the jurisdiction or anything of that kind, that you now grant a stay in the matter until the termination of this case.

Mr. Paisley: It seems to me, your Honor, that this man is in the custody of the marshal and his name has been stricken from the roll of lawyers.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan may speak. What is your position?

Mr. Paisley: I say it seems to me this man is in the custody of the marshal. He stands here, a prisoner, his name is stricken from the rolls of this court.

Mr. Hallinan: The Court can always make the order operative at a later date. I ask now for a stay of the Court's order so I may continue to represent the defendant.

The Court: I should like to have the view of the United States Attorney's office on this. This is a matter that transcends anything that I have ever encountered in my career. The case is an important one to the Government. It is important to your defendant, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt. It has been suggested to this Court that he might very well obtain counsel. Mr. MacInnis has shown a tremendous ability in the [849] presentation of this matter on behalf of the two codefendants——

Mr. Hallinan: Mr. MacInnis is not familiar with the matter at all. He knows nothing of the background of it. I have worked on the case diligently for three weeks, worked hard on it, and prior to that time I had read some of the legal matters on the case for a week or so before. Mr. MacInnis was in the case less than two weeks from the time it started. He hasn't the background to fit. He doesn't know enough about it. It is impossible that he should represent Mr. Bridges.

The Court: Is Mr. Richard Gladstein available?

Mr. Hallinan: Mr. Richard Gladstein is not available. Mr. Richard Gladstein has a fate somewhat similar to the one you have just bestowed on me. He is not available, and, furthermore, Mr.

Gladstein is not prepared to try this case. He has been out here only a week or so. Certainly it will do nobody any harm, and if in the course of the proceedings you feel that I again transgress your rulings, why, then it is time enough to take such a drastic step in the matter. But for the honor of the Court, I think it is imperative——

The Court: What I have just done, Mr. Hallinan, is for the honor of the Court. I have no personal view.

Mr. Hallinan: I think for the honor of the Court it is imperative that the counsel selected by the defendant should be permitted to finish the case for him, and I say to your Honor that it would be a gross, a grave miscarriage of justice, a [850] terrible thing to remove from the defendant the spokesman whom he has selected to represent him, the attorney who knows what his case is about, on whom he relies, and whom he has selected to represent him. And I say to your Honor that I think removal from the case would, in addition, be prejudicial error of the highest kind. Now, I am not quarreling at this time with your decision; if you feel that way, so be it. But in the interest of Mr. Bridges, I think it would be atrocious that I not be permitted to continue and finish the trial. Don't you think that, having expressed your regard for his welfare and looking out for him, that he would be put in the most invidious position?

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, under my oath I am duty bound to protect his welfare as well as the welfare of the government. I have a duty.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I say.

The Court: I have a duty.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I say.

The Court: I have a duty. I recognize it. There is no question about it. I have taken an oath.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, your Honor. Will your Honor grant a stay of your order?

The Court: Mr. McMillan, may I hear from you? I have great respect for your considered judgment, and your temperament.

Mr. McMillan: If it please the Court, I believe the [851] orderly administration of justice and the proper respect to be shown to the Court far exceeds the Bridges case. I think it far more important that the integrity of our courts and the respect due our courts should be upheld. I see no reason at all for any stay of execution.

Mr. Hallinan. I am surprised to hear that, Mr. McMillan.

Mr. McMillan: Because I believe that this thing will continue every day and we would just reach a stage sooner or later where we shall conclude we have just been putting off the evil day. That is what will take place. I am going to suggest to your Honor that this trial be recessed, we will say, until December 5th, and that your Honor instruct Mr. Bridges that meanwhile he procure additional counsel to get prepared to proceed to trial on that date and also announce at this time that if he has not counsel then, that you notify Mr. MacInnis that you are going to assign him to act as counsel and instruct him to act as counsel.

Now, so far as Mr. MacInnis is concerned, he is a partner of Mr. Hallinan. There is no conflict of interest here. Your Honor has observed from the start that in the examination of jurors, when challenges were made, they were made jointly and so far as objections were made, the same there. There isn't anything in the nature of the case where there is a suggestion of any conflict of interest. Furthermore, I have reason to believe that assisting these gentlemen are members of the firm of Gladstein, Andersen, Resner and the other members of the firm [852] because the reporter's transcript is being delivered to Mr. Norman Leonard of that firm.

Mr. Hallinan: He is the only one who is available or who has given us any help at all. I haven't seen any of the other gentlemen whose names were mentioned in the case. And I say that I am surprised to think that Mr. McMillan would get up and make that motion. I thought Mr. McMillan and I were friends. We have known each other for years. We have expressed mutual regard for each other, and that Mr. McMillan should want to do my client the damage of having me put out of the case and have other counsel brought in and be prepared in a week or so, surprises me. I suggest, your Honor, that you do not follow such procedure.

The Court: I am going to look to Mr. McMillan. I, like you, Mr. Hallinan, knew him over the years in the practice of law. I have always found him a very considerate, fine gentleman. I have seen him in the trial of criminal cases here when he has leaned over backwards to give defendants a fair and square deal. I think that when he has reached that conclusion he does so probably looking at the whole scene very objectively.

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, it is quite true I am very fond of Mr. Hallinan personally. I like him very much.

Mr. Hallinan: Especially in jail.

Mr. McMillan: No. I say the respect that I owe the Court [853] and the administration of justice, standing as I do in an official capacity, not being in the private practice of the law, that surpasses the liking I have for Mr. Hallinan.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, you represent the United States as a special prosecutor. May I have your view on this matter?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, I do not concede that the removal of Mr. Hallinan from the representation of Mr. Bridges will operate to the the detriment of Mr. Bridges. I quite definitely feel to the contrary. I concur thoroughly and wholly in what Mr. McMillan has said. I think we have a situation to meet; we must meet it now. I concur in one suggestion that your Honor adjourn this trial until the 5th day of December and at that time instruct Mr. Bridges to be here with counsel to continue the progress of this trial.

The Court: Mr. Paisley, may I address myself to you? You have participated in some rather outstanding trials, including the United States v. May, the Congressman, the Garson trial; I do not know whether you had any participation in the more recent trial in New York before Judge Medina, but I feel that you are a pretty temperate fellow. I have seen you in court here. We are dealing with a brother lawyer. In effect, we are all lawyers. How do you feel toward the situation?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I have never seen any such performance as this in my life. Your Honor has indicated that you have never seen any such contemptuous conduct in a courtroom. [854] I dare say that no appellate court will ever receive such a record as this. Mr. Hallinan—I will not refer to him as counsel—I will not prostitute the word by using it in relation to this matter, He has desecrated this temple of justice.

Mr. Hallinan: What a shabby fraud, your Honor, to be called upon to make a statement in the court in the respectful attitude you adopted toward him and the way you questioned him and then have counsel to make a statement like that about a man who is helpless to do anything about it.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, you are remanded to custody, sir.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, this is the temple of justice. He is trying to make this a bawdy house.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, may I remain? Am I to be excluded from the courtroom during this discussion?

The Court: There will be no discussion during your absence. Mr. Paisley, thank you very much.

Mr. Hallinan: May I find out what the consequence of this is?

The Court: Yes. Mr. Bridges, may I ask you to step forward, please? You can come up here and sit down a minute.

(Defendant Bridges sat in the witness chair.)

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, can you hear my discussion with Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: I will if the bailiff will unhand me for a minute. [855]

The Court: They are very, very gentle people, Mr. Hallinan. You will become accustomed to them after a while. Mr. Bridges, you have been in court during this whole unfortunate matter.

Mr. Bridges: I have, your Honor.

The Court: I intend to recess this case until December the 5th, which is a full two weeks hence. Is that correct, Mr. Mitchell?

The Clerk: December 5th, if your Honor please, is a Monday. A week from next Monday.

The Court: Let us put it down for later in the week.

The Clerk: Two weeks would be the 6th.

The Court: The 6th. I am going to continue this matter by stating to the jury that the matter stands over regularly until December 6th. I request you, Mr. Bridges, to obtain counsel of your own choosing. I say to you that many of the men from Mr. Gladstein's office have been before me on the motion to dismiss—Mr. Norman Leonard, an extremely able man; Mr.——

Mr. Donohue: Herbert Reaser, your Honor.

The Court: Herbert Resner has tried I do not know how many cases before me. I have never had one word with Herbert Resner of an unfortunate consequence. I tried some matters in Honolulu. Miss Harriet Busilog appeared before me for a period of—I do not know—several weeks. I had no differences in that case. [856]

With Judge Biggs and others, we handed down a decision, I think, in that matter. Now, what I am coming to is that you have a selection of counsel. It is not as if you were stranded without someone to aid and assist you. I feel that in good conscience, you can obtain someone in the course of two weeks to aid and assist you, to collaborate with Mr. MacInnis. And that shall be my order. Now, do you have anything to say, sir?

The Defendant Bridges: I might have, your Honor, but what good would it do? What use would it be? I have selected counsel that I want, but he is not available any more. What I would like to have would be to have the trial wait until he is available, and that is quite a long time, it seems here. I don't think that by December 5, or for some time after December ~~5, I will be able to~~ get a counsel that I have as much confidence in as I have in Mr. Hallinan. I spent a lot of time with him lately, going over this case, and over a period of years—not with Mr. MacInnis, whom of course we have a lot of confidence in, too. I presume, if the Court orders it, we have to do the best we can. But if things go wrong, I will never, never think that it was a square deal. If you want me to speak frankly, that is what I am doing.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say something, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Now again, not that I think it would do any [857] good, not that I think that anything is going to be changed by what I say now, but at the conclusion of this proceeding, which it is not our province to argue now, your Honor turned to the bench where these gentlemen (indicating), who have come from Washington or some other jurisdiction to enlighten us with their prowess as prosecutors, and asked them for guidance in your decision respecting Mr. Hallinan. You thus reposed faith in the judgment of two men, one of whom but yesterday had risen before you and asked you to hold another lawyer in contempt of this court, and in another man who but five minutes before had stood up and had referred to his adversary in this case as a "mad dog." Now, I don't know to what extent I am going to participate in this case from now on. But in my participation, any participation that I have in it, I will be mindful of the things that you said today and I will be mindful of the things that these men have said in court. No one would be able to forget those things, because I don't come into this court and start any trial as though I were living in a vacuum. I bring into every trial the experience that I have had in other cases. And I have tried a good many cases—I have tried at least as many as you. And I have been in cases where I have been opposed by friends, I have been in cases where I have been opposed by enemies. I have been in cases where one side or the other had quarrels with the judge over the admission or the [858] exclusion of evidence. And I have never seen anything like this morning. Maybe this is not the forum for free exchange of ideas, but I think it is. When you were talking this morning, based upon something that you had prepared, based on what I think you said was arrived at out of the complacent environment of your chambers——

The Court: Rather than the torrid atmosphere of the courtroom. I meant by that the cloistered atmosphere.

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever you meant. When you were saying those things, I turned to Harry Bridges, who was sitting next to me, and said, "This isn't really happening; you are just dreaming. Forget about it." I have never seen anything like it. And with respect to the United States District Court and to yourself as the judge, I want to say this: This is what I think has happened. In many criminal cases where notoriety attaches, where there is a great public interest, where there is prejudice one way or the other, or a lot of people have an interest either in a conviction or in an acquittal, the judge comes to the bench fraught with all of the cares of the case. Of course, the judge comes to the bench always with the thought that he is going to do a good job and do justice for both sides. But here is what I think happened in this case: In the ordinary criminal case, particularly where there is something inflammatory involved in it, you find the defendants usually striving to keep something [859] out of evidence, fighting to keep the Government's case from coming in. In this case you had something much more remarkable; you had the converse of that. You have the United States Government, zealously striving to keep out of this case the opinion of the highest authority in our land. More remarkable still, these men represent the United States Government. The opinion that they tried to keep out, that they still try to keep out, was an opinion in a matter between the United States on one hand and Harry Bridges on the other. These men zealously tried to keep those matters out and in some way your Honor, believing that they were correct, became filled with a notion that any attempt to get that kind of evidence before the jury constituted misconduct.

The Court: Counsel——

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor had that notion.

The Court: You might have your own view in that regard. I stand on the record as read into our record this morning. That is your view and you are entitled to it.

Mr. MacInnis: Might I finish this? I am not going to dwell too long upon what has been done.

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Hallinan made an opening statement, and I am not going to argue with you now as to whether he should or shouldn't have said certain things. He said, both to the Court and to the jury, in unfolding the theory of his defense, that [860] he would show the Court and the jury that there was a great conspiracy of at least 125 persons to destroy Harry Bridges. We had a hearing outside the ears of the jury, and your Honor discussed the matters back and forth. As your Honor said, to say the least—Mr. Hallinan had said before to you, "You may think it fantastic,"—and you seized upon that word. You said, to say the least, "That is fantastic."

Now, as I said a moment ago, I don't come to the start of any case living in a vacuum, and I don't expect that the Judge does either. Particularly yourself. I think that you, who passed judgment upon all the preliminary motions of this case, know much better than I the contents of the decision of Bridges v. Wixon, the opinion of Mr. Justice Douglas of our Supreme Court, the concurring opinion of the late Mr. Justice Murphy. But unless a man puts his mind in a vacuum, he raises all of the background of experience on a particular matter, I do not see how a mind could pivot its attention only upon the contents of this indictment and say this to himself, "Now, I can see that the Supreme Court found exactly what Hallinan said he was going to prove, a monster conspiracy engaged in by agents of the Government, along with men engaged in private industry." In the words of Mr. Justice Murphy, "Fifteen years of relentless effort to deport one man." City police departments, wire-tapping, all of the other ingredients of the [861] case.

And yet here we were told that the same conspiracy, in order to be continued within these halls—because this is a criminal case and not merely the administrative process before the immigration officials—we were told that that was fantastic.

Now, I think that by some process your Honor came to the conclusion that any attempts to bring that matter into this case, either by the superficial route which was adopted yesterday, out of the lips of Mr. Garner—and I certainly believe that it was the Government that introduced that matter into the case; Exhibit No. 2, admitted in evidence by your Honor, contains a recital by Harry Bridges of the previous matters; Exhibit No. 3 is the transcript by which his Honor Judge Foley said that all of the proceedings were before him at that time—although Mr. Garner denied that under oath. Well, that is my point of view. I think that your Honor just made up his mind that that was improper and hence thought that anything done to further that end was an intrusion upon the dignity of the Court. I just—I can't see that such a thing took place. We have been accused of adopting inflammatory tactics. I don't know whether you accused me along with Mr. Hallinan. You may well have. How about the inflammatory tactics of charging Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt with being members of the Communist Party, when they are not accused of that in the indictment at all? Yet we listened [862] silently when Mr. McMillan made that offer. Your Honor made a comment upon the merits of the case today, as well as yesterday. In commenting that it was ridiculous to think that Mr. Garner would tell a lie about the matter of whether or not he asked certain questions of Robertson and Schmidt. And I say, I am just amazed at what has taken place. I don't—and maybe I don't have the right perspective. Maybe I have to think it over for a couple of days. I have seen the same kind of remark, the same kind of colloquy, between court and counsel. You may draw the invidious conclusion that I haven't been before the right kind of court. I don't know. But I have been with some of our well-known prosecutors, some of our well-known judges. I have seen prosecutors in the same position as Mr. Hallinan now finds himself, so far as the asking of questions may be concerned.

Mr. McMillan arose to his feet and was sustained by you during Mr. Hallinan's opening statement, because he commented upon the arrests of Harry Lundeberg, and he pointed out to your Honor that that was obviously improper, because the only kind of arrest that could come into evidence would be a conviction of a felony under our rules. Your Honor nodded that that was so. Yet in the first exhibit introduced by the Government in this case, there is a whole history of the minor arrests of Harry Bridges. And Harry Bridges isn't merely a witness in this case; he is the defendant, who is presumed to [863] be innocent and who is guarded by the doctrine of doubt.

The Court: That was part of the application, was it?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Well, that is a pro forma matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. And every other matter to which reference has been made would have come into evidence through legitimate channels, even though it would appear at first glance that those things might not find their way into the record.

Now, as I say, to say that I am astonished is a weak word. I listened—And I would like to ask you to read over the record again and judge your own conduct in this case. Now, here is what you did. Now, I am not an impartial observer, of course; I am very much biased in favor of the defendants, whom we represent. I am biased in favor of my partner. You came out this morning and prepared to read part of the record in certification of a ruling which you had made up your mind to endorse. Whenever you came to a part where there was a colloquy on behalf of Mr. Paisley, whose brilliance you have extolled here, or Mr. Donohue, you spoke of them as being mild, temperate men.

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, I am obliged to object. I can see no place in him standing here and reproving the Court.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not reproving the [864] Court.

Mr. McMillan: Now, the situation is this: The Court has made its order, counsel has been remanded to the custody of the marshal. The statement that counsel is making now, if they are motions to modify the judgment, why, I suppose he could properly review all these matters. But to stand here now and undertake to dissect what the Court said, and to reprove the Court, it is out of place.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't have that intention, and I will come to a conclusion in a moment.

When your Honor referred to himself—and I assume your Honor did devote some time to this matter——

The Court: Until three o'clock this morning, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: You spoke of your own efforts as being painstaking, assiduous, careful. But when you spoke of Mr. Hallinan, you said, "Unbridled, Mr. Hallinan was at it again." You said that he "lugged" certain evidence into the case. He "lugged" the Supreme Court opinion.

The Court: I used that expression? I may have used it.

Mr. MacInnis: I read it. You did.

The Court: "Lugged" has a connotation, too—lug, hauling.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. You said that he stabbed the witness in the back. Well, now, it would be idle to repeat those comments. But now we have come to our decision, which I think we all conceive and concede is without parallel. I have never [865] read of such a decision; possibly your Honor has. To say the least, it is invoking the extreme of the Court's powers against a man who has been hired to represent a defendant. Now, it shouldn't matter whether the defendant be well-known or little-known—

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please; I will have to object. The Court has made its decision and your Honor has read the Supreme Court decisions, and all our decisions. Now, if your Honor has made an erroneous judgment——

The Court: Mr. MacInnis is an officer of this court, I look upon him as such. I will hear him out, on the condition that he not be too long.

Mr. MacInnis: We have a jury empaneled in this case. The present disposition of the Court, guided by these men in whom the Court apparently reposes faith, is to put this case over on the calendar and to order the defendant in effect to obtain new counsel. The new counsel, to say the least, will not be counsel of his first choice. That is obvious. What will the jury think? Suppose they all zealously try to follow your Honor's order not to read the papers. That is possible, but it isn't possible that word of these proceedings will not leak to the ears of the jury. It would be impossible to describe the prejudice that would result to the chief defendant, Mr. Harry Bridges, and to the other two men, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Schmidt, who are indicted with him in [866] this case, that a new man, a new personality, must now come into the case and attempt to carry on—and who must perforce be expected to make a prodigious effort in memory within a matter of days or weeks. I think that regardless of whether you are right or wrong upon the matter of contempt, that you would do the right thing, you would feel better with yourself, if——

The Court: Counsel, you have done just what perhaps I would do or any lawyer would in like circumstances—you talked for your colleague, your office associate. It is fair, it is a decent thing, it is a lawyerlike thing to do. I have in juxtaposition the rights of this man to my right, Mr. Bridges, in obtaining counsel. I realize the enormity of this case. No one realizes any better than I do, Mr. MacInnis. I worked with those exhibits on the motions to dismiss. I have had all them before me, all these matters. I do not know that if we continue on in the present vein that Mr. Hallinan might again launch into these matters under which he has been brought under my condemnation, my order—whether, as you say, it be right or wrong, still brought under. The trial of the case cannot be made a shambles, as Mr.—~~counsel~~ for the Government, Mr. McMillan, pointed out. The case of the United States v. Harry Bridges is one matter, the question of maintenance of order in the court, and dignity and its preservation, another matter. They have [867] to be weighed in juxtaposition. I suppose I am rather peculiar sort of a fellow. I can't harbor malice. I can't harbor the subject matter that Mr. Hallinan poured into this court today. All his statements, all those things, are untrue. He knew it. If Mr. Gladstein were available, I assume there would be no problem. He has represented this man in other matters, two in number.

I should like to have about ten or fifteen minutes to consider this matter. In the meantime let us have the jury remain where they are. We will resume at a quarter to four, and I should like to consider this alone, in the light of everything that has been said.

Will you hold the jury, Mr. Mitchell, as they are.

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, there is one matter I lost sight of. There is a very distinguished lawyer associated in this case. For about fifteen years he was Deputy Attorney General. Mr. William Cleary. He just left a few moments ago.

Mr. Hallinan: He is an ill man and cannot try a case.

Mr. McMillan: What?

Mr. Hallinan: He is an ill man and cannot try a case.

Mr. McMillan: Well, he is a very able man.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think that the advice of Mr. McMillan can aid Mr. Bridges in choosing counsel.

The Court: I haven't heard of Mr. Cleary being very [868] active in recent years. He represented the Attorney General. I have argued criminal matters against him in the District Court of Appeals. He represented the Attorney General for many years.

We will take until a quarter to four.

(Recess.) [868-A]

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, may I ask you to rise so I can address these remarks to you? We have given consideration to the matter—I say "we" colloquially—the Court has given consideration to the request of your colleague ~~Mr.~~ MacInnis, your office associate, as well as your client, Mr. Harry Bridges. You remain in this case for the furtherance of the trial and in the representation of Mr. Bridges as his counsel. Mr. Bridges made a forthright request. Out of regard for the fact that in a criminal case, the defendant is entitled to a lawyer of his own choosing, it might be a circumstance that would interfere with the orderly administration of justice to require him to obtain counsel in the course of two weeks. The Court therefore is inclined to and will grant a stay of execution in the matter of your contempt and the judgment and sentence meted out to you until you have completed all of the trial responsibilities in this case, that is to say, to and excluding ~~the~~ ultimate verdict of the jury, be it guilt or innocence of the deefndant, but I would say until the trial stages have been completed, and accordingly that stay is granted. In granting the stay to you and to your client, Mr. Bridges, I need not repeat to you that the Court will demand obedience to the orders of the Court and to my rulings. I have never in my career taken a position that a lawyer could not preserve his record. I believe in a lawyer preserving his record. You may make your offers of proof out of the presence of the jury.. When I [869] spoke of your unbridled conduct, I meant just what I said, attempting to introduce matter foreign to the issue. I shall not retrace my steps. You know precisely what I have in mind. I have been talking since ten o'clock this morning. I am sure I am weary; I am sure that counsel is weary. This case is important to the United States Government. I have a responsibility as an officer of this court to the United States Government. I have a responsibility in continuing the trial of this case. Accordingly, I ask counsel on both sides, that is, Mr. MacInnis, Mr. Hallinan, the government counsel, to compose, in the spirit of a fair trial, all differences that have heretofore existed. Let us put aside this rancor, whatever ill will may have been generated in the last 24 hours. Let us try this case like gentlemen. Let us try it like lawyers. Let us try it like Americans. That is all.

Mr. Hallinan: I consider your action, so far as the defendant is concerned, magnanimous. I do not criticize you, Judge, though I feel I may do so justly. Whatever I expressed was sincere and well felt, and I am grateful for the concession that you make, not for my own account, but because I think it interferes with my client's safety. I am glad to see your Honor has done that.

As I told you before from the start, I conceded that you were entirely fair in the matter, so far as you saw the thing, but the only question was, something like Mr. MacInnis said, [870] that you had set out with the idea that we were trying to intrude matters into the record that should not have been put in, and I think you were a little inflexible in it, that you refused to yield.

The Court: Counsel, I carry no feeling in a case. I can't carry a feeling. If I did that, I would get off this bench. I would retire from this bench.

Mr. Hallinan: I am glad to hear that.

The Court: I cannot try a man when his freedom is involved having a feeling of rancor or ill will toward him. I can't do that.

(The Clerk spoke to the Court.)

The Court: Automatically, by granting the stay of execution of judgment and sentence, Mr. Hallinan is restored to all rights of this court as practitioner, counselor and solicitor. How else could he practice before the Court if I did not set aside that part of the order?

Now we have the jury to consider. They have been out practically all day. I realize there is always a very slender thread by which the matter of possible prejudice might attach. I have been trying to carefully safeguard the rights of the defendants in that respect by admonition, and even if I say, Mr. MacInnis, with respect to the admonition—with some pardonable pride I repeat myself—we do try to admonish them consistently and persistently. Now, I will admonish them not to read [871] the papers, not to listen to the radio, and I assume they will obey my command. With respect to those matters bearing upon any adjudication of contempt of Mr. Bridges' lawyer, counsel on both sides necessarily shall refrain from any comment thereon, either expressly or impliedly, during the course of this trial, so that no prejudice will result.

Mr. MacInnis, I say to you on behalf of your colleague, Mr. Hallinan, you have shown a fine lawyer-like attitude, an admirable quality. Long before we were on this bench and long before you appeared today, they had lawyers and they had judges.

Mr. MacInnis: What I wanted to suggest at this time, for the benefit of the jury only, would be this: and I think it would be fair to both sides in the case: If your Honor instructs the jury that quarrels between counsel upon what the law is or should be or argues with the Court upon what evidence is admissible or ought to be excluded, are not matters for them to speculate upon and they are not to speculate upon whether one lawyer or another was right or whether the Court was right or the Court was wrong. I think if you would give that kind of instruction you can do much to eliminate what you call the slender thread by which prejudice may hang.

The Court: There is a slender thread sometimes.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: All right, Mr. Mitchell, call the jurors.

> (Thereupon the jurors, at 4:00 p.m., returned to the [872] courtroom.)

The Court: It is stipulated the jurors are present?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the Court again must offer you a note of apology. We have kept you all day, perhaps unwittingly on our part, because the time has gone by quite rapidly. I say to you the day has been engaged in the refinement of many legal matters, differences existing between counsel, matters of refinement between the Court and counsel, and under the circumstances I desire to admonish you that in the course of a trial many matters occur between Court and counsel. There are colloquies, discussions, matters of viewpoint, sometimes very definite, fixed viewpoints, and that whatever they may be, and however they may exist, to what degree that may be pronounced or affirmed by the Court or by counsel is in no manner or degree to interfere with your ultimate judgment on the facts of the case. As I have indicated to you at the start when you were impaneled, I reindicate to you again, you are the sole and exclusive arbiters of the facts. That is your sole and sacred responsibility in the trial of a case. No matter what the Court may say to you, by direction or indirection, no matter how you may think and feel about a case is no criterion of your conduct. I say to you at the threshold, and I will repeat to you when I finally charge you, I have no feeling one way or the other about the defense or the guilt or innocence of the [873] defendants on trial. That is exclusively your province. During the course of the trial I need not again repeat my admonition in that respect. I will hereafter charge you very briefly and very explicitly. Counsel may on both sides argue that matter to you. But in the light of these lengthy arguments today, may I particularly at this time charge you to remove any such effects from your mind if they do exist. The day has been spent. Tomorrow morning brings a new day. We will resume the taking of testimony of the gentleman who only recently left the stand for further direct examination by Mr. Donohue.

In the interim, I admonish you not to discuss this case with any person or persons, not to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, not to form nor express an opinion on it until it is finally submitted to you for decision. You may now retire until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Thereupon the jury retired from the courtroom.)

The Court: This Court will stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Wednesday, November 23, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [874]

November 23, 1949, 10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: The case of United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt, and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: If it please your Honor, with respect to the witness Garner, who is here under your Honor's direction to remain until excused, I wonder if he might be permitted to return to his duties in Los Angeles? We can have him back here in a matter of hours if counsel wishes.

The Court: Is there any objection, counsel?

Mr. Hallinan: I think not.

The Court: So ordered, subject to call upon notice.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed; previously sworn.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, you testified on Monday that during the period of your membership in the Communist Party you have served as a unit director, as agitation and propaganda director, and as a member of the District Committee. I ask you now whether or not during the period of your [875] membership you served in any other capacity.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and also res inter alias acta. I might suggest this, your Honor, in order to save time, constant interruptions, and in order to preserve the record, as we must do: If the Court will accept the agreement that any question asked of the witness as to activities outside of the presence or outside of the knowledge of the defendants is res inter alias acta, that is, matters done between other persons, hearsay and not binding on the defendants—is that agreeable, counsel, that that should be done?

Mr. Donohue: Of course.

Mr. Hallinan: And then I won't have to make that same objection on each occasion, although other objections may be necessary.

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. Donohue: You may answer the question, Mr. Schomaker.

A. Why, yes, I served as a section organizer.

Q. Would you distinguish for his Honor and the members of the jury between a unit and a section in the Communist Party?

A. Well, a unit is the basic organization, that is, all members are assigned to a unit, whereas the section—and the unit organizers are responsible to the section organizers for carrying out their work, and of course the section organizer is responsible in turn for all the unit organizers in [876] his section and responsible to the District Commitee for his section.

Q. Would you be able to tell us how many units were under your jurisdiction as section organizer?

A. Well, on the waterfront there was two.

Q. Do I understand from your answer that your section was the waterfront section of the Communist Party? A. It was.

Q. Can you tell us how many members constituted the District Committee of the Communist Party? A. I couldn't tell you, no.

Q. Could you tell us whether it was a large number or a small number?

A. Quite a large number. I would say it was over twelve.

Q. During the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you pay dues?

A. That is one of the stipulations of the Communist Party. You must pay weekly dues, when I was a member.

Q. Will you tell us the manner in which dues were paid by you?

A. Well, not only by me—that is, the way it was paid by me, you have to attend to the stipulation to be a member of the Communist Party. You must be an active member and you must attend weekly meetings, and at those weekly meetings you must pay your weekly dues. [877]

Q. And how are the dues paid? What is the physical manner in which the dues are paid?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, you plunk down your dough and you get a stamp in return.

Q. And will you tell us what this stamp is and what you do with the stamp?

A. Well, the dues is paid on a graduated basis. If you are unemployed, for instance, you paid two cents per week. And of course it graduated up. If you made $15 or $20—and the maximum dues to be paid would be a dollar. However, if you made—I think when I was a member the maximum wage to be earned was, I think, $40. And over that, why, then, you paid for each additional $5.00, I think. You paid a certain amount. But generally it was $1.00 for those who were working.

Q. And to whom did you pay your dues?

A. To the unit dues secretary.

Q. And you received in return what kind of a stamp?

A. In turn, received a little—well, an ordinary stamp that you would—well, the way it worked, generally worked, when you went to the unit, the dues secretary sat alone, and you went in and put down your book. The dues secretary would examine it and say, "You owe for a week's dues." You would give him the money and he would, or she—whoever it would be—would stamp the book, initial the stamp and give it back to you. Now, of course, some people carried their own books and some people left their books [878] with the secretary.

Q. Did you carry your own book?

A. Well, I carried my own, yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, during the period of your membership in the Communist Party, was your membership book issued to you in the name of John Henry Schomaker? A. No, it wasn't.

Q. In what name was the book issued?

A. My book was issued in the name of John Delaney.

Q. And is that the name that you gave to the Communist Party for the purpose of having your book issued in that name?

A. Oh, sure, certainly.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, can you tell us where it was that you first met the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. Where I first met Bridges?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, it was at his home. He lived on Harrison Street.

Q. Here in San Francisco?

A. In San Francisco, yes.

Q. And what is your best recollection of the year in which you first met the defendant Bridges?

A. It was 1933.

Q. And over how long a period of time did you know Mr. Bridges?

A. Well, I have known him since.

Q. How often have you seen Mr. Bridges during the period of [879] time from when you first met him until today, in your best recollection?

A. I didn't get that.

Q. What is your best recollection of how often you saw Mr. Bridges over the period of years from when you first met him until today?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, that varied. The early days I saw him every day. And later, of course, when he had different positions, why, I didn't see him quite so often. And since 1945 I have seen him very—not very frequently.

Q. Was there ever a time at which you lived close to where Mr. Bridges also lived?

A. We were neighbors on Pine Street, San Francisco.

Q. And when you say neighbors, were you living next door to each other?

A. No, there was an apartment between, I think—that is, an apartment or a flat in between the——

Q. When, as you now recall it, was it that you and Mr. Bridges were neighbors living on Pine Street? A. Well, it must have been in 1935.

Q. And over how long a period?

A. Well, it was from—the summer in 1935 until 1937.

Q. About how long a period of time did that situation continue?

A. Well, I would say it would be more or less two years.

Q. Now, going back to 1933 when you first saw Mr. Bridges at his [880] home, did you go to Mr. Bridges' home alone or were you accompanied by any other person?

A. I went out there with another guy.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Do you recall who that person was?

A. Yes, he was a fellow longshoreman, Herman Mann.

Q. I asked you whether or not at the time you went to Mr. Bridges' home with Herman Mann, that Herman Mann was also a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as calling for opinion and conclusions from the witness, if the Court please, and an ultimate fact.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes, Herman—may I answer the question?

Q. Yes, his Honor said so.

A. Well, Herman Mann at that time, he was the unit organizer of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask the answer be stricken out, if the Court please, as stating an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And at that time did you occupy any position in the Communist Party?

A. No, other than being a member.

Q. And will you state to his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, as you now recall it, the conversation that was [881] had at Mr. Bridges' home when you and Herman Mann were there present, whether it was something that you said or Mr. Mann said or Mr. Bridges said?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Now, if the Court please, we have an important objection that goes to the disposition or the possible disposition of the entire case. Now preliminary to that, I want to make a motion to strike out the statement of this witness, as stating a conclusion and not facts from which a conclusion could be drawn, because, your Honor, while a man may be able to identify another person, say, as a negro or a white man, or a person of a certain height or even, if he were experienced in it, a person of a certain nationality, to just come out flatly and say the man was a Communist is certainly invading the province of the jury 100 per cent. Why, then any person can be so designated; all that you have to have is a witness take the stand, characterize some man as a Communist, and then state what that person said, what his relations to the defense was. Why, it seems to me, your Honor, that that is reaching into conclusions about as far as can be gone. What is there to distinguish a Communist from any other person? For all that anyone knows, any person might or might not be a member of any political party or any religious creed or anything of that kind. And I submit that the answer given by the witness should be stricken out; that he hasn't any right to point out some particular person and say he was a member of the Communist [882] Party. There is no foundation laid.

The Court: Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Of course, if your Honor pleases——

The Court: Would you establish for the record the length of time this gentleman knew Mr. Mann?

Mr. Donohue: Surely.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: The nature of the relationship?

Mr. Donohue: Of course, sir.

The Court: The depth, the extent and all the ramifications. Then ask the question.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir, glad to.

The Court: Opportunities for knowledge.

Mr. Hallinan: Meanwhile, is the answer stricken out in advance of that?

The Court: Yes, the motion is granted to strike at this time.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, when did you first meet Herman Mann?

A. You mean the time?

Q. Yes, sir, your best recollection.

A. Well, it was some time in, I suppose, the summer of 1933.

Q. And under what circumstances did you first meet him?

A. Well, I met Herman at the Communist Party headquarters at 37 Grove Street.

Q. And where was the Communist Party headquarters situated? [883] A. 37 Grove Street.

Mr. Hallinan: We make the same objection as to all this line, as to res inter alios actae, if the Court please, and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, without the necessity of interposing the objection to each question.

The Court: That objection stands as a running objection to the questions, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you answer the question?

A. You asked where was the Communist Party headquarters?

Q. Yes. A. 37 Grove Street. [884]

Q. How frequently would you see Mr. Mann at the Communist Party headquarters at 37 Grove Street?

A. Well, it varied, I suppose. I would say quite frequently.

Q. And you stated, I believe, that Herman Mann was the unit organizer for the Communist Party?

A. He was.

Q. Did you ever pay any dues to Herman Mann as unit organizer?

A. Well, no, I never did pay dues to Herman Mann, no.

Q. He was the unit organizer of your unit, was he not?

A. No, you didn't pay dues to the unit organizer; you paid to the unit dues secretary.

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings of the Communist Party at the Communist Party headquarters at which Mr. Herman Mann was also present? A. I have, yes.

Q. And you knew him as a member of the Communist Party? A. Definitely so.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Herman Mann matters of policy within the Communist Party or Communist Party policy?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. In addition to that, this is calling for hearsay, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I have discussed matters of policy with Herman Mann.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And this was prior to the time that you went with Herman Mann to see Mr. Bridges? [885] A. It was.

Mr. Donohue: I submit, if your Honor please, the witness is qualified.

The Court: You may ask the question.

Mr. Hallinan: I object, your Honor, on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid. It is calling for an opinion and conclusion.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Under the ruling of his Honor will you tell his Honor and the members of the jury your recollection of the conversation had at the time when you and Herman Mann were present with Mr. Bridges at Mr. Bridges' home?

The Court: Have you specified the date?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you state the date earlier?

A. It was in—it was in the latter part of October, 1933.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, I want to make the objection which I said goes to a disposition of the case, or a disposition of a large part of any possible proof that this witness might introduce hereafter. While your Honor has ruled on certain matters as to their legal significance, in the matter of the decision itself, there is another matter that is involved in the same thing. While a decision may not constitute once in jeopardy or a final judgment, still matters that have been decided in it are res adjudicata. Now, res adjudicata is not a question addressed to the Court alone. Res [886] adjudicata, as you will bear me out, is a mixed question of law and fact addressed to the jury, and while it has been held error, and reversible error, for the Court not to permit the offer of res adjudicata to be made in the presence of the jury, still in deference to other discussions that have taken place, I suggest that we be permitted now to make the objection and make a tender of proof on the judgment that I have discussed here, that is, the Supreme Court decision of 1945, to limit any testimony relating to any possible membership in the Communist Party of Mr. Bridges from June, 1945, to the time that the naturalization proceedings took place, which would be in August. I would like to make that in a formal manner, and I would like to be heard to argue on it. Mr. Cleary has prepared an argument on it. It will take some little time to present, and if your Honor would permit us to do that—if you wish, we will make the offer in the presence of the jury. If you would prefer, let the jury stand by or be excused until two o'clock.

The Court: Are there any other matters that we may take up so we may pursue the matter of taking testimony?

Mr. Donohue: I am afraid this is an issue which should be met at this time, if your Honor please.

It is very difficult to examine the witness further unless we do it chronologically.

The Court: Do you anticipate you will have completed it [887] by noon?

Mr. Hallinan: I think so, but probably not much before.

The Court: With that suggestion, then, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, you are excused until two o'clock this afternoon. Again I admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express any opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you. This matter will be recessed, so far as the jury is concerned, until two o'clock, so the Court may hear these legal arguments. As I announced to you, from time to time matters of this kind come up, particularly in a trial of this nature. Mr. Schomaker, you may step down.

Two o'clock this afternoon, ladies and gentlemen.

(Thereupon the jury was excused and retired from the courtroom.)

The Court: You gentlemen are prepared to argue this matter?

Mr. Donohue: Of course, we do not know what the matter is, but I think we will be prepared to argue it.

The Court: Is Mr. Cleary taking up this phase of the case?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, if your Honor please.

The Court: Mr. Cleary?

Mr. Cleary: May it please the Court, prior to the commencement of this trial certain pleas in bar were made and [888] ruled upon by your Honor. One of the pleas in bar was that the matter was res adjudicata. The doctrine of res adjudicata has two uses. It may be urged as a plea in bar——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. It is difficult to hear. May we ask that the microphone be used?

The Court: I was going to make the suggestion, Mr. Cleary, that you use the amplifier.

Mr. Cleary: The doctrine of res adjudicata has two uses. It may be urged as a plea at bar and it also may be urged as a rule of evidence. At this time we are urging it as a rule of evidence. In the motion to dismiss the indictment made in this case the question of res adjudicata was raised. In response thereto counsel for the Government stated in their written argument that it was "another attempt to invoke a rule of the civil law in a criminal proceeding."

Immediately following that statement Government counsel said, "It is the result of assuming a false premise, to wit, that the issues heretofore repudiated are the same as those involved in the present criminal proceeding, the points 2 and 3 above, wherein the allegations of double jeopardy and former acquittal were discussed; we have exposed the assumptions indulged herein. In the light of the discussion of those two points, no further discussion is deemed necessary here."

And I may say in discussing the discussions under points 2 and 3 there was barely any mention of the doctrine of res adjudicata. The argument was confined to double jeopardy and [889] former acquittal. In your Honor's memorandum opinion, ruling upon the pleas in bar, your Honor, beginning on page 8, in the heading wrote, "Double Jeopardy, Former Acquittal, and Res Adjudicata." That is the only mention of res adjudicata in your Honor's discussion of the matter. The fact is in the first sentence your Honor said, "The defendant Bridges invokes the doctrine of double jeopardy, former acquittal, et cetera." The "et cetera" is the only other reference to res adjudicata.

Government counsel's statement that the raising of the question of res adjudicata in this case is an attempt to invoke a rule of civil law in a criminal proceeding implies that the doctrine of res adjudicata is without application in criminal proceedings. Nothing could be further from the truth. As a matter of historical fact, the doctrine of res adjudicata first came into the common law of England in a criminal case and from there spread to the other branches of the common law of England.

Moreover, that doctrine was well and long established when the Constitution of the United States was drafted and ratified.' As a result, it became or was a part of the due process of law which came into the fundamental law of our land with the ratification of the Fifth Amendment. But we need not rest this point on such a general premise. We have direct and abundant authority to the effect that the doctrine [890] of res adjudicata has application in criminal proceedings.

In the case of Frank v. Mangum, 237 U. S. 309, the court on pages 33 and 334 said:

> "It is a fundamental principle of jurisprudence arising from the very nature of courts of justice and the objects for which they are established, that a question of fact or of law distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction cannot afterwards be disputed between the same parties."

Citing Southern Pacific Railroad v. United States. The court continued:

> "The principle is as applicable to the decisions of criminal courts as to those of civil jurisdiction. As to its application, in habeas corpus cases, with respect to decisions by such courts of the facts pertaining to the jurisdiction over the prisoner, see Ex Parte Terry and Ex Parte Columbia Gorge."

I am leaving out the citation of volume and page.

In the case of United States v. Oppenheimer, 242 U. S. 85, the defendant was indicted. He pleaded the one-year statute of limitations, which he contended was applicable to the offense. The trial court, deciding it was applicable, quashed the indictment. Subsequently on the appeal of another case an appellate court of the United States decided that the three-year statute was applicable to such an [891] offense.

On the strength of that appellate court decision, Oppenheimer was reindicted. He made a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the court's decision quashing the previous indictment was res adjudicata, barring further prosecution for the same offense. The trial court ruled with him on that contention, and the United States Supreme Court affirmed the trial court. The decision of the Supreme Court in that case is of interest not only because it shows that the doctrine of res adjudicata is applicable in criminal proceedings but also it reveals that the Attorney General of the United States and the Solicitor General of the United States in that case made the same mistake which government counsel have made in this one, namely, in assuming that the plea of double jeopardy displaces in criminal cases the doctrine of res judicata.

Commencing on page 87, the Supreme Court of the United States in that case said:

> "Upon the merits the proposition of the government is that the doctrine of res judicata does not exist for criminal cases except in the modified form of the Fifth Amendment that a person shall not be subject to the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; and the conclusion is drawn that a decision upon a plea in bar can not prevent a second trial when the defendant never has been in jeopardy in the sense of being before a jury upon the facts of the offense charged. It seems that the mere statement of [892] the position should be its own answer. It can not be that the safeguards of the person, so often and so rightly mentioned with solemn reverence, are less than those that protect from a liability in debt. It can not be that a judgment of acquittal on the ground of the statute of limitations is less a protection against a second trial than a judgment upon the ground of innocence, or that such a judgment is any more effective when entered after a verdict than if entered by the government's consent before a jury is impaneled; or that it is conclusive if entered upon the general issue, (citing a case), but if upon a special plea of the statute, permits the defendant to be prosecuted again. We do not suppose that it would be doubted that a judgment upon a demurrer to the merits would be a bar to a second indictment in the same words. (Citing cases.)

"Of course, the quashing of a bad indictment is no bar to a prosecution upon a good one, but a judgment for the defendant upon the ground that the prosecution is barred goes to his liability as matter of substantive law and one judgment that he is free as matter of substantive law is as good as another. A plea of the statute of limitations is a plea to the merits, (citing a case), (United States v. Barber,) and, however the issue was raised in the former case, after judgment upon it, it could not be reopened in a later prosecution. We may adopt in its application to [893] this case the statement of a judge of great experience in the criminal law:——" and here the court quotes:

"'Where a criminal charge has been adjudicated upon by a court having jurisdiction to hear and determine it, that adjudication, whether > it takes the form of an aquittal or conviction, is final as to the matters so adjudicated upon, and may be pleaded in bar to any subsequent prosecution for the same offense. . . . In this respect the criminal law is in unison with that which prevails in civil proceedings.' "

That is the end of the inner quotation, and the court cites Hawkins, Judge, in The Queen v. Miles, 24 Queens Bench Dec. 423, 431. And the court continues:

> "The finality of a previous adjudication as to the matters determined by it is the ground of decision in Commonwealth v. Evans, 101 Mass. 25, the criminal and the civil law agreeing, as Mr. Justice Hawkins says. Commonwealth v. Ellis, 160 Massachusetts 165. Britain v. Kinnard, 1 Brod. and B. 432. Seemingly the same view was taken in Frank v. Mangum . . . as it was also in Coffey v. United States. . ."

Now, the next sentences, the next paragraph of the decision, I want to stress:

> "The safeguard provided by the Constitution against the gravest abuses has tended to give the impression that [894] when it did apply in terms, there was no other principle that could. But the Fifth Amendment was not intended to do away with what in the civil law is a fundamental principle of justice (citing a case), in order, when a man once has been acquitted on the merits, to enable he government to prosecute him a second time."

Now, I want the Court to observe that in that case the Court regarded and treated and referred to the judgment quashing the indictment on the ground that the one year statute of limitations had been exceeded, was an acquittal on the merits. Those are the words of the Court. Even though an acquittal was based upon a mistake of law, and even though the defendant had never faced a jury to determine the question of his guilt or innocence. This discussion reveals that the fact that double jeopardy is mentioned in the Fifth Amendment does not prevent the doctrine of res judicata from being applied in criminal cases where the plea of double jeopardy is not strictly applicable; but that the doctrine of res judicata is.

The next case which we call to this Court's attention is Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427. It was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States so long ago as 1886, and even then was founded upon more ancient authority and is still being cited and followed by the Supreme Court of the United States. It establishes the proposition that a decision in a criminal case can be res judicata in a civil case, and by logic [895] and necessary implication, that the reverse is also true, namely, that a judicial decision in the civil case or proceeding can be res judicata in a criminal case.

In the case of Coffey v. United States, there was involved an appeal from a judgment in rem, declaring a forfeiture. Such judgment was reversed. The Supreme Court, commencing upon page 442, said:

"The principal question is as to the effect of the indictment, trial, verdict and judgment of acquittal set up on the fourth paragraph of the answer. The information is founded on Sections 3257, 3450, and 3453; and there is no question, on the averments, in the answer, that the fraudulent acts and attempts and intents to defraud, alleged in the prior criminal information and covered by the verdict and judgment of acquittal, embraced all the acts, attempts and intents averred in the information in this suit. The question, therefore, is distinctly presented, whether such judgment of acquittal is a bar to this suit. We are of the opinion that it is.

"It is true that Section 3257, after denouncing the single act of a distiller defrauding or attempting to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits distilled by him, declares the consequences of the commission of the act to be (1) that certain specific property shall be forfeited; and (2) that the offender shall be fined and [896] imprisoned. It is also true that the proceeding to enforce and forfeiture against the res named must be a proceeding in rem and a civil action, while that to enforce the fine and imprisonment must be a criminal proceeding, as was held by this court in The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 14. Yet, where an issue raised as to the existence of the act or fact denounced has been tried in a criminal proceeding instituted by the United States, and a judgment of acquittal has been rendered in favor of a particular person, that judgment is conclusive in favor of > such person, on the subsequent trial of a suit in rem by the United States, where, as against him, the existence of the same act or fact is the matter in issue, as a cause for the forfeiture of the property prosecuted in such suit in rem."

Now, let me pause in my quotation from that decision to point out that a case in rem is not one against the person; but here the Court looked behind the form to the substance and found an identity of parties. Now, continuing to read from the decision:

> "It is urged as a reason for not allowing such effect to the judgment, that the acquittal in the criminal case may have taken place because of the rule requiring guilt to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, and that on the same evidence, on the question of preponderance of proof, there might be a verdict for the United States, in the suit in [897] rem. Nevertheless, the fact or act has been put in issue and determined against the United States; and all that is imposed by the statute, as a consequence of guilt, is a punishment therefor. There could be no new trial of the criminal prosecution after the acquittal in it; and a subsequent trial of the civil suit amounts to substantially the same thing, with a difference only in the consequences following a judgment adverse to the claimant."

And the Court continued:

> "When an acquittal in a criminal prosecution in behalf of the Government is pleaded, or offered in evidence, by the same defendant, in an action against him by an individual, the rule does not apply, for the reason that the parties are not the same; and often for the additional reason, that a certain intent must be proved to support the indictment, which need not be proved to support the civil action. But upon this record, as we have alrady seen, the parties and the matter in issue are the same."

Then the Court continued:

> "Whether a conviction or an indictment under Section 3257 could be availed of as conclusive evidence in law for a condemnation, in a subsequent suit in rem under that section, and whether a judgment of forfeiture in a suit in rem under it would be conclusive evidence in law, for a conviction on a subsequent indictment under it, are questions [898] not now presented.
> "The conclusion we have reached is in consonance with the principles laid down by this Court in Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat., 246. In that case Hoyt sued Gelston, the collector, and Schenck, the surveyor, of the Port of New York, in trespass, for taking and carrying away a vessel. The defendants pleaded that they had seized the vessel, by authority of the President, as forfeited for a violation of the statute against fitting out a vessel to commit hostilities against a friendly foreign power, and that she had been so fitted out and was forfeited. At the trial it was shown that, after seizure, the vessel was proceeded against by the United States, by libel, in the United States District Court for the alleged offense, and Hoyt had claimed her, and she was acquitted, and ordered to be restored, and a certificate of reasonable cause of seizure was denied. The defendants offered to prove facts showing the forfeiture. The trial court excluded the evidence. In this court the question was presented whether the sentence of the District Court was or was not conclusive on the defendants, on the question of forfeiture. This Court held that the sentence of acquittal, with a denial of a certificate of reasonable cause of seizure was conclusive evidence that no forfeiture was incurred, and that the seizure was tortious; and that these questions could not again be litigated in any forum. [899]

"This doctrine is peculiarly applicable (the Court says) to a case like the present, where, in both proceedings, criminal and civil, the United States are the party on one side and this claimant the party on the other. The judgment of acquittal in the criminal proceeding ascertained that the facts which were the basis of that proceeding, and are the basis of this one, and which are made by the statute the foundation of any punishment, personal or pecuniary, did not exist. This was ascertained once for all between the United States and the > claimant, in the criminal proceeding, so that the facts can not be again litigated between them as the basis of any statutory punishment denounced as a consequence of the existence of the facts. This is a necessary result of the rules laid down in the unanimous opinion of the judges in the case of Rex v. Duchess of Kingston, 20 Howell's State Trials 355, 538 and which were formulated thus: The judgment of a court of concurrent jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is, as a plea in bar, a bar or, as evidence, conclusive, between the same parties, upon the same matter, directly in question in another court; and the judgment of a court of exclusive jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is, in like manner, conclusive upon the same matter, between the same parties, coming incidentally in question in another court for a different purpose. In the present case the Court is the [900] same court and had jurisdiction, and the judgment was directly on the point now involved, and between the same parties."

May we have a recess?

The Court: We will take the morning recess.

(Recess.) [900-A]

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Cleary: May it please the Court, in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of United States v. Coffey the Court will observe that the Supreme Court of the United States applied to the civil court the doctrine of res adjudicata arising out of a case which had been tried in a criminal court. The Court will also observe that in one of the cases discussed, a previous decision in the Supreme Court of the United States, in Gelston v. White, the court applied in the civil court res adjudicata on a determination which had been made in a court of admiralty. From this it would appear that it is not a question of what particular jurisdiction the first court happened to be in, as long as it had jurisdiction, that the decision of that court was res adjudicata in all other courts where the same issue of fact or of a group of facts arise in another court.

The next case to which we would direct your Honor's attention is that of the New Orleans v. Citizens Bank, 167 U. S. 371. It is important for two principal reasons: First, because it reveals that where an administrative action has been reviewed by a court of competent jurisdiction, and the decision of that court has become final, that decision is res adjudicata as between parties on all matters of law and fact actually litigated and actually or unofficially determined in that judicial proceeding. The case of New Orleans v. [901] Citizens Bank is also important because it reveals that such a decision is res adjudicata between such parties not only with relation to the demand made or liability asserted in that action but also with relation to other demands and asserted liabilities, even demands and asserted liabilities thereafter arising, to the extent that the matters of law and fact actually litigated and actually or unofficially determined in that judicial proceeding are involved in those other demands and asserted liabilities.

The Citizens Bank was organized by legislative charter in 1833, which charter was amended in 1836. Under such charter the shares of stock were issued in exchange for interest-bearing notes secured by mortgages on real estate. Under such charter the working capital was procured by a loan from the State to the bank of State bonds, which bonds were endorsed by the bank and sold in the open market. There were other bilateral contractual obligations between the State and the bank specified in the charter. For example, it was provided that a certain number of directors should be appointed by the State, and it was further provided that the bank should pay off the Government bonds, and for that purpose a limitation was put upon the distribution of profits to the stockholders until the bonds were paid off.

By the amendment of the charter in 1836 it was provided, "The capital of said bank shall be exempt from any tax levied [902] by the State or by a parish or body politic under the authority of the State during the continuance of its charter." The charter by its terms was to expire in 1844. In 1874, or ten years before the expiration date, the legislature passed an act extending the charter to the year 1911. The State constitution in force at the time the charter was issued apparently prohibited the tax exemption given to the bank by the charter. Two subsequent State constitutions, those of 1868 and 1879, apparently prohibited such a tax exemption. The constitution of 1868 was in force when the Act of 1874 was passed, and the constitution of 1879 was in force when the original charter expired and the bank commenced to operate under the State.

From 1833 to 1877 no attempt was made by the State or any of its political subdivisions to tax the capital of the bank. In 1878 such an assessment was made. The State filed a petition in the county court of the State, or, rather, the bank filed a petition in a county court of a State, that is, a State court corresponding to a superior court in California seeking to enjoin the tax so assessed upon the ground that its enforcement would impair the obligations of the contractor. The assessors contended that the clause of the charter exempting the bank from taxation violated the constitution of 1912 and that it also violated the constitution of 1868.

The trial court first issued a preliminary injunction [903] and thereafter, declaring the assessment to be null and void, perpetuated the injunction. On appeal the Supreme Court of Louisiana affirmed the trial court. While that case was pending in the Supreme Court of Louisiana, but before it was decided, certain of the tax assessors brought a suit to enforce the collection of the tax. It was decided by the trial court after the decision of the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana in favor of the bank, that is, the trial court's decision was in favor of the bank, and no appeal was taken. Thereafter three other cases were taken to various county courts involving similar assessments, two of said actions being brought by the bank, and then I have already referred to the one that was brought by the assessors. All resulted in judgments declaring the assessments void. Two of those cases occurred subsequent to the time that the original charter expired. They were commenced in 1886 and 1887. They were decisions of the trial court. No appeals were taken from those decisions. In 1892 the bank filed a bill in the Circuit Court of the United States (for the first time the matter comes into the Federal jurisdiction) against the various assessors involved to restrain them from assessing the bank for the years 1889, 1890, 1891 and 1892 as such assessors threatened to do. [904]

Now, may it be observed that the four years for which the assessors threatened to make assessments were subsequent to the decisions of the trial court in 1886 and 1887.

On that suit in the United States Circuit Court, a restraining order was issued. After answer, a trial was had and a decree was entered against the assessors. They appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it was on such appeal that the case of New Orleans v. Citizens Bank was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. That Court held that the judgments of 1886 and 1887, that is, the judgments for tax years subsequent to the expiration of the original charter, were res adjudicata in relation to tax demands for subsequent years. The following statements appear in the decision and are of particular interest:

> "The proposition that because a suit for a tax of one year is a different demand from the suit for a tax for another, therefore res adjudicata, cannot apply; whilst admitting in form the principles of the things adjudged, in reality substantially denies and destroys it. The estoppel resulting from the things adjudged does not depend upon whether there is the same demand in both cases, but exists although there be different demands, when the question upon which the recovery of the second demand depends has under identical circumstances and conditions been previously concluded by a judgment [905] between the parties or their privies. This is the elemental rule stated in the textbooks, and enforced by many decisions of this Court. A previous review of some of the leading cases will make this perfectly clear."

The Court continues:

> "In Bank v. Beverley, 1 Howard 134, 139," —and, by the way, 1 Howard goes back a long ways—"it was held that a construction of a will affecting the rights of parties must govern in subsequent controversies between the same parties, without reference to the different nature of the demand. (Citing two cases.) In Mason Lumber Company v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 638, it was held that when the proper construction of a contract was in controversy, the construction adjudged by the court would bind the parties in all future disputes.

"In Cromwell v. Sac. County, 94 U. S. 351, 353, after a full statement of the nature of the estoppel resulting from the thing adjudged where the demand was the same in both cases, the court then considered the extent of the estoppel, where the causes of action were distinct, and said:

"'But where the second action between the same parties is upon a different claim or demand, the judgment in the prior action operates as an estoppel only as to those matters in issue or points controverted upon the [906] determination of which the finding or verdict was rendered. In all cases, therefore, where it is sought to apply the estoppel of a judgment rendered upon one cause of action to the matters arising in a suit upon a different cause of action, the inquiry must always be as to the point or question actually litigated and determined in the original action, not what might have been thus litigated and determined. Only upon such matters is the judgment conclusive in another direction.'"

A little further, the court said:

"And the law of Louisiana is exactly in accord with the rulings of this court, for, as said by the Supreme Court of Louisiana in Heroman, et al., v. Louisiana Institute Deaf and Dumb, et al., * * *:

" 'No principle of law is more inflexible than that which fixes the absolute conclusiveness of such a judgment upon the parties and their privies. Whether the reasons upon which it was based were sound or not, and even if no reasons at all were given, the judgment imports absolute verity, and the parties are forever estopped from disputing its correctness. (Citing Cooley on Constitutional Limitation, page 47 et sec., and authorities there cited.)

" 'Matters once determined in a court of competent jurisdiction may never again be called in question by [907] parties or privies against objection, though the judgment may have been erroneous and liable to, and certain of, reversal in a higher court.' "

And the inner quote continues:

" 'The estoppel extends to every material allegation or statement which, having been made on one side and denied on the other, was at issue in the cause, and was determined therein.' (Citing authorities.)"

And that is the end of the inner quote. Now we go back to the words of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"It follows, then, that the mere fact that the demand in this case is for a tax for one year and the demands in the adjudged cases were for taxes for other years, does not prevent the operation of the thing adjudged, if, in the prior cases, the question of exemption was necessarily presented and determined upon identically the same facts upon which the right of exemption is now claimed."

The next case which we would call to the Court's attention is that of United States v. De Angelo, 138 Fed. (2d), page 466. In that case De Angelo and two other persons were by one indictment charged with the offense of robbing a national bank messenger, and by another indictment with having conspired to rob the same messenger. The charge of robbery was first tried. The jury acquitted De Angelo and convicted the other two. The charge of conspiracy was then tried. All three [908] defendants were convicted, De Angelo alone appealed.

In the second conspiracy trial, the Government put in evidence, as it had in the first, or robbery trial, testimony concerning De Angelo's presence and participation in the robbery. In the conspiracy trial the Government put in evidence additional testimony relating to conversations which De Angelo had had with others preceding the robbery, which the appellate court held was sufficient, without evidence of De Angelo's presence and participation in the robbery itself, to warrant his conviction on the charge of conspiracy. After the Government had introduced evidence of De Angelo's presence and participation in the robbery, his counsel offered to prove by the robbery indictment, the evidence given at the robbery trial, the instructions given to the jury in that trial and the jury's verdict of acquittal, that the question of his presence and participation in such robbery had been put in issue in the trial of that charge and had been determined by the jury in his favor. The trial court rejected such offer of proof. It merely allowed to go into the record in the clerk's possession the robbery indictment. But under specific directions that it be not shown to the jury. On appeal it was contended that the rejection of such offer of proof constituted reversible error. The Circuit Court of Appeals, after stating the facts and the question, cited and quoted from Frank v. Mangum and the Oppenheimer case. It [909] then proceeded as follows:

> "The conclusiveness of a fact which has been competently adjudicated by a criminal trial is not confined to such matter only as is sufficient to support a plea of double jeopardy. Even though there has been no former acquittal of the particular offense on trial, a prior judgment of acquittal on related matters has been said to be conclusive as to all that the judgment determined. (Citing United States v. Adams, a Supreme Court decision.) The matter is one of collateral estoppel of the prosecutor. Nor can there be any requirement of mutuality with respect to a criminal judgment's conclusiveness. An accused is constitutionally entitled to a trial de novo of the facts alleged and offered in support of each offense charged against him and to a jury's independent finding with respect thereto. [910]
> "But a 'rule of evidence' has been recognized

'which accords to the accused the right to claim finality with respect to a fact or group of facts previously determined in his favor upon a previous trial,' citing United States v. Carlisi.

"The pertinency of the foregoing rule depends upon what facts at the verdict of acquittal in the former criminal trial served to conclude and whether the facts so determined are again put in issue by the Government's allegations and proofs at a subsequent trial of the same defendant for another criminal offense. Here the robbery indictment had been alleged De Angelo's presence at and his participation in the robbery; and the Government had offered proof in support of these allegations. The appellant's plea of not guilty to the indictment had here put in issue every material allegation of fact contained in the indictment (citing two cases). And throughout the trial for the robbery the defendant's plea of not guilty served as his continuing denial of the evidence offered against him by the prosecution pursuant to its ever-present burden of proof (citing two cases).

"Among the facts so litigated and submitted before the jury's determination of the trial for the robbery were the questions as to whether De Angelo was present [911] at and had participated in the robbery as the driver of the car used in the perpetration of the robbery. The jury, by its verdict of acquittal as to De Angelo, determined those issues adversely to the Government's allegations. They should not therefore have been gone into again at the trial of the conspiracy indictment; and, when reintroduced by the Government, the appellant was entitled to show the former verdict of acquittal and what it had concluded as to the facts. We think that the trial court's rejection of the appellant's offers, which became relevant because of the Government's allegations and evidence, constituted substantial error (citing Crawford v. The United States).

"It was of course unnecessary for the Government, in the light of the evidence as to the co-conspirators, to prove that De Angelo was the actual perpetrator of one of the overt acts alleged. But, for the Government to relitigate in the conspiracy trial the facts as to De Angelo's alleged presence at and participation in the robbery and the resubmission of those issues allowed the jury in the conspiracy case to find the facts in such regard contrary to the findings as impliedly established by the verdict of acquittal of the robbery. Such a finding by the jury in the conspiracy case was capable of directly influencing the verdict to the appellant's [912] harm.

"The former acquittal was not, however, a bar to the prosecution of the conspiracy indictment. No question of double jeopardy is involved. The first trial was for robbery and the second for conspiracy, both relating to the same unlawful transaction, it is true, but separate and distinct offenses nonetheless. Nor were the facts as established by the verdict of ac> quittal of the robbery a defense to the conspiracy charge. As established by the verdict at the robbery trial, such facts became relevant and material in the conspiracy trial only because of the Government's reintroduction of the particular issues.

> "The judgment of the District Court is reversed and the case remanded with directions that a new trial be granted the appellant."

Now, that case was decided by the Circuit Court on October 28, 1943. It has since been cited, with approval and as authority, on the subject of res adjudicata in criminal cases by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Your Honor, it is going to take me at least half an hour or three-quarters of an hour to finish what I have to present. It is now noon.

The Court: We will run, then, through the noon hour, twelve to one. [913]

Mr. Hallinan: It seems to me, your Honor, if a reply is made and then some rebuttal possibly, it would consume longer than I had anticipated and it might be advisable to let the jury go at two o'clock and conclude, because we will probably take until half past three or so with this argument. I suppose the Government will have some rebuttal.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, how long will you take?

Mr. Donohue: I should say not over a half hour.

The Court: Let us run on then.

Mr. Hallinan: There is an hour and a half there, your Honor. That will run to half past three.

The Court: We will run through the noon hour, twelve to one. We will take one to two for the lunch period. You may proceed.

Mr. Cleary: This is a personal matter, your Honor. I have been suffering from a physical disability for the last few years, and if I stand on my feet for more than an hour at a time——

Mr. Hallinan: That is one reason why I suggested that it might be continued to two.

The Court: We have a situation with the jury that has become a little bit——

Mr. Hallinan: We would just as soon hurry it along ourselves, but this is such an important point, and I know what Mr. Cleary's difficulty is. [914]

The Court: Let us do this, gentlemen. I am always appreciative of anyone's illness or the like. Let us take the noon hour from twelve to one and resume at one o'clock.

Mr. Cleary: That would be satisfactory.

The Court: Is that agreeable?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: We will resume, then, at one o'clock.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 1:00 p.m. this date.) [914-A]

Wednesday, November 23, 1949, 1:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed. If you would be more comfortable counsel, the matter of standing or sitting would make no particular difference in the presentation. I suggest, if you would be more comfortable, that you be seated.

Mr. Cleary: I would prefer to stand. I think better on my feet.

The Court: Whatever you wish.

Mr. Cleary: May it please the Court, just before the noon recess, I said that the De Angelo case, while only a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeal, had been cited with approval and as authority by the United States Supreme Court.

We had reference to the case of Sealfon v. United States, 337 U. S. 575, decided only last year. As decisions go, it is so recent that we can say the ink with which it was written is still wet. The decision is a short one, and it is so crammed with pertinent reasoning that we feel constrained to quote it in its entirety, and before beginning to quote it, I am going to jump into the middle of it and pick out one sentence. The Court said:

> "We granted the petition for writ of certiorari because of the importance of the question in our administration of the [915] criminal law."

Mr. Justice Douglas delivered the opinion of the Court. It reads as follows:

"This case presents the question of whether an acquittal of conspiracy to defraud the United States precludes subsequent prosecution for the commission of the substantive offense on the particular facts here involved. Two indictments were returned against the petitioners and others. One charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States of its governmental function of conserving and rationing sugar by presenting false invoices and making false representations to a ration board to the effect that certain sales of sugar products were made to exempt agencies. The other indictment charged petitioner and Greenburg with the commission of a substantive offense, viz., uttering and publishing as true the false invoices. The conspiracy indictment was tried first and the following facts were shown:

"Defendant Greenburg manufactured syrup and approached Sanford Doctors, a salesman for a brokerage concern, to sell vanilla syrup. Doctors negotiated some sales to petitioner, who did a wholesale business under the name of Sero Syrup Co. Thereafter Greenburg asked Doctors to get a lease from petitioner showing the places where petitioner made sales and told him that if any sales were made to exempt agencies, Greenburg could sell to petitioner [916] in larger quantities. Doctors so informed petitioner, and some time thereafter petitioner wrote to Greenburg saying, 'At the present time some of our syrups are being sold at the Brooklyn Navy Yard' and various defense plants. The petitioner did sell some of his syrup to a vending company which had machines at the Navy Yard, but it was not vanilla syrup and no sales were made to the Navy Yard as such.

"Greenburg thereafter presented a series of false invoices to the ration board purporting to show sales to petitioner for delivery to the Navy Yard. Petitioner's letter was never shown to the board. On the basis of these invoices, Greenburg received replacement certificates for 21 million pounds of sugar, 10 million of which he sold to petitioner in the form of vanilla syrup, and which was by petitioner sold to non-exempt consumers, mostly National Biscuit Company. Petitioner had first made payments to Greenburg by check, but thereafter gave checks to his trucker, which he later cashed, deducted his trucking fee and paid Greenburg. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty as to petitioner. Thereafter trial was had of the other indictment which charged petitioner and Greenburg with uttering and publishing as true the false invoices introduced in the conspiracy trial. Greenburg pleaded guilty and the trial proceeded against the petitioner on the theory that he aided and abetted Greenburg in the commission [917] of the substantive offense. The false invoices, the let> ter from petitioner to Greenburg, and essentially the same testimony were again introduced against petitioner.

> "In addition, it was brought out on cross-examination that petitioner had unsuccessfully sought replacement certificates from his ration board for sugar contained in syrup sold at the Navy Yard and defense plants. Greenburg gave testimony from which the jury could conclude that petitioner was a moving factor in the scheme to defraud which was constructed around petitioner's letter, and that he was familiar with Greenburg's intention to submit false invoices."

I ask the Court to pay particular attention to the next statement in the opinion:

> "Greenburg further testified that petitioner received $500,000 in cash under the agreement as a rebate of two cents a pound on all replacement sugar which Greenburg received on Navy Yard invoices, whether or not it was used in syrup sold to petitioner. This time the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and petitioner was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and fined $12,000. Petitioner moved to quash the second indictment on the ground of double jeopardy, abandoned in this court, and res judicata; and also objected to the introduction of the evidence adduced at the first trial. The District Court ruled against petitioner, and the Court below affirmed. We granted the petition for a writ of [918] certiorari because of the importance of the question to the administration of the criminal law. It has long been recognized that the commission of the substantive offense and a conspiracy to commit are separate and distinct offenses (citing Pinkerton v. United States). Thus, with some exceptions, one may be prosecuted for both crimes. But res judicata may be a defense in a second prosecution. That doctrine applies to criminal as well as civil proceedings (citing U. S. v. Oppenheimer and U. S. v. De Angelo and also see Frank v. Mangum) and operates to conclude those matters in issue which the verdict determined, though the offenses be different. (See U. S. v. Adams.) Thus the only question in this case is whether the jury's verdict on the conspiracy trial was a determination favorable to petitioner of the facts essential to conviction of the substantive offense. This depends upon the facts adduced at each trial, and the instructions under which the jury arrived at its verdict at the first trial. Respondent argues that the basis of a jury's verdict can not be known with certainty, that the conspiracy trial was presented on the theory that petitioner was a party to an overall conspiracy, ultimately involving petitioner, Greenburg, and the Barron Corporation. Thus it is said that the verdict established with certainty only that petitioner was not a member of such conspiracy and that therefore the prosecution was not foreclosed from [919] showing in the second trial that petitioner wrote the letter pursuant to an agreement with Greenburg to defraud the United States. The theory is that under the instructions given, the jury might have found that petitioner conspired with Greenburg and yet refused to infer that he was a party to the overall conspiracy. The instructions under which the verdict was rendered, however——" and I ask Your Honor to pay close attention to this——

"——must be set in a practical frame, and viewed with an eye to all the circumstances of the proceeding. We look to them only for such light as they shed on the issues determined by the verdict (citing a case). Petitioner was the only one on trial under the conspiracy indictment. There was no evidence to connect him directly with anyone other than Greenburg. Only an agreement with at least Greenburg was inferred by the jury, could petitioner have been convicted; and in the only instruction keyed to the particular facts of the case, the jury was told that petitioner must be acquitted if there was reasonable doubt that he conspired with Greenburg. Nowhere was the jury told that to return a verdict of guilty it must be found that petitioner was a party to a conspiracy involving not only Greenburg but with the Barron Corporation as well. Viewed in this setting the verdict is a determination that petitioner, who concededly wrote and sent the letter, did not do so pursuant to an [920] agreement with Greenburg to defraud.

"So interpreted, the earlier verdict precludes a later conviction of the substantive offense. The basic facts in each trial were identical. As we read the records of the two trials, petitioner could be convicted of either offense only on proof that he wrote the letter pursuant to an agreement with Greenburg. Under the evidence introduced, petitioner could have aided and abetted Greenburg in no other way. Thus the core of the prosecution's case was in each case the same. The letter, the circumstances surrounding it and to be inferred from it and the false invoices. There was, of course, additional evidence on the second trial, adding detail to the circumstances leading up to the alleged agreement, petitioner's participation therein, and what he may have got out of it. But at most this evidence——"

now listen to this——

"——only made it more likely that petitioner had entered into the conspiracy under the agreement. It was a second attempt to prove the agreement which at each trial was crucial to the prosecution's case, and which was necessarily adjudicated in the former trial to be non-existent. That the prosecution may not do. Reversed."

Now, may it please the Court, the doctrine of res judicata is an uncompromising doctrine, an uncompromising rule of law. [921] Sometimes it is harsh in its application. But it cuts straight and it cuts deeply through all obstructions without favor and without pity. In civil matters it often operates to preserve to the cheat and the deceiver the fruits of his wrongful conduct. In civil matters it often cuts off the right of compensation and redress to one who in truth and in justice is entitled to it. In criminal matter it often keeps in prison one who has been mistakenly or wrongfully convicted, but who, at the time of trial and within that short period after trial, when a motion for a new trial can be made, is unable to discover or to locate the witnesses or the documentary evidence necessary to prove his innocence. These facts are all well known to the lawmakers and ~~to the courts~~, yet the doctrine of res judicata ~~is~~ cherished. It is regarded as a fundamental principle of justice, to use the Supreme Court's statement in the Oppenheimer case, and is said by Mr. Justice Holmes, in Frank v. Mangum, to be a fundamental principle of jurisprudence arising from the very nature of the courts of justice and the objects for which they are established, that a question of fact or of law distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, can not afterwards be put in issue between the same parties.

The reason for this rule of res judicata is clearly and briefly stated in Wisconsin v. Torres, 9 Northwestern 725, as follows: [922]

> "The doctrine of res adjudicata, or estoppel by judgment, as it is sometimes less accurately termed, is a rule of law founded on the soundest consideration of public policy. It means that if an action be brought and the merits of the question be discussed between the parties and a final judgment be obtained by either party, the parties are concluded and can not again canvass the same question in another action. It is founded upon two maxims of law, one of which is that 'a man should not be twice vexed for the same cause,' and the other is that it is for the public good that there be an end of litigation."

We say that the doctrine of res adjudicata is an uncompromising rule of law. The full doctrine is expressed not in one maxim but in a number of maxims, each beginning with the two words "Res adjudicata." I am not going to quote the Latin of those maxims, but I am going to quote the English translation as given by the Encyclopedia of Law and Procedure. One is as follows: "Matter judicially decided begets a perpetual exception." Another is: "A question adjudicated between the parties after hearing them makes the law of the question." A third is: "A thing adjudged is taken for the truth." A fourth is: "A thing adjudged is held to be true." Now, listen to this one, because in more forceful words than I could construct, put together, it states the essence, the uncompromising essence, of the rule: "A thing adjudged [923] makes white black, black white, the crooked straight, and the straight crooked."

This brings me to the case of Bridges v. Wixon. Before I go further with that case, let me make this statement. The question of whether res adjudicata is applicable in any particular instance is a mixed question of law and fact. The decisions of the courts on when res adjudicata is applicable constitute the law in the matter. The particular facts asserted in support of a question that the doctrine be applied are the facts, the factual half of the mixed question of law and fact. If I may use a simile, the law is the horse and the facts constitute the wagon. If the horse is a wooden one or decrepit, it will not pull the wagon very far. And on the other hand, if the wagon breaks down, the horse is unable to pull it. There must be a union of law and fact. And we are citing the case, the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Bridges v. Wixon, as the facts, or the fact, in our request that the rule of res adjudicata be here applied. Mr. Justice Douglas delivers the opinion of the Court. He said:

> "Harry Bridges is an alien who entered this country from Australia in 1920. In 1938 deportation proceedings were instituted against him on the ground that he both had been and then was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States, and that that Party [924] advised and taught the overthrow by force of the Government of the United States and caused printed matter to be circulated which advocated that course. Under the statute then in force, past membership or past affiliation was insufficient for deportation; present membership or present affiliation being required. Kessler v. Strecker, 307 U. S. 22. A hearing was had. The examiner, the Honorable James M. Landis, concluded that the evidence established neither that Harry Bridges is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States. The Secretary of Labor sustained the Examiner and dismissed the proceedings. That was in January, 1940. By the Act of June 28, 1940, Congress amended the statute so as to provide for the deportation of any alien who was at the time of entering the United States or has been at any time thereafter a member of or affiliated with an organization of the character attributed to the Communist Party in the first proceeding. [925]

"A second deportation proceeding was instituted against Harry Bridges under the amended statute on the ground that he had been a member of or affiliated with that organization. Another hearing was had. The inspector designated to conduct the hearings and make a report, Hon. Charles B. Sears, found that the Communist Party of the United States was an organization of the character described in the statute, that the Marine Workers' Industrial Union was affiliated with the Communist Party and was an organization of the same character, and that after entering this country Harry Bridges had been affiliated with both organizations and had been a member of the Communist Party. He recommended deportation. The case was heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals which found that Harry Bridges had not been a member of or affiliated with either of those organizations at any time after he entered this country. The Attorney General reviewed the decision of the Board and rendered an opinion in which he made findings in accordance with those proposed by the inspector and ordered Harry Bridges to be deported. A warrant of deportation was issued. Harry Bridges surrendered himself to the custody of respondent and challenged the legality of his detention by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court for the Northern District of California. That court denied the petition and remanded petitioner to custody of respondent. [926] 49 F. Supp. 292. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed by a divided vote. 144 F. 2d 927, 944. The case is here on a petition for a writ of certiorari which we granted because of the serious character of the questions which are presented.

"As we have said, Harry Bridges came here from Australia in 1920. He has not returned to Australia since that time. He was a longshoreman. In 1933 he became active in trade union work on the water front in San Francisco. The Attorney General found that he had done much to improve the conditions that existed among the longshoremen. He reorganized and headed up the International Longshoremen's Association, an American Federation of Labor union. He led the maritime workers' strike on the Pacific Coast in 1934. He was president of the local International Longshoremen's Association from 1934 to 1936 and was Pacific Coast president in 1936. In 1937 his union broke with the American Federation of Labor, changed its name to International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, and became affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Bridges was elected Pacific Coast District President of that union and has held the office ever since. He also holds several important offices in the C.I.O.

"The two grounds on which the deportation order rests—that Harry Bridges at one time had been both 'affiliated' [927] with the Communist party and a member of it—present different questions with which we deal separately.

"Affiliation. The statute defines affiliation as follows:

"For the purpose of this section: (1) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to be used for the advising, advocacy, or teaching of any doctrine above enumerated shall constitute the advising, advocacy, or teaching of such doctrine; and (2) the giving, loaning or promising of money or any thing of value to any organization, association, society, or group, of the character above described shall constitute affiliation therewith; but nothing in this paragraph shall be taken as an exclusive definition of advising, advocacy, teaching, or affiliation." 41 Stat. 1009, 8 U.S.C. cf. 137f.

"The doctrine referred to is the overthrow of the government by force or violence. The organizations or groups referred to are those which advise and teach that doctrine or which write, circulate, display and the like or have in their possession for such purpose any written or printed matter of that character.

"In ruling on the question whether an alien had been 'affiliated' with the Communist Party and therefore could be deported, the court in United States v. Reimer, 79 F. 2d 315, 317, said that such an affiliation was not proved [928] 'unless the alien is shown to have so conducted himself that he has brought about a status of mutual recognition that he may be relied on to cooperate with the Communist Party on a fairly permanent basis. He must be more than merely in sympathy with its aims or even willing to aid it in a casual, intermittent way. Affiliation includes an element of dependability upon which the organization can rely which, though not equivalent to membership duty, does rest upon a course of conduct that could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for the charge of a breach of good faith.' The same idea was expressed by Dean Landis in the first Bridges' report. After stating that 'affiliation' implies a 'stronger bond' than 'association,' he went on to say: 'In the corporate field its use embraces not the casual affinity of an occasional similarity of objective, but ties and connections that, though less than that complete control which parent possesses over subsidiary, are nevertheless sufficient to create a continuing relationship that embraces both units within the concept of a system. In the field of eleemosynary and political organization the same basic idea prevails.' And he concluded: 'Persons engaged in bitter industrial struggles tend to seek help and assistance from every available source. But the intermittent solicitation and acceptance of such help must be shown to have ripened into those bonds of mutual [929] cooperation and alliance that entail continuing reciprocal duties and responsibilities before they can be deemed to come within the statutory requirement of affiliation. * * * To expand that statutory definition to embrace within its terms and cooperation on objectives whose pursuit is clearly allowable under our constitutional system, or friendly associations that have not been shown to have resulted in the employment of illegal means, is warranted neither by reason nor by law.'

"The legislative history throws little light on the meaning of 'affiliation' as used in the statute. It imports, however, less than membership but more than sympathy. By the terms of the statute it includes those who contribute money or anything of value to an organization which believes in, advises, advocates, or teaches the overthrow of our government by force or violence. That example throws light on the meaning of the term 'affiliation.' He who renders financial assistance to any organization may generally be said to approve of its objectives or aims. So Congress declared in the case of an alien who contributed to the treasury of an organization whose aim was to overthrow the government by force and violence. But he who cooperates with such an organization only in its wholly lawful activities cannot by that fact be said as a matter of law to be 'affiliated' with it. Nor is it conclusive [930] that the cooperation was more than intermittent and showed a rather consistent course of conduct. Common sense indicates that the term 'affiliation' in this setting should be construed more narrowly. Individuals, like nations, may cooperate in a common cause over a period of months or years though their ultimate aims do not coincide. Alliances for limited objectives are well known. Certainly those who joined forces with Russia to defeat the Nazis may not be said to have made an alliance to spread the cause of Communism. An individual who makes contributions to feed hungry men does not become 'affiliated' with the Communist cause because those men are Communists. A different result is not necessarily indicated if aid is given to or received from a proscribed organization in order to win a legitimate objective in a domestic controversy. Whether intermittent or repeated, the act or acts tending to prove 'affiliation' must be of that quality which indicates an adherence to or a furtherance of the purposes or objectives of the proscribed organization as distinguished from mere cooperation with it in lawful activities. The act or acts must evidence a working alliance to bring the program to fruition.

"We are satisfied that the term 'affiliation' was not so construed either by Judge Sears or by the Attorney General. The reports made in this case contain no precise formulation of the standard which was employed. But the way [931] in which the term 'affiliation' was used and applied convinces us that it was given a looser and more expansive meaning than the statute permits. Judge Sears in his report stated that 'Affiliation is clearly a word of broader content than membership, and of narrower content than sympathy. Generally, there will be some continuity of relationship to bring the word into application.' But he concluded that that was not necessarily so in view of the statutory definition. And he added: 'Affiliation may doubtless be shown circumstantially. Assisting in the enterprises of an organization, securing members for it, taking part in meetings organized and directed by or on behalf of the organization, would all tend to show affiliation. The weight to be given to such evidence is, of course, determined by the trier of the fact.' That view was apparently shared by the Attorney General. But the broad sweep which was given the term in its application to the facts of this case is illustrated by the following excerpt from the Attorney General's report:

"Judge Sears summarizes Bridges' attitude towards the Communist Party and its policies by saying that the 'isolated instances,' while not evidence to establish membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party, nevertheless show a sympathetic or cooperative attitude on his part to the Party, and form 'a pattern which is more consistent [932] with the conclusion that the alien followed this course of conduct as an affiliate of the Communist Party, rather than as a matter of chance coincident.' This conclusion, said Judge Sears, was strengthened by his consistently favoring nondiscrimination against union men because of Communist membership; and by his excoriating "red baiters," as he called those who took an opposite view, which "amounted to cooperation with the Communist Party in carrying out its program of penetration and boring from within."

"But when we turn to the facts of this case we have little more than a course of conduct which reveals cooperation with Communist groups for the attainment of wholly lawful objectives.

"The associations which Harry Bridges had with various Communist groups seem to indicate no more than cooperative measures to attain objectives which were wholly legitimate. The link by which it is sought to tie him to subversive activities is an exceedingly tenuous one, if it may be said to exist at all. The Trade Union Unity League was found to be a Communist organization. It chartered the Marine Workers' Industrial Union in 1930, which continued until 1935 and was found to be a proscribed organization. That union launched the Waterfront Worker, a mimeographed sheet, in 1932. The Attorney General sustained Judge Sears' finding that Bridges sponsored it and was responsible for [933] its publication shortly after it first appeared in 1932 and down to its abandonment in 1936. The paper acknowledged the assistance of the MWIU prior to September 15, 1933. The question when Bridges took over the paper was closely contested, the Board of Immigration Appeals finding that Bridges became connected with it about September 15, 1933, after the MWIU had abandoned it. The finding of Judge Sears, approved by the Attorney General, that the paper was an instrument of the MWIU and the Communist Party from December, 1932, to its abandonment in 1936 and that it was under the domination and control of those organizations during that period rested primarily on the following grounds: '(1) The acknowledged cooperation with the M.W.I.U., in the early issues of the paper and subsequent favorable treatment of the M.W.I.U., T.U.U.L., and other Communist-sponsored organizations during the paper's entire existence. (2) Consistent attacks upon the so-called "reactionary" leaders of the A. F. of L. (3) Support of the Communist candidates for political office. (4) Advice to read Communist literature. (5) The use of addresses of Communists or Communist-affiliated organizations.' But when the evidence underlying these findings is examined it is found to be devoid of any showing that the Waterfront Worker advocated overthrow of the government by force. It was a militant trade union journal. It aired the grievances [934] of the longshoreman. It discussed national affairs affecting the interests of working men. It declared against war. But we have found no evidence whatsoever which suggests that it advocated the overthrow of the government by force. Nor is there any finding that Bridges took over this project with the view of doing more than advancing the lawful cause of unionism." [934-A]

"The advice to support for office certain candidates said to be Communists was based entirely on the platform on which they ran—cash relief; abolition of vagrancy laws; no evictions; gas, water and electricity for the unemployed; and unemployment relief. The advice to read Communist literature was not general; it was specifically addressed to the comparative merits of those publications and other papers on the truthfulness of labor news. The use of addresses of Communist organizations, especially stressed by the Attorney General, was said by Judge Sears to demonstrate 'a close cooperation with the Communists and Communist Organizations.' But close cooperation is not sufficient to establish an 'affiliation' within the meaning of the statute. It must evidence a working alliance to bring the proscribed program to fruition.

"It must be remembered that the Marine Workers' Industrial Union was not a sham or pretense. It was a genuine union. It was found to have, and we assume it did have, the illegitimate objective of overthrowing the government by force. But it also had the objective of improving the lot of its members in the normal trade union sense. One who cooperated with it in promoting its legitimate objectives certainly could not by that fact alone be said to sponsor or approve of its general or unlawful objectives. But unless he also joined in that over-all program, he would [935] not be 'affiliated' with the Communist cause in the sense in which the statute uses the term.

"Whether one could be a member of that union without becoming 'affiliated' with the Communist Party within the meaning of the statute, we need not decide. For Harry Bridges was never a member of it."

Now that is the Supreme Court of the United States talking, in making a decision.

> "To say that his cooperation with it made him in turn 'affiliated' with the Communist Party is to impute to him belief in and adherence to its general and unlawful objectives. In that connection, it must be remembered that although deportation technically is not criminal punishment (citing cases), it may nevertheless visit as great a hardship as the deprivation of the right to pursue a vocation or a calling. (Citing cases.) As stated by Mr. Justice Brandeis speaking for the Court in Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U.S. 276, 284, deportation may result in the loss 'of all that make life worth living.' "

Well, there the Supreme Court was quoting itself to that effect.

> "We cannot assume that Congress meant to employ the term 'affiliation' in a broad, fluid sense which would visit such hardship on an alien for slight or insubstantial reasons. It is clear that Congress desired to have the [936] > country rid of those aliens who embraced the political faith of force and violence. But we cannot believe that Congress intended to cast so wide a net as to reach those whose ideas and program, though coinciding with the legitimate aims of such groups, nevertheless fell far short of overthrowing the government by force and violence. Freedom of speech and of press is accorded aliens residing in this country. (Citing Bridges v. California, 314 U.S. 252.) So far as this record shows the literature published by Harry Bridges, the utterances made by him were entitled to that protection. They revealed a militant advocacy of the cause of trade-unionism. But they did not teach or advocate or advise the subversive conduct condemned by the statute."

Again the Supreme Court of the United States is making a finding of fact.

> "Inference must be piled on inference to impute belief in Harry Bridges of the revolutionary aims of the groups whose aid and assistance he employed in his endeavor to improve the lot of the working men on the water front. That he enlisted such aid is not denied. He justified that course on the grounds of expediency—to get such help as he could to aid the cause of his union. But there is evidence that he opposed the Communist tactics of fomenting strikes; that he believed in the policy of arbitration and [937] of direct negotiation to settle labor disputes, with the strike reserved only as a last resort. As Dean Landis stated in the first report:

"'Bridges' own statement of his political beliefs and disbeliefs is important. It was given not only without reserve, but vigorously as dogma and faiths of which the man was proud and which represented in his mind the aims of his existence. It was a fighting apologia that refused to temper itself to the winds of caution. It was an avowal of sympathy with many of the objectives that the Communist Party at times has embraced, an expression of disbelief that the methods they wished to employ were as revolutionary as they generally seem, but it was unequivocal in its distrust of tactics other than those that are generally included within the concept of democratic methods. That Bridges' aims are energetically radical may be admitted, but the proof fails to establish——' "

Now listen to this——

"'——but the proof fails to establish that the methods he seeks to employ to realize them are other than those that the framework of democratic and constitutional government permits.' "

That is the end of the inner quote from Landis. The Court continues:

"That observation is equally pertinent to the record [938] before us."

Now there the Supreme Court of the United States, in those words, is adopting what it has just quoted from the Landis report. It is another finding of fact.

> "We cannot construe 'affiliation' as used in the statute to bring such conduct and attitudes within its reach. Whether the evidence would justify a finding of 'affiliation' in the strict sense in which the statute uses the term is not for us to say. An act innocent on its face may be done with an evil purpose. But where the fate of a human being is at stake the presence of the evil purpose may not be left to conjecture. In these habeas corpus proceedings we do not review the evidence beyond ascertaining that there is some evidence to support the deportation order. (Citing a case.) But detention under an invalid order of deportation is established where an alien is ordered deported for reasons not specified by Congress."

Now there is a holding by the Supreme Court of the United States, a factual holding, that the reasons cited by the Attorney General to support the charge of affiliation were not those specified by Act of Congress. That is the case here. For our review of the record convinces us that the finding of affiliation was based on too loose a meaning of the term.

May I have a short recess? I feel a little faint.

The Court: All right. I suppose you can conclude rather [939] abruptly now? Do you propose to conclude very shortly?

Mr. Cleary: Yes. I am going to finish the reading of the case, but I would like to sit down for a few minutes.

The Court: Yes. I wanted to know just precisely how much longer you might take, so I might be guided accordingly.

Mr. Cleary: Well, I am now at the bottom of page 149 and I propose to read to the top of 157. It is coming to new matter, the matter of membership.

The Court: All right, we will take a short recess.

(Recess.) [940]

(At 2:25 p.m. the jury was brought back into the courtroom, and in their presence the following occurred:)

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I have discussed this matter generally with counsel earlier in the day and I believe I presently have their wholehearted stipulation that the jury be excused until Monday next. You may look forward to the intervening holiday with some degree of pleasure, as will the Court as well as counsel. We necessarily will occupy the balance of the day, I take it, in the furtherance of legal arguments. The defense has not as yet completed their matters. Government counsel is entitled to argue. We may well run over the four o'clock period. Our estimate this morning was a little inaccurate. At the threshold of the trial many matters arise of legal consequence that occupy perhaps more time than necessarily will be occupied at a later stage in the trial. It is like any other undertaking. Under the circumstances, then, this jury is excused until next Monday, November 28, at ten o'clock in the morning. Is that clear to everyone now? There are to be no further hearings or court matters until next Monday, November 28, at ten o'clock. I renew the same admonitions to you. Again I repeat particularly and specifically not to discuss the case with any person or persons, or not to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, and not to form or express an opinion thereon until the case [941] is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon the jury was excused, and the following proceedings were had:)

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Cleary.

Mr. Cleary: By the way, the reporter tells me that my citation of Sealfon v. The United States was inaccurate. My notes here are 337 U.S. at 575. I may say I have the date of the decision filed as January 5, 1948.

Mr. Donohue: That is correct. I have it here. (332 U.S., 575.)

Mr. Cleary: Now I resume the reading of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Bridges v. Wixon. Resuming on page 149 with the heading "Membership," the Court said:

> "The evidence of 'affiliation' was used not only to support the finding that Harry Bridges had been 'affiliated' with the Communist Party but also to corroborate the finding that at one time he had been a member of that organization. We may assume that such evidence, though falling short of the requirements of 'affiliation,' might be admissible for the latter purpose. But the difficulty is that the finding of membership, like the finding of affiliation, has an infirmity which which may be challenged in this attack on the legality of Harry Bridges' detention under the deportation order. [942]

"Rule 150.1(c) of the Regulations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (8 C.F.R., 1941 Supp., 150.1(c)) provides: 'All statements secured from the alien or any other person during the investigation which are to be used as evidence, shall be taken down in writing; and the investigating officer shall ask the person interrogated to sign the statement. Whenever such a recorded statement is to be obtained from any person, the investigating officer shall identify himself to such person and the interrogation of that person shall be under oath or affirmation. Whenever a recorded statement is to be obtained from a person under investigation, he shall be warned that any statement made by him may be used as evidence in any subsequent proceeding.' And Rule 150.6 (i) provides in part: 'A recorded statement made by the alien (other than a general Information Form) or by any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence only if the maker of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statements made during the investigation.'

"O'Neil was a government witness. He was intimate with Harry Bridges. During the course of the examination, O'Neil was asked about statements which he allegedly had made to investigating officers some months earlier. [943] These statements were not signed by O'Neil. They were not made by interrogation under oath. And it was not shown that O'Neil was asked to swear and sign; or that, being asked, he refused. They were not read into the record and verified by the stenographer who took them down. And an officer testified that later O'Neil had repeated the statements to him and to other witnesses. These statements were that O'Neil joined the Communist Party in December, 1936; that he walked into Bridges' office one day in 1937 and saw Bridges pasting assessment stamps in a Communist Party book; and that Bridges reminded O'Neil that he had not been attending party meettings. O'Neil admitted making statements to the investigating officers but denied making those particular statements.

"Judge Sears admitted the statements not for purposes of impeachment but as substantive evidence. The Board of Immigration Appeals and the Attorney General both conceded that the statements were admitted in violation of Rules 150.1(c) and 150.6(i). The Board held that it was error to consider the statements as affirmative, probative evidence. The Attorney General ruled: 'Had the alien raised the question at the time of the hearing, compliance with the Departmental Regulations would have been obligatory and a deliberate rejection of a request to exclude the testimony would have rendered appropriate [944] the objections now raised by the Board. No objection having been raised by the alien throughout the hearing, however, he waived the right to object on the technical ground that the statement was not taken in accordance with the rules.' One difficulty with that position is that Bridges did protest before Judge Sears over the use of the statement. He maintained that they were erroneously received and were without probative value though he did not rest his objection on the regulations. But there is a more fundamental difficulty. The original deciding body is not the inspector who hears the case. He merely submits a memorandum setting forth the evidence adduced at the hearing, his proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a proposed order. The case then is heard by the Board of Immigration Appeals, which is authorized to perform the functions of the Attorney General in relation to deportation. 8 C.F.R., 1940 Supp., Sections 90.2, 90.3. And the case may then go to the Attorney General for decision. If the objection to evidence on the ground that it violates the governing regulations is made before the agency entrusted with the duty of deciding whether a case for deportation has been established, it is made soon enough. Objection to the use of these statements as probative evidence was made before both the Board and the Attorney General. It was specifically [945] objected that the statements did not qualify under the regulations.

"The rules are designed to protect the interests of the alien and to afford him due process of law. It is the action of the deciding body, not the recommendation of the inspector, which determines whether the alien will be deported. The rules afford protection at that crucial stage of the proceedings or not at all. The person to whom the power to deport has been entrusted is the Attorney General or such agency as he designates. 8 U.S.C., Section 155. He is an original trier of fact on the whole record. It is his decision to deport an alien that Congress has made 'final.' 8 U.S.C., Section 155. Accordingly, it is no answer to say that the rules may be disregarded because they were not called to the attention of the inspector.

"It was assumed in Bilokumsky v. Tod, 263 U.S. 149, 155, that 'one under investigation with a view to deportation is legally entitled to insist upon the observance of rules promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to law.' We adhere to that principle. For these rules are designed as safeguards against essentially unfair procedures. The importance of this particular rule may not be gainsaid. A written statement at the earlier interviews under oath and signed by O'Neil would have afforded [946] protection against mistakes in hearing, mistakes in memory, mistakes in transcription. Statements made under those conditions would have an important safeguard —the fear of prosecution for perjury. Moreover, if O'Neil had been asked to swear to and sign the statements and had refused to do so, the fact of his refusal would have weight in evaluating the truth of the statements.

"The statements which O'Neil allegedly made were hearsay. We may assume they would be admissible for purposes of impeachment. But they certainly would not be admissible in any criminal case as substantive evidence. Hickory v. United States, 151 U.S. 303, 309, United States v. Block, 88 F. 2d 618, 620. So to hold would allow men to be convicted on unsworn testimony of witnesses—a practice which runs counter to the notions of fairness on which our legal system is founded. There has been some relaxation of the rule in alien exclusion cases. See United States v. Corsi, 65 F. 2d 564. But we are dealing here with deportation of aliens whose roots may have become, as they are in the present case, deeply fixed in this land. It is true that the courts have been liberal in relaxing the ordinary rules of evidence in administrative hearings. Yet as was aptly stated in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 227 U.S. 88, 93, 'But the more liberal the practice in admitting testimony, [947] the more imperative the obligation to preserve the essential rules of evidence by which rights are asserted or defended.'

"Here the liberty of an individual is at stake. Highly incriminating statements are used against him—statements which were unsworn and which under the governing regulations are inadmissible.

We are dealing here with procedural requirements prescribed for the protection of the alien. Though deportation is not technically a criminal proceeding, it visits a great hardship on the individual and deprives him of the right to stay and live and work in this land of freedom. That deportation is a penalty—at times a most serious one—cannot be doubted. Meticulous care must be exercised lest the procedure by which he is deprived of that liberty not meet the essential standards of fairness.

"On the record before us it is clear that the use of O'Neil's ex parte statements was highly prejudicial. Those unsworn statements of O'Neil and the testimony of one Lundeberg were accepted by the Attorney General as showing that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. There was other testimony but it was so 'untrustworthy, contradictory, or unreliable' as to be rejected by the Attorney General. If the finding as to Lundeberg's testimony was treated by the Attorney General independently of [948] his finding as to O'Neil's, we would have a different case. Then we would have to determine whether the testimony of Lundeberg alone was sufficient to sustain the order. [948-A]

"But the Attorney General, unlike Judge Sears, did not separate the testimony of Lundeberg and that of O'Neil for the purpose of his finding as to membership. He lumped them together and found that between them their total weight was sufficient to tip the scales against Harry Bridges. He ruled that if the unsworn statements of O'Neil and the testimony of Lundeberg were believed, the doubt is decided. It is thus apparent not only that the unsworn statements of O'Neil weighed heavily in the scales, but also that it took those unsworn statements, as well as Lundeberg's testimony, to resolve the doubt on this sharply contested and close question, whether the findings would have been made on this record from the testimony of Lundeberg alone is wholly conjectural and highly speculative. Not only was Lundeberg admittedly hostile to Bridges, not only did the Attorney General fail to rule on the basis of Lundeberg's testimony alone that he had been a member of the party, but beyond that, the Board of Immigration Appeals significantly concluded that apart from O'Neil's unsworn statements, the evidence of Bridges' membership was too flimsy to support a finding. It is thus idle to consider what the Attorney General might have ruled on the basis of other evidence before him. Citing U. S. v. Dutton. The issue of membership was too close and too crucial to the case to admit of mere speculation. Since it was error to admit O'Neil's unsworn statements against Bridges, since they were so crucial to the findings of membership, and [949] since the issue was so close, we are unable to say that the order of deportation may be sustained without them."

May it please the Court, that is both a finding of fact and a conclusion of law, that the evidence was insufficient. The Court continues:

> "In these habeas corpus proceedings, the alien does not prove he had an unfair hearing merely by proving the decision is wrong or by showing that incompetent evidence was admitted and considered. (Citing a case.) But the case is different where evidence was improperly received, and but for that evidence it is wholly speculative whether the requisite finding would have been made. Then there is deportation without fair hearing, which may be corrected on habeas corpus (citing a case). Since Harry Bridges has been ordered deported on a misconstruction of the term 'affiliation' as used in the statute, and by reason of an unfair hearing on the question of his membership in the Communist Party, his detention under the warrant is unlawful. Accordingly, it is unnecessary to consider larger constitutional questions which have been advanced in the challenge to the legality of petitioner's detention under the deportation order. The judgment below is reversed."

Now, may it please the Court, the ordinary or extraordinary—in the criminal case it is the duty of the jury to find the defendant not guilty unless he has been proven guilty beyond [950] all unreasonable doubt. It is true that the verdict is not guilty, but in fact, looking from the form to the substance, the verdict is not proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. And that verdict, as the cases which we have cited to Your Honor show, is an adjudication, not merely that he has not been proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but that the facts which the Government or the prosecution presented against him, and on which to convict him, were not true.

Now, here we have a verdict, as it were, of the Supreme Court of the United States. It isn't a general verdict of not guilty, it is one that goes into detail to point out not only that Harry Bridges was not proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but that he was not even proven guilty by that scintilla of competent evidence which would make the decision of the Attorney General conclusive. We point out that in the Bridges case, Bridges v. Wixon, there were two questions presented for decision and only two. One was whether Harry Bridges then was or had ever been, since his entry into the United States in 1920, a member of the Communist Party. And the other was whether Harry Bridges then was or ever had been, since his entry into the United States in 1920, affiliated with the Communist Party. Those were the ultimate issues of fact which were presented to the Supreme Court for its decision, and those are the issues of fact upon which the Supreme Court decided, and which we are here citing as being res judicata as far as the introduction of [951] any evidence tending to show that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party at any time prior to the date of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Bridges v. Wixon.

Thank you.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases——.

The Court: We might take a short recess, five or ten minutes.

Mr. Donohue: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Recess.)

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases Your Honor, I am certain that the reading of the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Bridges v. Wixon did not bring to Your Honor's attention that decision for the first time, because I can recall Your Honor saying some six weeks ago when I thought we had concluded an examination into the questions of law when reference was made into th[illegible] case, Your Honor saying, "Please don't read it to me; the Court is quite familiar with it. If there is some portion to which you would like to direct my attention, the Court would be glad to hear. And thus in spite of the fact it has just been read to Your Honor, I would like to invite to Your Honor's attention what seems to be an apparent fact from the case of Bridges v. Wixon and that is that [952] after certain testimony was taken before the Hon. Judge Sears, he made a finding of fact in consequence of which that finding of fact was sent to the Board of Immigration Appeals and ultimately to the Attorney General. In that finding of fact, as the Supreme Court says, he eliminated the testimony of a great many witnesses on the ground that the evidence resulting therefrom was too flimsy to consider; and he based his conclusion on the testimony of two persons, the sworn testimony of Harry Lundeberg and the unsigned, unsworn statements of O'Neil which were admitted in evidence. The trial examiner said either one of these two bits of evidence alone, justify a finding of membership which entitles the United States to deport. When that opinion was reviewed by the Attorney General, the Attorney General grouped the two, and he said on the testimony of Harry Lundeberg, supported by that evidence of O'Neil, unsigned and unsworn to, together, support a finding of membership upon which the Attorney General ordered a deportation.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the opinion just read, by Justice Douglas and read by my colleague, said the evidence of O'Neil, unsworn to, unsigned, was improperly admitted by Judge Sears; therefore could not be considered by the Attorney General. Since the Attorney General had made his finding of fact on the evidence of O'Neil, plus Lundeberg, and since O'Neil's testimony was declared illegally before the Attorney General by the Supreme Court, it had to find, and [953] found only, that because of the illegal admission of the evidence of O'Neil that the Attorney General could not sustain the order of deportation because he had stated he drew that order and issued that order on the combination of O'Neil and Lundeberg. And that is as far as the Supreme Court of the United States goes, despite the repeated statements I heard in this court that the Supreme Court of the United States has found Harry Bridges not a member of the Communist Party. The Supreme Court of the United States has only said that the Attorney General of the United States, having found him a member of the Communist Party and subject to deportation, on a combination of the testimony of Lundeberg and O'Neil, finding O'Neil's testimony illegally admitted, that the judgment could not be sustained on the uncorroborated testimony of Mr. Lundeberg; and even in so finding, the Supreme Court said, "We do not have to decide what our position would be had the Attorney General said, as Judge Sears said, on the testimony of Lundeberg alone, 'I find Bridges a member of the Communist Party and order him deported.' "

So that point wasn't even decided by the Supreme Court because, of course, it wasn't before it. And so as a practical matter, in asking a simple question of a witness about a conversation had between him and one of these defendants, and the raising of the issue of res judicata, I say, with deep respect to Your Honor, and in full accord with the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Bridges v. Wixon, that if there was any [954] matter excluded by the Supreme Court of the United States, it was only a determination that the Attorney General's decision, based upon a combination of the evidence of two men, could not be sustained, when the evidence of one of those men was held illegally admitted because it was unsigned and [954-A] unsworn to.

And so as a matter of fact, there could not be any question of res adjudicata in this matter. I hope, if your Honor please, what once and for all that will settle the case of Bridges v. Wixon as far as this proceeding is concerned, just as I think your Honor completely settled the issue, and I ask your Honor's indulgence to briefly read for the record, because I think it should be in the record, following the statement just made by Mr. Cleary, from your Honor's own opinion rendered in consequence of four days of lengthy argument, argument which was perhaps longer but equally eloquent with the presentation made by Mr. Cleary today, in which Mr. James Lawrence Fly, in which Mr. Herbert Resner, in which Mr. Norman Leonard, and in some slight measure Mr. George Andersen, participated.

The Court: Including Mr. Goodman from Seattle.

Mr. Donohue: Including Mr. Goodman from Seattle; in consequence of which, on the question of double jeopardy, former acquittal and res adjudicata, your Honor found as follows:

> "The defendant Bridges invokes the doctrines of double jeopardy, former acquittal, and so forth, as a basis for the dismissal of the indictment.
> "Defendant Bridges says, 'But this is not a simple prosecution. This case has become a cause celebre, taking its place in history with the prosecution of Peter Zenger, [955] the witchcraft crimes of the early Colonial days, the alien and sedition prosecutions of the post-period of World War I, and prosecutions of the

Haymarket riot, Tom Mooney, and Sacco and Vanzetti.'

"Your Honor, it is contended that the institution of this criminal prosecution places Harry Bridges in jeopardy because 'He has heretofore been so subjected to jeopardy on four prior separate and distinct cases contrary and in violation of the Fifth Amendment.'

"This contention of the historic and atmospheric background does not provide a legal basis for the dismissal of the indictment. It appears affirmatively from the record that the defendant Bridges has never been subjected to criminal prosecution under the statutes which form the basis for the present indictment, nor has he ever been subjected to criminal prosecution by the United States Government prior to the bringing or institution of the within prosecution. There has been no double jeopardy within the meaning of the said Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The defendant concedes that the earlier proceedings against him warrant 'technically criminal prosecutions,' but argues because the result of the earlier civil proceedings, such as the deportation hearings, might have ended in a more severe penalty than a criminal penalty, that the civil proceedings should be [956] considered criminal in nature and extent.

"The Court has not been referred to any rule or principle of law or reason which would support this novel contention. Counsel for the defendant, however, with great force seeks to have this trial court depart from well-known principles and launch upon some heroic venture, and at this stage of the proceedings strike the criminal indictment down and render ineffectual the efforts of the Government in the prosecution of what the Government regards as felonious conduct on the part of the defendant Bridges. If more compelling reasons were present than may appear in the case at bar, this court under accepted and well recognized rules is foreclosed from deciding the case at this stage upon constitutional grounds. See Baker v. Greeve, 169 U. S. page 284, 292; Arkansas Fuel Oil Company v. Louisiana, 304 U. S. page 197 and 202.

"Suffice in disposing of this branch of the defendant's argument to say, (a) defendant Bridges has never been the subject of a criminal prosecution under any statute arising out of the facts and circumstances present in the case at bar.

"(b) The 'double jeopardy' provision of the Constitution requires that there be a second prosecution for the same offense.

"(c) No court of the United States, as far as I know, [957] has ever held that a prior civil action or proceeding may be considered a criminal prosecution for the purpose of invoking this provision of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. See Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U. S. page 391 to page 399.

"(d) Due process of law. The instant ground urged by the defendant Bridges, as well as the other two defendants, is that of the due process clause. He says in this connection that under the indictment he is deprived of his life, liberty and property without due process in that the instant proceeding, criminal in nature, is the fifth of a series of such proceedings. This contention on Mr. Bridges' part is based upon the erroneous predicate that the prior proceedings were criminal in nature. As to the defendants Robertson and Schmidt, the contention is devoid of any merit, and accordingly the several motions based upon this ground are and each of them is denied." [958]

I think there is no reason for further support to the position which your Honor took then on the point which is exactly the point which is raised, but with your Honor's indulgence, may I briefly call your attention to two cases. One is the case of Sourins v. United States, which is reported in 86 Fed. 2d at page 309, and which was decided in the Fifth Circuit of the Court of Appeals on November 17, 1936, Circuit Judge Holmes.

> "This appeal is from a decree canceling the appellant's certificate of naturalization upon findings that it had been fraudulently and illegally procured. The proceeding was in accordance with Section 405, Title 8 of United States Code. It was instituted by the District Attorney after an indictment under Section 414 of said title, referring to Title 8, U.S.C.A., page 414, for fraudulent procurement of his naturalization, which resulted in a verdict of not guilty, and a judgment discharging the appellant."

Then skipping a recitation of the facts and coming to the opinion of the Court:

> "The principal issue for our determination is the sufficiency of the plea of res adjudicata to sustain which it is essential, among other things, either that the cause of action be the same or that the exact point was in issue and decided."

Citing numerous cases including Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. at page 351, and the case of Russell v. [959] Place, 94 U. S. at page 606. This proceeding to cancel appellant's certificate of naturalization is not the same cause of action as the prosecution by indictment referred to, but it is an additional remedy for correcting an error in the original proceeding granting naturalization. It was designed to afford cumulative protection against fraudulent or illegal naturalization. The fact that naturalization may be revoked as an incident to conviction of fraudulent or illegal procurement thereof does not give the required identity to the two proceedings or to the thing previously sought to be obtained by them, nor does it appear that any issue here in controversy was adjudicated in the criminal prosecution where the sole issue was the bar of the statute of limitations. It follows that the facts shown by this record do not sustain a plea either of res adjudicata or estoppel by prior judgment.

One other opinion, if your Honor please, which was found in Volume 186 of the Federal Reporter at page 479, the case of Williams, Immigration Commissioner, v. the United States, to the use of Bougadis, an appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States from the Southern District of New York, habeas corpus proceeding, on the relation of Antonios Bougadis against William Williams, Commissioner of Immigration, from an order discharging realtor, the Commissioner appeals.

> "Circuit Judge Coxe: The appellee, Antonios Bougadis, an alien, arrived here March 28, 1910, on the steamship Martha [960] Washington, where he had taken a second cabin passage from Greece under the name of Dimitrios Papos. He was admitted as a citizen upon the production of citizenship papers issued to said Papos by the County Court of Westchester County, N. Y. He was arrested upon a warrant issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and the facts were fully investigated before a board of special inquiry, which found that he had secured admission to this country by false representations as stated. On these facts the board recommended his deportation.
> "(1) There can be no doubt whatever that the appellee came here under the name of Dimitrios Papos, and secured admission as a citizen by falsely representing himself to be Dimitrios Papos, and presenting naturalization papers issued to said Papos. In other words, he secured his admission to this country by fraud. The immigration act of 1907 provides that any alien who shall enter this country in violation of law shall be deported to the country from whence he came. We are of the opinion that an alien who falsely represents himself to be a citizen, and by such artifice and fraud secures admission to this country, has entered contrary to and in violation of law. Any other construction would render the act abortive, if the alien succeeds in consummating his fraud. The most undesirable immigrant may in this way secure admission to the country. [961] He may be diseased, a criminal and a pauper, and yet evade the law intended to discover his physical, moral and financial status. One who by fraud succeeds in circumventing the law, and who thus secures advantages to which he is not entitled, violates the law.

"(2) In our judgment, the direction of the verdict upon the trial of the indictment is not res judicata of the present proceeding. That was a criminal trial, under section 79 of the Criminal Code (U. S. Comp. St. Supp, 1909, p. 1414), in which the government was required to establish the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. This is a proceeding under an entirely different law, instituted by executive officers of the government to ascertain whether an alien should be deported. It is not a criminal trial. No punishment has been or can be inflicted. The department charged with the administration of the law has decided, on ample evidence, that the appellee was improperly admitted to this country. As was said by the Supreme Court in Turner v. Williams, 194 U. S. 279, at page 289, 24 Sup. Ct. 719, at page 722, 48 L. Ed. 979:

> "'Repeated decisions of this court have determined that Congress has the power to exclude aliens from the United States; to prescribe the terms and conditions on which they may come in; to establish regulations for sending out of the country such aliens as have entered in violation [962] of law, and to commit the enforcement of such conditions and regulations to executive officers; that the deportation of an alien who is found to be here in violation of law is not a deprivation of liberty without due process of law, and that the provisions of the Constitution securing the right of trial by jury have no application.'
> "The order discharging the appellee is reversed."

There could certainly be no doubt in Your Honor's mind, from Your Honor's own familiarity with the law in this case, that the proceedings involving the defendant Harry Bridges before an administrative officer of the Immigration Service, looking to the question of his deportation, in which it was endeavored to prove at that time either that he was one who was affiliated with the Communist Party or that he was a member of the Communist Party or that the Communist Party sought, taught and advocated the overthrow of the government of the United States by force and violence, which question did not come before the Supreme Court, because of its decision on the question of affiliation and on the question of membership. Your Honor can not certainly confuse that matter of an administrative hearing before an officer of the Immigration Service and the present indictment in which the United States is still a party, in which the defendant Harry Bridges is still a party, and in which also the defendants Schmidt and Robertson are parties. The question is not the same. The degree of proof is not the [963] same. The facts are not the same. There can be no more problem in determining whether or not the rule of res judicata applies here than there is difficulty in determining that there is a difference between a deportation proceeding under the Naturalization Act and an indictment, a criminal indictment, charging in substance the perjurious answer to a material question.

I most respectfully say, if Your Honor pleases, that the line of questioning as suggested by the instant question before the witness, the witness should be permitted to answer, and that the objection should be overruled.

The Court: One moment, counsel. Mr. Cleary raises the point or issue that the problem presented is one of a mixed question of law and fact. What have you to say on that phase?

Mr. Donohue: I have not heard any authority on that proposition, if Your Honor please.

The Court: He raises it. He asserted it.

Mr. Donohue: I say, of course, whether or not the doctrine of res judicata applies, just the same as the question whether or not the doctrine of double jeopardy applies, is wholly a matter of law, and that matter of law has already been decided by Your Honor, and that the present discussion as a matter of fact is precluded.

While I am here, may I suggest one more case in the event Your Honor should care to read it? It is the case of United [964] States v. Ness, found in 38 Supreme Court Reports at page 118, holding that though under Section 409 of the Immigration Act the government appears and opposes a petition for failure to file a certificate of arrival, an order of naturalization does not preclude a suit subsequently to cancel that certificate. I think that is also a point. [964]

Mr. Cleary: May it please the Court, I thought that in my argument I had made it clear that we were not now urging the plea of double jeopardy, that we were raising an entirely different issue. Yet counsel in his reply spent about half of his time going over the matter of double jeopardy and pointing out why it was not applicable. I admit that it is not applicable at this time. It isn't a rule of evidence, the doctrine of res adjudicata is a rule of evidence.

Now, concerning the two cases from which counsel read, the first sustains our contention; in that case there was no issue of the guilt or innocence of the defendant decided. There was merely an adjudication that the statute of limitations had run, and of course an adjudication that the statute of limitations had run is not an adjudication that the offense charged was not proven. As to the second of the two authorities cited, I may call your attention to the fact that it is contrary to the holding of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Coffey v. The United States, and that the decision in Coffey v. The United States is still being cited and followed by the Supreme Court of the United States. And I will give your Honor one case in which, subsequent to that decision, it was cited with approval and followed, and that is the case of United States v. Oppenheimer, which we have already discussed.

Now, certainly res adjudicata is applicable in civil [965] cases. In civil cases the burden is upon the plaintiff to establish his claim by a preponderance of the evidence. A jury's verdict finding for one of the parties and against the other, unless there are special interrogatories, makes no finding on any of the facts in issue. The decision is for the plaintiff or for the defendant. Yet your Honor knows that once one of the parties has obtained such a judgment and it has become final, it bars out of any action between those parties at any other time or in that court or any other court the facts covered by the pleadings which were put in issue by the pleadings and which were determined by the verdict, merely on the basis, in case the decision is for the defendant, not proven by a preponderance of the evidence. We say that in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Bridges v. Wixon it is in legal effect not only a holding that Bridges was not proven to be a Communist, a member of the Communist Party, that it was not proven so beyond all reasonable doubt, which would be the case in a criminal case—and lacking that proof, he would get a verdict of acquittal. It not only held that Bridges was not proven to be a Communist by a preponderance of the evidence, but it went so far, in effect, as to hold that Bridges was not proven to be a Communist by that scintilla of competent evidence which is sufficient on habeas corpus proceedings to sustain the action of the Attorney General. But it is in effect a general verdict [966] of not guilty, of not proven. And that is the factual basis upon which 90 per cent of your cases of res adjudicata are involved.

We submit our objection to the question.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, do you have anything further?

Mr. Donohue: No further reply, if your Honor please.

The Court: All right. We have now reached a time after the four o'clock adjournment period. We have had a rather extended two or three days, and we will take our adjournment until Monday, November 28, at ten o'clock. The matter may stand submitted.

Mr. MacInnis: May I hold the Court a moment on another question?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: I think that some time would be saved over the week-end if we could be permitted to withdraw the instructions that we have proposed.

I have several amendments in mind, and I have discovered several typographical errors, and if I may have the instructions returned, I can augment them and have them back in your hands Monday.

The Court: I will hand them to Mr. Mitchell, and you may have them. The court will then stand regularly adjourned in this trial until next Monday, November 28, at ten o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Monday, November 28, 1949, at 10:00 [967] a.m.)

November 28, 1949, 10:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: I am filing herein a memorandum opinion and order overruling the objections to the testimony of the witness John Schomaker.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, Your Honor; before that point might I make an objection?

The Court: The order is filed.

Mr. Hallinan: Would Your Honor permit me to make the objection before the filing of the order?

The Court: The copies may be distributed to counsel. Now, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I had an objection to make, Your Honor, to the filing of the order. I wanted to make it, of course, before the order was made. Might it be considered the objection is made before the order?

The Court: What is the purpose?

Mr. Hallinan: The purpose is we filed on Saturday under Rule 25 of the Judicial Code an affidavit and certificate to disqualify Your Honor from further participation in this proceeding, and the rule plainly states that upon the filing of such affidavit the Court shall take no further proceeding in the matter, and so we object to the filing of this order and to [968] this judge proceeding further.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I have read the affidavit filed herein by Mr. Bridges, as well as the accompanying document. It is the opinion of this Court that the affidavit and/or the affidavits were not filed timely. There is no good cause shown for the failure to file timely, and that the affidavit or affidavits and the motion itself are and each of them is legally insufficient as a matter of law, and in support of my statement, Mr. Hallinan, I refer you to Price v. Johnston, 125 Fed. 2d. 806 at 811; Sanders v. Allen, 58 Fed. Sup. 417 at 419; the decision of Judge Yankwich in Cole v. Loew's Incorporated, 76 Fed. Sup. 872; in re Beecher, 50 Fed. Sup. 530 at 532; Refoir v. Lansing Drop Forge Company, 124 Fed. 2d. 440 at 444.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we add this, Your Honor, in order to have the record straight, that Your Honor's order refusing to disqualify yourself precedes the ruling upon the motion or the objection to Schomaker's testimony, because obviously the first thing before the Court is the motion of disqualification, because if it were good, you would concede that this order could not be made. If Your Honor rules it not good, that should precede the ruling upon the objection.

The Court: In terms of sequence of procedural technique, I suppose that, in the light of the filing of the motion on Saturday, as you did, the matter comes before the Court. I have disposed of it. In the light of the sequences, then, the order [969] with respect to the examination of Mr. Schomaker may be deemed made in subsequent point of time to my other order, and in connection with the order I have made in connection with the affidavit claiming bias and prejudice, they are and each of them is taken from the files of this court.

Mr. Cleary: May it please the Court——

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cleary: I have not had a chance to read the Court's memorandum opinion.

The Court: A copy is being presented to you.

Mr. Cleary: Yes, but for the purpose of the record I now want to make the same objection, but instead of specifying the date upon which the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States was filed, I wish to specify the date upon which the opinion or order of the Attorney General was filed. Will you make the same ruling?

The Court: I do not follow you, Mr. Cleary. I have made my order. This is the second time in point of procedure that I have ruled on this particular motion. I have ruled on it in advance of trial after lengthy arguments. [970] And I listened to you the other day patiently, and I think with a degree of patience that might at times be wearing on me. Now I have ruled. My ruling is sufficient unto the day. It is recorded in this court and you have copies thereof. You may review it hereafter if the occasion should arise.

Mr. Cleary: If I may say a word. The present objection upon which your Honor ruled was that the decision in Bridges v. Wixon was res adjudicata as to all evidence tending to show that Bridges was a Communist, up to the date of that decision. There may be a question, the appellate court may at some time in the future raise the question, "Well, the objection was good had it been made as of some previous date."

The Court: Counsel, I shall not assume to be prophetic as to what the appellate courts may have in mind. I have made a very clear order and an exposition of my views, and that suffices. That is all, sir.

Mr. Cleary: Well, I just want to establish for the record——

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cleary: I now make the motion, or the objection, that it is res adjudicata as of the day the Attorney General's opinion or decision was filed. I assume your Honor is going to——

The Court: I think——

Mr. Cleary: ——sustain that.

The Court: I think the order will stand and will probably [971] answer your question.

Mr. Cleary: Well, I woud like a direct ruling.

Mr. Donohue: May I be heard?

The Court: The ruling is on file, Mr. Cleary.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I think if Mr. Cleary looks, as I just have, at the order which your Honor has just filed, particularly with reference to page 3, to the statement in your Honor's opinion that "It appeared thereafter that the crucial finding of the Attorney General was arrived at in reliance upon incompetent testimony in violation of a regulation of the Department designed to insure fair hearing and to safeguard the rights of aliens" that it answers the question of counsel, and would indicate that your Honor's ruling would be as well toward the admissibility of this evidence subsequent to the date of the finding of the Attorney General, and subsequent to the date of the opinion of the Supreme Court.

The Court: Call the next witness, Mr. Schomaker.

Mr. Cleary: May the record show an exception?

The Court: Yes, sir. It isn't necessary, counsel, to take exception. That rule has long since been dispensed with in these courts.

The Clerk: Call Mr. Schomaker. Call the jury.

(The jury then came into the courtroom and assumed their respective places in the jury box.)

The Court: Is it stipulated that the jurors are present? [972]

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: You may proceed. Call Mr. Schomaker, please. Mr. Schomaker is called for further direct examination by Mr. Donohue.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed.

Direct Examination

The Court: You may direct the witness' attention to the last question.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, on Wednesday last I asked you this question, to which objection was made, and his Honor has ruled that you may answer the question: "And will you state to his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, as you now recall it, the conversation that was had at Mr. Bridges' home when you and Herman Mann were there present, whether it was something that you said or Mr. Mann said or Mr. Bridges said?"

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. To identify the time, as I have forgotten it, is that sometime in 1933?

Mr. Donohue: On page 880 of the record——

The Court: The record reflects that it was in 1933 in the fall of the year. [973]

Mr. Donohue: Yes. Page 880. In the fall of the year.

Mr. Hallinan: In the fall of the year?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: October, I think; is that correct, sir?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

A. Well, after he went into the room, why, Bridges was introduced to me and I was introduced to him. And the purpose of our visit was to discuss the——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that, your Honor, as stating something not responsive to the question, stating an opinion and conclusion. He is asked as to the conversation, not as to the purpose of his visit.

Mr. Donohue: May I meet the objection by another question, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you state to Mr. Bridges the purpose of your visit?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that, if your Honor please, as leading and suggestive. He should ask for what conversation took place.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: You may answer the question, Mr. Schomaker.

A. Well, the reason we were there was to discuss the problems on the waterfront and to——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Your Honor, I ask that that be stricken out as not responsive and as stating an [974] opinion and conclusion. This witness is asked as to a conversation that took place. He is now stating what his opinion and conclusion is with regard to the purpose of the visit.

The Court: Mr. Schomaker, may I interrupt you? Will you state the conversation to the best of your recollection, the parties present at that time and place, what Mr. Bridges said to you, what you said to him, to the best of your recollection?

The Witness: Well, Bridges says, "What's doing?" And I answered, "We are out here to get an article for the Waterfront Worker, and to discuss with you the problems on the waterfront," which we did. And the upshot of the meeting was that I was——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Pardon me. Object to that, your Honor. Now he has stated the conversation, and the rest of this is——

The Court: You may address another question to him.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, will you tell his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what was said by Mr. Bridges at any time during this meeting at his home, just his conversation.

A. Well, Bridges said that it was time that something was being done to revitalize the ILA.

Q. And did you make any response to that?

A. "That is the reason that we are here, is to write an article [975] for the Waterfront Worker, to do just that." And the upshot of it was that Mr. Bridges agreed to write an article.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment, Mr. Schomaker. Object to that——

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did Mr. Bridges say he would do?

A. He said he would write an article for the Waterfront Worker.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Object to it again as leading and suggestive and as assuming something not in evidence. Now, your Honor, he should state the conversation.

The Court: Well, he has, to some extent. I will strike the word "upshot" or "the upshot of the conversation"; that perhaps was his own observation.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did Mr. Bridges say with respect to or in response to your question?

A. Bridges said he would write an article.

Q. And was that the end of the visit and the end of the conversation?

A. Well, we discussed other things. That is, the general situation on the waterfront.

Q. Can you recall at any time, or can you recall now anything that Mr. Bridges may have said with respect to the situation on the waterfront or anything that you may have said to him or that Mr. Mann may have said to him?

A. Well, as I explained, we discussed the situation. And as Bridges said, we needed to take some action to revitalize the ILA. [976]

Q. Did he offer any suggestion, meaning by "he" Mr. Bridges?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive. He hasn't stated——

The Court: Yes, that is correct, counsel.

Mr. Donohue: I agree with your Honor. I withdraw the question.

Q. What did Mr. Bridges say with respect to the conditions on the waterfront?

A. Well, that the action needed to be taken to overcome the leadership of the people who were elected officials of the ILA at that time.

Q. And what did he say about those officials and what was he going to do about it, what he suggested to do about it?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me: May I state that my understanding of the rule in matters of this kind is this: that the witness is asked the conversation; now, he is supposed to state the conversation in the exact words, if he can, and if he can't in the context. And unless he says that he cannot remember anything further, these leading questions cannot be asked. Now, counsel hasn't done that. He is simply putting words in the witness' mouth.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, may I ask you to refrain from any suggestion of a leading question?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor. Your Honor of course understands that this witness is testifying as to his recollection [977] of a conversation which occurred a good many years ago. I think it is quite apparent even to Mr. Hallinan that his recollection of his distinct words, and those which were said by any of the persons there, was exhausted soon after he was inquired of with respect to this particular meeting.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest, your Honor, that Mr. Schomaker claims to have been present at the conversation. I don't understand Mr. Donohue was. So if Mr. Schomaker does not remember what was said, I don't think the deficiency can be supplied from Mr. Donohue's memory.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, have you told us everything that you recall, either by way of the exact words of Mr. Bridges or Mr. Mann or yourself, or the context of what they have said or did say? [978]

A. Well, no, there was more to the conversation than that, but I can't tell you with all these objections. I am not a lawyer, you know.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that the last remark of the witness be stricken out and that the jury be instructed to disregard it.

The Court: Yes, the last remark of the witness, Mr. Schomaker, to the effect that he is not a lawyer may be stricken from the record and the jury is admonished to disregard the statement. You might, in the light of the objections, address the question to Mr. Schomaker mindful that the years relate to 1933, is that correct?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, have you exhausted your recollection of the conversation that was had among you three persons at Mr. Bridges' home?

A. Why, no, there was more to it than that.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Will you state in your best manner what you do recall of that conversation?

A. Well, when the objection was raised to the officials of the ILA that something needed to be done, and it was not quite clear just what was needed to be done, whether to continue to make the fight in the ILA or to divert it to the MWUI and make the fight through the MWUI, which was an industrial union comprising mostly seamen, we kicked that around for quite a while [979] and the conclusion that was drawn——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to the statement.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was stated——

The Court: One moment. The conclusion may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was stated by any of the persons present, Mr. Schomaker?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Your Honor, that is asking the witness, disregarding Your Honor's ruling, to state a conclusion. The witness is testifying to a conversation and doing all right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was stated by any of the persons present, Mr. Schomaker?

A. I think it was Mann who suggested that we should run an article on the basis of having the men pay up, those who were delinquent in their dues in the ILA, that we should stress the fact that the members who were members of the ILA should pay up their dues and those who were not members should join.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. At that time were you a member of the ILA?

A. I was, yes.

Q. And to your knowledge, was Mr. Herman Mann a member of the ILA?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion and, Your Honor, again it is not the best evidence. There is no showing that the records of these organizations are not available. This is asking for an [980] opinion and conclusion.

The Court: The objection is overruled, and I base my ruling on the Marzani case.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, could I say something on the Marzani case? It will only take a minute.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: In the Marzani case, Your Honor will remember the Court pointed out that no objection had been made in asking the question. The Court said that no objection was made to any of those questions. However, every answer contained some sort of conclusion of fact.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I have analyzed that in the light of your anticipated objection and the objection heretofore made. It may go to the weight of the evidence, but you have full scope of cross-examination to cross-examine him throughly on the basis of his knowledge.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you answer the question?

A. If Herman Mann was a member?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. To your knowledge.

A. To my knowledge, Hermann Mann was a paid-up member of the ILA.

Q. To your knowledge, was Mr. Bridges a member of the ILA?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled. [981]

A. Well, whether Bridges was a member of the ILA or not I don't know. I know several times he was delinquent in his dues——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, Mr. Schomaker, please. I think when an objection is made the witness should be asked to desist from continuing his answer until the objection is finished. He has answered the question that he does not know. He starts now to give an argument upon which a conclusion might be based.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, how long did you remain at Mr. Bridges' home on the occasion you have been testifying to?

A. That evening, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I imagine we were there two and a half hours.

Q. You have mentioned that you were discussing articles for the Western Worker?

A. No, the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Will you tell us what the Waterfront Worker was?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, Your Honor, asking for an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The Waterfront Worker is a paper that was a mimeographed paper that was published at first bi-monthly and later weekly. It was a paper that was published by a group of longshoremen who were members of the Communist Party——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Might I make this further objection, [982] Your Honor? I do not like to be continually objecting, but Your Honor realizes my position. I have to make the objection or they are deemed waived. No proper foundation is laid to show this gentleman's knowledge of what the Waterfront Worker was, who founded it.

The Court: Counsel, may I ask you to give more scope to these questions? Make a little picture as to what that is. We hear it for the first time. I hear it and I am interested.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you have any official connection with the Waterfront Worker?

A. In 1933 and 1934 and up until the time it was liquidated I was the editor.

Q. At the time when you were at Bridges' home with Herman Mann, did you have any official position with the Waterfront Worker?

A. No, I had no official position with the Waterfront Worker at that time.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. When did you obtain or attain an official position with that publication?

A. It was around Thanksgiving of 1933.

Q. That is the same year?

A. The same year.

Q. Will you tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what the Waterfront Worker was?

A. Well, the Waterfront Worker was a mimeographed paper put out—issued in those years, 1933 and 1934, the early part of [983] 1934, as a bi-monthly paper, and later it became a weekly, and this paper was edited by Communist Party members——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that, if the Court please, and I also have to make the objection now, Your Honor, and offer in evidence a document that I do not want to discuss, because I do not want to have some further visitation inflicted upon me, but this is also res judicata as to the nature of this paper. That has heretofore been passed upon. It is not what the gentleman just said it is. I ask that his answer be stricken.

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, the witness is testifying as to the nature of a publication of which he was the editor. As Your Honor has suggested, Mr. Hallinan has the right and will have the right of cross-examination to determine by cross-examination of this witness whether he is qualified to speak and to describe the publication of which he was the editor, but certainly the question itself is proper, the foundation having been laid, and I think the witness should be permitted to answer.

Mr. Hallinan: That is not my point. The point is, in the Landis decision it was specifically passed upon. The nature of this paper was specifically determined. We make the objection it was res judicata.

The Court: The objection is overruled, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you answer the question, Mr. [984] Schomaker?

A. What is the question?

Q. The nature of the Waterfront Worker at the time when you were editor of that publication. What was it?

A. The nature of the Waterfront Worker was to publish news of the waterfront and to receive the men's grievances, and to raise—editorials generally contained the policy of the union—the correct policy which the progressive forces or the Communist Party members——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Your Honor, I ask that that be stricken out and I make the further objection, Your Honor, that now this witness is invading squarely the province of the jury. No explanation is made as to why some copies of the Waterfront Worker are not produced here. I suppose they are available and the jury is entitled to make up its own mind as to the nature of it.

The Court: This man, Mr. Hallinan, apparently was the editor and as editor he is entitled to make observations as to the scope and purpose thereof, subject to whatever questions you may address to him. The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you continue, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, in the editorials it sought to lay down the policy which the Communists thought would be the correct policy for the union. Also it published, sought letters from the rank and file of their grievances, of being short-timed and being worked [985] overtime without being paid, heavy loads and any injustices or grievances from which they suffered were given voice in this paper. And as I said, the two principal reasons why it was published was, first, to direct the policy or lay down a policy which the Communists felt was the correct thing to follow; secondly, it was to hear the grievances of the men; and thirdly, to receive contributions from the men to keep up its publication.

Q. At any time, Mr. Schomaker, during the period when you were the editor of the Waterfront Worker, did that publication receive any contributions by way of articles for publication from the defendant Harry Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute.

A. Numerous times.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that that be stricken out, Your Honor, until I can get the objection in. I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and no foundation laid. There is no foundation laid as to what he knows about it. It is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You may answer the question, Mr. Schomaker.

A. In determining each issue, we had a meeting of the editorial board and as the events occurred on the waterfront, we would try to determine what editorial needed to be written and [986] to be printed for the men to follow, and it was agreed that certain people would write certain editorials or certain stories and numerous times Bridges—it was ruled that he should write certain editorials, and I would like to say we had a hell of a time getting them from him. I had to visit him two or three times to get an article.

Q. Did he ultimately deliver them?

A. He ultimately delivered them after pressure, yes.

Q. Were they published, to your knowledge?

A. They were published, yes.

Q. Can you recall, Mr. Schomaker, when it was that you again met the defendant Harry Bridges and where?

A. Well, I wouldn't remember the exact place, no.

Q. After this first visit to his home in 1933, on how frequent occasions did you see him?

A. Well, it would be at the rate of two or three times a week.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Can you tell us generally where it was or under what circumstances it was that you saw him?

A. Well, either it would be at his home, at a prearranged—either at his home or other prearranged meeting place, and occasionally on the waterfront, either going to work or coming from work.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, do you know a man by the name of B. B. Jones?

A. Bruce B. Jones? I know him very well, yes.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. Well, Jones I have known since about the middle of the [987] depression, about 1931.

Q. Over how long a period of time did your acquaintance with him continue?

A. Why, up to the present time.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether or not B. B. Jones or Bruce B. Jones, as you have described him, was a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, Mr. Schomaker. I object to that, if the Court please, as not the best evidence, calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness. The records of the Communist Party itself, or Mr. B. B. Jones, would be the best proof of his membership of non-membership, and there is no reason——

The Court: Will you withdraw that question and lay a foundation for the asking thereof?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: The question is withdrawn, Mr. Hallinan.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, at any time during the period when you were a member of the Communist Party, did you ever attend a meeting, the attendance at which was restricted to the members of the Communist Party at which Mr. F. B. Jones was present?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please, and this is widening the scope now, calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and not the best evidence. [988]

The Court: Overruled. State all the circumstances surrounding this meeting.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you describe to His Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: Furthermore,—pardon me, Your Honor,—this is also subject to the objection that it was all apparently outside the presence of the defendants. It is not binding on them.

Mr. Donohue: I am going to bring it directly into the presence of the defendant, if counsel will permit a preliminary question.

Mr. Hallinan: The necessary preliminary question would be, first, that the defendant was present at some such meeting.

The Court: I assume Mr. Donohue is coming to that point. If he does not come to that point, it will be stricken.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I think the foundation should be laid first.

Mr. Donohue: I withdraw the question.

The Court: You withdraw the question?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: I withdraw the question.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, did you ever meet the defendant Harry Bridges in company with Mr. Bruce B. or Mr. B. B. Jones?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. That is objected to as leading and suggestive, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled. [989]

A. You asked if I ever met Bridges with B. B. Jones?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes.

A. Numerous times. Numerous times.

Q. Did you and Mr. B. B. Jones ever meet with the defendant Harry Bridges when no other persons were a party to your conversation, the meeting taking place in the cooperative restaurant at Stewart and Market Streets in the City of San Francisco?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as leading and suggestive and telling the witness what to say, Your Honor. Here is the whole thing, the whole statement.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you answer the question?

A. The question of the cooperative restaurant —if that is 1933, there was a restaurant on the corner of Stewart and Market, but it was not a cooperative restaurant, I don't think.

Q. What is your best recollection of the name of the restaurant?

A. I don't remember. It may have been Boyd's

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Restaurant. I think the cooperative restaurant went into operation in the early part of 1934, but there was a series of restaurants from the corner of Stewart Street to the Embarcadero. Olson's Restaurant was in there at one time.

Q. Did you ever meet in a restaurant on the corner of Stewart and Market Streets in 1933?

A. Lots of times I did.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to this as leading [990] and suggestive.

Mr. Donohue: Would you mind if I finished the question?

Mr. Hallinan: The witness has started to answer already. The witness answers so rapidly I have to make the objection so it won't go in at all.

Mr. Donohue: I withdraw the question.

The Court: The question is withdrawn.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you meet with Mr. Bridges and Mr. B. B. Jones in a restaurant at or near the corner of Stewart and Market Streets in the City of San Francisco?

Mr. Hallinan: I will ask that the witness wait until an objection can be made before snapping out an answer. We object to that as leading and suggestive.

The Court: Overruled. [991]

A. There is not a restaurant on the waterfront that I didn't meet with some member of the Communist Party, whether it was Jones or any other people.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out as not responsive, if the Court please.

The Court: The motion is granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): The question is whether you met in a restaurant with Mr. Bridges and Mr. Jones on a particular occasion.

A. I did, yes.

Q. What is your best recollection of where and when that meeting took place?

A. Well, that meeting took place in—well, whether you call it fall or winter—November or December of 1933. So it must have been what you term the winter of 1933. And——

Q. Yes? A. The occasion was that——

Q. You may not state the occasion, Mr. Schomaker, but you may state to his Honor and to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what you said to Mr. Bridges or what Mr. B. B. Jones said to Mr. Bridges as to the reason for your meeting with him, if you recall it.

Mr. Hallinan: If your Honor please, pardon me. I don't think that counsel has correctly enunciated to the witness what his rights and duties are. The witness' duties and [992] rights are to answer questions. Now, counsel says to him, "You may state to the jury so-and-so." Now, that is not a question; it is a direction to the witness. I think a question should have been asked.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, will you state to the jury and to his Honor what was said by either you or Mr. B. B. Jones to Mr. Bridges as to the purpose of your meeting with him.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: And pardon me; one other objection, your Honor. And might we have somewhat the same sort of agreement that we had before, that in view of the motion that was addressed to you by Mr. Cleary, we should propose an identical objection to each question, that all these matters are res adjudicata. Now, if it be understood that we make the objection that everything preceding the decision in 1945 is res adjudicata, I will not make that objection as to each separate question asked.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, will you stipulate to counsel to the end that we have a clear, definite statement in the record?

Mr. Donohue: Gladly, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall the question, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, I remember the one in there, the first thing Jones [993] says, "How about buying the coffee, Harry?" So, a cup of coffee was only a nickel in those days, so he went and got three cups of coffee and sat down.

Mr. Hallinan: I think, your Honor, that "a cup of coffee was only a nickel" should be stricken out, as it is a reminded of the sad conditions where we now exist, where it has gotten up to 15 cents a cup.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor please, it was only a recitation of a historical fact; certainly wasn't prejudicial to either side.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: No one can be injured by a nickel cup of coffee.

Mr. Donohue: I think not.

The Court: All right.

A. So they brought the coffee back to the table and proceeded to discuss the situation on the front. That was, all stevedores did that in those days, how lousy conditions were, and things that needed to be done to correct them. So when, in the course of the conversation, Jones put the $64 question to Mr. Bridges—

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was the question he put to Mr. Bridges?

A. The question was, "When are you going to join the Party, Harry?" And since Bridges already had the application,—

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out, if your Honor please, as stating an opinion and conclusion and [994] not responsive.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to that going out.

The Court: Yes, that last part may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): With reference to an application, did you see an application, Mr. Schomaker, in the possession of Mr. Bridges?

A. I know in those days we always packed three or four applications with us.

Q. You didn't actually at that time see one in the possession of Mr. Bridges?

A. No, but Jones had one.

Q. You saw one in the possession of Mr. Jones?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And did you have one yourself?

A. Oh, yes, I had several.

Q. Now, what was Mr. Bridges' response to the question of, "When are you going to join the Party?"

A. Well, Bridges acted kind of coy, you know, like he wanted to be coaxed a little bit. So,——

Mr. Hallinan: Ask that be stricken out.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection, if your Honor please.

The Court: Yes, it may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What did he, Mr. Schomaker, say?

A. Well, his objection was, he says, "What about the name?" And so Jones said, "Well, that should be pretty easy to figure [995] out a name." He says, "Pick out any name, like T. J. Plant, for instance. That would be a good name."

So Bridges laughed, said, "That would be a joke on Plant, wouldn't it, if I would get a Party book in Plant's name and drop it in front of the Waterfront Employers down there and let someone pick it up and let a little heat go on Plant for a change?" So, and then he says, "No, that wouldn't be a good name either."

So Jones said, "The best thing to do is what is generally done; use a name that you are familiar with, so you won't forget it. And I would suggest you use your mother's name."

So we discussed that for, oh, on that basis for a while, and then some guy called in, came in and called me outside for some reason, I don't remember what, and I went out and stayed 15 or 20 minutes, and then as I was going back in, Jones was coming out.

Q. Now, you may not state any conversation that was had between you and Mr. Jones while Mr. Bridges was absent, and I take it that when you met Mr. Jones coming out, Mr. Bridges was not with him? A. That's right.

Q. Now, where did you and Mr. Jones go, if you went together after you left this restaurant at the end of this conversation?

A. Well, we walked up Market Street. [996]

Q. And where did you go?

A. To 37 Grove.

Q. And may I ask you what was at 37 Grove Street?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, your Honor; it is calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, 37 Grove Street was the editorial office of the Western Worker and the headquarters of the Communist Party of California and San Francisco.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, while you were in transit from the restaurant where this conversation was had, and Communist Party Headquarters at 37 Grove Street, did Mr. Jones show you anything? A. He did, yes.

Q. What was it?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as calling for hearsay, not in the presence of the defendant. I understand the defendant was not present at any of this time.

Mr. Donohue: This isn't hearsay, if your Honor please. I am not asking for conversation; I am asking the witness if he was exhibited or shown anything by the witness Jones. He certainly can describe the fact.

The Court: He can state the fact if something was shown to him. [997]

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I think action, if your Honor pleases, is as much hearsay as words; in other words, showing a thing outside the presence of a party is as much making a statement as what was said. It is purely hearsay.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. He showed me an application of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And will you describe that application for his Honor and the members of the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, that it is hearsay, not binding on the defendant, words and acts that took place between this gentleman and Mr. B. B. Jones outside the presence of the defendant.

The Court: Do you have subsequent testimony with respect to the same document, conversations with reference thereto between this witness, Jones and Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: No, your Honor; but between this witness and Mr. Bridges.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You may describe the document, his Honor has said, or the application, as you call it.

A. This application blank was an orange card. It was about the same sized card as the ordinary postal card, and on it was the insignia of the Communist Party of America. In the left-hand corner, I think, in that particular application [998] it was. And it had some fine print which, in a few sentences, explained the aims of the Communist Party. And then it had the name of the applicant, the address, "Are you a trade union member?", "the number of workers employed in your plant," the— Then it had two blank spaces for sponsors. And then at the end it had the name of the applicant.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, your Honor. I ask that all that be stricken out, and I have here this further objection, if the Court please, that have not proved the unavailability of that document, and what this witness is purporting to do now is give secondary evidence of its contents without the foundation laid of its unavailability. I ask the answer be stricken out.

Mr. Donohue: We obviously cannot prove it is unavailable until we have first proven its existence, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, your Honor, they should try to prove that first. Now, if the card existed, there are means they could use for getting it or showing why it wasn't available, and this is putting in secondary evidence of the contents of a written instrument without first accounting for the fact that the written instrument is not available.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: May that objection precede the answer of the witness?

The Court: Yes, sir. [999]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Have you stated as best you can recall it the nature of this piece of paper you have been describing?

A. That's right; and on the reverse side it asked the—I think it also had a space there for the name that you were to use, your Party name.

Q. At that time you were yourself a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. The same objection has been made before, that it has been asked and answered, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is proper at this time, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled. He has answered it several times, Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: I understand.

Q. May I ask you, Mr. Schomaker, was the document which you have just described similar to the application blank for membership in the Communist Party which you had yourself signed on some prior occasion?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment, sir. We make the objection that that is again calling for secondary evidence. Now, at least the application that this gentleman says that he has been handling around ought to be available, and there is no reason for introducing secondary evidence in that event. I object [1000] to it as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. It was quite similar. Maybe there had been a few minor changes made in the text of the application.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, where were you when you first saw this application which you have just described?

A. We were walking along Market Street and we were just opposite the Lincoln Hotel.

Q. And when you say "we" you refer to yourself and B. B. Jones?

A. B. B. Jones and myself.

Q. Did you observe any handwriting on this application which you have described?

A. Oh, I did, because Jones showed it to me.

Q. And what handwriting did you see?

Mr. Hallinan: Now, just a moment. Same objection, if the Court please; calling for hearsay, opinion and conclusion of the witness, it is not the best evidence, and no reason is shown why secondary evidence should be introduced as to the contents of this document. No showing that the original is not available.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you answer the question.

A. Oh, it was the handwriting of H. R. Bridges.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, just a moment. Ask that be stricken [1001] out, if the Court please, and no foundation has been laid for that, and that is calling for an expert opinion.

The Court: That answer may go out. Will you ask this witness questions that may be considered as foundation for his observation that the handwriting was that of Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: But, if your Honor please, at this moment the witness has only stated that he saw in the handwriting of a H. R. Bridges. He has not yet said it was the handwriting of this defendant.

The Court: All right; H. R. Bridges.

Mr. Donohue: I expect to ask him whether he could identify it.

The Court: I was incorrect. I thought he had made the observation it was Mr. Bridges'.

Mr. Donohue: No, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I thought he had said, too. In fact, I think that's——

The Court: With that understanding, being in the record, it is stricken, then.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Because, your Honor, you understood it correctly.

The Court: That was my understanding, counsel.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, prior to the day about which you have been testifying, had you ever seen the defendant [1002] Harry Bridges write his name? A. I have, yes.

Q. And on how many occasions would you say?

A. Well,——

Q. And under what circumstances?

A. I have already said he submitted articles for the Waterfront Worker, written in longhand, which had to be typed first into a dummy and then later transposed onto a mimeograph sheet, or stencil.

Q. And how often had you seen specimens of his handwriting?

A. Well, I wouldn't specify whether they were a dozen or two dozen times, but it had been numerous times.

Q. Had you observed anything unusual about the handwriting of the defendant Harry Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to it as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for a conclusion and on a matter that he has not been qualified to pass upon.

The Court: I think so, counsel. I think it is asking for the unusual characteristics of a man's handwriting.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I think the law is pretty well settled that any one of us is able to testify, having seen the handwriting of an individual, as to whether or not in our opinion a sample or type of his handwriting is or is not from our past experience the handwriting of that individual. [1003]

The Court: Similar to.

Mr. Donohue: And I think we are all—yes, your Honor, similar to. And I think we are all capable of stating whether or not in our layman's analysis of one's handwriting, there was any peculiarity in the formation of characters or any other peculiarity which comes to our attention. That is all I have asked the witness.

The Court: How many occasions prior to this particular occasion had this gentleman seen or observed the handwriting and the signature—particularly the signature—of Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: Well, he has only testified as to the handwriting, your Honor. At least a dozen and perhaps two dozen times.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I ask this, your Honor; I think this is something the Court is entitled to know now, with fairness.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Is the prosecution in possession of this alleged document? Now, if they are, then it is the best evidence, and in good faith it should be produced.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: I cannot ask the prosecution whether they are presently in possession of it. I have to rule on these matters as they proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: But then that would go to the good faith [1004] of such inquiry, your Honor, as to whether or not this man is qualified to make such a determination, whether he is also, in addition to being an expert hod carrier, an expert handwriting expert.

Mr. Donohue: Are you questioning our good faith in asking the question?

The Court: What was the last question? Will you read it back, Mr. Reporter.

(Question read.)

The Court: This goes to the general handwriting, the characteristics that may be present in Mr. Bridges' handwriting.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: And his opinion as a lay person with respect to those characteristics.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor, and no further.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Will you answer the question.

A. Well, whether I am an expert hod carrier, or what?

The Court: No, no.

Mr. Donohue: No.

The Court: No, no. The last question, please, Mr. Reporter?

(Question read.)

The Court: You may answer that.

A. Well, the handwriting of Mr. Bridges is very legible, for [1005] one thing, and he writes very large, and his capitals, capital letters, that is, are generally made with a flourish and his signature is generally written, the H stretches like an S, and he runs them all together, the H, R, B. are generally run without—run in one letter without taking his pencil off the paper or pen off the paper.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, when you testified shortly ago that on numerous occasions you had seen articles submitted to the Western Worker in the handwriting of the defendant Harry Bridges, may I ask you now whether or not those articles were signed by Mr. Bridges?

A. Well, they weren't articles for the Western Worker. The articles were for the Waterfront Worker.

Q. I am sorry; the Waterfront Worker.

A. No, I don't think they were signed, no.

Q. Then on how many occasions have you actually seen Mr. Bridges sign his name or his name signed?

A. Well, I have saw it when he had written resolutions either to be submitted to the local trade union—that is, the local meeting—or we had a group functioning in the Albion Hall, where numerous resolutions were submitted. And there I saw his signature.

Q. His name was affixed to those resolutions?

A. Yes, they were.

Mr. Donohue: May we take our recess at this time? [1006]

The Court: Yes. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the morning recess and the same admonition to you as I have given in the past, not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you. You may step down, Mr. Schomaker.

(Recess.)

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Schomaker, from your stated familiarity with the signature of the defendant Harry Bridges, are you able to tell us whether or not in your opinion the name H. R. Bridges which you saw in the application you have described was or was not in the handwriting of the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. Definitely it was in the handwriting of Bridges.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out. That is not the question he was asked. He was asked whether or not in his opinion he could give an opinion. I ask that the answer go out.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue (To the Witness): The answer be either yes, you can give an opinion, or no, you can not give such an opinion.

The Court: The answer may go out pending the preliminary question.

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

Q. Are you able to state, in your opinion, whether it was or was not the signature of the defendant Harry Bridges? Will you answer the question yes or no? A. Yes, it was.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that go out.

The Court: The "yes" may stand. "It was" may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): In your opinion, whose signature was it [1007] that you saw on the application you have described to the Court and jury?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to it, if the Court please, as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and not the best evidence, again attempting to prove a document which has not been explained by secondary evidence, and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness on a matter for which no proper foundation has been laid.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. In my opinion, it was the signature of that of Harry Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: I am sorry. I didn't hear.

The Witness: This interruption kind of confuses me. What is the question? In my opinion, was the signature that of Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes, the Court stated you may give your opinion as to whether it was or was not the signature of Harry Bridges.

A. In my opinion, it was Harry Bridges' signature.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, when you and B. B. Jones went to Communist Party headquarters, did you see anything happen with respect to that application that you have described to the jury?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. We object to that, if the Court please, as res inter alios actae, matters done outside the presence of the defendant, not binding on the defendants, [1008] transactions between other persons, and hearsay.

The Court: I will overrule the objection on the condition that you attempt to fix the date, the persons present, and the place with more particularity.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What is your best recollection of the time at which the incident which you have described with respect to this application took place?

A. Well, it was about 10:00 o'clock in the morning in the fall or winter, ~~whatever you~~ want to term it, of 1933.

Q. In the City of San Francisco?

A. In the City of San Francisco, County of San Francisco.

Q. Can you tell us your best recollection of the time when you and Mr. Jones reached Communist Party headquarters?

A. We walked up Market Street, since we didn't have any money—short of dough in those days, so we walked up. I imagine it took us about 45 minutes. We arrived at headquarters about 11:00 o'clock.

Q. Who was present at headquarters whom you can now recall when you got there?

A. We saw different people there. George Morris was there. He was the editor of the Western Worker. There was a little guy there who sold literature. I don't recall his name. But we went upstairs. They had a mezzanine floor. We went up on this mezzanine floor into the office of Sam Darcy, who was a district organizer of District 13. [1009]

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that that be stricken out as stating the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: In what particular?

Mr. Halllinan: About Sam Darcy, what his occupation was.

The Court: That may go out.

Mr. Hallinan: He was just asked as to who were the people there. He can give the persons and then a description might be asked for.

The Court: That is correct. Give the parties present.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You say a man whom you have called Sam Darcy was there?

A. Yes, Sam Darcy was there.

Q. Will you tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury who Sam Darcy was? Now, don't answer until counsel has had an opportunity to object.

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that for the same reason. Of course, it is very difficult to have to get up and object to every question. I am afraid the jury will get a bad impression. They will understand if I do not make these objections, I waive them.

The Court: I will say to the jury at this juncture, Mr. Hallinan, if you desire, that counsel for the defendant is entitled to interpose objections to questions which in his opinion he believes to be incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial or hearsay. Those questions are addressed to the Court. I have ruled on them as you have observed. That is my function and my province exclusively. As I indicated to you, your province is to pass upon the facts, and as I further indicated, we work as a sort of team to that extent in channeling this evidence. Mr. Hallinan has urged these objections. It may well be—I am not saying that with particular reference to any phase of the testimony—if he did not urge the objections, he would be foreclosed hereafter from urging them in any reviewing court if the matter ever reaches such court; unless, of course, if counsel will stipulate with government counsel that an objection runs to a certain line of testimony. That procedure apparently could not be adopted here because the interrelation of the questions is such, I take it, he must interpose an objection. Is that satisfactory?

Mr. Hallinan: Thank you, and where it has been possible to get a stipulation, I have done that, on two occasions, to save the annoyance.

The Court: I say to you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, not to be prejudiced in any sense at all by Mr. Hallinan's interposing these objections.

Mr. Donohue: May I say, if the Court please, with respect to the pending objection and the instant question, the question being, "Mr. Schomaker, are you able to tell us who Mr. Sam Darcy was?"

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. I hadn't finished the objection. [1011] I object, too, if the Court please, on the ground that it is not the best evidence. There is no reason why Mr. Sam Darcy can not be produced to testify himself, or no reason shown why records can not be produced to identify who he was. It is calling for an opinion and conclusion and not the best evidence.

The Court: What particular bearing on this particular phase of the case has Mr. Darcy?

Mr. Donohue: I may say, if Your Honor please, to object to a question as to who Mr. Darcy was would be like, in my judgment, objecting to a police officer who might be on the stand being asked the question, "Who is the chief of police?" Or if a man was sitting on the stand, and was a member of Post No. 1 of the San Francisco American Legion, objecting to the question, "Who is the commander of your post?" It certainly is within his knowledge.

The Court: Bear in mind, Mr. Donohue, both the Court and jury meet the impact of this evidence for the first time.

Mr. Donohue: I quite understand it, but I never can develop who Mr. Darcy was if I am going to meet that objection to a question put to a witness who has qualified himself as the unit organizer and as a section organizer.

The Court: Let us as a preliminary question ask the witness the length of time he has known Mr. Darcy, and so forth, so there is some foundation laid for this question to which Mr. [1012] Hallinan objects as his conclusion and without foundation.

Mr. Hallinan: And might I suggest, Your Honor, this in direct connection with what counsel said: Ordinarily a witness is put on the stand and a question, "Who is the chief of police?" or "Who is the head of your order?" is not a matter of great moment. Nobody cares. But where the great issue is who is the chief of police, or where that becomes a material matter—I might point out to Your Honor that so important is a matter of that kind that after the 1906 fire in San Francisco, when Eugene Schmidts was sentenced to prison for accepting bribes, it was reversed on appeal because of the failure of the prosecution properly to prove that Eugene Schmidts was there in San Francisco. We can not take judicial notice of who else is of the government, officers of the city government, let alone from a witness who gets on the stand and sui spondi identifies people who are not directly related to the charge against the defendant.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, when did you first meet Mr. Sam Darcy?

A. Well, it was in the depression of the '30's, 1930 or early 1931, I met Sam Darcy.

Q. Where did you first meet him?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not binding on the defendants, res inter alios actae. [1013]

The Court: Overruled. The purpose of this line of evidence is to determine whether this witness had a capacity to identify him at the time and place in question more recently referred to in the evidence, and that is the reason and solely the reason for this background.

Q. The Court has indicated that you may tell us where it was you first met Sam Darcy.

A. Why, he was speaking at a meeting of the unemployed over on—in the California Hall. I think it is on Larkin Street. Anyway, it is the California Hall. Now, what street it is, I don't recall.

Q. Now, from that time until 1930 or '31, when you first met Mr. Darcy, until the day in 1933 about which you have recently testified, how often did you see Mr. Sam Darcy?

A. Well, I met him occasionally up to October, 1933, and then after 1933 up until the middle of or the end of '34, let's say—that is, 1933, October, November, to the end of 1934; that is, the fall of 1934, I saw him sometimes two and three times a day.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, in the interim between 1930 and '31 and October of 1933, when you saw Mr. Sam Darcy occasionally, where did you see him?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Why, I saw him at 37 Grove Street in San Francisco.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And at what part or place at 37 Grove Street, San Francisco, did you see him?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection again.

The Court: Overruled. [1014]

A. You mean in what part of the building was he?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes.

A. Oh, why, he had an office on the mezzanine floor at 37 Grove Street.

Q. Well, what was at 37 Grove Street?

A. Well, that was the——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as having been already asked and answered.

The Court: It has been, two or three times, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, in the interim between October of 1933 and some date which you gave us in 1934, when you say you saw Mr. Darcy sometimes twice a day, where was it that you had then seen him?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled. You may answer.

A. You mean where I met him in this time?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes. Where would you meet him?

A. Oh, at various places—at homes, at offices, and at 37 Grove Street, on the street, in restaurants.

Q. And would you tell his Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the purpose of your meeting Mr. Darcy during this period of time?

Mr. Hallinan: Now, there is a matter that is between other persons, not in the presence of the defendant, calling for hearsay, opinion and conclusion of the witness, asking him [1015] the purpose of his meetings.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, the purpose of this question, as your Honor has indicated to counsel, is not to bind either of the three defendants by the answer of a witness, but merely to qualify him as one capable of stating to your Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, in order to meet the objection of counsel, why it was he is able to tell us.

The Court. All right. For that limited purpose, ladies and gentlemen, the evidence is elicited from this witness to show background for knowledge and recollections of events, to the end that he may answer, if he can, and identify a particular witness —by means of questions as to his occupation and identity. For that limited purpose the evidence may proceed, and for no other purpose.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was the purpose of the meetings that you had?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Just a moment. I will ask that—I have to repeat the objection when he repeats the answer. Your Honor suggested to him——

Mr. Donohue: Can't we stipulate that——

Mr. Hallinan: And what he does is make the objection negligible by simply repeating the question. That requires me to repeat the objection.

Mr. Donohue: In the economy of time, your Honor, may we [1016] not stipulate that it will be unnecessary for you to repeat the objection should I again repeat the question? It would save a great deal of time from asking the reporter to go back and read it.

Mr. Hallinan: I think it would be better if counsel simply learned, if for the first time, the proper procedure in such matters instead of inventing a new form of stipulation that we must enter to accommodate him.

Mr. Donohue: I shall be guided by your Honor's judgment in the matter.

The Court: I think you should proceed, then, along this line. Counsel may object for continuity. You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you now recall the——

The Court: If he is so advised.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue, continuing): Do you now recall the question, Mr. Schomaker?

A. What position Sam Darcy held?

Q. No. The question——

I will ask the reporter to read it.

(Question read.)

A. Well, Sam Darcy was the district organizer of the Communist Party, I was the section organizer.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out as not responsive, if the Court please.

The Court: The motion is granted; not responsive. [1017]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you answer the question as to the purpose of the meetings which you had with Sam Darcy?

Mr. Hallinan: Now, there we have fallen into the same vice, and I will have to repeat the objection again. It should be easy for counsel to have the Court direct the reporter to read the question, where an objection has been made and the Court has ruled upon it.

The Witness: Why, to carry on Communist Party business.

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment until his Honor rules, Mr. Schomaker.

The Witness: Oh, pardon me.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I met with Sam Darcy to carry on Communist Party business.

Mr. Hallinan: We ask that be stricken out as stating an opinion and conclusion, hearsay and not binding on the defendants, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: I think your Honor just told the jury it was not binding on the defendant.

The Court: The motion is denied and the answer may stand. The jury, of course, is instructed, as I have indicated before, as to the limitations of the scope of this testimony, at this juncture.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, I ask you the question, Mr. Schomaker, when you went to the Communist Party headquarters following the meeting between yourself, B. B. Jones and Harry [1018] Bridges, who was the Sam Darcy who you say was present at the Communist Party headquarters?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, not binding on the defendant, hearsay, opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. To turn in the application we received from Harry Bridges to join the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And to whom was that application turned in?

A. Turned in to Sam Darcy.

Mr. Hallinan: Will your Honor instruct the witness to wait until——

The Court: Yes. Mr. Schomaker, may I ask you, in the light of the objections which you have heard, not to answer the question until Mr. Hallinan has an opportunity to interpose the objection and I rule on it? If I sustain it, of course, your answer is not given. If I overrule it, you may answer.

The Witness: I am sorry I answered it, your Honor.

The Court: No reflection on you.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that the answer be stricken so I may make the objection.

The Court: Yes, the answer may be stricken.

Mr. Hallinan: We object to it as calling for the [1019] opinion and conclusion, not binding on the defendants, hearsay, not done in their presence, and no proper foundation laid; and furthermore, it is not the best evidence, in giving secondary evidence concerning a document, and its disposition, without explaining the inability to produce primary evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Would you repeat the question, please.

(Question read.)

A. It was turned in to Sam Darcy.

Q. And who was Sam Darcy?

Mr. Hallinan: Now, if your Honor please—pardon me. That has already been asked and answered.

Mr. Donohue: No, it was not answered. I think the witness went over and answered something else.

The Court: It went out of the record on a motion, Mr. Hallinan. I struck it out on one occasion.

Mr. Hallinan: We object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion and not the best evidence, that the records of the Party and Mr. Sam Darcy, or whoever it is alleged he may be, is the best evidence. This is stating an opinion and conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, with respect to that objection, this witness has heretofore testified that sometime early in 1930 or '31 he became a member of the Communist Party. He has testified that on various and varying days he was one [1020] time the unit organizer or a unit organizer for the Communist Party, that he was the agitation and propaganda director for the Communist Party, that he was at one time a section organizer for the Communist Party, that he was editor of a publication for the Communist Party, that he was a member of the executive committee of the district for the Communist Party. He has heretofore testified that he met Mr. Sam Darcy in 1930 or 1931, and saw him on frequent occasions at Communist Party headquarters, and on other occasions to discuss Communist Party business. I certainly suggest to your Honor that we have established a foundation to permit the witness to answer the question as to who Sam Darcy was in the light of the fact that your Honor has correctly and carefully instructed the jury that these statements on the part of this witness are not binding upon the defendants or any one of them, but are only purposed to state his qualifications to draw the conclusion as to who Sam Darcy was. Mr. Hallinan, reserving a right, which I am sure he will exercise, to cross-examine this witness completely to determine whether or not he was qualified, did in fact know who Sam Darcy was.

The Court: Objection overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Now would you repeat the question, Mr. Reporter.

(Question read.)

A. He was district organizer of the Communist Party of the [1021] United States of America for the State of California, District 13.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, you have stated that you saw B. B. Jones turn over the application you have testified concerning, to Mr. Sam Darcy?

A. I did, yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask the answer be stricken out and object to that, your Honor. That is not a question; that is a statement, and leading and suggestive.

Mr. Donohue: I have merely asked the witness if he has so testified as a preliminary to a further question, your Honor. [1022]

Mr. Hallinan: It isn't proper to ask the witness—

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: And the answer may go out, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How long did you remain at the Communist Party headquarters on this occasion, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Oh, 45 minutes or an hour.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, may I ask you whether or not, subsequent to the date you have been testifying about, you ever received from or delivered to Harry Bridges personally a membership card in the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion, if the Court please, as to its being a membership card in the Communist Party and calling for secondary evidence. No explanation made as to why primary evidence is not produced.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you remember the question?

A. Have I ever delivered to Harry Bridges a Communist Party book? I have, yes.

Q. Will you state to His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the circumstance as to time, place, purpose and so forth, when you delivered such a book?

A. Well, it happened in parallel situations; at the end of each year—— [1023]

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that, ask that be stricken.

The Court: "It happened in parallel situations" may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): At the end of each year?

A. At the end of each year the Communist Party calls for a turning in of all the books.

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as not responsive; ask it be stricken out.

The Court: The motion is granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you state with particularity what you——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. There is a pending question.

The Court: There is a question before the witness.

Mr. Donohue: I understood Your Honor granted the objection of counsel.

The Court: No, the answer was not responsive. I granted a motion to strike.

Mr. Donohue: Then I take it there is no question?

The Court: He was speaking of parallel situations, practice and custom in the Communist Party. The question was a very direct question, calls for a direct answer. (To the Reporter) Would you read the question?

(Record read.)

The Court: Now you may answer.

A. Well, in 1934 in the month of December the Communist Party asked—— [1024]

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that now. He is putting in something else, too. He can easily answer that question that was addressed to him.

Mr. Donohue: Without reference to what the Communist Party did.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Now, pardon me, Your Honor. I ask that counsel not direct the witness. There is a pending question, and as Your Honor has expressed it, there is a question that is simple and concise and calls for a direct answer. Let him tell us.

The Court: Yes, sir. I think the question calls for a direct answer.

A. Well, I got the time in there. I got December, 1935. And Harry Bridges gave me his Communist Party book——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment, Your Honor. The question has been asked and answered.

Mr. Donohue: The question has not been answered, if Your Honor please. I can understand why he objected to the answer, but it is the first time the question has been answered.

The Court: You may continue, Mr. Witness.

A. (Continuing): Well, it was in December of 1935 and Harry Bridges gave me his Communist Book to be what they call "controlled." The old book would be turned in and the new book would be granted.

Q. Now, on the occasion in 1935 when Harry Bridges gave you [1025] his Communist book, did you give him anything in return?

A. At that particular time, no.

Q. Yes. Did you subsequently give him anything in return?

A. Later, yes; subsequently means later. I did get it later, yes, give him a book later.

Q. Will you say when it was, subsequent to

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

December of 1931, and the circumstances under which you gave him something and describe that something.

A. Well, it was December, 1935; and then next year it would be in January, the latter part of January. No, it would be earlier than that; it would be about the middle of January, 1936, when I received the books from the Communist Party headquarters and gave them to each individual member.

Q. And do you now state that in January of 1936 you gave such a book to the defendant Harry Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Why, yes, I gave him a book.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you recall where it was or where Mr. Bridges was when you gave him the Communist Party book in 1936?

A. It was at a Communist Party meeting, that is, a unit meeting and the particular place I can't recall.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Just a moment. Ask that that be stricken out, that it was a unit meeting, that it was a [1026] meeting of the Communist Party, as stating an opinion and conclusion and no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, will you state for us whether this was the only instance in which you received from or gave to Harry Bridges a book or membership in the Communist Party?

A. No, it was not the only instance.

Q. Then will you state your best recollection of any other instance or instances?

A. Well, the same procedure went on in '36 and —that is, the winter of '36—the old book turned in and the new one received in '37.

Q. Now, will you state for us why it was that you turned in or you received from Mr. Bridges his old book and turned over to him a new book?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; calling for an opinion and conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: If our Honor please——

The Court: Overruled. He might have answered it before in part with respect to certain proceedings. He may answer.

A. I was the section organizer of the waterfront.

Q. And was Mr. Bridges within your jurisdiction as a section organizer of the waterfront section of the Communist Party?

A. He was in my jurisdiction, yes. [1027]

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Your Honor, the witness constantly— And the witness has shown an interest in the thing by the statement, "Well, we got in the date anyhow." Now, I think he is purposely trying to fill in with an answer before an objection can be gotten in. I will ask Your Honor to again instruct him to wait until an objection can be made.

The Court: I will instruct the witness accordingly, Mr. Hallinan, and in addition, I will instruct the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that the observations made by counsel with respect to the admissibility of evidence may not be regarded by you as evidence in the case. I have already instructed you fully on that score. And the observation made by Mr. Hallinan with respect to what he got in—he, the witness, got in—and so forth are not to be considered by you as a reflection upon the witness at this particular time.

Mr. Hallinan: No, pardon me, Your Honor; that is not what I said. I said that the witness said that. The witness said, "Well, we got in the date anyhow." Do you remember him making that remark?

The Court: No, I don't.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, he said, "Well,"—he said, "December, 1935," and then he said, "Well, we got in the date anyhow." I didn't—I am not saying that. I say he said that. And it shows, I think, and I suggest to the Court, his intention to try to assist the prosecution by answering it too quickly before an [1028] objection can be made.

The Court: You may examine him on that.

Mr. Donohue: I am only too happy to have the remark stricken, if Your Honor pleases, but I think Mr. Hallinan has tried too many——

The Court: Where are we now, Mr. Donohue?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: We are about to ask another question, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, you have heretofore described the process by which upon the payment of dues by a member in the Communist Party, stamps are issued which are pasted by the member in a book——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, Your Honor——

Mr. Donohue: Would you let me finish the question, please?

Mr. Hallinan: No, it is always held improper to recite to a witness a compendium of what he has already stated. Now, that is always held improper. It is leading and suggestive, making resumes and arguments in advance of the proper time, and there is no disability shown in this witness' part to be able to remember the events, and no necessity for resumes of this sort.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever see the defendant Harry Bridges pay his dues as a member in the Communist [1029] Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. That is certainly calling for an opinion and conclusion, if the Court please. He could be asked what was done and what he saw and what was said, but he is calling for a direct opinion and conclusion as to whether money passed, whether that constituted dues, for what purpose.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I saw Mr. Harry Bridges on numerous times pay dues to the unit secretary for dues in the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Ask that be stricken out, and further point out, Your Honor, that it is not the best evidence, that the testimony of the unit secretary, as he said, would be the best evidence.

The Court: The motion is denied, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Are you able to tell us, Mr. Schomaker, on any of these occasions who the unit secretary was?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please; calling for an opinion and conclusion, identifying now and describing some third person not a party to these proceedings.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: Shall I answer it?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): The Court says you may answer the question.

The Court: When I overrule it, that means you may answer automatically, unless otherwise indicated. You might answer [1030] it, sir.

A. Thank you, Your Honor. In the early days Herman Mann was the unit secretary, and later, after the strike, Norma Perry was the unit dues secretary. Later J. C. Clark was the dues secretary, and also B. B. Jones was a unit dues secretary.

Q. Now, in order that we may be clearly——

A. Pardon me. Another guy in there, too. An old man—he was an old unemployed seaman. Arnold

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

—old man Arnold. He was the—he was one of the first.

Q. Now, to which of these named persons was it that you saw Harry Bridges pay dues?

A. Well, I saw him pay dues to Herman Mann and Norma Perry and J. C. Clark, and they all squawked that he was very bum pay.

Q. Mr. Schomaker——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I ask that that be stricken.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: Yes, the last part of the answer may go out.

Mr. Donohue: May we take the usual recess at this time, if Your Honor please?

The Court: We shall recess at 12:15 and resume at 2:15.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did Harry Bridges ever on any occasion make any request of you with respect to his Communist Party membership book?

A. Yes, he has. Yes. He had, rather.

Q. Will you state when and where and what the request made [1031] of you by Harry Bridges was?

A. Well, he told me to get up to his house and get rid of his Communist book before the reporters got up there.

Q. Now, will you tell us when that was and the circumstances under which that statement was made?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, that was—well, either the latter part of 1935 or the first part of '36. That is, either the winter months of '35 or the spring of '36.

Q. Now, tell us, if you know, where Harry Bridges was living at that time?

A. He was living on Pine Street, right two doors from me.

Q. And will you state what the circumstances were under which he made this request of you with respect to his party book?

A. Well, I came home from work, working on the waterfront; came home from work, it was around in the evening, around 6:00 o'clock, as close as I can recall. And as I came up, it must be Broderick Street, the one—either Broderick Street or there is a cross street there, or the next street up. I don't know which, whether it was Baker. Anyway, I got off the car, a No. 2 car, walked up the street and turned into Pine, and there was a big crowd in front of the street there, and an ambulance there. And as I started across the street, why, Bridges came across, met me halfway. And he says, "Jesus Christ, there is a lady fell out the window." And I says, "What?" And he said, "The old lady fell out the window." And he says, "Get up there and [1032] don't let anybody in, get up there and keep those snooty reporters from getting in there."

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Keep what?

The Witness: Keep the snooty reporters—of course, I didn't agree with that as being snooty, but he said, "Get up there and keep those snooty reporters out of there."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

I said, "I can't do it. I just came home from work." I says, "I will get Rosie, my wife."

So I went home. My wife was cooking supper. I told her, I said——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to any statements that he told his wife.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you in fact go in and get Mr. Bridges' book at the time you have just—— A. I did not, no.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as leading and suggestive. He can ask him what he did next.

Q. (By the Court): What, if anything, did you do, Mr. Schomaker, after the events of the lady falling out of the window?

A. I went home and took a shower and then I had supper.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You had no further discussion with Mr. Bridges at that time?

A. I had no further discussion with him, no.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, have you ever heard the defendant Harry Bridges solicit persons to join the Communist Party? A. I have, yes. [1033]

Q. Will you state for us the date, the circumstances and the place?

A. This is some time in 1938, and it was at the home of Jack Shaw on Pine Street.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: I didn't get that name.

The Witness: Jack Shaw; just like George Bernard Shaw. Jack Shaw on Pine Street, and the number I don't recall. But it was right—there is a Japanese church on the corner opposite his home. It is on Pine Street. Just what the number was, I don't recall. Anyway, that is where we met quite frequently in Jack Shaw's house because it was a large home, quite a large room there, and we called a meeting for those people who were interested in the Communist Party, and it was there that Bridges made a speech and solicited membership for the Communist Party.

Q. Can you recall at this time anything that Mr. Bridges may have said on that subject?

A. Well, he spoke about the international situation and the necessity of the workers joining a political party that would fight in the interests of the workers, particularly in view of the international situation that existed then, the rise of Fascism in the world and the threat of a new war, and he stated very emphatically that all workers who were interested in stopping these things should join the Communist Party, because he was a member of the Communist Party and he was there to fight [1034] such goings on.

Q. And you heard Harry Bridges make that statement?

A. I did, yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as leading and suggestive.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue).: Mr. Schomaker, are you able to tell us now the name or names of any person or persons who may have been present at the meeting you have just described?

A. There was quite a few people there.

Q. Will you state your best recollection of the person or persons whose identity you can now recall as having been there?

A. Well, of course, Jack Shaw was there and Slim Melin.

Q. (By the Court): How do you know Melin?

A. M-e-l-i-n. Mae Waugaman.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue). How do you spell Waugaman?

A. W-a-u-g-a-m-a-n. Whether there are two n's on that I don't know. There is one n anyway. And there is Charles Waugaman, and I am pretty sure Henry Schmidt was there that night, too.

Q. By Henry Schmidt, do you mean the defendant Henry Schmidt seated here in court?

A. That is correct. There was quite a few other people. Some were strangers to me and I didn't know any too well. But there was quite a few people there.

Q. In what year did you say this meeting took place, Mr. Schomaker? [1035]

A. That was in the early fall of 1938.

Q. Will you tell us at that time in the early fall of 1938, who was then the district organizer for District 13 of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please, calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Why, William Schneiderman was the district organizer of the Communist Party then.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Who is today the district organizer of District 13 of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, and this is certainly of no consequence.

The Court: What bearing or relevancy would that have in the controversy at bar?

Mr. Donohue: Only to show the continuity in office of a certain person, and also to refresh the recollection of the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: It is not shown the witness requires any such refreshment.

The Court: It might go to his familiarity and general knowledge of the overall picture.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: It might affect his—that suffices. I will overrule the objection. [1036]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you answer the question? Read the question.

(Question read.)

A. Well, since I have no personal contact I don't know. I have no personal contact with the Communist Party now.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Are you able to tell us, Mr. Schomaker, who was district organizer for District 13 of the Communist Party at the time when you severed your membership with that party?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please; too remote.

Mr. Donohue: Same principle, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: We have not yet found out when he severed his connection. He should give the time.

Mr. Donohue: He told us, but I fear by asking him to repeat it you will just object again.

The Court: You may answer.

A. You mean who was the district organizer when I severed my relations? Why, it was William Schneiderman.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue). Are you able to tell us now whether or not William Schneiderman was present at Jack Shaw's house on the occasion when Harry Bridges solicited persons to join the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, sir. Your Honor, that is [1037] leading and suggestive. He has already been asked to name the persons he remembers. He remembers certain ones. Counsel makes this suggestion to him.

Mr. Donohue: He said he named all that he could recall. Now under the rule I have a right to refresh his recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: How does he know? How could he refresh his recollection? You weren't there.

Pardon me. Counsel wasn't there. He has no right to fill in other names.

Mr. Donohue: I am only asking the witness if he was there. I think it is proper, but I will bow to Your Honor's judgment if you think to the contrary.

The Court: Yes, for the record now, so that hereafter there may be no question, I will ask him to the best of his recollection to name, identify all of the persons then and there present on the occasion when it is asserted by the witness Mr. Bridges made this talk.

Mr. Hallinan: That is the proper procedure, surely.

The Court: Let us find out, without specification of one or two individuals. Let us find out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you, in response to His Honor's suggestion, name all the persons whom you can recall as having been present on the occasion you have just testified about?

Mr. Hallinan: I do not want to be captious, Your Honor, but isn't it also held that where an objection is sustained on a matter like that and counsel simply repeats it, all the harm [1038] that was involved in the original question is still present? Isn't the decent thing to wait and ask it later so that it does not look like a trick?

The Court: There is a question before the Court, Mr. Hallinan. Let us address that question to the witness and let him say to the best of his recollection the identity of those present at that particular time when, as he says, Mr. Bridges made the talk concerning Communism and affiliation thereto.

The Witness: Shall I name those people whom I have already named?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes.

A. There was Mae and Charles Waugaman, Jack Shaw, William Melin and Walter Lambert, Bill Schneiderman—there was quite a few. I can't recall all the other people who were there.

Q. Have you exhausted your present recollection of the names of the persons who were there?

A. I have, yes.

The Court: May I ask the witness through you or directly, counsel——

Mr. Donohue: Yes, surely.

Q. (By the Court): How many persons were there at the time in terms of numbers?

A. I would estimate between 30 and 40.

Q. Where was this meeting held? In the rooms in front of the house, the back—— [1039]

A. This was an old mansion on Pine Street. The living room was an enormous room and it was cut through, including the dining room.

Q. The time in the evening or morning?

A. This was in the evening, at night.

Q. What was the duration of the meeting, if you recall?

A. That lasted about, I would say, two and a half hours.

Q. Were there any other talks or any other conversations had at that time other than Mr. Bridges' conversation?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. There was. There was a discussion and other people wished to take the floor could do so. After the meeting refreshments were served.

Q. And the meeting was discontinued at what time?

A. I would say around 10:30.

Q. Who served the refreshments?

A. The women who were present.

Q. Could you identify any of the women now by name?

A. I can recall Mae Waugaman, Mrs. Melin was there.

Q. The wife——

A. The wife of William Melin.

Q. Were there any other wives present?

A. There certainly were, but I can't recall them.

Q. That is the extent of your best recollection upon the attendance aspect?

A. That is correct. [1040]

The Court: We will take the noon adjournment and resume at 2:15. The same admonition to you, ladies and gentlemen, not to discuss the case under any conditions or form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:15 o'clock p.m.) [1040-A]

Afternoon Session, Monday, November 28, 1949, 2:15 o'Clock

The Clerk: In the case of United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed the stand;

By Mr. Donohue:

Your Honor, with Your Honor's permission, I would like to ask a question which I overlooked this morning; for that reason it is out of sequence.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, at the time when you accepted from the defendant Harry Bridges, in December of 1936 and again in 1937, the Communist Party membership book, and returned a renewal thereof to him in January of 1937 and 1938, will you tell His Honor and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury whose name or in what name that book was issued?

Mr. Hallinan: We object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness. It might be competent, in view of the Court's ruling, for the witness to say what name was on the book, but in whose name it was issued is a totally different thing.

Mr. Donohue: I will accept the suggestion of counsel and amend the question.

The Court: Yes, the name or identity of the person in the book.

A. The only thing about those dates, though,—I don't—you [1041] said,—was that '35 and '36 or '36 and '37?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Is that the period of time in which the incident we just asked you about occurred?

A. That is the period of time that I can recall, yes.

Q. Then at that time will you state to His Honor and the members of the jury what name appeared on that Communist Party book?

A. Well, for the years '35 and '36, '36 and '37, Harry Dorgan.

Q. And——

A. ——was the name on the book.

Q. And how was that name spelled on the book?

A. It was spelled D-o-r-g-a-n.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, at any time did you ever carry any Communist Party instructions from Sam Darcy, whom you have identified as organizer of District 13, to the defendant Harry Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. We object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, not the best evidence.

The Court: Ask him what he carried from Mr. Darcy, apart from a characterization as to "instructions." Let us find that out ourselves.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever carry any instructions or messages from Sam Darcy to the defendant Harry Bridges? [1042]

Mr. Hallinan: Now just a moment. Your Honor, that is evading the instructions of the Court. The Court suggested that——

Q. (By the Court): Have you at any time had any communication from Mr. Darcy to the defendant Bridges during the period of time related?

A. Numerous times.

Q. Will you state them?

A. Well, you want me to state all of them or just——

Q. All of them.

A. Well, there is, starting at the very beginning in 1933, our instructions were to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party, which we did.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. That is not an answer. I ask that that be stricken out. The Court asked first whether any document or any communication was carried. Now, if that is anwered, why, then, the witness is now starting in to fill in what would be an answer to the next question. The contents of such documents, or the purport or meaning of them. I ask the answer be stricken, if the Court please, that part of it.

The Court: Well, there was no limitation in the question I posed to the witness, and to that extent I may have interrupted Mr. Donohue in his presentation of the question. But the question I asked was a general one. Will you repeat it for me, Mr. Reporter? I have lost the context myself.

(Question read.) [1043]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Is your Honor asking the time or the nature of the communications?

The Court: He fixed the time and then the nature of the communications. He said he had many of them. He asked me about the time and I said, "State them in their orderly sequence as best you can."

The Witness: I can do that all right.

The Court: Do so.

The Witness: As I say, the first instructions——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I have to put in another objection. I object to this as calling for an opinion and conclusion and not the best evidence; no foundation has been laid to show that the original statements or communications are not available.

The Court: Overruled.

A. This is going to take quite a long time.

The Court: All right.

The Witness: We were instructed to——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, your Honor. That is what he was instructed. He was to state what the statements conveyed to Mr. Bridges were.

The Court: I assume you are coming to that?

The Witness: Give me a chance. I can't do everything——

The Court: Go ahead. The objection is overruled.

The Witness: We were instructed to recruit Harry Bridges [1044] into the Communist Party, to get a leader for the waterfront longshore union. That we did.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The next instruction was to build the union, and we formed a group of longshoremen which met in the Albion Hall every Sunday for quite a length of time, and that was direct orders from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges to take part in those meetings.

The fourth thing of the convention of the ILA, which was scheduled for May, and we had it through our efforts and the instructions of Sam Darcy held in February of 1934.

Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges that—from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that we should raise the demands of the men from the employers, and that was done.

And then the instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that they should proceed up and down the coast with the Rank and File committee to get the sentiment in the other ports—Seattle, Portland and San Pedro, and that was done. Not only once, but numerous expeditions went out from San Francisco to seek out the sentiment of the unions in the other ports.

Then the calling—the setting of a date of a strike on May 9 was done at the express order of Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges, and because—pardon me. That was not May 9, but in March; the strike was set for March, and through the intervention of President Roosevelt it was called off.

Then the strike was set for May 9, and expressly Sam Darcy wrote a resolution that the strike should not come off [1045] on May 9, because it was sent back the workers were not prepared for it, and we had the resolution the night before the strike was called. We went to the meeting together, Harry Bridges and I sat together on May 8, at the hall at 14th and Guerrero Streets. We were to submit this resolution, and we saw that the sentiment had not been built up enough to go through with the strike, and because the sentiment had not been built up, we were to let it go by. We didn't submit the resolution. That resolution in particular was written by Sam Darcy. And all throughout the strike the strategy and conduct of the 1934 maritime strike was conducted by Sam Darcy and nobody else.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that that be stricken out, your Honor. If the objection is to be overruled, at least he can state what the statements were, not the result. Let him state now what Darcy said to Bridges and what communications be addressed.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may proceed.

The Witness: Throughout the 1934 strike every action that was done, the strategy and tactics of that strike was worked out by the Communist Party and transmitted through the strike committee, through Melin, through Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt and the other people who were Communist Party members at that time, and subsequent to the strike, the settlement of the strike, that is, after the formation of the [1046] Longshore—the U. S. Longshore Board appointed by President Roosevelt, that was thoroughly discussed by Sam Darcy and Harry

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Jackson, Walter Lambert and myself, Harry Bridges, Schmidt, and others who were members of the Party at that time. All the decisions that related to the strike were discussed and were carried by orders from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges. The question of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the organization of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, was carried out through instructions from Sam Darcy through myself and other messages, and so forth. The question of the texture, the set-up of the organization, how it should be organized particularly was Sam Darcy's brain child. Any action that the opposition made to checkmate or to forestall the Martime Federation to organize all the maritime workers into one group, the strategy of that and the tactics that were put into force was the brain child of Sam Darcy, and later when Sam Darcy was transferred it became the duty of Walter Lambert, who was the trade union director, to make those decisions.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I move that that be stricken out as not responsive to the question.

Q. (By the Court): Were these communications brought to the attention of Mr. Bridges by you or to your knowledge any other person?

A. Mr. Bridges was under the discipline of the Communist Party and he had to carry out those decisions. [1047]

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out.

The Court: That may go out.

Q. My question was whether these communications were addressed to Mr. Bridges directly, or indirectly to your knowledge.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. They were definitely, yes.

The Court: You may continue.

The Witness: Through Sam Darcy—Sam Darcy left San Francisco in the early part of 1935, so any connection that Bridges may have had with Sam Darcy was terminated at that time, because Sam Darcy left the community.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Who took Sam Darcy's place?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence.

The Court: Best place where? Socially, economically——

Mr. Donohue: He had not permitted me to finish my question. I was about to say, Who took Sam Darcy's place as organizer for District 13 after Sam Darcy left?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. William Schneiderman.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us how long a hiatus there was between Sam Darcy's leaving and the appointment of Mr. Schneiderman as district director? [1048]

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I do not know what you mean by "hiatus."

The Court: I was going to suggest that we eliminate "hiatus."

Mr. Donohue: I think that is a good suggestion.

Q. What interval of time was there between the leaving of Sam Darcy and the time when William Schneiderman took over as district organizer?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, if the Court please, calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I would say there was a lapse of three or four months. That is approximately. I could not say the exact number of days, but I would estimate it was three or four months between the leaving of Sam Darcy and William Schneiderman coming on the scene.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Subsequently when Mr. Schneiderman took over in Mr. Darcy's place did you carry any instructions from Mr. Schneiderman to Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Just a minute. I object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion, hearsay, and not binding on the defendants.

The Court: Overruled. [1049]

A. Not only did I carry instructions——

Q. (By the Court): Did you carry instructions?

A. I did, yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell his Honor and the members of the jury what instructions you carried to the defendant Harry Bridges from William Schneiderman?

A. Practically of the same nature, but allow me to say this: that William Schneiderman is not the man Sam Darcy was in doping out strategy and tactics and furthering the interests of the Communist Party, trade unions, or anything else. He had much less to say because he didn't know what to say, but I met with William Schneiderman and Harry Bridges numerous times in my Clay Street—in my house on Pine Street, I mean, and the messages were numerous.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, during the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you attend few or many Communist Party meetings?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that again as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness on an ultimate fact, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. My period in the Communist Party I attended a meeting every day at least, and on Saturdays and Sundays two or three meetings a day.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): During the period, Mr. Schomaker, when [1050] you were a member of the Communist Party did you attend any meetings of the Communist Party at which the defendant Harry Bridges was also present?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, calling for an opinion and conclusion, if the Court please, no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I attended numerous meetings with Harry Bridges.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): During the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you attend any Communist Party meetings at which the defendant Henry Schmidt was present?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I attended numerous meetings when Henry Schmidt was present, Communist Party meetings.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): During the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you attend any Communist Party meetings at which the defendant J. R. Robertson was present?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please, calling for an opinion and conclusion and no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I cannot recall any with Robertson, no.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Directing your attention to the defendant Harry Bridges, can you state to his Honor and the members of the jury whether ~~or not~~ you attended a meeting with the [1051] defendant Harry Bridges at a place called Grants Pass in the State of Oregon?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection.

The Court: When and where?

Mr. Donohue: If he says he did or did not, I will ask him if your Honor please.

A. I attended a meeting——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Just a minute. We object to that also as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and calling for a conclusion. That meetings is one of the things that is res judicata under Judge Landis' decision.

The Court: The objection is overruled, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you attend such a meeting? A. I did, yes.

Q. Will you state and tell us where and when that meeting took place.

A. That meeting took place in Grants Pass in 1936 and it was——

Q. Can you tell us the nature of the place?

A. It was a hot summer month.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Let him finish. He was going to tell us the time and place.

The Witness: I couldn't give you the hour, but I would say it was 1936. It was a hot summer month. I would say it was in August, either August or the very first part of [1052] September.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us by whom you were directed to attend that meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as calling for hearsay.

The Court: A statement as to a direction received by him?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. Walter Lambert—Lambert came out to our house and Bridges was called in, and there we were directed to proceed to Grants Pass, Oregon.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): When you received that direction from Walter Lambert Mr. Bridges was present? A. He was.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that, your Honor, as leading and suggestive.

The Court: Yes, it is.

Mr. Donohue: He just so stated.

Mr. Hallinan: That does not give counsel the right to repeat.

The Court: The observation of Mr. Hallinan is well taken.

Mr. Donohue: I am sorry, your Honor.

The Court: Please refrain from any suggestion of leading.

Mr. Donohue: I shall do my best, if your Honor please. [1053]

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us what the instructions were which you received?

A. Well, Walter Lambert told us to proceed to Grants Pass, and to be parked in the courthouse square at twelve o'clock noon, and there someone would come and direct us where to go.

Q. Will you tell us, if you recall, about what time of day you left San Francisco?

A. We left about—it was around 9:30. It was about 9:30 in the morning.

Q. How did you proceed to Grants Pass?

A. Well, I met Bridges at 11th and Mission Streets. There is a service station there. I was picked up and we proceeded to drive in a Ford, a V-8 Ford. It was a coach model with only one door on each side, and we drove to Grants Pass, Oregon.

Q. Was there anyone in the car other than yourself and Mr. Bridges?

A. Well, the first day we drove up to the mountains and we picked up a hitch-hiker in the late afternoon. Bridges was driving, and I out of the corner of my eye—we had our coats in the back because it was hot—in the corner of my eye I saw this young kid going through our pockets. We stopped the car and bounced him out. He was going through the pockets of the coats.

Q. Did any other incident occur on this trip which calls it to [1054] your attention?

A. Several incidents occurred. The first is the fact that I met Bridges at 11th and Mission, which is quite a ways from the waterfront, but that is what he wanted because he said it wouldn't look good to be picking you up near the waterfront, people seeing us leave and being gone for a couple of days. I would be out of the office for a couple of days. And secondly, it was a new car, and we took turns driving, and so I drove rather slowly, around 60, and when he took the wheel he drove 80 and 85, which I objected to, the speed of the car, and then it became so hot that we stopped at a stream there and took a swim in the afternoon before we met this young hitchhiker. After we got in the mountains we ran into a hailstorm, a terrific hailstorm. [1055]

Mr. Hallinan: I think, Your Honor, that the recital of these meteorological incidents scarcely throws light upon the subject of the discussion; I object to it.

The Court: I suppose that might go to his credibility, the story itself.

Mr. Donohue: I think so.

The Court: All right, overruled.

A. Well, as I say, we run into a hailstorm and we had to stop while the—was it the meteorological—or whatever it was—this hailstorm stopped. And after it stopped, we proceeded. And then at night we stopped at one of those roadside cabins and stayed there that night and proceeded on the next day.

Q. Now, what occurred when you reached the point to which you had been directed?

A. Well, we pulled up into the courthouse square in Grants Pass and we parked and some fellow came along and said,—just looked at us and said, "Follow me," and we followed him.

Q. And where did you go?

A. Well, we drove out of Grants Pass. It wasn't very far, two or three miles, I imagine. And we came to a—turned into a lane and parked the car at this farmhouse under a big tree. Parked the car and stopped.

Q. Did you meet any person or persons there?

A. Well, when we drove up there was two people underneath the tree, and so as we got out of the car, why, they walked over [1056] toward us.

Q. Can you identify those two persons for us?

A. Well, one was Bert Nelson. He was a section organizer of the Communist Party in Seattle.

Mr. Hallinan: Ask that be stricken out, the latter part, Your Honor, as not responsive. He was asked for the persons. He can give the name without describing them.

The Court: Well, part of the identity at that time would be his occupation.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we ask that it be stricken out as stating an opinion and conclusion, Your Honor, on another person; in other words, now here without any foundation being laid——

The Court: Pardon me. One moment. I may have been misled. What was the question?

(Question read.)

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: And that part is stricken out?

The Court: Yes, stricken out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us the name or names of the two persons who met you at the place you have just described?

A. Well, one was Bert Nelson.

Q. And the other? A. Morris Rappaport.

Q. Did you know Bert Nelson on this occasion when you met him there? [1057]

A. The first time I ever saw Bert Nelson.

Q. Did you know Morris Rappaport?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I did, yes.

Q. How long had you known Rappaport prior to the occasion of this meeting?

A. Well, I had met Rappaport in 1931, in San Francisco, here.

Q. And had you met him at any time in the interim between 1931 and the date you have just indicated?

A. Well, I saw him in '31 quite frequently; '31 and possibly the early part of 1932.

Q. Where was it that you met Mr. Rappaport?

A. At the Communist Party headquarters in San Francisco.

Q. Do you know whether or not Morris Rappaport was a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; calling for his opinion and conclusion; and too remote; and the foundation isn't laid, Your Honor. He says he knew him in 1931 or '32, and this meeting took place some time in 1936, a four year span in there. Anything might have happened.

The Court: What have you to say about that, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Well, I can't change the facts, if Your Honor please. It would seem to me that this witness having testified that on at least two occasions prior to 19——

The Court: He met Nelson for the first time. [1058]

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: Rappaport he knew.

Mr. Donohue: He met on at least two occasions at Communist Party headquarters in San Francisco.

Mr. Hallinan: 1931.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

The Witness: What is the question?

Mr. Donohue: Would you repeat the question, please?

(Previous question read.)

A. Why, yes, I knew Morris Rappaport to be a member of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Are you able to tell us what position, if any, was occupied in the Communist Party by Morris Rappaport?

Mr. Hallinan: Now just a moment. The same objection, Your Honor: calling for his opinion and conclusion, no foundation, nothing at all except asking a man—Why, he can identify anybody in the world by saying, "Yes, he was a member of the Communist Party; she was a member of the Communist Party." Nothing that the jurors can go on at all except this man's unvarnished statement, and I think that is improper. That is not a way to prove a case. A person is at the mercy—anybody is at the mercy of an individual witness who simply makes identification like that.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: And furthermore, Your Honor, I point out [1059] this, that this meeting is in 1936 and this man says he knew him in 1931, and he knew him then to be a member of the Communist Party. Now, according to this man's own statement, he was a member in 1943 or so, and no longer is.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Well, I suggest you cross-examine him on that very thoroughly. You may answer.

A. I forget the question again.

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

A. He was the district organizer of that district in the Northwest. Now, whether it is District 12, I don't recall. But it was the Pacific Northwest where he was district organizer.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Bridges was with you when you met Mr. Rappaport?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive.

The Court: Sustained. This was the meeting in Grants Pass when you had the rendezvous with these men?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: Mr. Bridges was with him; that is foreordained He was with him. That has been testified to?

Mr. Donohue: Correct, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, did Mr. Rappaport tell you and Mr. Bridges who Mr. Bert Nelson was?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Now, that is leading and [1060] suggestive, if the Court please. He might ask him what conversation took place, but trying to lead the witness into a statement——

The Court: I would suggest——

Mr. Donohue: I agree, Your Honor.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, I would suggest you ask for the conversation.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, can you tell us what conversation took place among you four persons at the time and place you have just stated?

A. Well, as I say, we pulled up to the lane and parked under this tree, and I got out on the right side and Bridges got out on the left and walked around the car, and Rappaport and Bert Nelson came toward us, and Rappaport—the first thing he said was, "Well, you old wolf, I see you made it." Everybody laughed. I don't know, didn't know what he was supposed to make, but everybody laughed. And then Bridges says, "Well, how's things in the Northwest?" "Oh," he says, "everything is fine. Didn't we elect you district president of the ILA?" And then he said, "Yes," he says, "but the guys in Tacoma—" —and Rappaport again says, "Yes, but the guys in Tacoma are not satisfied and they are making things kind of tough up here for us." So then he says, "Well, how about Bert here?" He says, "I don't think you have met Bert, one of our—he is section organizer of the waterfront in Seattle." So he introduces Bert [1061] to Bridges and myself. And then we walked over to the—there was a chicken house there, and walked over into this chicken house and we took a seat and began to discuss the business we came there for.

Q. Can you relate to us at this time any portion of the discussion?

A. Well, yes, the discussion was around the question of determination of the waterfront agreements with the employers, and Rappaport particularly stressed the fact that the people in Tacoma, that is, the longshore group in Tacoma, were rather hostile to the way the elections went. That was the first year that the rank and file had a chance to vote for the district officials, and the result was that the old line officials were booted out and the so-called progressive militants were put into office. And he says, "I think they are going to cause considerable trouble when the agreements terminate, particularly among the seafaring crafts." And we discussed the ways and means to bring the two—that is, the Northwest maritime groups—closer to the California and Southern California groups. And that was the extent of the discussion, was what needed to be done to do it. And the—well, that was the general text of the discussions, along those lines.

Q. About how long is your recollection of the duration of that meeting?

A Well, we left there in the early evening, I would say around [1062] 4:00 o'clock or 4:30.

Q. How long have you known Walter Lambert?

A. Well, that was in the middle of the depression, about 1931.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. From 1931 until the day you have just described, when he gave certain instructions to you and Mr. Bridges, how often had you seen Walter Lambert?

A. Well, during the waterfront strike in 1934, why, we saw him maybe two and three times a day. And then later, after the men returned to work, why, I saw him less often—possibly two or three times a week.

Q. What was the occasion for your so frequently seeing Walter Lambert during the 1934 strike?

A. Well, Walter Lambert was next in rank to Sam Darcy, and——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out, if the Court please. That isn't stating the occasion for him seeing him.

The Court: Motion granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue:) What was the occasion for your seeing Walter Lambert?

A. Well, to discuss strategy and tactics—you mean, the period of the waterfront strike in 1934?

Q. Correct.

A. Was to discuss strategy ~~and tactics of~~ the 1934 maritime strike. [1063]

Q. Mr. Schomaker, can you tell us whether or not, of your own knowledge, you know if Walter Lambert was a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Make the same objection, Your Honor: here is still another person now who is being pointed out as a member of the Communist Party without any foundation, no record.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Lay the foundation, Mr. Donohue, if you can.

Mr. Donohue: Here, if Your Honor pleases, is a man who said that from 1931 to 1936, he knew Walter Lambert, saw him frequently, particularly during the period of the 1934 strike. He saw him several times a day.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest this, Your Honor, that one of the reasons for requiring a witness to lay a foundation for identifying a person or saying he was there or giving times, places, persons and circumstances is so that the witness may be contradicted, if a contradiction exists.

The Court: That is true.

Mr. Hallinan: But if the witness just states a conclusion and opinion, names any person whomsoever, how can it be contradicted?

The Court: In the light of the objection, counsel,—

Mr. Donohue: May I perhaps clarify the situation, Your Honor?

Q. Mr. Schomaker, during the period of your acquaintance with Mr. Walter Lambert, did you occupy any official position in the [1064] Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. That question has been asked and answered, Your Honor; no use making the objection all over.

The Court: Well, we take it on his testimony that he did?

Mr. Donohue: Well, I want to directly find out, if Your Honor pleases, what position he occupied during this particular time.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hallinan: We will then have to make an objection again, as calling for his opinion and conclusion and not the best evidence.

The Court: All right. Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Would you repeat the question?

(Previous question read.)

A. You mean the period of '34?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes.

A. I was the section organizer of the Communist Party on the waterfront.

Q. In your official function as section organizer on the waterfront, did you have occasion to come in contact with Mr. Walter Lambert. A. I did.

Q. And what was the occasion for your coming in contact at that time with Mr. Walter Lambert?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as calling for his opinion [1065] and conclusion, if the Court please; and further, the question is ambiguous, asking what was the occasion.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: I think the witness——

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

A. Well, Walter Lambert would bring the instructions and advice, what to do, and what not to do.

Mr. Donohue: Now, I submit, if Your Honor please, the witness is qualified to answer the question.

Q. As of the date when Walter Lambert gave you and Mr. Bridges the instructions you have just described, do you know of your own knowledge whether or not he was or was not a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness and an ultimate fact and no proper foundation laid.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: The Court said you may answer the question. I will have to ask the Reporter to read the question again.

(Question read.)

A. Oh, he was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did he occupy any official position in the Communist Party at that time? [1066]

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object on the ground it is calling for his opinion and conclusion and not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. He was a trade union director of the Communist Party, had charge of all the work in the trade unions.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever attend a meeting of the Communist Party at which meeting attendance was restricted to members of that party, which took place at the home of Herman Mann?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. That is calling for several conclusions, Your Honor: One, as to its being restricted to members of the Communist Party, and also whether or not it was restricted and by whom restricted.

The Court: You might ask him if he attended a meeting in Mr. Mann's home.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever attend a meeting at the home of Herman Mann?

A. I did. Numerous meetings in the home of Herman Mann.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting at the home of Herman Mann at which the defendant Harry Bridges was present?

A. I attended numerous meetings there when Harry Bridges was present.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting at the home of Herman Mann at which time the defendant Harry Bridges was present and the subject matter of the meeting was Harry Bridges' secretary, [1067] Norma Perry?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Your Honor, I think that is leading and suggestive, and the question should be asked as to conversations. Now, this question should be skipped by, because it is——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Well, this is directing his attention to a particular meeting?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I will allow it.

A. If I attended that meeting when Bridges was there with his secretary, Norma Perry? Is that what you asked?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Can you tell us when that meeting was held?

A. Well, that meeting—if this is the meeting—was in the early part of 1935.

Q. By whom were you notified that such a meeting was to be held?

A. Well, I wasn't notified by anyone. I think that I was responsible for calling the meeting.

Q. Whom did you ask to attend that meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as calling——

Mr. Donohue: He said he called it, if Your Honor ~~pleases~~.

The Court: Yes. Objection overruled.

A. Well, present at that meeting was Sam Darcy, Norma Perry, [1068] I, Bridges, and Schmidt, Henry Schrimpf, and Herman Mann.

Q. Will you tell us what the purpose of that meeting was, you having called the meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Your Honor, I think we ought to have the place and the time a little more exactly.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: It is in '35, he has said, Your Honor—early in 1935, and at the home of Herman Mann.

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you fix the time any more specifically than that, Mr. Schomaker?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, that is all right; I didn't get that this was one of the meetings at the home of Mr. Mann he was testifying to. I got sidetracked off of it.

A. Well, Mann then lived on Germania Street. That is right off Fillmore. I think it is two small streets down from Page, that is, going that way (indicating). It is two small, two alleys in there and then comes Germania, and it is on the other street, it is Fillmore. And as I can recall, it was on a Sunday. It was warm—it may have been in December of 1934 or January of '35. It was a sunshiny day, it was a Sunday and we met kind of early. It was 9:00 o'clock in the morning, and it was a meeting to discipline Norma Perry.

Q. Did you notify the persons whom you have stated as being present? A. I did, yes. [1069]

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that that be stricken as calling for hearsay, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, I notified—either I notified them or Henry Schrimpf notified them.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, will you tell us what was discussed at this meeting?

A. Well, Norma Perry was secretary to Bridges, who was president, of the ILA Local, No. 3879; and Norma Perry being a Communist Party member, was subject to the discipline of the Communist Party. However, she did certain things which wasn't proper to do. That is, what we thought wasn't proper to do. And Henry——

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, pardon me. He should state what the conversation or the discussion was, not what the final impression is that he had of it, or some conclusion or opinion of it.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you recall, Mr. Schomaker, any of the conversation, who said what at this meeting? A. Well, I can, yes.

Q. Will you recall that for us, then, please?

A. Norma Perry, as I say, was the secretary for the local president, and Henry Schrimpf brought charges against her. I remember very distinctly him saying, "Norma, you are a little stool pigeon." And of course, Norma, being a very vigorous person, why, she denied it. And Henry says, "I have got the dope here to prove you are a stool pigeon, and you are consorting [1070] with people that you have no business being with, and they told me certain things, what they should not have known." Well, as I say. Norma was a very vigorous person, and she denied it very emphatically, and it wound up to quite a dogfight, where accusations were made on one side and accusations on the other. But with Henry

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)
Schrimpf and myself being the chief accusers. So the meeting wound up, that particular meeting, that there wasn't—we were advised that she should mend her ways and everything would be O.K.

Q. Was there a subsequent meeting on the same subject? A. There was one later, yes.

Q. And when was that meeting and where was it held?

A. The next meeting concerning Norma Perry was held at 121 Haight Street, which had a little different composition.

Q. And again, what was 121 Haight Street?

A. That was Communist Party headquarters.

Q. And was it so at that time, at the time of the meeting that you are about to describe?

A. When we met there it was, yes.

Q. Who was present at the subsequent meeting?

A. Well, at that meeting it was Sam Darcy and Pop Hanoff and Henry Schrimpf and Schomaker and Jones and Norma Perry, of course, and Ed Harris. Did I say Darcy? And also Lambert was there. I think that is about—that about comprises it.

Q. Was the defendant Bridges at the second meeting? [1071]

A. Bridges was there, and so was Schmidt.

Q. And by "Schmidt" you mean the defendant Henry Schmidt? A. Henry Schmidt, yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive, if the Court please. Now, there he puts the words right in the man's mouth. I ask the answer be stricken out.

The Court: Well, counsel,——

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection. I will ask the question another way, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, it may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you describe——

Mr. Hallinan: Counsel has the habit, Your Honor, of making these resumes, and they are always held to be improper or leading and suggestive. He has no right to repeat the statement of the witness or to make another suggestion or to state it as a fact to be assumed as proven.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to the question being stricken and the answer, too.

The Court: So ordered.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Who was the Schmidt to whom you just made reference as being present?

Mr. Hallinan: Well pardon me. That, Your Honor, is improper and that is indulging in trickery, because here first he asked his leading question. When an objection was sustained, [1072] he just makes it into a non-leading question, with the answer having already been given to the witness.

The Court: Well, you might clarify it, Mr. Donohue, by the elimination of any other Schmidts. Was there any other Schmidt identified?

Mr. Donohue: I will be glad to follow Your Honor's suggestion.

The Court: Then we will not have the objection, if we eliminate any other Schmidts. We might come to the Schmidt on trial.

Mr. Donohue: At this meeting, Mr. Schomaker, was there more than one person named Schmidt present?

A. Well, the only person named Schmidt was Henry Schmidt, who was present at that meeting.

Q. And who is the Henry Schmidt whom you say was present at that meeting?

A. Who is he?

Q. Who is he, yes.

A. Well, he is a member of the Longshoremen's Union.

Q. Do you see the Henry Schmidt whom you say was present at that meeting in the courtroom?

A. He is sitting over there at the table (indicating).

Q. Did you send out the notices of the second meeting which was held at the place you have just described?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading, Your Honor. He should ask him who sent them out. Every question—— [1073]

Mr. Donohue: I will be glad to follow your suggestion. I have no objection to the question being stricken, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Who sent out the notices of the second meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. I make the same objection, Your Honor: This is following a leading question. Having given the suggestion to the witness with another question that is not leading, but which obviously expects the same answer that the first question directed. Numerous times counsel has done that.

Mr. Donohue: May the witness answer the question?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. Well, in the second meeting Walter Lambert sent out the notices for that meeting.

Q. Now, going back for a moment to the first meeting, to your knowledge, was every person who was present at that meeting a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as leading and suggestive, in addition to calling for his opinion and conclusion. Your Honor, that is a question where he bunches all the people together and then asks for a yes or no. Now, he didn't ask the witness to identify these people as being members in any way that would allow the witness any discrimation [1074] but simply asks him, "Were, to your knowledge, all these people members of the Communist Party?" That is obviously a leading question. In addition, it calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness on all the——

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases Your Honor, if I had done as counsel suggested, and asked individually, I would be faced with the same result.

Mr. Hallinan: And moreover, the question has been asked and answered. He first asked about every person who was there, and then the witness answered. Now he bunches them all together and asks the question again.

Mr. Donohue: If it pleases Your Honor, if I may be permitted to say to you, sir, this witness has identified himself as one who was not only a member of the Communist Party, but one who had occupied certain offices, the highest being a member of the Central or District Committee. He has testified on the subject matter of this first meeting, that he called the meeting. I think certainly he has a right to tell us whether or not that the persons whom he has stated were present and who were there at his call were members of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, he first asked each of the people individually. The witness says, "Yes." Now he comes back, groups them all in a bunch and asks him the question again. Now repetition of questions like that is improper. It is [1075] stressing and trying to pound in things that aren't entitled to have that degree of force put on them by counsel. It is repeating the same question, grouping them all together and asking it again, forcing us to make the same objection over and over; having identified them as such; which he has done, why, this is repetition of it, now in a group form. I make the objection, Your Honor, that the question has been asked and answered in effect, and furthermore, it is again calling for his opinion and conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: This question has not been answered, if Your Honor pleases. If your Honor would prefer, I would be glad to ask the question with respect to each of the persons who were named as being present by the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Those questions have been asked and answered.

Mr. Donohue: The question was neither asked nor answered, Mr. Hallinan.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan's objection goes to the wholesale characterization. Now,——

Mr. Donohue: No.

The Court: You have already specified the individual numbers of it, the constituents of the meeting.

Q. (By the Court): Well, what was the nature of this meeting, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, both meetings were Communist disciplinary meetings.

Q. Now, would you in the ordinary course of your duties as an [1076] executive meeting, call in non-members to those meetings? A. No.

Q. Would you proscribe that to so-called inner circle members of your party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I have to object to that.

The Court: Your objection is well taken; I will sustain it. Maybe I was imbued with my own question. Perhaps I will let Mr. Donohue ask the question.

Mr. Hallinan: Now he will do it, of course, having learned a little technique from Your Honor.

The Court: No, there is no technique at all. I long since have lost my technique.

Mr. Donohue: Apparently you are not alone in that respect, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes. If I ever had any.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What opportunity did you have to determine whether or not the persons who were present at the first meeting you described at Herman Mann's house as being or not being members of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: I submit, Your Honor, we are right back where we started. That question has been asked and answered, and if each one has already been identified, why bunch them together and ask for a general characterization?

Mr. Donohue: Again I say, Mr. Hallinan, each person has not been so identified. If you will concede that they have, then I [1077] will pass on to something else.

The Court: Your objection is overruled.

A. Well, since I was the section organizer of the Communist Party in the waterfront, I certainly wouldn't go up and invite the employers to come down there to sit in at a disciplinary meeting, where we were going to discipline one of our members.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And did you as section organizer restrict your invitations to persons who were known to you to be members of the Communist Party? A. Definitely so.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out so I can make the objection.

The Court: The answer may go out.

Mr. Hallinan: All right. I object to it as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for an opinion and conclusion, and again, as leading.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Now, would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

A. Definitely so.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting in the city of San Diego?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: The date? [1078]

Mr. Donohue: I will ask him if he says he did, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, you may answer that.

A. Well, I have attended several meetings in San Diego as a Communist Party member.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting in San Diego at which the defendant Harry Bridges was present?

A. I did, yes.

Q. Did you attend more than one such meeting that you can recall?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I can recall one where he was present.

Q. Will you tell us when this meeting took place and where in San Diego?

A. That was during—that was the 1935 state convention of the American Federation of Labor; that is, the California State Federation of Labor.

Q. And the place? A. Pardon?

Q. And the place?

A. Well, the convention of the California State Federation of Labor was held in San Diego in the fall of 1935, and I believe it was the month of September.

Q. And where was the meeting at which Mr. Bridges was also present held in the city of San Diego?

A. Well, I don't know the streets of San Diego too well, although [1079] I have been there numerous times, but coming in from the—that is, up the—Broadway runs up from the waterfront, and there is a large hotel right opposite the Plaza. The Plaza in the center of the town. And this large hotel, whatever it is—it couldn't be the Senator Hotel, but there is a large hotel there, anyway. [1079-A]

Well, this meeting that we attended continued through the Plaza up around about seven blocks, and then instead of turning right to go to Tijuana, which I generally went to when I went to San Diego, to Tijuana, this time we turned left about two or three blocks, so that was the general direction where this meeting was held.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. By whom were you notified as to this meeting? A. Walter Lambert.

Q. Can you recall whether the meeting took place in the daytime or in the nighttime?

A. It was held in the early afternoon about this time, I suppose, 3:30.

Q. Whom do you now recall as having been present at this meeting?

A. Well, they were all delegates to the California State Federation of Labor convention and most of them were from San Francisco, although there was a few from San Diego and Los Angeles, and as nearly as I can recall there was myself, Schomaker, and Bridges, John Larson, Henry Schmidt, and some sailors, Harry McNeill, John— J. C. Clark, Stanley Hancock, who was from the southern part of the State, Emil Ratin, who was from the Cleaners and Dyers, I think, and Walter Lambert, and there was a guy out here from the East, from the Central Committee, Jack Johnston, and I believe William Schneiderman.

Q. Can you tell us, Mr. Schomaker, whether or not the defendant [1080] Harry Bridges participated in the discussion which took place at this meeting?

A. Yes, he gave a report. Bridges gave a report at that meeting.

Q. What is your recollection of the nature of that report?

A. Well, at that particular time in 1935 the beef centered around the sailors, the Sailors Union of the Pacific, and Paul Scharrenberg was secretary, and in that summer the sailors—Paul Scharrenberg was also secretary of the California Federation of Labor, and the sailors in that year, that summer, they expelled him from the Sailors Union of the Pacific, although he still held his job as the California secretary of the State Federation of Labor. The sailors were pretty hot about this being so. They wanted him removed not only as the secretary of the Sailors, but also removed as the California State Federation of Labor secretary, and that was the main point in the convention as far as—that was one of the main points in the convention, that is, as far as we were concerned, as far as the maritime workers were concerned, and men, of course—the maritime unions had no representation outside of Scharrenberg in the Federation, so they sought and put some of our men either as vice president of one—I think our sub-district was No. 9, and we endeavored to get one of our persons as a vice president and also to run opposition, if possible, against Scharrenberg as secretary. [1081]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Is this a convenient time to recess?

Mr. Donohue: I think so.

The Court: We will take our afternoon recess. Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions and not to form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.)

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Referring still to the meeting in San Diego, about which we have been inquiring, are you able to state whether or not the membership or attendance at this meeting was restricted to the persons who were members of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that for the same reason, calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and here we have still more people who have not appeared before now and they are being identified in the same general identification, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I only asked the question whether or not he could, if your Honor please.

The Court: Why not ask him as to the formative period with respect to the data and the surrounding incidents? That might lead to the composition of the meeting?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us, Mr. Schomaker—— [1082]

If your Honor please, I think unless I am permitted to ask a preliminary question as to whether or not the witness is able to classify this meeting, then I can ask him the reasons for his so classifying.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, I say in deference to you the question as phrased is not that type of question.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, with respect to the persons whom you have identified as having been present at that meeting, would you again repeat them, and with respect to each tell us how long you have known that person and where you met him.

A. Well, Bridges I had known since—this was 1935—I had known him since October, 1933.

Q. Had you attended prior to this time——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, your Honor. The question is not answered. He asked him as to each of the persons to repeat their names and state how long he had known them. We might as well have an answer to that question. Now there is an intervening question that stops that off.

The Court: I think the witness has in mind the general nature of the question. (To the witness) Without interruption you may continue on this phase of it.

A. As I said, all the people who were there were delegates to the convention with the exception of one, Stanley Hancock, who was the Communist organizer for San Diego County.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out as not responsive. He was asked one question. He was asked to [1083] repeat the names of the persons and tell how long he had known them.

Mr. Donohue: May I withdraw the question, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that the statement that Stanley Hancock was an organizer for the San Diego County Communist Party be stricken out.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection.

The Court: It may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, what opportunities, if any, did you have in order to determine the nature of this meeting?

A. Well, the meeting was called by Walter Lambert, who was the Communist Trade Union director for District 13, and he give notices for the meeting, and he checked the people who came to the meeting in at the door. And the chairman of the meeting was Stanley Hancock. He was not a delegate to the convention, but he chairmaned the meeting.

Q. Did you know Stanley Hancock?

A. I knew Stanley Hancock, yes.

Q. How long had you known him prior to this meeting?

A. Well, that is in 1935. I would have known Hancock about three years, I suppose, prior to that.

Q. Under what circumstances had you known him? [1084]

A. I met Hancock at the Communist Party headquarters at 37 Grove Street and also at 121 Haight Street when he came up here for Communist Party meetings, that is, statewide meetings.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that latter part be stricken out as stating not this gentleman's conclusion but Hancock's conclusion, when he came up for certain purposes. I ask that that part of the answer be stricken out, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to the latter part being stricken, if your Honor please.

The Court: It may go out.

Mr. Donohue: I submit, if your Honor please, this witness is qualified to answer the question which I now put to him:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, to your knowledge was the attendance at this meeting restricted to persons who were members of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion, and the proper foundation has not been laid.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Everyone who attended that meeting, to the best of my knowledge, was a member of the Communist Party of the United States of America and were affiliated with the California District of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out, your Honor, and the witness has qualified it now with "to the best [1085] of my knowledge."

The Court: Motion denied.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Now, your Honor, you see the vice of that sort of question. Here persons whom he has not identified before, and whom he may have met for the first time, or never met before, and did not know who they were when they came in, by a sort of blanket statement like that he puts them all in the same category, and that is just evading asking him about each separate person and what he knows about him. I notice the names of a couple of sailors, McNeill and Clark. [1086]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Well, those persons are not on trial, are they?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, apparently they are. Everybody is on trial now. We are just sweeping in everybody in the labor movement on the Pacific Coast at that time, seems to be identified by this gentleman as a member of this Party.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, this is just the reverse of the objection made just prior to our recess.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): I ask you again, Mr. Schomaker,—

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, I object to counsel repeating the question. Then we have to repeat the objection again.

Mr. Donohue: ~~If it pleases~~ your Honor, your Honor sustained a motion to strike a portion of the answer, and for that reason I think I am entitled to repeat the question.

The Court: All right, proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): I ask you again, Mr. Schomaker, whether or not to your knowledge all of the persons who were present at the meeting in San Diego concerning which you have testified were members of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to that as having just been asked and answered.

The Court: Overruled.

A. They were, to the best of my knowledge; they were all [1087] members of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue) Mr. Schomaker, do you recall any other Communist Party meeting or—strike that, please.

Mr. Schomaker, did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting at Sokol Hall?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object, your Honor, as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and no proper foundation laid as to whether it was a Communist Party meeting or not.

Mr. Donohue: May I strike the question, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, did you ever attend any kind of meeting in the Sokol Hall?

A. I attended numerous meetings at the Sokol Hall.

Q. And where is Sokol Hall located?

A. It is on Paige Street, and to the best of my recollection it is in the 700 block, or maybe it was the 600 block. But anyway, it is along in that adjacent vicinity there.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. What was the nature of the meetings which you attended in Sokol Hall?

Mr. Hallinan: Object, if your Honor please, calling for his opinion and conclusion on an ultimate fact.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: No circumstances of time, place or persons [1088] present; simply a blank statement of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The meetings that I attended at Sokol Hall were generally Communist Party meetings.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting at Sokol Hall at which the defendant Harry Bridges was present?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Same objection; containing opinion and conclusion, designating the type of meeting.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes, I can recall one meeting.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): When?

A. That Harry Bridges attended.

Q. When was that meeting?

A. That meeting was the year 1935. It would be in the fall of the year 1935; it was the early fall of 1935.

Q. Can you tell us who was present at that meeting?

A. Well, there was quite a few people present.

Q. About how many?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. But what distinguished this meeting was the fact that——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to this as not responsive.

The Court: He has asked a particular question. Yes, the motion is granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How many persons were present? [1089]

A. Oh, the number of people. There was quite a number. I would say between 17 and 23, or somewhere along in there.

Q. Whom can you now recall as having been there?

A. Well, Bill Schneidermann was there, and myself, of course; Pop Hanoff, Betty Ganat, and Harry Bridges, and Hnery Schmidt and Bill Schneiderman, Lawrence Ross, and the other big brass of the Communist Party in California.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Ask that be stricken out, if the Court please, as constituting an opinion and conclusion of the witness. He was asked the names.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection, if your Honor please.

The Court: That may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Schomaker, is there anything or was there anything about this meeting which peculiarly calls it to your attention?

A. Why, definitely so, because that was the meeting where Bill Schneidermann was officially, well, greeted, I guess you could say, as the State organizer of the Communist Party.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Do you recall whether or not—do you recall anything that anyone said at that meeting particularly?

A. Well, I can recall Lawrence Ross was the chairman.

Q. And who was Lawrence Ross?

A. Well, he was the editor of the Western Worker at that time and had been for some time.

Q. How long did you know Lawrence Ross? [1090]

A. Well, I have known Lawrence Ross, at that time, I would say, from the depression days, 1931, to that particular time.

Q. What opportunity, if any, had you to determine whether or not Lawrence Ross was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, when he was appointed editor of the Western Worker, Sam Darcy and I brought the decision to him of the District Committee that he was made editor of the Western Worker.

Q. Do you recall anyone else making a speech or report of any character at this meeting?

A. Well, Bill Schneiderman made a report on. I think it was the 7th Congress of the International—of the Comintern.

Q. What did he say about it?

A. Well, he had quite a bit to say. Naturally, in those day,——

Mr. Hallinan: I object to this, if the Court please, and ask that those "days" be stricken.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: No objection.

Q. What is your best recollection of what Mr. Schneiderman had to say?

A. Well, he had just come back from the International Congress. With the question of Fascism and the threat of war, it was an international question, and the security of each country was of paramount importance. So he delivered a report along those lines.

Q. Did Mr. Schneiderman say where the 7th International Congress [1091] had been held?

A. Well, I don't recall, no. It was in Europe somewhere; just where, I don't recall.

Q. What opportunities were yours in order to determine whether or not this particular meeting was one the attendance at which was restricted to members of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Now, just a moment. Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for an opinion and conclusion, and further, assuming something not in evidence and leading and suggestive.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, it was announced that this was a meeting of the District Committee to welcome Schneiderman to District 13.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Were you at that time a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party? A. I was, yes.

Q. By whom were you notified of this meeting?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, I was notified by Walter Lambert.

Q. Can you tell us of any security measures that may have been taken at the time and place of the meeting?

A. Well, at that particular time there was two persons at the door, and they let each one in after they were recognized, and the same thing on departure.

Q. Do you recall who those two persons were?

A. Well, they were two fellows that—one was, he handled [1092] the sale of literature at 121 Haight Street. Now, just what his name was I don't recall. And the other fellow was one of the fellows who stayed around 121 Haight Street all the time.

Q. Of your own knowledge, Mr. Schomaker, was the meeting concerning which you have just testified a Communist Party meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Now, object to that again, if the Court please, as calling for his opinion and conclusion, no proper foundation laid, not binding on the defendants.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Why, it was definitely a Communist Party meeting.

Mr. Donohue: Would your Honor indulge me just a moment, please?

The Court: Surely.

Mr. Donohue: We have no further questions of the witness, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Might we adjourn until tomorrow?

The Court: Yes. We have reached the four o'clock period, gentlemen, and we have had a long day.

Under the circumstances, may I again admonish the jury not to discuss the case with any person, not to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of this trial, not to form or express an opinion on it until it is finally submitted to you for decision. You may now retire.

Tuesday Morning Session, November 29, 1949,
10:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. Bring in the jury, please. Call Mr. Schomaker.

(Whereupon the jury entered the courtroom and assumed their respective positions in the jury box, and the prior witness resumed the witness stand.)

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, there is one further matter I would like to inquire of Mr. Schomaker about, with Your Honor's permission; a matter that did not come to my attention until last night.

The Court: All right.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed the stand.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, did you ever meet a man by the name of Earl Browder?

Mr. Hallinan: Earl what?

Mr. Donohue: Browder.

A. Well, I have met Earl Browder several different occasions.

Q. Where was the occasion of your first meeting?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, the first meeting, where I was formally introduced to him, was in San Mateo—no, in Santa Clara County.

Q. Can you describe more particularly the place in Santa [1094] Clara County?

A. Well, it was a shack in a prune orchard or a prune ranch.

Q. Can you tell us when this meeting took place?

A. Well, that meeting took place in—it was during the maritime strike of 1934, and it was in that period. Now, it was in—it was prior to the general strike, so it must have occurred in June, June, 1934.

Q. Will you tell us, if you were accompanied by any person or persons on your visit to that prune ranch in Santa Clara County?

A. Well, there was quite a group of persons that went down there.

Q. Will you tell us by what means you went and with whom?

A. Well, I was driven there in—it was a large green Packard sedan, and in the car—that is driving the car was Walter Lambert. And in the car was Henry Schmidt and myself and Harry Bridges and Henry Schrimpf, and another longshoreman named Elmer Wheeler.

Q. Can you tell us what occurred when you reached your destination?

A. Well, we drove down the Peninsula and we turned off the highway 101 and went over toward the foothills and drove into this ranch and there was some people there already outside, and drove up to this little shack on this prune ranch. And there was a table spread out under the trees, it was a lunch. So we pulled up, and evidently the people who had been there [1095] ahead of us had eaten, because when we got out of the car, why, Henry Schrimpf was one of the first out. He dove into this lunch and began to eat. So I says to him, I says, "Well, Henry, how about giving somebody else a chance?". So I jumped in, too, and then we had a little lunch there, and then, as I say, we were there, got there late and the other people had eaten. So then we went inside of this cabin and I was introduced, well, all of us were introduced to a fellow there, by "Earl Browder." So I raised the question, I said, "Well, that don't look like Browder to me." And Walter Lambert said, "No, he shaved his mustache off."

Q. Was Mr. Bridges with you at the time he was introduced to Mr. Browder?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Was Mr. Bridges introduced to Mr. Browder?

A. Well, he was there in the cabin; he certainly must have been introduced to him.

Q. Was anything said by anyone while you and Mr. Bridges were there together?

A. Why, yes, we began discussing the strike and the progress it had made, and the general situation concerning the strike.

Q. Can you tell us what person or persons were present other than those who went down with you in this automobile?

A. Well, when we got there, there was—I remember very distinctly—Minnie Carson, a person named Minnie Carson was there, and [1096] Sam Darcy was there, and this person who was introduced as Earl Browder. And there was another fellow there, but I don't recall his name; he was a stranger to me.

Q. On this occasion, did Mr. Bridges have anything to say?

A. Well, yes. As I say, we all discussed the strike and the aspects of it and what was to be expected in it, and the future conduct of it.

Q. Did Mr. Browder have anything to say?

A. Why, he had quite a bit to say, yes.

Q. Can you tell us, your best recollection, what Mr. Browder said?

A. Well, the best of my recollection was that, the fact that there was quite a bit of terror being exerted on the strike from various sources, from the police and private agencies, tear gas salesmen that were applying pressure in the form of shooting tear gas into the strikers. And in general, the atmosphere was one of tension and Browder suggested that what needed to be done was to get more support for the strike. That is, more support for it, to line up people on the side of the strikers against these forces that were of terror and violence against them.

Q. Can you recall by whom you were notified of this meeting?

A. Walter Lambert notified us.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And it was in his car you went to——

A. Well, he drove the car. He drove that car during the [1097] strike. It was a green Packard, a large Packard with those extra seats behind the front seat.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions of the witness, if Your Honor please.

The Witness: Oh, by the way. There was one thing that I——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to any volunteering of a statement from the witness.

Mr. Donohue: I think if the witness has something to say, he should be allowed to say it.

The Court: Is this part of the last answer?

The Witness: No, something I testified to yesterday.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, ask that——

The Court: You desire to clarify something?

The Witness: I would like to.

The Court: You may.

The Witness: And regarding that second meeting at 121 Haight Street, with Norma Perry, the disciplinary meeting.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes?

A. Well, I placed Henry Schrimpf in that meeting, and he wasn't there. That is the meeting, the second disciplinary meeting, which was held at 121 Haight Street. But Henry Schrimpf did not attend that meeting.

Q. You testified, I believe, yesterday that he attended two meetings?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I testified he did attend that meeting, [1098] yes.

Q. And you now say that he was at the first but not the second meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to this. He has already made his statement and——

The Court: I think it was clear in the record, Mr. Donohue. The witness has already testified, as of yesterday, with respect to the second meeting.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions, Your Honor. [1099]

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. You talked that matter over with Mr. Schrimpf last night? A. Pardon?

Q. You talked that matter over with Mr. Schrimpf last night?

A. Did I talk it over with Mr. Schrimpf last night?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I haven't seen Henry Schrimpf for years.

Q. At that meeting at Shaw's house when Harry Bridges made a speech did you recruit any people?

A. Did I recruit any people?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I was a silent spectator at that particular meeting.

Q. Did you see any recruited?

A. Evidently there must have been people recruited.

Q. You made a couple of statements here, in one of which you were talking about some conversation about conditions, and you said the lousy conditions on the waterfront, and at another place you said, "We talked about the terrible conditions on the waterfront." Just now you told us about a conversation that you had with a number of people including Mr. Browder, and you spoke about the future aspects of the strike, quite a bit of terror by the police, private organizations, tear gas salesmen, and so forth. Going back to the first conversation at which you said that you, Mr. Mann and Mr. [1100] Bridges talked about these matters, will you enlarge upon the conversation. Tell us what was said.

A. You mean with Browder at the prune ranch?

Q. No, the prior ones, the ones that you had before the strike back in 1933 preceding the time at which you say Bridges signed an application for the Communist Party. You stated in your testimony that you had conversations with him and Mr. Mann in that restaurant at the time about these lousy conditions on the waterfront and the terrible conditions that all the stevedores were talking about. Do you remember that you so testified?

A. I don't remember that, no.

Q. You do not remember testifying to that?

A. Herman Mann wasn't there. Either you are crossed up or I am.

Q. Who is the person who was there?

A. I don't know what meeting you are speaking about.

Q. The one in the restaurant at which you said

Mr. Bridges signed the Communist Party application. Who was there?

A. B. B. Jones was there.

Q. Do you remember yesterday testifying that you had a conversation, you, Mr. Bridges, Mr. B. B. Jones, about the terrible conditions on the waterfront, and, as you put it, the "lousy conditions on the waterfront"? A. I recall that, yes. [1101]

Q. You recall that you said that yesterday. Tell us what was said about that. Give us the whole conversation on that subject.

A. I couldn't do it verbatim.

Q. You do not have to do it verbatim. Do it as well as you can.

A. As I said, as we went into the restaurant evidently on that particular morning Bridges at that time was working——

Q. Pardon me. Will you please tell us what conversation you had on the subject I just discussed.

A. I am trying to get a background.

Q. We have a background.

A. What I am trying to do—after all, you asked me a question. I can't snap it out of thin air. I have to get a background in my own mind first. Bridges was working with a gang on the Hawaiian docks. On that particular morning he evidently had a late start because he was in the restaurant when we walked in. Jones said to Harry, "Harry, how about buying the coffee?"

So Bridges proceeded to buy the coffee. As I say, it was a nickel a cup at that time. He could easily afford it. We got the coffee and we sat down and began to talk about conditions on the front, particularly about the case of a fellow who was killed—I think it was on the Encinal Terminals—a heavy load of canned goods. The winch fall carried away. He [1102] was underneath the load and it killed him, he and his brother were working together, and we were talking about that particular thing, that due to the excessive speed-up and the big loads, here was a guy whose life was sacrificed. And from that we discussed the other conditions, that something more—action needed to be taken and the officers of the ILA at that time were not doing enough to rectify these things.

Q. What conditions did you talk about? What conditions were being complained of?

A. Well, for instance, the selection of men to be picked for a job.

Q. How was that worked?

A. That was done on the basis of a shape-up where the boss picked his men.

Q. Describe what you mean by the "shape-up."

A. A group of men assembled on the waterfront every morning, on the Embarcadero, right off of Market, and there the boss picked John, Dick and Harry to fill out his gang, and of course it wasn't always the best workers who got the jobs, and generally the guys who were the quietest and were able to kick back maybe a little thing to the boss—maybe a bottle of whisky, a ham or something, so he would get a job—in other words, favoritism.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Was that the consistent procedure that was being followed on the waterfront at that [1103] time?

A. Very consistent, certainly it was.

Q. When you said a gang of men would line up for this shape-up, how many men would line up?

A. I wouldn't say they would line up in numerical order or alphabetical order.

Q. I did not mean to say that.

A. I mean they ganged up there, generally the union—it was a blue book union, and those guys generally worked, and those fellows who belonged to the ILA or those who did not were generally ganged on the waterfront in the early morning where they were selected or not selected for work.

Q. What time in the morning?

Mr. Paisley: We are only concerned with what was said in the conversation rather than describing conditions.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I asked him.

The Court: You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Go ahead.

A. I think the guys who were the hungriest and needed the work the most got there pretty early, maybe five o'clock.

Q. Then did you men in this discussion say that that was an unfair, unjust or vicious sort of practice?

A. Well, I wouldn't say at that particular meeting we discussed that, but that was one of the paramount issues we had discussed later, the question of a hiring hall where we had an equalized system of hiring. [1104]

Q. What was said about a hiring hall? What was proposed in that connection?

A. I wouldn't say at this particular meeting.

Q. At any time.

A. At any time it was a question of establishing a hiring hall where everyone had an equal chance to do the work.

Q. How did that work?

A. That involved quite a bit of discussion and argument, because quite a lot of people said you couldn't establish a hiring hall on the waterfront because you didn't have anyone to run it. Like I remember very distinctly Burglar Lewis and Curly Cutwright getting up and shouting on the floor of the meeting, "Who the hell is going to run the hiring hall when you get it?"

Q. Who the hell did run it?

A. We got guys from the union to run it. Bill Morrow, for one, when they first established the hiring system.

Q. Was anything said about wages on the waterfront at that time?

A. That is true, they discussed the question of wages.

Q. Was anything said about what the average wage of a stevedore on the waterfront was during that period?

A. You couldn't strike an average wage because the star gangs, as Bridges was in, would make $75 or $80 a week, where fellows who worked in casual gangs or extra men would make $10 a week. [1105] We proposed to establish a wage at a dollar an hour and a 30-hour week on the basis of a six-hour day. That would be enough to carry—a 30-hour week, 30—that would be enough to live on.

Q. In other words, while the star gang men, those who were cutting back to the bosses, and so forth, could make as much as $75 a week, there were a great many men on the waterfront making as little as $10 a week; is that correct?

A. I wouldn't establish it at $10. They made a dollar or maybe they wouldn't make anything.

Q. They might go down there morning after morning and assemble under the conditions you described and not make a nickel?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that very frequent?

A. What do you mean, "frequent"?

Q. Did that happen all the time? Were there men who went through that day after day after day?

A. I would say they would get maybe a day now and then. After all, they couldn't go down there day after day after day and not make something, or they couldn't get down there; they couldn't exist, pay for their food and lodging.

Q. Coming to the period of 1934, when you say you went down and talked to Mr. Earl Browder, at that time the 1934 strike was on, is that correct?

A. Yes, that was possibly June of 1934. [1106]

Q. In the meantime there had been a great deal of difficulty reorganizing the ILA and making a union out of it, isn't that right?

7

A. That is very correct.

Q. Prior to that time there had been a company union, what they call a blue book union is that right? A. That is right.

Q. The great difficulty that you men were in caused you to get the men to desert this company union and form a union of their own or revitalize the ILA, is that correct?

A. I wouldn't pose a question like that, no.

Q. Do you mean it was not difficult to do it, or what do you mean?

A. In my opinion the blue book union was not a factor concerning the men, because I would say half of the men did not belong to the blue book. It was not a factor of overcoming, that is, getting the men away from the blue book.

Q. What was the difficulty about the blue book union?

A. Do you want to let me answer this question?

Q. Yes.

A. I am not too bright, but I try to get this thing chronological so I can explain it. It wasn't a factor of getting the men away from the blue book. It was a factor of getting all men into the ILA or as many as we possibly could.

Q. The strike that happened in 1934 lasted 85 days. Do you [1107] remember that?

A. Well, 84 or 85 days, yes.

Q. Was it a very violent strike?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, I would think it was an extremely violent strike.

Q. When you went down to San Jose sometime in June of 1934 the strike had then been on for some time, is that right?

A. In June it would have been on since May 9, yes. We didn't go to San Jose. Let us get that straight.

Q. San Mateo, or wherever it was.

A. Santa Clara County.

Q. Santa Clara County. Will you tell us now what the conversation with Mr. Browder and these other people who had driven down there, including yourself and Mr. Bridges, was in connection with these subjects that you mentioned, that they discussed the subject, its future aspects, quite a lot of terror by the police, private organization, tear gas salesmen, and so forth? Tell us what was said.

A. You mean the conversation that we had——

Q. Yes, on that subject.

A. As I say, I couldn't repeat that verbatim, but the text of it would be that Browder was there and Darcy was there, and it was after Joe Ryan, who was the International president of the ILA, had come out and had signed an agreement with the Waterfront Employers, and which was later repudiated by the membership, and then the fact that there were certain [1108] people on the West Coast here, that is, in an official capacity, who were working with Ryan to sign an agreement which the men would have nothing to say about. That was one angle. Now, the other angle was the fact that there was so much terror, and because the police were raiding the picket lines and arresting MWIU men, beating up everybody they run across, and besides invading your homes and things of that nature, the question was how could we get more strength for the strike? And that was the general line which was followed.

Q. What was said about private operators?

A. Private operators?

Q Yes, private agencies. What was said about that? A. I don't get that.

Q. By that you mean private detectives?

A. You mean stool pigeons?

Q. Yes. What were they doing? What was said that they were doing?

A. They were all lumped together.

Q. Tell us what was said about it. What was the discussion about that? You say here that you talked about this terror on the waterfront, the police were beating up and arresting strikers, invading homes. What do you mean by "invading homes"?

A. For instance, they would come out to your home and knock—possibly the door was unlocked and they would walk right in.

Q. And do what? [1109]

A. And begin to question you, or possibly they even tried to install dictaphones in places where they were meeting. They were raiding the—they raided the various union halls where the workers were congregating.

Q. Who did that?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, now, I say I don't know who did it. They claimed the vigilantes did it under the organization of the Police Department.

Q. And those vigilantes were actually hired agents of the Waterfront Employers, isn't that right?

A. I couldn't say that, no. I don't know.

Q. They were men who were doing this constantly, that is, beating up strikers and going into their homes, dictagraphing, trying to collect evidence, trying to send men to jail and things of that kind, isn't that correct?

A. Whether it was by the Waterfront Employers, I couldn't say that. It was being done, but who was responsible for it—certainly the union weren't doing it.

Q. The union was on the receiving end?

A. That is right, getting beat up.

Q. When you talk about the police beating up the men, what do you mean by that?

A. Well, the pickets and the picket line, there was several men beaten. They would pick out men who were in the chow line there on the Embarcadero, where they had a soup kitchen. [1110] And they would go along and ask people for their strike cards which would identify them with an organization that they belonged to, and if they carried a green industrial workers' union card, they were intimated and beaten, but, as I say, we had honest leaders and we combatted that to a great extent.

Q. Were they beaten with fists, clubs, or what?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I don't know. I know I was beaten with a club; I suppose the others were beaten the same—clubbed, kicked. . .

Q. Would they beat these men even though they were doing nothing offensive or nothing illegal?

A. I don't know what you call legal or illegal. Picketing was a legal right.

Q. You mean the men who would get beaten were not being unduly noisy or attacking anybody?

A. No, not to my experience they hadn't, no.

Q. What about this tear gas that you spoke about? Tell us about that.

A. I don't know what you mean to tell them about.

Q. You said part of the reign of terror was from tear gas salesmen. They were pouring tear gas on the pickets and on the strikers.

A. That happened in instances where—I think it was the end of May where the police attacked a picket line and they shot tear gas. Whether they threw them—I think in those days they generally threw them. That is, they ignited them [1111] in some fashion and, like throwing a football. And then they had another—I think the guy came in—his name was McCarthy. He was a tear gas salesman. He demonstrated a new type of tear gas which is fired by a pistol. Well, on July 3 they fired numerous tear gas before the ranks of the strikers, and again on July 5 they did this, and subsequently a couple of people were killed. Two strikers were killed. [1111-A]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. There was a day called "Bloody Thursday": when was that? A. That was July 5th.

Q. Was that the day the two men were killed or approximately?

A. Well, yes, somewhere around that. One was killed and I think one was killed a day or two later, or so.

Q. What means brought about their death? What particular type of violence—tear gas?

A. Well, gunshot, I think—gunshot wounds.

Q. In addition to the two men who were killed, about 400 men were wounded, weren't they, that day?

A. Well, I wouldn't say, estimate the number. There was a considerable number was gassed and wounded, yes.

Q. Now, with relation to the Communist headquarters that you describe, up on Grove Street, were the dead bodies of the slain men taken up there? A. Well, not that I recall.

Q. Were any of the wounded taken up there, laid out on the floor for treatment?

A. Well, it is very possible.

Q. Now, the union had a union hall down there on the waterfront, didn't it?

A. 113 Stewart Street, yes.

Q. And were any of the wounded men taken there?

A. There were considerable number inside there, yes.

Q. And then after the wounded men were in

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

there, laid out on [1112] the floor, didn't the police come in and throw them out and take them out and lock them up in the City Prison?

A. No, I don't recall that. I do recall them shooting tear gas into 113 Stewart Street, but I don't think any police invaded the hall.

Q. In other words, after the injured men had been brought in there, then the police fired tear gas bombs into the building, isn't that right?

A. Well, they did that, yes.

Q. And then after that, why, you and Mr. Bridges and a number of other men went down to Santa Clara County to talk to Mr. Browder and find out if he had any suggestions as to how public interest might be turned in favor of these men who were being treated that way, isn't that correct?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that we went down there specifically to see what Browder had to say; we were taken down there primarily to meet Sam Darcy. Now, I didn't know that Browder was there, because I had never met Browder before. But Browder was there.

Q. But I say, that was the problem that you went there to consider and discuss, is that right—how to awake, how to arouse public sympathy and public indignation against this treatment?

A. That is precisely correct.

Q. And that was the thing that was discussed, is that right? A. That's right. [1113]

Q. And that was the thing that was arrived at, isn't that right? A. That's correct.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. There wasn't any recommendation by anybody to retaliate in kind and shoot policemen and stool pigeons, was there?

A. Why, no, sir; certainly not.

Q There wasn't any fund attempted to be raised to buy tear gas to fire back at the people that were assailing you and your men, was there?

A. I don't get that "my men." I don't know what you mean by that.

Q. Well, the other men who were—there were no such suggestions as that, were there?

A. There was no suggestion, no.

Q. There was no recommendation that force be met with force or violence with violence, was there? A. No.

Q. In other words, all that was discussed there was what means could be employed to rouse the decent people of the community to awaken their indignation and protest against this treatment, isn't that correct? A. That's correct.

Q. Now, after that the strike continued for some time, did it? A. You mean after what?

Q. After you went down and met Mr. Browder at this place that [1114] you mentioned.

A. Well, that was June and July. It continued until the termination, yes.

Q. And was that the first time that this group of men met Mr. Darcy to discuss the matters that you have mentioned?

A. You mean—what group of men do you mean?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. The men who went down there on that occasion.

A. You mean Bridges and I and Schmidt?

Q. Yes. A. Why, no, certainly not.

Q. Was it after that that Mr. Darcy had you transmit messages and recommendations to Mr. Bridges?

A. You mean before Bridges joined the party or after he joined the party?

Q. No, I mean after this visit to Santa Clara, was it after that that Mr. Darcy had you carry these messages?

A. Why, certainly not. Mr. Sam Darcy instructed Herman and I—Herman Mann and I—when I first came up here that we were to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party, and from that day up to the time that I severed my relations with the Communist Party, I carried messages from, particularly in that period of '33 and '34, from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges and to other members on the waterfront.

Q. That was after Mr. Bridges had joined, as you say, the Communist Party? [1115]

A. Well, even before, that he actually signed an application, that they was meetings with Communist groups with Bridges.

Q. Before Mr. Bridges joined the Communist Party, then, he had meetings with Communist groups, is that right?

A. With the understanding that—well——

Q. Just answer yes or no, if you will.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, let me explain.

Q. I will let you explain afterwards.

A. The——

Q. No, I ask an answer to the question.

A. Well, I have to answer it, certainly I have to answer it. The——

Q. Now, you answered this, that before Mr. Bridges joined the Communist Party, he had meetings with the Communist members. Is that correct or not? A. Well, that is correct, yes.

Q. And at those meetings matters were discussed relating to conditions on the waterfront, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. And matters were discussed relating to the wages that the men were getting, this shape-up system, the necessity of a hiring hall, and similar related matters, is that right?

A. Well, until it reached a point.

Q. All right.

A. It reached a point at these meetings where the proposition [1116] was put clearly to Bridges, "Are you going to join the Communist Party?"

Q. Well, that isn't what I asked. Coming to that, we have a long time ahead of us, Mr. Schomaker; so let's not be in a hurry.

A. I am not impatient; all I want to do is make this thing clear.

Q. We will see that you make it so clear that a blind man could see it. You needn't fear. Now, before Mr. Bridges joined the Communist Party there; as you say, he had meetings that members of the Communist Party attended relating to, and had discussions with them in these meetings related to, these conditions on the waterfront; that is right, isn't it?

A. For a very short period of time it is, yes. A short period of time—less than 30 days, I would say.

Q. All right, less than 30 days. Now, how many days less than 30 days?

A. Well, I got up here in the middle of October, so, oh, I wouldn't say how many days less or how many days more, but it was around in that neighborhood of about 30 days or about a month.

Q. All right. And at these meetings, Mr. Bridges attended meetings at which everybody was a Communist except he, is that right?

A. Well, that is pretty correct, yes. [1117]

Q. And what was the largest number of people present at one of those meetings that you can now remember?

A. What do you mean, in that particular period?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I can name them. There would be——

Q. No, just give us the number.

A. That is the only way I can fix it in my mind, is recall the people who were there.

Q. Well, recall them to yourself and then tell us the sum total.

A. Well, there would be three or four.

Q. Three or four. And that, you say, concerned the matters that we have been heretofore discussing.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)
Now, at those meetings were recommendations made by the officials of the Communist Party to Mr. Bridges? A. Were recommendations made?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the policy was discussed and recommendations weren't made directly to Mr. Bridges, they were made to the group.

Q. At which Mr. Bridges was present?

A. At which Mr. Bridges was present, yes.

Q. In other words, between Mr. Bridges and these members of the Communist Party, these officials, I take it, were they?

A. Officials of——?

Q. Of the Communist Party. [1118]

A. You mean the people that were there?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, being an official in the Communist Party is not, possibly, like being an official of a corporation, where they can veto any—that is, take an action. A Communist Party member was a Communist Party member, where things were discussed, and a decision was made, and you didn't ask whether he was an organizer or he was—he was accepted.

Q. No. Pardon me. I am afraid you have misunderstood me. You say that for a period of about 30 days prior to the time that you say Mr. Bridges signed an application for membership in the Communist Party, he had meetings with persons who were Communists—all persons being present, all persons who were present being Communists except Mr. Bridges? And you said that the number of Communists who would be there would be three or four. And I say, in those instances, were those three or four members of the Communist Party also officers of the Communist Party?

A. Well, you could term them officials of the Communist Party in that sense, yes.

Q. Well, I can't term them anything. I know nothing about them. I ask you, were they or weren't they officers of the Party?

A. Well, I can tell you; Harry Jackson was there, and he was——

Q. Pardon me.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I want to get an answer to it. [1119] He knows whether they were or not. Now, he can answer it yes or no.

The Court: Well, I think he is entitled to explain to you. You may proceed.

A. (Continuing): Well, I say, being, as I say, a Communist Party member, he doesn't run around with a tag on his back, "I am a unit organizer," "I am a section organizer." I can say yes, that Herman Mann was a unit organizer, I was a section organizer and Jackson—I don't know his precise title, but he was a pretty brainy guy, and he made a lot of good suggestions and he was hooked up with the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, that is not in answer to the question.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. (Continuing): So I would say yes, they were officials of the Communist Party.

Q. Well, that is all you had to say in the first place.

A. I am trying to tell the truth and get this thing cleared, so yourself and myseff——

Q. Oh, are you, Mr. Schomaker? All right.

Now, at those meetings suggestions were made concerning the waterfront situation and what should be done about it, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And recommendations were made by these officers of the Communist Party to Mr. Bridges as to the reasonable course to [1120] be followed, is that right?

A. Well, I wouldn't say they were made to Mr. Bridges. They were made to the group and since Herman Mann and I were members of the longshoremen, that we carried out decisions that Bridges wouldn't dare touch in those days.

Q. I see. In other words, the recommendations were to the group and not to Mr. Bridges specifically?

A. As an individual. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Bridges, though not a member of the Communist Party, participated in those meetings, is that right?

A. Well, he was there. Now, what you mean by "participating" is another question. But he——

Q. I mean, he talked and discussed back and forth the problems, too; didn't he?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. All right. And you say that you and the other gentlemen whose name you mentioned, being members of the Communist Party, were also members of the Longshore Workers Union, is that right? A. The ILA, yes.

Q. But there were members of the Communist Party present who were not members of the Longshore Workers Union, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. All right. But these men, I suppose, had some special experience or knowledge of labor relations or trade union activities that enabled them to make some suggestions that were [1121] advisable, is that right? A. Sure they did.

Q. All right. A. Absolutely.

Q. Where were those meetings held?

A. They were held, some in Bridges' home, and were held some in Herman Marin's home, and we held some in the MWIU headquarters, and they held some where I was living.

Q. Any place else?

A. Well, there must have been others, but I mean, these particular places, because I can recall them pretty well.

Q. How about the Communist Party headquarters? Were any of them held there?

A. And there were some held at 37 Grove Street, too.

Q. Which were the Communist Party headquarters? A. That's correct.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And then where was Mr. Mann's residence?

A. Well, the closest I can recall, where he lived then, was on Germania Street in a basement flat.

Q. Where is Germania Street?

A. Well, Germania Street runs parallel to Haight—now, I don't know where it begins, but it is a short street, it is more of an alley than it is a thoroughfare.

Q. And what other streets is it between?

A. Well, it runs—Haight and the cross street is Fillmore, so [1122] it is in that triangle there.

Q. So it is out some place, then, in the neighborhood of Haight and Fillmore Streets?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. And there were meetings held there?

A. That's right.

Q. Yes. And that there were meetings held where you lived? A. That's right.

Q. And where did you live then?

A. At 1027 Page Street.

Q. 1027 Page. Near what street is that?

A. That is right off of Divisadero.

Q. And then there were meetings held at Mr. Mann's house, and where was he living?

A. That is what I told you, on Germania.

Q. Oh.

A. As close as I can recall him now, we met at Herman Mann's house, yes.

Q. Pardon me. Where was Mr. Bridges' home then?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, he lived out on Harrison Street then.

Q. Out on Harrison and what other street?

A. Well, I think it was a park there, and I think the cross streets was Army, up above Army Street. I think it was the last block on Harrison.

Q. So that is a considerable distance away from the section [1123] around Haight, from Fillmore to Divisadero?

A. That's right; it was quite a ways out there.

Q. Some miles?

A. Well, I wouldn't say how far, but it is quite a distance.

Q. Now, you testified here that you carried messages and instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges, and I will go presently into a list of the matters that you say you carried such instructions on. But were those instructions oral or in writing?

A. Well, I don't know just what you mean by "instructions" now.

Q. Well, you used the word or term yourself, sir: "The next instruction was to build the union. Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges that, from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges, we should raise the demands of the men from the employers." Now you tell us what you mean by "instructions." A. Well, just exactly that.

Q. All right. A. Now, on the——

Q. No. Then let's get back to the original question. Were the instructions written or by word of mouth?

A. The way these instructions came about——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. No.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I will ask an answer to it.

Q. Now, you say that certain instructions were given to you by [1124] Sam Darcy to transmit to Harry Bridges. Did Sam Darcy put those instructions in writing and deliver it to you to hand to Mr. Bridges or did he tell you what you should say to Mr. Bridges?

A. Well, the point is this: Now I have no legal —I have no legal background, and perhaps the word that I used has a different meaning than what you have.

Q. I don't care what——

A. So the question——

Q. ——word you use, whether it was instructions or directions.

A. ——of instructions or directions.

Q. Well, you used the word.

A. I know. I say, I am not a student of the English. And if I was, possibly I wouldn't be packing that hod down there. But the point is, the question of instructions, maybe you put a different interpretation——

Q. I don't know anything about them, sir. You said you got instructions from Mr. Darcy to Mr. Bridges. Now, did you get instructions from Mr. Darcy to Bridges?

A. Well, if you would allow me to explain, I will explain it:

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: He can answer it first and then explain it, if it is ambiguous.

The Court: I think it is clear, Mr. Witness. You might answer the question and then explain it in your own way.

The Witness: O. K. Thank you, Your [1125] Honor.

A. Well, the question of instructions, I think—I mean, yes, I received instructions from Sam Darcy to carry to—not only to Harry Bridges, but to other people of the Communist Party on the waterfront. The point is this: The question of instructions——

Q. Now, just a moment.

A. You have a different interpretation than I have.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. I will ask the witness not to volunteer anything. We will be rambling all over the place.

The Witness: The point is, I have got to get this clear. But what I meant by "instructions"——

Mr. Hallinan: I am asking Your Honor—all the witness has to do is answer the question. He doesn't have to participate in the results of this or concern himself with what impression is being made. That is for the jury to determine.

The Witness: The point is, though, that the question is not answered, it is still up in the air.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will bring it down and step on it.

Q. Now, you received what you call instructions.

Now, will you tell us just what definition you give the word "instructions"?

A. O. K. Shall I explain that?

Q. No, just define the word instructions for us as you understand it. Now, what do you mean yourself by the word "instructions"? [1126]

A. Well, in this particular case——

Q. No, I mean generally, your ordinary——

A. Well, instructions have different meanings. In this particular case of instructions, that a meeting would be held, Communist Party functionaries, and there the policy would be formulated, and the policy which was formulated, the question of revitalizing the ILA and the plans from which it would be revitalized. That to me was instructions. That was my instructions.

Q. All right.

A. So that was carried to those people, since I was a section organizer of the Communist Party —was carried to those people who didn't attend, and to see that it was carried out, as to those people who did attend. So that to me was my instructions.

Q. All right. Now, will you come back and answer the question, were those instructions in writing or were they by word of mouth?

A. Well, no, the policy of the Communist Party was never to keep records of their meetings. [1127]

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out, if the Court please.

The Court: The motion is denied.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Will you simply state whether they were written or not?

A. I can't tell you except what I know. I have no legal background. That kind of confuses me at times.

Q. Who told you to say "I have no legal background" every time you feel yourself jammed a bit?

A. I am no Little Abner. I am not so stupid that I don't know my way around.

Q. How stupid is Little Abner?

A. Maybe he is stupid as I am, I don't know, but the point is this——

Q. Just a minute, sir. When you received instructions from the Communist Party or when these resolutions were arrived at, were they reduced to writing or weren't they?

A. Because the policy of the Communist Party was not to reduce——

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I will ask that the witness answer yes or no.

The Witness: Let's hear the question again.

The Court: Were those instructions reduced to writing?

A. No, they were not reduced to writing.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): So that they were transmitted orally [1128] to you, is that right?

A. Well, no, you are getting the wrong interpretation on it. They were not transmitted to me.

Q. You attended the conversation and you heard what was said?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. That is right, and I participated in the discussion and helped formulate this decision, and possibly Bridges was there helping to formulate these——

Q. We are coming to bat in a few moments.

A. Undoubtedly we will.

Q. Then according to your statement you received instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges. When you conveyed the instructions to Harry Bridges did you put them in writing?

A. Well, that is——

Q. Will you answer that yes or no?

A. Well, you are putting the wrong interpretation on it.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, might I have answers from this witness?

The Court: In this instance you are entitled to a yes or no answer.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): When you transmitted the instructions to Harry Bridges did you put them in writing?

A. No. Neither did I ask——

Q. Just a minute. You have answered the question. A. The answer is no. [1129]

Q. You stated yesterday in answer to a request to state in an orderly sequence as best you can the instructions that you conveyed from the Communist Party to Mr. Bridges—you were asked, "State them in their orderly sequence as best you can"—you stated, "This is going to take quite a long time." And over the objections of some person whom we won't mention you stated this: "The next instruction was to build a union, and we formed a group of longshoremen which met in the Albion Hall every Sunday for quite a length of time, and that was direct orders from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Now, tell us what you told Harry Bridges Sam Darcy was directing him to do on that subject.

A. Applying the same interpretation to the question of instructions——

Q. I don't know what you call them, instructions, directions, or whatever you want—we are not quibbling on the meaning of words. You used the word "instructions." You have been trying to show here that Harry Bridges was taking instructions or directions from the Communist Party. Now, stay with it. What did you say to him on that subject?

A. You mean what I actually said verbatim?

Q. As well as you can put it. What did you tell Harry Bridges Sam Darcy wanted him to do or ordered him to do or instructed him to do or suggested him to do with regard to forming a group of longshoremen to meet in the Albion [1130] Hall?

A. If you will allow me I can do it easily.

Q. Go ahead.

A. You will have to allow me to do it in my own words. The question of instructions, we have a different interpretation. You have a different interpretation than I do. But the decision was arrived at as to the best method of how to revitalize the ILA and to involve the greatest number of men in doing it.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Are you telling me now what you told Harry Bridges that Sam Darcy said to say to him?

A. If you give me a chance I will tell you.

Q. I do not want the background. We have got all that. A. No, you haven't.

Q. I want you to tell us this: When Sam Darcy gave you instructions to carry to Harry Bridges to form a group of longshoremen to meet in the Albion Hall, what did you say to Harry Bridges that he was to do or that he had been told to do or that he was directed to do? What did you say to him?

A. Just give me a chance and I will tell you. So, as I say, the decisions were made, an order to revitalize the ILA and to involve the greatest number of men in doing it. The Albion Hall was formed and Bridges, Schmidt and various other members, various other people, were very glad to come to those meetings because it was a chance to build a union, and that is the measures we took to revitalize the ILA.

When the message was carried to Bridges, possibly he [1131] was at the meeting when such a decision was made. I don't recall, but no doubt he was there.

Q. Just a minute. You testified that you acted as a messenger from Sam Darcy to the defendant Bridges, and you were asked these questions——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. If you will give me a chance I will finish the answer without reading that, if you want me to.

Q. What I want you to tell us is the message that you conveyed to Mr. Bridges now. Tell us that. What did you say to him?

A. That is the point I am getting to now, if you will just allow me. You keep interrupting. I have to start over every time you interrupt, because my train of thought is interrupted.

Q. You are not a lawyer?

A. No, I am not a lawyer.

Q. And you are not Little Abner. We have that established. Now, tell us what you said to Harry Bridges on that subject as conveying some instruction from Sam Darcy to him.

A. It was my duty as section organizer of the Communist Party—my duty was to see that this decision was carried out, and I carried it out to the extent of getting those people to the meeting. I would say that is my instructions.

Q. On direct examination when you were being led along by Mr. Donohue, you were asked, "Did you ever carry any instructions from Sam Darcy to the defendant Harry Bridges?" [1132] The answer, after objection: "Numerous times."

"Will you state them.

"A. Well, you want me to state all of them or just——

"Q. All of them.

"A. Well, there is, starting at the very beginning in 1933, our instructions were to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. And that we did. We did that.

Will you please listen and keep your ears open and your mouth shut, as they say colloquially, for about a minute?

"Q. State them in their orderly sequence as best you can.

"A. I can do that all right.

"The Court: Do so.

"The Witness: As I say, the first instruction—this is going to take quite a long time.

"Q. All right.

"A. We were instructed to——" And then some objection.

"The next instruction was to build the union and form a group of longshoremen to meet in the Albion Hall."

You understand that you have testified that you got orders from Sam Darcy which you were to deliver to Harry Bridges to recruit a group of longshoremen and build the Albion Hall group. You so testified, didn't you?

A. As the section organizer of the Communist Party that was [1133] my duty——

Q. I say, you testified to that yesterday, didn't you? You testified to the language I just read?

A. You read it correctly. I did, yes.

Q. You remember you testified to that yesterday?

A. I don't remember the exact words, but I would say the text of it is correct, because that was our instructions and that is what we did.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Tell us what instruction you gave Harry Bridges on that subject that came from Sam Darcy. What did you say to Harry Bridges on the subject?

A. Well, as I say, my position as section organizer of the Communist Party was to see that these decisions were carried out, and we carried them out. That is all I can say about the proposition, because no doubt Harry Bridges was at this meeting when it was discussed, and, as I say, my instructions were to form an Albion Hall group, and that is what we did.

Q. Now you are changing ground. You said yesterday you were given instructions by Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that he was to get to work to form a group of longshoremen into the Albion Hall group. Now you are changing that, are you?

A. Well, no, I don't think I am changing it, no.

Q. Will you say now that Sam Darcy never gave you any instruction to convey to Harry Bridges to form a group of longshoremen to meet in the Albion Hall? [1134]

A. I will say this: That Sam Darcy, being the district organizer of the Communist Party, he was my boss. The decision was made. I was responsible to Darcy——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to this discursive discourse, your Honor. I asked him one question and that is whether or not Sam Darcy ever did give him any instruction to convey to Harry Bridges to form a group of longshoremen to meet in the Albion Hall.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, did he or didn't he?

A. If you will allow me to explain——

Q. No, answer it yes or no.

A. Did Sam Darcy—well——

Q. Yes.

A. As head of the Communist Party, yes, because the Communist Party decision was made.

Q. He did give you that instruction, then, did he?

A. Will you please repeat that? You said did he give me that instruction?

Q. Yes. A. As I say——

Q. Did he?

A. He didn't come out and say, "Schomaker, you go down there or I will beat you to death, and give this message to Harry Bridges." No, he didn't say that.

Q. What part of that did he leave out? That he would beat you [1135] to death?

A. Pardon? You got me a little bit rattled here. I don't know what you mean by direct instructions. It is a Communist Party decision, and that is what I did. I carried it out.

Q. Do you remember who was testifying on the witness stand here yesterday, the name of the person who was testifying here?

A. You mean during this trial?

Q. Yes.

A. I guess I was here part of the time.

Q. Have you seen me on the witness stand at all?

A. Don't let me go into that. I saw you on your feet considerable time yesterday. I don't know whether you were the witness or I was.

Q. You didn't hear me testifying as to any instructions that you were supposed to have received from Sam Darcy to convey to Harry Bridges, did you?

A. Certainly not. You were objecting, I think.

Q. But you testified under oath that you had received certain instructions from Sam Darcy to convey to Harry Bridges yesterday, didn't you?

A. In a sense; the decision was made and that was my instructions.

Q. So you never received any instruction from him to convey to Harry Bridges? [1136]

A. From the Communist Party I did. Sam Darcy was its head, and I was responsible to Sam Darcy.

Q. So you want to take back this story about instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges?

A. No, sir, don't get that impression. I'm not taking back anything. That is the truth; that is all I can say.

Q. "Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges—from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that we should raise the demands of the men from the employers and that was done." Now, if I may remind you, this is your language under oath and not mine, so don't tell me that I am putting interpretations. "Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges that—from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that we should raise the demands of the men from the employers, and that was done." Now, what was that instruction?

A. It was on the same basis, a meeting was held and there it was discussed, the proper methods to use in raising these demands of the men to the employers.

Q. What were the demands that were to be raised?

A. The question of the wages, a dollar an hour, and the six-hour day—that is, the principal demands were a dollar an hour and a six-hour day and a 30-hour week, and a hiring hall.

Q. And Sam Darcy gave you instructions that you should go to Harry Bridges and tell him that those demands should be raised in the manner that you have just indicated, is that [1137] right?

A. Not in the sense of the interpretation you are making on it, no.

Q. So this did not happen either, then?

A. Oh, yes, it did happen, too. Don't say that.

Q. Did this happen or didn't it happen? I want you to answer this yes or no.

A. What happen?

Q. "Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges that—from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that we should raise the demands of the men from the employers." Did that happen?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, yes, it happened.

Q. You did receive those instructions, did you?

A. On the basis which I explained to you, how it occurred, a decision of the Communist Party.

Q. Did you receive the instructions from Sam Darcy to convey to Harry Bridges instructing him to increase the demands of the men from the employers? Did you receive such instructions?

A. Increasing the demands—I don't know what you mean by "increasing the demands." Is that the way the recorder took it? There is a question of raising the demands of the men to the employers, yes.

Q. So you never conveyed such an instruction to him?

A. Oh, yes, I did convey, not only to Harry Bridges but to [1138] all of the Communist Party members.

Q. Let us forget the rest of them.

A. You can't do that.

Q. Tell us what you said to Harry Bridges on that subject. After you got these instructions from Sam Darcy what did you say to Harry Bridges?

A. The Communist Party decision, and that Harry Bridges was expected to carry this decision out.

Q. All right. Now we have got it.

The Court: We might take the morning recess. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion about it.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

(Recess.) [1139]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): All right. Now, we received from you at the close of the last session a confirmation of your previous testimony that you had conveyed instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges. And I asked you then just what you told Harry Bridges as to the instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that "we should raise the demands of the men from the employers." I want to know just what you said to Mr. Bridges on that subject. I mean, on the subject of Sam Darcy having given you some instructions to convey to him.

A. Well, the question of the raising the demands of the longshoremen, that was discussed at a meeting and that was the—as I enumerated—the demands that were raised.

Q. That isn't what I asked you. Now, you have told us here yesterday all sorts of conversations that took place, statements that were made in speeches, people who were present and things of that kind, and now what I want you to do is this: I want you to tell me what you said to Harry Bridges, what was the language you used to him or the context of the language, at the time that you conveyed instructions to him from Sam Darcy to raise the demands of the men from the employers. What did you say to Bridges?

A. It wasn't a personal conversation between

Bridges and I, it was a decision that was made by the Communist Party and which Bridges was a member and I was a member, and my duty as a section organizer was to see that they were carried out, which they [1140] were.

Q. So then this was a falsehood yesterday?

A. By no means was it a falsehood.

Q. Beg your pardon?

A. I said by no means was it a falsehood.

Q. Do you want to take this back: "Then we received instructions to Harry Bridges that from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that we should raise the demands of the men from the employers." Now do you want to take that back?

A. I certainly don't want to take it back.

Q. And you know very well what I mean when I am asking you to relate the conversation that you had with Mr. Bridges conveying these alleged instructions from Sam Darcy to him, don't you?

A. Well, no, I don't quite follow you. I don't, to be frank with you.

Q. As a matter of fact, you never in your life received any instructions from Sam Darcy to convey to Harry Bridges, did you?

A. Yes, I most certainly did, on numerous times, numerous occasions.

Q. All right. Well, let's see if we can hook the next one. "And then the instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges that they should proceed up and down the Coast with the rank and file committee to get the sentiment of the other ports,

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)
Seattle, Pedro and San Francisco." Now; you will remember that this is part of a list of instructions that you started out to [1141] give that you testified under oath Sam Darcy gave you to convey to Harry Bridges. Do you remember that that is so, that you so testified?

A. Well, in that particular case, if I can recall correctly, I did convey an oral message to Bridges that a——

Q. Wait a minute. Now, hold it. Oh, we finally have something. All right, you conveyed an oral message to Bridges. Now, tell us what you said to him in that message.

A. That the—the text of it was that since the things—there had been a convention held in Portland, I believe, of the ILA, and there was something to do with phoning up the minutes, and in this particular case, decision was made to send a committee up, I think it was to Portland to find out and to bring to them the sentiment of the guys in the Bay Area regarding that particular convention, and to lay the basis to call in another convention, rank and file convention.

Q. That is what you said to Mr. Bridges?

A. Well, that was the sense of it, yes.

Q. And you said, "Sam Darcy told me to give you this instruction," is that right?

A. Well, I don't think I said it in those many words. I said it in a basis, "Well, Harry, the deal is this, that we discussed this thing and the best thing to do is to get a rank and file committee together and to tour the Coast and to create the sentiment for a rank and file convention." I think he and a guy [1142] named Dutch Dietrich. Now, I am not too positive about that, but he and some other guy went up.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. It may be Frenchy Dietrich?

A. Well, I don't know if there was any Frenchy Dietrich. I said Dutch Dietrich.

Q. What you are telling us now is what you professed to be your advice to Mr. Bridges. What I want to know is, what was the message that you gave to him in which you relayed to him instructions that you had received from Sam Darcy to convey to him. Tell us that.

A. The instructions from the Communist Party, of which Sam Darcy was the head, was conveyed to Mr. Bridges.

Q. Well, what did you say to him, did you say something like that, "Now, Harry, Sam Darcy and the Communist Party issued these instructions that you shall go out and organize the other ports on the Coast and find out what the sentiment of the rank and file is"? Did you say something like that to him?

A. Oh, I didn't say anything like that.

Q. Nothing like that?

A. Nothing that loud, at least.

Q. Did you use the word "instruction" to him at all?

(Laughter in audience.)

The Bailiff: Order in the court.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you tell him at all that you had any instructions to give to him from Sam Darcy? [1143]

A. Why, certainly I did. On numerous times.

Q. You did tell him that? You said to him, "I have instructions from Sam Darcy to you"; is that right?

A. Just not like that. I would say, "Bridges, here is the scoop, that we discussed this thing and Sam Darcy and——" ——I didn't enumerate the guys who were there, but said, "Here is the scoop, Harry; the group decided this, and it would be a good idea to send a delegation up and down the Coast to see what is cooking up there, what's cooking down at Pedro."

Q. Uh-huh. Well, these—now you switched over to where the instructions were not from Sam Darcy, but from some group, is that right?

A. Communist Party. Referred to them as a group or "the church"; we had a lot of different names for it. Didn't go around and holler, "Hey, wait a minute. I have got a message from Sam Darcy." My God, it's that simple.

Q. When you were testifying yesterday, you said nothing about a group, you said "Sam Darcy," didn't you?

A. Well, I looked upon Sam Darcy as head of the Communist Party and all decisions that were made, we were responsible to carry them out through the head of the Communist Party, was Sam [1144] Darcy.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, will you listen to this and see if you remember this as your testimony:— A. I certainly will.

Q. "All the decisions which related to the strike were discussed and were carried by orders from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges: the question of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the organization of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific was carried out through instructions from Sam Darcy through myself." Is that true or false?

A. It is true.

Q. Will you now tell us what instructions you gave Harry Bridges that you had received from Sam Darcy relating to the strike, and I want the message that you conveyed to Mr. Bridges, not the general idea of what "a group of us boys" got together and decided, but what you told Mr. Bridges Sam Darcy had instructed.

A. Listen, there was a thousand decisions made in that strike, at least a thousand, and luckily—not luckily, but I would say thank God the correct ones were made by the Communist Party and ordered us to win it. So the decisions that were made, since I was a section organizer of the Communist Party, it was my duty to see that they were carried out, and they were.

Q. You also testified to this yesterday: "The setting of a date of strike on May 9 was done at the express orders of [1145] Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges." Is that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Will you please read that again?

Q. "Then the calling, the setting of a date of strike on May 9 was done at the express orders of Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges." Is that right?

A. I read that myself last night and that is not correct, because the reporter—the reporter didn't catch my meaning on that.

Q. Where did you read it, Mr. Schomaker?

A. I read it after I left here.

Q. What time?

A. It must have been around midnight, I guess.

Q. Where? A. In the room upstairs.

Q. Upstairs where?

A. In the Postoffice Building.

Q. In this building? A. That is correct.

Q. Whose room?

A. There is an office upstairs, isn't there? There is a lot of offices.

Q. Whose office were you in?

A. I was in the defense attorney's offices—the prosecution offices, rather.

Q. Who else was with you? [1146]

A. Well, there was one other person.

Q. What was his name? A. Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Nobody else in there at all during the time?

A. There was other people there, but they weren't right in that room.

Q. When did you first get there?

A. Oh, it was quite late.

Q. What time?

A. I would say it was around midnight.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. That you got there?

A. No, it was before that.

Q. What time?

A. I say it was before midnight.

Q. What time before midnight? Will you tell us that?

A. Fifteen minutes before midnight.

Q. Fifteen minutes before midnight you got there? A. Yes.

Q. This other gentleman, Mr. Kaiser, was there, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. What was the number of the room, do you remember? A. It is 434.

Q. What is written on the door? "United States Attorney" or anything like that? [1147]

A. It is Room 434.

Q. How did you happen to go there a little before midnight?

A. I was told to go over there. I was brought there.

Q. By whom? Who told you to go there?

A. By Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Who is Mr. Kaiser?

A. Well, who is—Mr. Kaiser is a gentleman. That is all I know.

Q. Do you know what his position is?

A. I wouldn't say. No, I really don't know. He is connected with the Immigration Department, but what branch—I mean, what particular job, I don't know.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. An immigration official is not like a Communist, that you can tell them by looking at them, is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that question, if the Court please. I think it is improper. No one has ever suggested that you could tell a Communist by looking at him. It is too bad you can't.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Can you tell them by looking at them? A. You mean a Communist?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, certainly not, any more than you can tell a Democrat or Republican.

Q. There is nothing distinctive about them that would enable [1148] one to recognize him when he sees him, is that right?

A. Well, no, you generally tell them by the action they participate in.

Q. These people you have named here, these many, many people whose names you have given us as members of the Communist Party, you did not know that merely by looking at them? They didn't bear some singular mark which identified them or something like that, is that so?

A. No, because of the fact—any more than you can tell a person of the Waterfront Employers or a lawyer.

Q. A member of the Ku Klux Klan or anything like that?

A. Do you want me to answer that question or don't you?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. No, because I am really a little disappointed. I thought maybe if B. B. Jones came rolling in, we could all recognize that obviously there is a Communist, you know. [1149]

Now, how long did you stay in this office upstairs?

A. It wasn't very long.

Q. How long?

A. I would say a half hour or so.

Q. Did you read all the testimony that you gave yesterday?

A. Well, I read the biggest part of it, yes. Of course, I didn't read the objections.

Q. Was the testimony that you read marked out? Was there pencil lining on it?

A. No, there was no pencil lining on it whatsoever.

Q. Did you take it away with you or did you leave it in the office?

A. No, I didn't take it away. I read it for 15 minutes, left it there, and walked out.

Q. You say you got instructions from somebody to go there shortly before midnight, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Where had you been up to that time?

A. In the hotel.

Q. What hotel?

A. The Marine Memorial Hotel—the Marine Memorial. I don't know whether they call it hotel or not.

Q. What were you doing there?

A. What was I doing there?

Q. Yes. [1150]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I was laying in the bed, I imagine. I don't remember exactly what I was doing, but I was resting anyway.

Q. You had gone to bed and then got up and went to this building?

A. No, I think I was reading a detective story, a magazine.

Q. Was anybody in the room with you?

A. No, there wasn't.

Q. You were told to come to this office at a quarter to twelve, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And when you got there, you met Mr. Kaiser, is that right?

A. Oh, no, I came over here with him.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. At the lobby of the Marine Memorial.

Q. By prearrangement?

A. No, it was not prearrangement, I don't think.

Q. How did you happen to meet him in the lobby of the Marine Memorial?

A. He called me on the telephone. They have a telephone service there.

Q. What time did he call you?

A. I would say around 11:30.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. Shall I give the exact conversation? [1151]

Q. As closely as you can.

A. He said, "Hello." I said, "Hello." He said, "This is Bill." I said, "This is John."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

He said, "Can you come down to the lobby of the hotel?" I said, "Sure."

Q. You went down and then what happened?

A. Well, he says, "You want to see the text of the proceedings?" So we proceeded over here.

Q. What did you say when he asked you if you wanted to see the text of the proceedings?

A. I didn't say anything.

Q. Is that the language that he used, "Do you want to see the text of the proceedings?"

A. I wouldn't swear it was the exact language, no.

Q. What were the exact words as close as you can give them?

A. That was the general conversation, yes.

Q. The text of the proceedings. Did you understand then what he meant by text of proceedings?

A. I imagine—I wouldn't say that was exact language, but he said the proceedings of the trial.

Q. And what did you say? "Yes."?

A. I said, "Yes."

Q. Did he tell you his object in coming there so late at night to have you study the text of the proceedings?

A. It wasn't a question of studying. I read the same thing in [1152] the Examiner and the Chronicle, so it wasn't any news to me.

Q. So then he took you over here and you read through your testimony that you gave yesterday, is that so? A. That is correct.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And did you talk over the testimony with Mr. Kaiser while you were reading it?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did he point out any matters to you?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Was he sitting in the same room with you until you had finished?

A. He may have went out. While I was reading, I didn't notice whether he stayed in there or not.

Q. Did you go over the text of the proceedings after that and before you testified today?

A. No, I just read through them and left.

Q. Did he go out with you?

A. We left together, yes.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. I think I had a cup of coffee and turned in.

Q. Did he have a cup of coffee with you?

A. No, I think he had tea.

Q. He went to the restaurant with you?

A. He did, yes.

Q. And stayed with you how long? [1153]

A. Well, you can imagine from here over to where the building of the Marine Memorial, which is the Women's old Federated Club, however far that is.

Q. You read over this testimony that you were questioned on here and you say you made a mistake?

A. I knew it after yesterday's proceedings. I knew I made a mistake by putting Schrimpf in a meeting where he wasn't.

Q. Do you want to take back, then, the statement that the setting of a date of strike on May 9th was done at the express orders of Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges? Do you want to change that?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. No, I don't want to take it back. I want to explain what was meant by that.

Q. I understand what was meant by it. Let me ask you this: This is one of the instructions that you say you conveyed from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges. You realize that, don't you?

A. That is true, yes.

Q. So did you come from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges and say, "Sam Darcy wants the date of the strike set for May 9th"?

A. No, I didn't say that. What I did say is, "Harry, I got a resolution given to me by Walter Lambert, and because the strike had been postponed or set back by governmental order in March, that in that space of time between March and May 9th, when the strike date had been set, Sam Darcy had felt that the sentiment of the men may have ebbed for the calling of the [1154] strike on May 9th. So we had this resolution. Bridges had a copy and I had a copy to submit in case that the sentiment in the meeting was such that enough preparation had not been made for the strike to be called on May 9th, that we would have submitted this resolution holding back the strike date, setting it at a future date.

Q. And you conveyed that to Mr. Bridges, did you?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I conveyed it to him. I gave him the resolution and I retained a copy. This resolution was written by Sam Darcy, by the way.

Q. That was a written communication, was it?

A. That was a written resolution.

Q. Did you hand that to Harry Bridges?

A. I gave him a copy and I retained a copy.

Q. And you told him that Sam Darcy told you to convey this to him, did you?

A. I didn't say it like that. I said, "Bridges, here is a resolution that Sam Darcy has written. Look it over."

Q. Out of all these instances that you have recited here, in which you say you conveyed instructions from Sam Darcy to Harry Bridges, can you tell us any one in which you said to Harry Bridges, "Here are instructions from Sam Darcy," or "Sam Darcy sends these instructions to you," or anything to that effect.

A. I am just telling you about this resolution written to [1155] postpone the date of the strike on May 9th.

Q. Did you ever say that to him concerning any other instruction?

A. Well, I have. Certainly I have.

Q. Which instruction?

A. Well, there was a lot of instructions that I carried to Bridges: "This is the dope, Harry. It comes directly from Sam Darcy. Sam Darcy wants to see you in a certain spot, Harry. Let's get going." And we did.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Tell us some of these instructions which you gave to Harry Bridges, which you preceded by saying, "This is what Sam Darcy wants you to do. These are instructions from Sam Darcy."

A. You mean individual instances?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I would say during the strike every day that occurred, that possibly I would see Herman Mann or Walter Lambert somewhere, around the street corner, and he would say, "The dope is——"

Q. We are not talking about Herman——

A. If you will allow me, I will finish my answer. I can do it.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, that is not responsive. The witness is evading. The questions are very, very plain. He simply evades answering them by talking about general things. I asked him simply to tell us one single instruction in addition [1156] to the resolution that he talks about now that he gave to Harry Bridges, which he stated to Harry Bridges to be given to him upon an instruction from Sam Darcy.

The Court: All right. Will you answer that?

The Witness: Certainly. Sam would send word down to the front to contact me and tell Bridges to be at a certain place that evening when the strike was in progress, and because I had a car—I had a Ford—we loaded up and we would go to the designated spot.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): So that all the Sam

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Darcy was using you for then was a messenger to convey information to Harry Bridges that he wanted to see him, is that right?

A. It was more than that—to see that Bridges carried out these instructions, decisions.

Q. Tell us what instructions.

A. Any of the policy of the strike—for instance, the June 16th agreement, that they got the word before we did that an agreement had been signed, and we met the night before and we discussed that, the question of the June 16th agreement and what should be done in order to nullify it.

Q. You stated that Sam Darcy also gave you instructions to convey to Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt and other people about the settlement of the strike. That is after the formation of the longshore, the U. S. Longshore Board appointed by President Roosevelt. Now, did Sam Darcy give you any instructions to [1157] convey to Harry Bridges as to what he should do about this U. S. Longshore Board? A. Yes, he did.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. Well, I remember one meeting that he sent word down, he said, "Bring Bridges," and we met with Darcy and Lambert, and the longshore hearing was in progress then, and Bridges was a witness, and Sam looked at the paper, he had the Call-Bulletin in his hand—"Geez, these reporters are a bunch of stupid bastards." He said, "Look what it says. Even a guy with a high forehead can be intelligent." That was Bridges testifying, of course. So Sam says, "They're really stupid. Even a worker can get up there and explain his position and make it understood to everybody." And then he proceeded to outline to Harry what question to raise, and the procedure.

Q. You still haven't told us any instruction that Sam Darcy gave to you that you conveyed to Harry Bridges, have you?

A. I am telling you at that particular meeting, during the longshore board meeting, that I brought Harry to the meeting, and Sam Darcy and Walter Lambert were both there.

Q. In other words, Sam Darcy nor nobody else of any importance ever gave you any instructions to transmit to anybody, did he, but they simply used you as a messenger boy to pick someone up and bring him out?

A. I wouldn't say that. I wouldn't say that at all. [1158]

Q. You have not told us yet one instruction that you conveyed from this long list that you gave off here yesterday—you have not told one instruction that you conveyed to Harry Bridges as being an instruction from Sam Darcy, have you?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that question, if your Honor please, because it is not accurate. If the Court please, the witness has just testified to a resolution.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Gentlemen, this is a convenient hour to take our recess period?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: We will resume at 2:00 o'clock, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case with any person under any condition or form or express any opinion.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [1159]

Afternoon Session, Tuesday, November 29, 1949, 2:00 o'Clock

(The following occurred outside the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: In the matter of the hearing on motion to set aside contempt order.

Mr. Olshausen: This motion is withdrawn and may go off calendar. I am filing the written withdrawal now (handing to the Clerk).

The Court: The motion heretofore made and filed by Vincent Hallinan through his attorney George Olshausen, to set aside the contempt order, is hereby withdrawn of record. So ordered.

The Clerk: In the matter of the United States v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. Bring in the jury. Call Mr. Schomaker.

(Whereupon the jury entered the courtroom and assumed their respective positions in the jury box.)

resumed the stand.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Hallinan.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Now, Mr. Schomaker, so far as I have been able to determine from your testimony, the matters which Sam Darcy or the Communist Party determined should be done in [1160] the waterfront strike were substantially the same thing that the men themselves wanted, isn't that correct?

A. Well, they possibly wanted them, but they didn't—they weren't able to express themselves, to the point that would lead them in the direction which to obtain them.

Q. In other words, Darcy, as a man of superior experience and education and so forth, was able to put the things in a more comprehensive and understandable and forceful form, is that about right?

A. Well, I guess there was a little bit more to it than that. Not only was it in a forceful form, but in a manner to which they were able to grasp and to—the ultimate conclusion would be to their benefit.

Q. Now, you stated already that the matters which Sam Darcy advised Mr. Bridges to hold out for, and increasing his demands to the employers, were an increase in wages, the hiring hall, doing away with the shape-up, and lessening of loads and shortening of hours. Those were approximately the four things that were involved, is that right?

A. Well, that is about it, that is about it.

Q. And then ultimately President Franklin Roosevelt appointed an arbitration board to pass upon the merits of the controversy, isn't that correct?

A. Well, I wouldn't say it was an arbitration board. I think it was more of a longshore fact-finding board. [1161]

Q. Well, whatever we call it. And that board was headed by the Roman Catholic archbishop of San Francisco, Archbishop Hanna, is that right?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge, it is, yes.

Q. And that board made recommendations that precisely those four things should be granted, isn't that correct?

A. That is to the best of my knowledge what was done. That was the verdict.

Q. Now, to throw your memory back a little ways, the wages at that time were not a dollar an hour, but 75 cents an hour, isn't that correct?

A. Well, there was a 10 cent increase. Now, whether it was from 65 to 75—I think that was what it was, from 65—prior to the strike there was a raise granted, a 10 cent an hour increase. Now, whether that was from 75 to 85 or from 65 to 75, I am just exactly not clear on that, but I think it was from 65 to 75.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Did you attend any of the hearings that were had before the President's Longshore Board?

A. No, I was working then. I was working as a longshoreman.

Q. And of course, you haven't any concept or belief that Archbishop Hanna was under the discipline of the Communist Party or anything of that kind, have you?

A. Have I any knowledge that he was, or any——

Q. Or any belief that he was. [1162]

A. Not the slightest, no.

Q. I wouldn't imagine, offhand, that he was; would you, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, I haven't got much of an imagination.

Q. All right. Now you told us that when you went down to Santa Clara, at the meeting that has been discussed, that another thing that was discussed were dictographs that were being installed. Now, will you tell us what you mean by that?

A. Well, no, I think if I made that impression, I want to correct it. There wasn't no question of discussing dictographs. [1163]

Q. Those were not discussed down there?

A. No, if I made that impression I want to correct it, because there was no discussion of dictaphones, dictagraphs, or anything of that nature.

Q. Have you read over your testimony at noontime, the testimony that you gave this morning?

A. No, I read the San Francisco News.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Was anybody with you at the time you read it?

A. Why, no. I don't know if there was or not. There was somebody in the room, I imagine.

Q. Was it Mr. Kaiser?

A. It is very possible he was there. I don't know. He could have been in or he could have been out. I don't recall.

Q. Where did you read it?

A. Where? Well, I read it partially in the street, walking down the street I was reading it—not crossing the thoroughfare, of course—and I finished it in one of the upstairs rooms.

Q. At the time you went down to Santa Clara with these other gentlemen there had been prior discussions about the planting of dictagraphs in the union headquarters, isn't that right?

A. I don't remember any such discussion.

Q. Coming now to the statement that you made concerning Mrs. Perry and the actions and steps that were taken with regard to her in December, 1934 or January, 1935, according to your testimony, you and Henry Schrimpf made certain accusations [1164] against Mrs. Perry. Now, just what were the allegations? What were the accusations made against her?

A. Well, at that time, being section organizer, Schrimpf raised the question with me that since Norma Perry was secretary to the Longshore president, Harry Bridges—I am just trying to recall if she was secretary at that particular time or not—anyway, she was connected with the waterfront. She came down there during the strike of 1934, the early days of the strike, and she worked with the strike committee—I think it was on publicity and any other way she could make herself useful as a stenographer, and after the strike she continued to work. Just what her capacity was I don't recall. Then when Bridges was elected president of the local she became his secretary. Now, just what month these were I don't remember distinctly, but she was there all this time.

Q. Well, now, tell us what took place at the meeting at which you said she was reprimanded or disciplined, or whatever it may be.

A. I was coming to that. As I say, because she was connected with the waterfront—that is, the Longshore Union—Schrimpf raised the question with me because I was a section organizer of the Communist Party that she was not doing the proper things, that she was consorting with people who were unfriendly to the progressive, militant leadership, and particularly the Communist Party members.

Q. What people? [1165]

A. I am trying to explain it. She was unfriendly—I mean the people who were unfriendly to the Communist Party members and the progressive militants in the local.

Q. I want the names.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Do you mean who she was consorting with?

Q. Yes.

A. She was consorting with the secretary-treasurer of the local, whose name was Scotty Frater, and the business agent at that time was Curly Cutwright, and Burglar Lewis—I think he was the district president of the ILA of the Pacific Coast District.

Q. What about Lundeberg?

A. Lundeberg? Well, he wasn't in San Francisco at that particular time.

Q. Had she been consorting with him?

A. As I say, she couldn't consort with him when he wasn't here. He was in Seattle.

Q. When did he move down here? When did he come into San Francisco?

A. Let's get this other point straight first. Lundeberg didn't enter into this picture at all. Schrimpf raised the question with me that she was consorting with these people, and he had evidence to prove that she was carrying information that these people shouldn't have, that it was endangering our position, because she was intimate with different [1166] people, knew the decisions that were being made, and she was carrying these decisions to these people which were detrimental to us.

Q. By "us" did that include Bridges?

A. Why, very definitely—Bridges, Schmidt, and I say all the Communist Party members, and we thought it endangered the progressive role of the longshoremen. So when Schrimpf raised this question with me, why, the best thing we could do is get her before the group and see what needs to be done, and that was the procedure.

Q. Let me ask you this now: You testified that Henry Schrimpf brought charges against her. Do you remember very distinctly his saying, "Norma, you are a little stool pigeon"? What did that mean?

A. Now we have got to the point where we were calling the meeting, haven't we?

Q. Yes. What is the meaning of the term "stool pigeon"?

A. As I say, you being a lawyer, you could explain that much more easily.

Q. I do not think it is a legal expression.

A. It isn't a legal expression?

Q. I don't think it is a legal expression.

A. I am glad to hear that.

Q. Tell us what you mean by that.

A. I would say a stool pigeon is a person that is supposed [1167] to be one thing and is not and carries information to people who are—well, he divulges things to people who are enemies of the other side. That is the best I can say.

Q. For hire ordinarily?

A. I wouldn't say for hire, not always, no.

Q. Were you and Schrimpf making the accusations that Mrs. Perry resisted and denied that she was a stool pigeon, is that right?

A. Norma Perry was a rather vigorous, enticing woman and naturally she resented this.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. You think enticing women resist more than non-enticing women?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. That is an improper question.

Mr. Hallinan: He made the qualification of the woman. It is not important.

Q. Let me ask you this: Do you remember an occasion in which Harry Bridges stated about Norma Perry that he had been informed by one of the waterfront employers that she was in their hire?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: That is perfectly proper.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Shall I answer? [1168]

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

A. At this particular time, about the meeting we were in, that was at Herman Mann's place, Bridges had very little to say concerning Norma at that time.

Q. At a later time was there some accusation made by Mr. Bridges in which he accused Norma Perry in front of you people or in front of some of you that he had been informed by some of the waterfront employers that she was in the pay of the Waterfront Employers Association?

A. We will get to that. Later—it must have been three or four months later, I would estimate—Bridges brought charges against Norma through Communist Party channels and we had her up at 121

Haight Street, and there at that particular meeting Bridges was the principal accuser.

Q. What was the nature of his accusation?

A. Along those lines, that she was answering the telephone; answering the telephone, writing letters, and signing his signature to them—in other words, taking over the functions of the local president when she was only the secretary to him.

Q. Had he discharged her as secretary?

A. Well, at that particular time I don't recall whether he had discharged her then or not.

Q. Did she subsequently, so far as you know, enter into some alliance with Lundeberg? [1169]

A. Just what do you mean by "alliance"?

Q. Well, any kind of relationship. I don't know.

A. I understood that, yes, later she went—there was quite a bit—well, six or seven months later she did go to work for Lundeberg, yes, to the best of my understanding. I just heard it on the waterfront.

Q. You know nothing further about her relation with Lundeberg except she went to work for him?

A. That was my understanding, yes.

Q. Now, to move to another subject, do you remember your discussion about the meeting that took place where Mr. Bridges made a speech in 1938—that was at whose house? Mr. Shaw. You remember the talk about Mr. Shaw's residence. Will you tell me now, enlarge a little, just what Mr. Bridges said at that meeting. Oh, no; pardon me. I withdraw that a minute. There is something I want preliminary to that.

In the latter part of 1935 or the early part of 1936 you related an incident in which Agnes Bridges, Bridges' former wife, had fallen out a window of their home. Do you remember that?

A. Do I remember Mrs. Bridges falling out of a window?

Q. You remember telling us about it yesterday?

A. That is correct, I do, yes.

Q. At that time Bridges asked you to go to his house and get his Communist book before the reporters got there, is [1170] that correct?

A. Before the snooty reporters got it.

Q. You also testified that when Harry Bridges first signed an application with the Communist Party a book was issued to him under the name of Harry Dorgan, is that correct?

A. That I testified that a book was issued to Harry Bridges under the name of Harry Dorgan?

Q. Yes. A. That is correct.

Q. Can you tell us what was the purpose of having the book issued under the name of Harry Dorgan? A. What was the purpose of it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it was one of the peculiar things that was the standing practices of the Communist Party, is that when you did sign up, you always signed under a fictitious name. The book was issued, rather, in a fictitious name. Now, just why, I never did quite understand that myself.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Was it always issued in a fictitious name?

A. Well, possibly not always, no. But they always recommended that and urged that it should be done.

Q. Was that for purposes of concealment?

A. Yes, I imagine it would be. As I say, I imagined it would be, yes.

Q. Well, now, when you talked to Mr. Bridges with B. B. Jones in the restaurant there was a discussion about what name he would use and a recommendation was made that he use his mother's maiden name, is that right?

A. Well, I wouldn't say you would call it a recommendation; it was a suggestion, yes.

Q. A suggestion. All right. And do you remember that at the time Mr. Bridges had difficulty in remembering what his mother's maiden name was?

A. No, I don't recall it, no.

Q. Well, now, don't you remember that he took a couple of pieces of paper that he had started out to write out, to figure [1172] out, what his mother's maiden name was, and he wrote Harvey on one piece of paper, then he wrote Canfield on another piece of paper. And he put those on one side. Then he wrote Dorgan on another piece of paper and Rossi on a fourth piece of paper and put those to one side. And then he tossed a coin to see which of the two piles he would select the name from. Do you remember that?

A. No. That sounds to me like some guy had been smoking marijuana. That doesn't sound like Bridges to me.

Q. Oh. Well, then, don't you remember that the choice of the coin falling to the Rossi-Dorgan axis, that he then separated those names and tossed the coin again, postulating his choice upon the falling of the obverse uppermost ~~on the~~ Dorgan name, and that that is what in effect ensued. Do your remember that? A. Certainly not.

Q. That never——

A. That sounds like one of those things out of a dime detective story or something.

Q. Yes. The whole thing does; it is nuts?

(Witness laughed.)

Q. Now, at the meeting that took place in the gentleman's home that you have testified to, you say that Mr. Bridges gave a talk. And let's see if I can find what you said Mr. Bridges said. Jack Shaw's house. "We called a meeting for those people who were interested in the Communist Party." Now, of course, [1173] all these people were not Communists, as you have already said; isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. 30 or 40 people. What percentage of them, would you say, were Communists?

A. Well, at that time—oh, I would say about 50 per cent.

Q. All right. And "It was there that Bridges made a speech and solicited membership for the

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Communist Party." You remember him having done that, don't you?

A. He made the pitch, yes, that is correct.

Q. "And he stated very emphatically that all the workers who were interested in stopping these things should join the Communist Party because he was a member of the Communist Party and he was there to fight such goings on." You heard him say that, didn't you?

A. Why, to the best of my recollection, yes.

Q. How long did his talk take?

A. Well, making a very rough estimate, I would say about 45 minutes.

Q. Well, now, let's see if I can't refresh your recollection as to one or two other things that he said in that talk, and ask you if he didn't say this, if he didn't say to the people there, "Now, ladies and gentlemen, I want to tell you now that I myself am a member of the Communist Party and that I have so much faith in all the people who are assembled here, even [1174] though I know hardly any of you, that I am now taking my safety and my liberty and putting them in your hands." Did you hear him say that?

A. No, I didn't. I don't recall any such remarks.

Q. Didn't you hear him say that, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Well, no, sir, I didn't. That is, I don't recall him saying those words, no.

Q. Well, now, didn't he go on and say this: "And I want to tell you how I am going to do that, ladies and gentlemen, On October 18, 1937, I, the man who is now talking to you, appeared before Gerard D. Reilly, Solicitor for the Department of Labor of the United States of America in the City of New York. Now, that is to say, about a year ago. And I then and there swore under oath that I am not and never have been a member of the Communist Party." You heard him tell the people that, didn't you? A. No, sir.

Q. Oh, Mr. Schomaker! And didn't he say to them: "And now any one of you can go forth from here and inform on me and put me in the penitentiary and have me put out of the country." Now, he said that, didn't he, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Why, absolutely not; you are thinking of some other meeting. That wasn't the meeting you spoke of there.

Q. Oh, not this meeting. Well, didn't he go and continue further: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, members of the Communist [1175] Party, strangers, undercover agents of the FBI: To show you what an utterly reckless fellow I am, I now inform you further that in March of this year, that is to say, five or six months ago, a warrant for my deportation was issued by the Department of Labor to put me out of this country as an undesirable alien and member of the Communist Party and the trial is set before Dean M. Landis in San Francisco for next January." Didn't he say that, Mr. Schomaker?

A. Why, it is impossible. He couldn't speak that eloquent.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, didn't he say something to that effect?

A. Well, I don't recall it, no.

Q. You don't recall him saying that?

A. No, absolutely not.

Q. You don't recall him saying so important a thing as that? A. Got me beat.

Q. And didn't he go on and address them as follows: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, you 30 or 40 strangers, of whom I know a bare handful, undercover agents for the FBI; potential informers and stool pigeons: I have now delivered myself into your hands; when the trial comes up next January, flock you in and sell this information that you have just heard enunciated and all my efforts to stay in this great land will be frustrated by my own folly in telling you here that I am a member of the Communist Party." Did you not hear him say that, Mr. Schomaker?

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, Mr. Schomaker. If your Honor [1176] pleases, I think we have been exceedingly patient in the matter of objection because I know that your Honor, and properly, will allow a wide latitude, in the matter of cross-examination. While I am enjoying this spectacle, I think we have reached the point where the witness should be permitted to testify and not Mr. Hallinan. I object to the question.

Mr. Hallinan: I am entitled to ask the witness leading questions and to ask him if things were not said, your Honor. I think it is perfectly proper.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, let me ask you this, Mr. Schomaker: When did you forget that a warrant for Harry Bridges' arrest for deportation had been issued in March, 1948?

A. When did I forget?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall that I ever knew it.

Q. Now, let me ask you this further, Mr. Schomaker——

Mr. Hallinan: '38, I said. I hope. '38, of course. I said I would have to do a lot of pawing, Judge, and this is where the pawing commences. But I will ask to be excused, because I haven't had the chance to get them all in proper order.

The Court: If at any time you request a recess, I will be willing to grant it, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I will find it all right without doing [1177] that.

Q. Now, Mr. Schomaker, in the year 1937, in the summer of 1937, you attended a convention of the ILA in Portland, didn't you?

A. In 19—an ILA convention held in Portland in '37? The answer is no.

Q. Oh. Sorry. It was a convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast. Do you remember that? A. That is correct, I did.

Q. And where was that held?

A. That was the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the convention was held in Portland in the year, 1937.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, you attended the session, did you not?

A. I did, yes.

Q. You were a delegate, weren't you?

A. I imagine so; I wouldn't be there for any other reason than being a delegate.

Q. Well, do you remember a gentleman named R. P. Bonham, district director of the United States Immigration Service?

The Court: How do you spell that?

Mr. Hallinan: Bonham, B-o-n-h-a-m.

Q. Do you remember that gentleman's name?

A. I have heard reference made to that name.

Q. Well, do you remember this conversation or discussion taking place in that convention on the 16th of June, 1937, Mr. Bonham [1178] appearing and making this statement: "I wish to thank you for the courtesy of your invitation to speak to you. I think it is a very evident manifestation of your sense of fair play. I have no criticism of any action taken by this convention or any individual at this convention. I am not here for that purpose, but thought you would like to know what the facts are. You understand that it is the function of the Department of Immigration to investigate any report with the appearance of reliable information that an alien is in the United States unlawfully. Any suggestion that any of you may have heard that the Department of Labor officials are prejudiced against labor is certainly erroneous. We have to make investigations of all reports that may come to us with the appearance that they are true. I thought it was only fair to tell you personally that this investigation was made very painstakingly. I have definitely established that no immigration official placed a dictaphone in the room of any delegate to this convention or entered legally or illegally the room of any delegate to this convention or took any documents or papers whatsoever. The thing simmers down to this, that a certain individual had certain information of value, and for that reason he was summoned to the Immigration office. He there made a statement that he did not desire to talk, and he was immediately allowed, without any pressure, to proceed about his business. I was told that he was there no more than ten or fifteen minutes. I know very [1179] positively and very definitely that while it may, from time to time, develop that some labor man is subject to deportation, that the Immigration Department does not go about that duty any more readily than they would if the man were the president of one of the big corporations. I am sure of that. I am talking to you with all the sincerity and frankness that I possess. I am not here to criticize any action taken here in the past. In a sense of fair play, I have come here simply to tell you what the facts are.

"Harrington: Did you ever hear of the case of David Nordhoff or Sig Sternberg, the Buford or the Lusk Commission? Some dirty stool pigeon turned my wife in to the Immigration Department and she was questioned as to her legal entry in this country. Has any member of the Chamber of Commerce been held for investigation or deportation by your department?

"Bonham: These matters that you mention are not within my knowledge personally.

"Bridges: I would like to ask if you interviewed the management of the Multnomah Hotel.

"Bonham: No, Mr. Bridges, I did not. For the very good reason that my office limits me to an investigation of the Immigration Department activities. I have no authority to investigate activities or individuals or organizations, or even one of your own members.

"Bridges: You did not interview the management of the [1180] Multnomah Hotel or you did not look in the room?

"Bonham: No. However, I feel that I am quite competent to know how to conduct an investigation. You ought to realize that my mission here was to investigate activities of Immigration Department and nothing else."

Now, Schrimpf: "Inasmuch as Mr. Bonham has mentioned an individual here, and inasmuch as it is common knowledge that he refers to me, I believe, having been a permanent resident of this country for the past 18 years, and having entered the country legally, I at this time certainly take exception and wish Mr. Bonham to know that in my opinion it is far apart from the democratic spirit of this country to molest an individual in the way of subpona to appear before some government hearing in which he did not wish to be a willing party. And I also wish to state, as long as I am a resident of this country, and not carrying out a policy which conflicts with the setup of this country, I would at all times like to reserve the right as a resident of this country to stand by my democratic rights in doing things voluntarily. And what's more, I wish to state that in my opinion, it was not acting along the lines of a democratic policy to go to my room and force me to appear before certain government officials and, as Mr. Bonham stated, that he did not force me, but their intent was to force statements from me, which, in my opinion, was the matter for government officials to find out. Any difference I might have had with any member [1181] of the Federation I feel I am quite capable of straightening through the union and rank and file. And I will endeavor to pursue this policy, and I believe that when the government of this country has absolutely a legitimate reason for asking any one as a resident of this country to give information, they should at least try to live up to the real democratic policy which they advocate and allow that information be made voluntarily and not forced out through the means which was brought forth at the Federal Building in Portland.

"Schomaker: Why did three persons appear at

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Room 12 of the Sherwood Hotel and ask where John Schomaker was? Not being satisfied that I was in, they went to 314, the adjoining room, and made absolutely certain I was not in that room. I want to know what the immigration authorities wanted with me; also if they are still looking for me.

"Bonham: I was told I would have perhaps five minutes to talk to you, and not a one-man debate. You do me credit. I might say I never heard of John Schomaker. I don't know who was looking for you, but the immigration authorities are not. I hope that will reassure you and restore your confidence."

Now, Mr. Schomaker, the man whose affiliation they were investigating at that time and whose deportation they were looking to was Harry Bridges, wasn't it?

A. Who Mr. Bonham was referring to?

Q. Yes.

A. It was undoubtedly Harry Bridges. [1182]

Q. At the dinner at Mr. Shaw's, or at the party at Mr. Shaw's a year and a half later didn't Mr. Bridges inform all the people present that if they would consult with Mr. Bonham, who had been investigating him for at least a year and a half, they could probably profit by handing out the information? Didn't he say that?

A. He may have, yes.

Q. Aren't you sure he did say it?

A. I am not absolutely positive, no.

Q. But you think he did?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker,)

A. I say it is very possible that he did make such a statement.

Q. Your recollection now is that something was said that might have included that, is that right?

A. It is very possible, yes.

Q. Now that your memory has suddenly freshened up, can't you remember that he also told him about the wararnt being issued for his arrest for a deportation proceeding about six months previous?

A. I don't recall that, no.

Q. Did you attend any of the hearings before Dean Landis on Angel Island in 1939?

A. Me attend hearings over there?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't see how I possibly could. I couldn't get a seat [1183] on the motorboat. It was impossible for a section organizer of the Communist Party to finagle a seat over there.

Q. Without arguing the whys and wherefores, did you attend any of the sessions?

A. I never attended a session, no.

Q. Did you read the papers that were giving accounts of the hearings over there?

A. I undoubtedly read the papers, yes.

Q. And the proceedings were, of course, a matter of great moment in the union, weren't they?

A. They were of concern to the union, yes.

Q. And they were discussed at great length in the union, weren't they? A. The proceedings?

Q. Yes. A. They may have been, yes.

Q. And those workingmen dug up what money

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

they could to assist Harry Bridges in his defense, didn't they?

A. I contributed considerable money myself.

Q. And you also solicited funds from other people who were in the union, did you not?

A. Well, I don't think I directly solicited funds. I perhaps urged them to buy stamps. There was an assessment and there were voluntary assessments which I probably urged the fellows to buy; yes. I myself bought a considerable amount. [1184]

Q. And you were on the publicity committee of the union, weren't you?

A. What was that year again? 1937?

Q. 1938.

A. Oh, 1938. I don't know. I was a business agent from September, 1937, to September, 1938. Whether I was on the publicity committee, I don't recall that. I hardly think I was. It is possible that I may have been.

Q. And you stood up at meetings and you made a great many statements concerning the hearing with relation to Harry Bridges' deportation at Angel Island, didn't you?

A. That is very possible, yes.

Q. And you said that anyone who said that Harry Bridges is a Communist is a perjurer and a liar, didn't you?

A. I couldn't—if you give me more of the speech and where it occurred——

Q. No, that one sentence. Didn't you use that one sentence in addressing the meeting?

A. I wouldn't agree—I mean admit that until I had heard where it was.

The Court: The witness is entitled to the time, place, circumstances, and the parties present.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I say this, your Honor: I want to make one point on that. That is true with regard to impeachment, and I will presently do that, but prior to that a witness [1185] may be asked these questions without such limitations, if I may read you——

The Court: Could you state the date of the meeting or some indication?

Mr. Hallinan: The thing is, of course, your Honor, the willingness of the witness now to deny he has made certain statements, when he thinks there isn't any impeaching evidence, also goes to his credibility. For instance, I want to show that this witness, unless he has the direct record before him, is willing to deceive, but if the record is shown to him, then he will try to explain.

The Court: If he has made a statement in writing he is entitled to have the statement exhibited to him.

Mr. Hallinan: This is not in writing at this time. Here is the law on the matter, your Honor, from the same authority I cited to you before on cross-examination, Wharton's Criminal Evidence, Volume III, 11th Edition.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, if you are laying the foundation for the impeachment or possible impeachment of the witness, he is entitled to be shown the matter to which you refer.

Mr. Hallinan: That is right. I am not now laying a foundation for impeachment. At this time I want to follow this rule: "It is proper to discredit a witness by his own admission on cross-examination as to prior inconsistent statements without calling his attention to the time, place, [1186] circumstances and persons present." If it is afterward attempted to impeach him by confronting him with a document in which he made the statements, then it is true——

The Court: In this instance I shall adopt the rule which has been uniform at least in this court in my career on this bench, to permit the witness to be refreshed as to time, persons present, and so forth, in traditional fashion, notwithstanding the general rule announced by the text writer.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we have a recess, then, for a few minutes until we dig these up?

The Court: Yes. We will take a short recess. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I admonish you again not to discuss the case with anyone under any condition or to form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.)

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): At a meeting of the membership of the ILWU held in the Coliseum Bowl on September 16, 1939, while the Landis hearing was proceeding, did you or did you not state orally to the meeting that witnesses who testified that Bridges was a Communist are perjuers and stool pigeons?

A. Well, I can't recall making such a statement.

Q. At any time?

A. Well, there is one thing to making a statement in a conversation and another thing to making a statement in an open [1187] meeting. As I say, just cold like that, I can't recall it, no.

Q. What were the conversations that you said that in? With whom did you have those conversations?

A. It is possible—I may have said it in a conversation with individuals, yes, but I can't recall saying it in an open meeting, no. I say it is very possible in a conversation, yes.

Q. You understand the discussion I was having about taking the four names and putting them apart down in that restaurant that I really did not think anything like that ever happened. You understand that, don't you?

A. Listen. I can't look into your mind and see what you are thinking. I wouldn't have the slightest idea what you are thinking.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Bridges had been at various times accused of being a Communist under the separate names of Harvey, Canfield, Rossi and Dorgan?

A. I can truthfully say the only names I heard him being accused of being a Communist were Dorgan.

Q. And you understand it is my position that the conversation that you said took place between B. B. Jones, yourself and Harry Bridges in that restaurant never occurred at all, any part of it—the names, the signing of a card or anything like that, so you may be sure what we understand. [1188]

A. It isn't clear—I don't understand what you are getting at.

Q. As part of your duties with the union, you were the publicity director for some time, were you not? A. I was, yes.

Q. During what time?

A. Well, I was the publicity director—I am rather certain in 1936. I am definitely certain it was. During the 1936 and 1937 strike I was publicity director for the maritime unions and then later, possibly in 1939 and 1940, it is very possible I was the publicity director for the union.

Q. Weren't you in 1941 also?

A. It is very possible, yes.

Q. You stated you left the Communist Party sometime in 1939 or 1940, is that right?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. When did you separate from the union?

A. Well, 1943, when I went into the Navy, and then when I came back in 1945 I was a member for several months until I took sick withdrawal.

Q. So early as 1937 you had already realized that a very effective way to injure a person without possible retaliation on yourself was to call him a Communist or a Red, isn't that right?

A. Well, I don't quite follow you on that. [1189]

Q. So early as 1937 you had realized that an effective way to damage a person, to get revenge on a person, was to start spreading a rumor that he was a Communist or a Red, isn't that right?

A. Well, no, I can't go along with that.

Q. Well, now, I want to cite a statement of yours in the bulletin, ILWU Bulletin, for Wednesday, ~~September 8th—the ILA Bulletin for Wednesday,~~ September 8, 1937, in which you quote Monsignor John A. Ryan, in a Labor Day sermon at St. Mary's Cathedral, in which he says this: "He decried the use of such terms as 'Communists' and 'Reds' among laboring men. 'Sometimes', Father Ryan said, 'it seems the easiest way to dispose of a man is to call him a Communits.'" Do you remember that?

A. Well, allow me to explain that a lot of people called me a Communist when I was a member of the Communist Party. It didn't worry me a bit. And I don't believe it hurt me any. But to rely on red-baiting and to obscure the real issue, that is another question, entirely different question, to red-bait in order to obscure a fundamental issue in a trade union or any place else. Certainly it is not ethical or it is not politically correct.

Q. That isn't what I asked you. I asked you this: You realized as early as 1937 that if you wanted to dispose of a man, an easy way to do it would be to call him a Communist, isn't that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I don't endorse that, never did endorse that 100 per cent, calling a man a Communist that you were going to—just sometimes it has the opposite effect. In those days it did.

Q. Well, what did you mean when you didn't—Withdraw that. [1190]

At the time you put this into your bulletin, apparently the suggestion had made a considerable impression upon you, that Father Ryan had said, and you quoted: "Sometimes it seems the easiest way to dispose of a man is to call him a Communist." That was something that must have made a considerable impression on you in order for you to print what Father Ryan said in the ILA Bulletin, isn't that right?

A. It made a tremendous impression on me for these reasons, as I have already stated——

Q. Now just a moment.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't want the reasons, Your Honor; I asked if it made an impression and he said yes.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, that impression has continued right along with you, hasn't it?

A. Not exactly, no.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, interrupting momentarily, if he admits that it did make an impression, I believe that the witness is entitled to supplement his answer with respect to the reasons underlying the impression, if any existed.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Witness: Can I explain now what my position was?

The Court: Yes, sir.

The Witness: As I already explained, to call a man a Communist doesn't mean that—in those days, now get this, that was from 1934 to about '38, to call a man a Communist in those [1191] days, in my opinion, you weren't deriding him, neither were you defaming his character. But to go out and red-bait him, to deliberately red-bait, to obscure a particular issue, then that was a different question entirely, because I knew that the Communist Party was the only, sole organization that made, changed the conditions on the waterfront and give the men the correct leadership to change them. That is the reason why in those particular years I was a Communist, and that is the reason why Father Ryan's statement made an impression on me.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, let me ask you this: Do you consider it detrimental to a man's character to now call him a Communist?

A. Why, no, just to call a man a Communist, no, I don't.

Q. Because you said at that time. I was wondering if you made a distinction between the times that you were a Communist and the times you were not a Communist.

A. I said, "particularly in those days."

Q. Uh-huh: Now——

A. I tried to qualify it somewhat.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, you had something to do with the discovery of the dictaphone in Mr. Bridges' room in 1937 in the Multnomah Hotel, didn't you?

A. Well, I didn't discover it.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor pleases—just a moment, Mr. Witness. I think these matters have been ruled on [1192] by Your Honor before. Not, of course, on the subject matter of cross-examination, but for another reason. And I at this time object to the question.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course they are asked, Your Honor, with a view toward the improbability of the conduct that they have been testifying of Mr. Bridges, going around declaring himself in open meetings to strangers, "I am a Communist," knowing he is under surveillance, knowing he has been dictographed, knowing he has been investigated, knowing a warrant is out. They are all pertinent for that purpose, at least.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: I am not trying to introduce or show anything about impropriety. I don't care about that.

Q. Now, will you tell us just what were the circumstances attending the discovery of that so far as you saw it? A. You mean——

Q. Yes, that is what I mean.

A. How I found it out?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Paisley: Now, is this a dictaphone in Bridges' room?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Mr. Paisley: Counsel says yes, so if that is the case——

Mr. Hallinan: Was a dictaphone mentioned in anybody else's room?

Q. Go ahead, Mr. Schomaker. [1193]

A. Well, the dictaphone wasn't in Bridges' room, to be very exact about it. It was in the room adjoining, and the hole was bored through the wall, and I don't know much about dictaphones. There was some kind of device to record, I guess, any motions or any conversations that were conducted in that particular room.

Q. Who discovered the actual device there, did you?

A. I don't understand that word "discover."

Q. Who first saw it? Who first called the others' attention to it?

A. Well, as close as I can remember, the Maritime Federation convention was in session, and there was a guy came up to me during the noon recess and says, "Get ahold of Bridges. I have got some important news for him." And I said, "Well, what's cooking?" and he says, "Well, there's a dictaphone in his room." So, right away, being a little Dick Tracy in me, too, I said, "How did you know?" And he says, "Well, I was going up the stairs and I heard a conversation between two people, and they said, 'Get that dictaphone out of there,'" so he says, "I listened and I found out

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

there was a dictaphone in Bridges' room. So naturally I went over and told Bridges. He said—I said, "There is a dictaphone in your room." He says, "Yes? By God, I guess that's true. Every time I push my bed away I come back and it is pushed back in the same position it was before." And, well, he says, "Get ahold of some guys and we will go up and take a look." So he says, "I got the same information [1194] a few minutes ago." So we went and got some people together and we proceeded to go to the Multnomah Hotel, and we got up there and on the way we picked up a radio operator who was supposed to be an expert on these things, on those kind of gadgets, and so we got up into the room and we pushed the bed back and noticed there was some plaster on the floor, looked like there was a drill pushed through the wall. And we got down and looked, and sure enough, you could see a device in there, looked like a wheel turning around or a plate, and this guy's name was Krolek, a member of the Radio Operators, and he said, "Yes, that's it; that is a dictaphone." All right, so we got on the telephone and I called the Portland police and I told them to come over there. And also we called the hotel clerk down below, wherever—down below anyway—and so immediately, soon the manager came up and he took a look and says, "That is no dictaphone. No dictaphone." And he says, "I will give you any room in the house. I will give you a new room, any room you want in the house." But this—he was in a terrible flustrated state, and a little later the police came, and well, they stalled around there, and that was about the extent of it. So we took it into the convention and made a report that there was a dictaphone found in Harry's room and some guy made a remark, "Well, he shouldn't stay in a scab hotel." So that was the content, that is all I know about the deal. [1195]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): What were the names of the other people who went up to the room with you?

A. As I say, there was Bridges and Krolek—he is the radio operator—Schomaker and a Clark from Seattle—I think his name was Tom Clark. It may have been possible Roy Donnelly from Pedro may have been there, but I am not sure about that.

Q. At the convention immediately following that, you being present, there was this discussion that took place:

> "Brother Bridges asked for a special privilege to bring up an important matter before the recess. Brother Bridges made a motion that the following telegram be sent to Madame Perkins, Labor Department, Washington, D. C., and the Lafollette Investigating Committee, Washington, D. C.:
>
> " 'Maritime Federation Convention now convened Portland, Oregon, emphatically protests

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

actions of Immigration Department agents here stop. Delegates whose only offense is carrying out the membership instructions are being deliberately intimidated by such agents forcing entrance into delegates' hotel rooms stop. Various delegates to the convention are being openly pursued and taken into custody and illegally questioned in endeavors of Department agents to intimiated delegates and disrupt convention stop. [1196] Dictaphone discovered installed in delegate's room and in addition room was rifled and papers stolen stop. Dictaphone incident and room burglarizing now followed by action of Immigration officials indicates to us collusion by Government agency with forces hostile to labor stop. We in convention assembled demand immediate investigation such illegal un-American actions of local Immigration Department by the Secretary of Labor under whose jurisdiction that department functions stop. Copy this wire forwarded to the Lafollette Senate Investigating Committee.'

"Brother Schrimpf stated that a Federal agent had given him a subpoena last evening and tried to make him give information to them, which he refused to do. Brother Schrimpf said he had also been visited by Government agents, who inquired for the whereabouts of Brother Schomaker and Lundeberg.

> Brother Maskel stated he was picked up about a week ago."

Now, while this convention was in session there was some difficulty which arose from the type of extent of the publicity which was sent to the paper edited by the Maritime Federation called "The Voice of the Federation." Do you remember that?

A. The Voice of the Federation?

Q. Yes. [1197]

A. Definitely, and Jim O'Neil was editor at that time, if I recall correctly.

Q. Jim O'Neil was the editor of the Voice of the Federation. I want to read this of June 18, 1937, and ask you if you remember this:

> "The secretary made a special request for instructions on how the publicity should be handled. Editor O'Neil had informed the secretary that no information had come through the publicity committee; and he had instructed Schomaker to cover this convention for the Voice of the Federation. Schomaker replied that he sent information to the Voice concerning the ILA only. Schrimpf spoke in favor of having news passed directly through the publicity committee. Moved and seconded that the publicity committee stand instructed that it would send daily press releases by airmail special delivery, return receipt requested, after each daily procedure to the editor of the Voice, and that the whole publicity committee shall > be responsible that this procedure gets to the editor of the Voice. Schrimpf first, Stivelar second. Harrington informed the convention he had given news to Schomaker. Amendment, that this convention go on record as notifying editor O'Neill that no news is official from this convention unless it comes through the publicity committee and the secretary of the Maritime Federation." [1198]

Do you remember the difficulty that arose on that criticism of you acting as the special agent for O'Neil in sending publicity?

A. Do I remember the objections, do you mean?

Q. Yes. A. Why, I do, yes.

Q. And then you know that O'Neil sent a wire to the Voice asking that you be on the job of handling the publicity solely? Do you remember that?

A. You mean O'Neil sent a wire to the Federation convention?

Q. Yes. A. It is possible he did, yes.

Q. "The following wire was read from San Francisco dated June 16, 1937: 'May I respectfully request the convention to designate some one member of the publicity committee to contact Voice. Last Wednesday at 4 p.m. I was forced to telephone Portland to get details of the convention. No news has been received at Voice office from publicity committee since convention opened. Have been contacting Schomaker, who covered ILA convention for Voice and did excellent job. Schomaker is experienced publicity man handling San Francisco publicity during strike. If committee would designate Schomaker as contact man for Voice all difficulties would be removed. As a matter of fact, someone [1199] from Voice should be covering convention but then neglect is not of my making. Must have news from a newspaper angle. Membership flooding office with inquiries and for first week my answer had to be, "I don't know." Signed, Jim O'Neil, Acting Editor, Voice of the Federation.'

"Moved and seconded that the convention notify O'Neil he would get publicity through the publicity committee and no one else. Howard first. Motion carried."

You and O'Neil were quite friendly at that time, weren't you?

A. I don't know just what you mean by "friendly." Do you mean a personal friendship?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. I always admired O'Neil, yes. He was a very competent newspaperman and, as far as I know, he was a reliable person.

Q. Still a friend of yours?

A. I haven't seen O'Neil since he took that perjury rap, long before that.

Q. What was the perjury rap that you are talking about?

A. Something to do with the deportation hearing of Bridges. I think O'Neil testified or gave a statement to the effect that he saw Bridges pasting

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Communist Party stamps in his book, and later—well, anyway, something happened that he [1200] said he didn't see it, and he went up for perjury. That is all I know.

Q. He later had to take it back under oath and they sent him to prison for perjury, didn't they?

A. I guess that is what they did, when you perjure yourself. They send you to prison, I guess.

Q. And if they get a statement from you, you are gone, aren't you?

A. I am not that much of a legal person to understand all those details, so I couldn't say Yes or No.

Q. You gave them a statement, though, didn't you? A. Gave who?

Q. The FBI or the Immigration agents or the Federal authorities investigating this matter.

A. You mean O'Neil gave them a statement?

Q. You. A. Certainly I did, absolutely.

Q. When?

A. I gave them two statements, I think.

Q. When was the first one?

A. The first one was—it was a shorter one I gave first, in May.

Q. It started a long time earlier than that. It was away back in 1940, wasn't it?

A. Who? That I gave a statement? [1201]

Q. Yes. A. Not to my knowledge, no.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Weren't you interviewed on this matter by two agents named Cassidy and Lish in November, 1940? A. In November?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I was interviewed by two fellows. It was at 111 Sutter Street. But to my knowledge the statement was not taken. It was not visibly taken. Whether it was taken now is another question.

Q. What place was that?

A. I think it was 111 Sutter Street.

Q. Yes, but I mean what office? The office of what organization?

A. Gee, you got me beat.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I say that beats me. I don't recall seeing any notice on the door.

Q. They questioned you then about your membership in the Communist Party, didn't they?

A. Well, it was an extensive questioning. What they mean or what they didn't mean. It is quite a while ago. I can't recall all the details.

Q. And you told them you joined the Communist Party in 1934 didn't you? [1202]

A. Gee, I don't recall. It has been quite a while. I don't remember what—I say, a statement wasn't taken, visibly taken. It may have been recorded, but there wasn't anything visible there.

Q. Yes, but——

A. I have been fooled a lot of times.

Q. You told them you were signed up by George Morris, didn't you?

A. As I say, I can't recall, but he is the guy who signed me up.

Q. Didn't you tell them that?

A. I may have and I may not have. I don't know.

Q. Then they asked you if Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party and you told them you didn't know, isn't that right?

A. That is very possible, yes.

Q. No. Isn't that so?

A. I say that is very possible.

Q. Mr. Schomaker, anything is possible. It is so, isn't it? A. I wouldn't say so, no.

Q. You wouldn't say unless you were shown the document, would you?

A. That wouldn't prove anything, because these people didn't sit down and take a statement. If they took it, it was on the basis of a recording device, and I can't recall if I said [1203] Yes or No. It is very possible I said I don't know.

Q. And then they gave you the statement. They put you under oath, didn't they?

A. No, I can't recall being under any oath. I would be stupid if they put me under oath and not take any visible statement. I'm not that stupid, I don't think. I am pretty dumb, but not that dumb.

Q. You testified here that during your membership in the Communist Party, a period which extended from 1931 to 1939 or 1940, that you had a meeting every day and that on Saturdays and Sundays two or three. Do you remember that testimony?

A. Yes, that is more or less correct.

Q. And as I say, you remained in the Communist Party from 1931 until 1939; that is approximately eight years; right?

A. That is about it, yes.

Q. So that as a quick calculation you had about 3,752 meetings of the Communist Party in that period?

A. About that many. There seemed to be more than that even.

Q. Then in addition to that you were a member of the union and attended a great many union meetings, isn't that right?

A. I tried to attend as many as I could, yes.

Q. How many did you attend?

A. Well, they met—I think at one time they met every two weeks, but anyway, we will say they met every week, and I tried to attend every meeting.

Q. When did that start? When did you join the union? A. In October, 1933.

Q. And you left it?

A. In, we will say, 1945. You know what I mean, to cover all the years.

Q. At least a period of ten years. So you were at 520 or more. Now, have you any memorandum that you have prepared upon which you have based the testimony that you gave in this case?

A. No, I haven't any memorandum.

Q. Have you any document in your pocket now that gives any names of persons or places or dates?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Did you ever see any such document? Was any such document exhibited to you by any person?

A. What document? I don't get that.

Q. Withdraw it. Did anybody tell you what you were to testify before you took the stand here?

A. Do you mean tell me what to say?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, certainly not. How could they? I don't follow that question. I don't quite understand.

Q. Did you discuss with anybody what you were going to say?

A. I discussed—I discussed with people the Bridges case, but not what I was going to say.

Q. Did you discuss with anybody what your testimony would be if you were called to the witness stand?

A. It would be on a question of the Bridges case.

Q. Did you discuss with any person the details of what you would testify to?

A. Well, I discussed with them the questions of the meetings I had attended and particular meetings, yes, I discussed it with them.

Q. Were you shown any statement taken or given by yourself or by anybody else which contained the matters that you were going to testify on?

A. Well, now, I may have been shown my statement, but I had never seen anyone else's statement, no, never.

Q. What is the date of the statement that you were shown?

A. Well, I say it is possible it was when—I wasn't even shown my own statement except—wait a minute—except when I dictated it, and then it was taken in shorthand and transposed and came back and I signed each page, and I haven't seen it from that day to this.

Q. When was that?

A. Well, one was taken in May and another was taken in—three, four or six weeks ago.

Q. May of what year? A. This year.

Q. May of 1949. Then who was present when that statement [1206] was taken?

A. Which one? In May?

Q. In May, 1949.

A. There was Mr. John Boyd and of course the stenographer, and there was one other person. It could have been Mr. Kaiser, but—John Boyd was there and the stenographer, and there was one other person that I can't recall at this moment exactly who it was.

Q. Was it John Hoey? A. Who?

(Testimony of John [illegible]. Schomaker.)

Q. Didn't you say John Hoey? A. Boyd.

Q. You do not know whether Mr. Kaiser was there or not?

A. As I say, there was some other person there and I can't recall if it was Kaiser or not.

Q. Was it a woman or a man?

A. It was a man.

Q. Where was the statement taken?

A. It was a hotel room.

Q. What hotel?

A. I am trying to think. A lot of those hotels in San Francisco. Was it the Canterbury? Worthington, or something? It is on the same street as the Marines' Memorial, I am pretty sure.

Q. Is it on the same side of the street as the Marines' [1207] Memorial?

A. On this side of the street going out.

Q. What is the name of the hotel?

A. I am trying to think. It is either the Canterbury—it slips my mind right now.

Q. What room was it taken in?

A. The seventh floor, but what room I wouldn't recall.

Q. What time of day did you first go there?

A. It was in the evening.

Q. What time?

A. Well, I came in on the train. It was, I imagine, around seven o'clock.

Q. Did you go there alone, or were you accompanied by somebody else?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I came in on the train and took a cab up there.

Q. Alone, or were you accompanied by someone?

A. The cab driver driving the cab.

Q. But there was nobody who came with you?

A. Nobody came along, no.

Q. Did you go to that hotel directly, to the Worthington, the Canterbury, or whatever its name is?

A. I did, yes.

Q. That was the first place you went when you got off the train in San Francisco. You took a cab and went directly there? [1208]

A. That was my destination, yes.

Q. Where did you leave? You left your home in San Mateo—no, Palo Alto, is that right?

A. Menlo Park.

Q. What time did you get on the train?

A. Well, as I say, it was an evening train. I would say between six and seven.

Q. When you got to the hotel, whatever the name of it may be, who was the first person that you met there?

A. Well, I walked into the lobby and said I wanted to see Mr. Boyd.

Q. Whom did you state that to?

A. Well, there was—you know how it is in a hotel, they have a desk and they have a clerk and a girl.

Q. Well, did you state it to the clerk?

A. I said to whoever the fellow might be at the desk that I would like to see Mr. Boyd, and he took, mentioned to the girl, and she rung upstairs and he spoke to someone, he said, "Send him up." So I went up. Said the seventh floor, and I got off at the seventh floor and someone was there.

Q. Who was there?

A. As I say, I can't recall this third person. As I say, I don't remember the third person.

Q. What did he look like?

A. Oh, an average guy. I can't——

Q. Had you ever seen him before?

A. I don't think I had, no.

Q. How tall was he?

A. Oh, he was the average size guy.

Q. Did you learn his name?

A. No, I didn't, no.

Q. I see.

A. Except later, except later in the room when we got discussing this thing, why, each of them brought out a card and gave me their—I mean, showed me their card and their identification. But as I say, that third name slips my mind at this time. [1210]

Q. You heard his name, but you don't remember it now? A. That is possible, yes.

Q. You did know it, though?

A. Naturally I knew that he was introduced, but I can't recall his name now.

Q. Was Mr. Boyd there at that time?

A. Boyd?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Yes. A. He was there, yes.

Q. Was it he that introduced you to the other man? A. That's right.

Q. Had you met Boyd before?

A. Prior to that?

Q. Yes.

A. I think—yes, he came down to the house one time.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I think about two weeks prior to that.

Q. Now, at this hotel that evening, then, you gave a statement, is that right?

A. Well, they asked questions and I answered the questions.

Q. They were taken down by a stenographer?

A. They were.

Q. And then they were reduced to typewriting, is that correct? A. That's right.

Q. And you signed each page? [1211]

A. Whether I initialed each page—I guess I signed each page, yes.

Q. Well, it was you that said you signed it; which was it, do you know?

A. Well, I say I signed each page, yes.

Q. All right. And how long were you at that hotel, in that room?

A. Oh, I don't—it wasn't too long. It was, oh, I would say about two and a half hours.

Q. And you remained there while the document was being typed out, did you?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, yes, the girl—yes, I remained there until it was finished.

Q. Did you leave the room at all from the time you dictated it until it was finished?

A. No, the girl typed it in the adjoining room. There is a hallway where you could——

Q. And how many pages were in that document?

A. Well, there wasn't any more than 15.

Q. Not more than 15?

A. Well, I say, maybe there was; maybe it was about over—about 22, I would say, to be——

Q. You don't know whether it was 15 or 22, is that right?

A. Well, it was between, around that number. Now, whether it was—I think it was around 22.

Q. Uh-huh. And prior to your coming there, who was the last person connected with the Government or this prosecution or the investigation whom you had talked to before arriving at the hotel?

A. That particular day, you mean?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, I didn't see anyone.

Q. Did you talk to anyone? Did you receive a phone call or anything of that kind?

A. Let's see. How did that finally come about? I know I worked that day, and I think I received a call the previous day, I think it was.

Q. From whom?

A. I think it was Jack MacGowan.

Q. And who is Jack MacGowan?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, he is an immigration official, or just what his position is I don't know.

Q. Now, you received this phone call, then, the day before you came up to—in May, to make this statement, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. What date was that in May, do you know?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. What day of the week was it?

A. It was in the middle of the week because I had to get a fellow to replace me. I think it was a Wednesday, a Wednesday [1213] night.

Q. So then on Tuesday you received the phone call, is that right?

A. Either Monday or Tuesday, yes; one of those days.

Q. And this was a phone call from Mr. MacGowan. Did you get it personally? Did you answer the phone?

A. No, my wife took the phone.

Q. You didn't talk to him on that occasion?

A. No, I don't think I did, no.

Q. And was a message left for you?

A. It was.

Q. And what was the message?

A. The message was to, I think, to call him. And I called—I had the number, so I called him and got the instructions to come up.

Q. Where did you call him?

A. Well, at this particular address—I mean, this particular telephone number.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. At the hotel?

A. No, I imagine—I don't say. It was a San Francisco number. I called it and that was it.

Q. I see. Now, prior to that time had you spoken to Mr. MacGowan before?

A. MacGowan had come down there on, I think, two pervious occasions. [1214]

Q. What was the first time?

A. What do you mean, what was the first time?

Q. That he came down. You said he came down on two previous occasions. When was the first time?

A. Well, it was around—I would say in January.

Q. 1949? A. Yes.

Q. At that time did he come down in the daytime or in the evening?

A. No, he and Bruce Barbour came down. It was in the evening after work.

Q. Now, did they come by appointment? Had you a previous appointment to meet them?

A. No, they came down and they parked their car in front and they rung the bell and I, inquisitive that I am, I went out to see who it was. And I went out to see who it was, and here they were, MacGowan and Barbour. And they introduced themselves, and I said, "Come on in, gentlemen." And they came in and sat down and we began to talk and discussed football and the marines, and then first one thing and then another—religion, possibly.

Q. Religion?

A. We discussed religion, too.

Q. What was the discussion about religion?

A. Well, different things; different religious sects and so on. [1215] Very casual and broad discussion.

Q. How did it happen that they discussed religious sects?

A. Well, you know how it is.

Q. Were you and they of the same religious sect?

A. I don't know what religion they are.

Q. Well, didn't they tell you then?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you, or did they ask you what your religion was?

A. They did not, no. It was one of those informal discussions.

Q. How long did they stay there?

A. Oh, we had quite a discussion, I guess; it lasted, oh, about 10:30. And they went out to leave and they couldn't start their car.

Q. What time did they get there?

A. Oh, I imagine it was around 8:30.

Q. All right. And then when did you next see Mr. MacGowan?

A. Oh, it must have been about a month later, I imagine.

Q. Well, now, can't you be more specific than that?

A. Why, no, I can't, because it didn't have any particular significance to me. I can't place it any sooner or later. It was——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Do you know what month it was in?

A. It was just one of those visits, casual visits, and there was no specific significance attached to it as far as I was concerned. [1216]

Q. Do you know what month it was in?

A. Well, I would say in the latter part of February or along in there.

Q. Did he come there that time by appointment?

A. I think he did call up.

Q. When did he call up?

A. Well, when I came home from work, why, my wife told me that MacGowan had called and he was going to come that evening if it was convenient.

Q. Did you phone him then?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And did he come down?

A. He did, yes.

Q. Alone or accompanied by somebody else?

A. He was alone.

Q. And did you have a talk with him again?

A. We had a discussion, yes.

Q. What time did he get there?

A. Well, it was in the evening. I imagine around 8:00, 8:00 o'clock.

Q. And what time did he leave?

A. It wasn't too late. It was around, since I had to work the next day, I imagine he left around 10:00 o'clock.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, now, do you know or do you imagine?

A. Well, I say, I didn't put a stop-watch on the guy. Since I [1217] worked, I had to go to bed so I could get some rest so I could give the boss a fair day's work for a fair day's pay.

Q. Now, did you see anybody connected with the prosecution from that time until you got the message to come to the hotel?

A. Then later I saw Mr. Boyd.

Q. When did he come?

A. Well, prior—about a week prior to—it was on a Sunday, it was a Sunday afternoon. Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser and some other person came down.

Q. Who?

A. I can't recall. That third person is—I can't recall who that third person was.

Q. Was it somebody you had known before?

A. Very possibly it was MacGowan.

Q. It wasn't anybody you had been working with on the waterfront or anything like that?

A. No, no. Anderson and Jones, they came down later.

Q. All right. Now, you talked—John Boyd came down with Kaiser. What is Kaiser's first name?

A. Bill; William, I think—William Kaiser.

Q. And you think MacGowan?

A. There was a third person in there, and I have reason to believe that it was MacGowan.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Did they all come into your house?

A. No, in the back of the house there was a small patio, or [1218] there was a small patio there and we sat there a while and discussed a few things——

Q. Did all three of them sit in the patio with you?

A. Well, if you will allow me to finish——

Q. No, I asked you, did all three——

A. No, none of them sat down. All of them stood up.

Q. All three went into the patio, though, is that right? A. They did, yes.

Q. All right. Now, whom did you see next, after that, connected with the Government?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. Well, now, you have given us the MacGowan —that he came down first with some other man, Bruce Barbour. And then MacGowan came down alone, and then Boyd came down with Kaiser and a third person. Now, who was the next person who came down?

A. Well, the next guy who came down stuck me with a subpoena to appear before the grand jury.

Q. When was that?

A. That was the—let's see. They were there Sunday and then I think it was the next day. The next was Monday, and I think they give me the—the guy came down and give me the subpoena to appear before the grand jury, I think it was on a—either a Tuesday or a Wednesday.

Q. Of what month? [1219]

A. Well, that would be May.

Q. Beg your pardon?

A. I am pretty sure that was in May. Whenever that grand jury was in session in San Francisco.

Q. Well, now, do you know?

A. What do you mean, do I know?

Q. Do you know when it was in session in San Francisco?

A. Well, to the best of my—I didn't know any more until I got this. He give me the subpoena, I went there, I went before the grand jury.

Q. That isn't what I wanted to know. I want to know when you got the subpoena.

A. I say, to the best of my recollection, it was either a Monday or a Tuesday in May.

Q. In May?

A. What the—I may have the subpoena at home yet. I don't know just now.

Q. No. But I want your recollection now.

A. Pardon?

Q. I want your recollection now.

A. Well, I say, it is along in the early part of May, first or second week in May.

Q. Well, now, did he give you the subpoena

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

before or after you made that statement in the hotel room?

A. Oh, he gave me the subpoena before I made the statement in [1220] the hotel room.

Q. Now, did you testify before the grand jury before or after you made the statement in the hotel room?

A. I testified to the grand jury, made the statement that night; the next day I appeared before the grand jury.

Q. So you made the statement in the hotel room before you appeared before the grand jury, is that right?

A. That is prior to my appearance before the grand jury.

Q. Now, you hadn't received any subpoena to go to the hotel or anything of that kind?

A. Well, I had the subpoena in my pocket.

Q. Well, to go to the hotel. You went there on a telephone call, is that right?

A. Well, I didn't know you had to have a subpoena to go to a hotel.

Q. That's right. The subpoena was to appear before a grand jury, not to go to the hotel?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. Now prior to the time that MacGowan had come down to see you in January, who had you spoken to who was connected with the government or the investigation of this matter, before you first talked to MacGowan in January?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, we lived on McKendrie Drive; that is in North Palo Alto. And there was two fellows came down.

Q. What were their names? [1221]

A. I can recall one name. It was Phillips. But who the second person was I can't recall his name.

Q. Did you hear his name?

A. Well, they give me their cards, yes.

Q. And what organization were they connected with or what department of the government?

A. The Immigration Service.

Q. They gave you cards, is that right?

A. Well, they had—the way it occurred, we were out and when we came home, the card was under the mail, it was stuck in the mailbox, and it had their names written—that is, I remembe a Phillips. There was Phillips' card and an additional name there, and their identity for the Immigration Service.

Q. When was this?

A. When we lived on McKendrie Drive. It must have been in the spring of, or early summer of '48.

Q. Can you tell us what month?

A. Well, no, other than that—I say, there was no particular significance to me that—to imprint anything on my memory.

Q. Well, when you got the card, did you call Phillips or the other man?

A. Yes, I think my wife did. She called Phillips.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And then did he come to see you?

A. That was the message on the card. It stated, "Will you please call this number?" And my wife called and—— [1222]

Q. Where was that number? Was it a San Francisco number or a number down there?

A. It was a San Francisco number. [1222-A]

Q. All right. And then did Phillips come to see you?

A. Then he came—I think it was two or three days later, and he came down.

Q. With whom?

A. As I say, I don't recall that second person. I remember—some particular reason I remember the name of Phillips. It was because it was his card that was left there.

Q. And that was sometime in the spring or early summer of 1948; you can't remember the month, is that right?

A. That's right; I don't remember.

Q. Did you have a conversation with those men?

A. I did.

Q. Where?

A. When we lived on McKendrie Drive.

Q. What part of the premises? Did you have a patio there?

A. Oh, no, they came in and sat in the sitting room and we just chewed the fat.

Q. Wha time did they get there?

A. Oh, it was in the evening after work.

Q. What time would you say?

A. Well, one of those deals where—around eight o'clock.

Q. And what time did they leave?

A. Oh, about ten o'clock, I imagine; or maybe earlier. They didn't stay too long.

Q. And did you discuss this matter with him, anything [1223] concerning what you have testified here?

A. Oh, we just—it was a general conversation about G.I. housing and so on.

Mr. Hallinan: I guess we might as well adjourn.

The Court: It has now reached shortly after four o'clock, Mr. Hallinan. If agreeable, we will take up in the morning at ten o'clock, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions or circumstances and not to form nor express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, December 1, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.)

Wednesday Morning Session,
November 30, 1949, 10:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: Case of the United States v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Call the jury, please.

The Clerk: Call Mr. Schomaker.

(Whereupon the jury entered the courtroom and assumed their respective positions in the jurybox. The previous witness, Mr. Schomaker; resumed the witness stand.)

The Clerk: The witness on the [illegible]and is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Hallinan.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Well, did you have a talk with these gentlemen last night again, Mr. Schomaker?

A. I don't know what gentlemen you are referring to, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. Did you talk with anybody connected with the prosecution last night after your testimony here?

A. Why, I did; I talked to quite a few of the people who were connected with the prosecution.

Q. Last night after you left here?

A. Yes, last night.

Q. Well, now, tell us what you worked out toward getting out of that story in Shaw's house in 1938; what changes are you [1225] going to make in that?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that question as being wholly improper, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: I submit it is proper cross-examination, Your Honor.

The Court: Sustained. Not in that form, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, tell us now, give us some—did you work out some kind of an explanation with these gentlemen that would get you out of the Shaw meeting? Was that discussed?

Mr. Donohue: I again object, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained. Ask him what, if anything, he did last night.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Whom did you have your talks with last night?

A. Oh, I don't quite understand what you mean by "talks." We talked about baseball and football and——

Q. Well, after you left the court here, what persons connected with the prosecution did you have a conversation with?

A. My God, I talked to—you mean all the shoeshine boys and newspaper boys and all that?

Q. Let me get that gentleman's first initials.

A. You mean the shoeshine boys, things like that?

Q. I asked you what persons connected with the prosecution. Don't pretend you don't understand if you do, Mr. Schomaker. [1226] You understand what I meant, don't you?

A. Well, to be frank, I really don't, no.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, do you remember the names? Do you remember the names of any person connected with the prosecution of this case to whom you talked after you left the witness stand here yesterday evening?

A. Well, I think, to make it easier for both of us, I will say that everyone connected with the prosecution I talked to.

Q. Last night? A. Yes, everyone.

Q. I see. A. Blanket endorsement.

Q. Let's have their names.

A. Well, I can start with Mr. Paisley and Mr. Donohue.

Q. All right. Who else?

A. And Mr. Boyd and Mr. Gallagher, and Mr. Kaiser. You don't want anyone else I talked to? Well, that's about it, I guess.

Q. Anyone connected with the prosecution of this case whom you talked to?

A. I think that is the sum of it.

Q. You think—now, where did the conversations take place?

A. You don't want me to tell you that, do you? Some of the places were in the bathroom and some was in the room, the offices upstairs, and some of it was in the restaurant and some was on the street. It was, you know, general—everywhere, I [1227] suppose.

Q. Well, all right. Let's start in now. After court convened last night around 4:00 o'clock, who was the first person you had a conversation—withdraw that.

In the conversations you had with these gentlemen last night, you discussed matters concerning what you ~~had~~ testified to, did you?

A. Well, I imagine we must have. I don't recall any particular incident. But I would say they might have referred to them. I don't know.

Q. May have referred to them?

A. I don't know.

Q. You are not sure?

A. Well, I wouldn't—I wouldn't depend on it. I say, I wouldn't swear my life on it, that I talked to them referring to any particular incident.

Q. Well, did you talk to any of them concerning the subject of this trial at all?

A. Well, I'll tell you. Well, as a general attitude, I said, "Mr. Hallinan had a beautiful orange tie."

Q. Never mind that.

A. And they agreed with me.

Q. Just answer the question.

Mr. Hallinan: If Your Honor please——

A. Well, that was it. [1228]

Mr. Hallinan: Well—I object to this——

The Court: You asked for the conversation, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I asked him if he talked with, if he had any conversations concerning the subject of this trial. Then we will go into that subject afterwards.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Well, the tie may be attributed to the trial. I don't know. [1228-A]

Q. Did you talk to any of these people about any matter that you testified concerning yesterday?

A. Well, I say we discussed the trial, yes, and the prosecution and the defense in a general way.

Q. Did you talk to anybody about any subject that you had testified concerning yesterday?

A. My answer would be No.

Q. Your answer would be No?

A. That is right, no.

Q. You did not talk about anything that you had discussed on the witness stand yesterday?

A. Except in a general way.

Q. What do you mean by "in a general way"?

A. Well, I said, "Hallinan is a smart guy," for instance, and I think Mr. Donohue said, "No, I think Mr. MacInnis is smarter." That is the way it went.

Q. Is that all that was said on the subject of your testimony?

A. In the general conversation, that is all.

Q. Did you spend some time in the room upstairs here last night?

A. Well, I remember I went up there.

Q. What time did you go up there?

A. We left—court was adjourned, we walked down, took the elevator and went up to the room.

Q. What time did you get up there?

A. I imagine eight or nine minutes after we left here. And by the way, my wife was there, and I said, "I think we want to go"——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Pardon me. We are a little ahead of the story. A. I see.

Q. About 4:10 you arrived at the room upstairs, is that right? A. About that.

Q. What room is that? A. Room 434.

Q. Whose room is it?

A. You got me beat. It is in the Post Office Building.

Q. Was there a name on the door? A. No.

Q. Is it connected with any suite of offices?

A. It is a single room with a basin in one corner.

Q. Was it the room you were in the preceding night when you read over the testimony that Mr. Kaiser talked about? A. That is correct.

Q. There are two rooms together?

A. No; all I saw was one room. There is a door going to the next room, but I think it is locked.

Q. When you got up there who else was present?

A. Well, my wife was there.

Q. What is her name? [1230]

A. Rosa Schomaker.

Q. She was there when you got there, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And who else was there?

A. Well, there was a secretary sitting there.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Several agents of the Immigration Service.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. What were their names?

A. I think Mr. Maxwell was there, and Mr. Wooley.

Q. Wooley?

A. I believe that is it. I am not certain about that, but phonetically it sounds like Wooley.

Q. Who else?

A. Well, to be frank, I didn't pay particular attention who was in there except my wife. You know how it is. You meet your wife; you want to talk things over.

Q. Do you remember who else was in the room?

A. I can't—I didn't pay particular attention.

Q. How many persons were in that room?

A. I would say roughly—in a rough estimate seven or eight. Who they were, I couldn't say.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. Well, we stayed longer than I thought was necessary.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. I would say we left there about fifteen minutes of five. [1231]

Q. You left about 4:45, is that right?

A. Yes, because my wife had to exchange some shoes at Macy's and I know she left at 4:30.

Q. While you were there did anybody else come in?

A. Gee, they were coming and going all the time.

Q. Do you remember any person who came in while you were there, anyone connected with the prosecution in this case?

A. Well, when I first arrived, I don't believe the prosecution had come in the room yet. They came in after I was seated.

Q. Who came in?

A. Mr. Donohue, Mr. Paisley and Mr. Boyd, and I think Mr. Kaiser was also in the group. Oh, Mr. McMillan, I think, was there, too. I am not quite sure about it.

Q. Did he come in or had he been there before?

A. I think he came staggering in there with an armload of books, if I can remember correctly.

Q. How long had you been there when these gentlemen came in?

A. Well, you can estimate it from four—I imagine they arrived—between 4 and 4:30, before my wife had left.

Q. Did any of them talk to you then?

A. They may have said—as I say, they may have said then, "Mr. Hallinan is a pretty smart guy."

Q. Did they talk to you about the facts in this case at all?

A. I do not know what you mean by the "facts of the case." [1232]

Q. Did they talk to you about anything you had testified concerning yesterday?

A. I don't think they did, no.

Q. Why did you remain there after your wife left? Did you have an appointment with these gentlemen to talk to them?

A. No, it was a question of transportation, I believe, and I said I would just as soon go back to the hotel and rest.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Transportation to where?

A. To where I am staying at the Marines' Memorial.

Q. What was the question concerning transportation to that place?

A. Well, I mean, how could you get over there? It is a question of transporting myself from here over to the Marines' Memorial on Sutter Street. I don't know how else I could get over there unless I transported myself.

Q. That is the reason you went up to the room, to discuss your transportation?

A. No, my hat was up there. I had to go back and get my hat.

Q. Your wife left around 3:30, is that right?

A. No, 4:30, it was.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. She attended the trial and had her picture taken here yesterday, and then she left. It must have been after four, so it must have been 4:30.

Q. Then you left about fifteen minutes later, is that right?

A. About that, I guess, fifteen or twenty minutes. I will tell you. I didn't even look at the time because I wasn't going anyplace.

Q. After you left that room where did you go?

A. I thought we were going back to the hotel. That was my impression, and I found we were headed—wound up at the Appraisers' Building down there on Sansome Street.

Q. How did you get to the Appraisers Building on Sansome Street?

A. In the vehicle I got in out here and drove down.

Q. Whose car is that?

A. I guess it belongs to the taxpayers. It had a Government license on it.

Q. It is a Government car, is that right?

A. I didn't even look at the license, but I presume it to be a Government car.

Q. Then you went down to the Appraisers Building. Who else was in the car with you?

A. Well, there was Mr. Wooley was driving, and there was a stenographer, a Mr. Kaiser, a Mr. Maxwell and myself.

Q. What time did you get to the Appraisers Building?

A. Well, it took quite a while. I recall now that Mr. Donohue told Mr. Kaiser, or, rather, he called the Appraisers Building while I was in the room upstairs and he told them to inform [1234] his wife that he would see her at five minutes after, five or ten minutes after five. So when we got down there I looked at my watch, and Mrs. Donohue was coming out of the Appraisers Building. So Kaiser told her that "Your husband" would see her in a few minutes because then it was about ten after five. So Bill sat in the car when we went upstairs.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Then you went into the building?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go in the building?

A. Well, we went up to the thirteenth floor, the offices—they have offices in one end. That is the far end from the elevator. We walked down there.

Q. Do you know whose office that was?

A. Well, I assume it to be the Immigration Service's.

Q. Did you see anything written on the door?

A. No, I don't think there was a thing on the door, no writing, at least.

Q. Had you ever been in that building before?

A. I have, yes.

Q. Several times? A. Several times.

Q. Recently? A. Recently, yes.

Q. Had you been in that same office before that you went to on the thirteenth floor? [1235]

A. Oh, yes, numerous times.

Q. When you went into that office who went with you?

A. Well, the people who I came up, drove up there with, yes.

Q. Was anybody else in the office when you got there?

A. Well, I think Mr. McGowan was there.

Q. Do you think or do you know?

A. He was there definitely. My little daughter was there. Susan was there, too.

Q. Anybody else?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. And Mr. Wooley's wife and Mr. Gallagher's wife.

Q. Anyone else?

A. I only went as far as the first office, and because my daughter was there I stopped to chat with her, and I didn't go any further into the offices.

Q. Then what time did you leave the Appraisers Building, or leave that office, rather?

A. Well, it must have been around six o'clock.

Q. You got there a few minutes after five and you left there about six? A. That is right.

Q. Did you talk to anybody in the meantime in that office besides your daughter?

A. No, I talked to—she told me where she had been that day. I think Mrs. Wooley had taken her to the movies—Macy's and saw Santa Claus at Macy's, and went up to—I think it was the [1236] Emporium, she said, and they rode on the merry-go-round and things up there.

Q. Mrs. Wooley is the wife of one of the agents of the Immigration Department, is she?

A. That is correct, and we discussed—general conversation with Mrs. Wooley and Mrs. Gallagher.

Q. They were in the office with you?

A. We were in the hallway. There is the hallway and this one office.

Q. You left there at 6 p.m.?

A. I would say it was around 6 p.m., yes, approximately.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Then from there we got in a car.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. The same car?

A. The same car, with Mr. Wooley driving, and we drove to—that is, Mrs. Gallagher and the stenographer and Mr. Kaiser, and we drove to the Marines Memorial Building.

Q. What happened there?

A. Well, Mr. Kaiser went inside the building. He got his key and we proceeded to go to the room.

Q. Kaiser went in and got his key?

A. You know, the lobby of the building. He got his key from the clerk and proceeded to go—got on the elevator and went up to the room.

Q. What room? [1237]

A. The hotel room.

Q. Whose room? A. Mr. Kaiser's room.

Q. Is that where you have been living, too?

A. Well, you know the question of expenses—I only get $9 a day, I think. It is a question of economy with me. So I have a bed there and I sleep there.

Q. If you will just listen to the questions and answer them.

A. I am answering to the best of my ability.

Q. Kaiser went in and got the key to a room, and then you went up to the room with him?

A. Mrs. Kaiser, myself and this agent, and I can't recall his name now. It is rather an odd name.

Q. Had you met that agent before?

A. Yes, I have, yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Oh, I wouldn't—I would say six times, but

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker,) for the sake of argument, to avoid any argument about it——

Q. I am not going to argue about it. You met him about six times? A. Casually, you know.

Q. You can't remember his name?

A. I may have been introduced to him, but as I say, I don't go around memorizing people's names. It is no point to me.

Q. Who else was in the room besides Kaiser, yourself and this [1238] agents? Anyone else?

A. No.

Q. Is that the room that you occupy now?

A. Well, I sleep there, yes.

Q. How long have you been staying there?

A. Since—what is this, Wednesday? Monday night.

Q. Is the room registered in your name?

A. No, it is not. All I did, Mr. Kaiser has the room, rented it, and when I came in I just signed as a second party to the room.

Q. What are they—twin beds in the room?

A. Definitely, yes.

Q. Does Kaiser occupy one of them at night?

A. He occupies one and I occupy the other.

Q. Where does your wife live now?

A. She lives where we maintain our home.

Q. Is that where she is living now?

A. Well, I have been here since Monday, and I certainly hope she is there.

Q. Where has she been staying this week since Monday?

A. She was here yesterday. She has been occupying the home at Menlo Park.

Q. And coming up here for the trial?

A. She came here yesterday morning, yes.

Q. When you, Kaiser and the agent got in this room how long [1239] did you stay there?

A. Well, Kaiser went to the bathroom and washed his hands, and then I went and washed my hands, and the agent, he went and washed his hands, and that was it.

Q. Then what did you do?

A. I put on my coat. We put on our coats and went upstairs to the barroom.

Q. How long did you stay in the room then? Five or ten minutes only?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, there used to be a rule that cross-examination was limited to the subject matter of the direct examination.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): How long did you stay in the room?

A. When we got there my wife—by the way, when we went into the lobby my wife—there was—this is—when my wife went to exchange her shoes at Macy's, this agent—he accompanied her to Macy's when she exchanged her shoes, and then he brought her to the Marines' Memorial. We met her in the lobby. That is the way that deal worked out. And so when we arrived at Marines' Memorial she was sitting in the lobby. So then when the stenographer and Mrs. Gallagher came in, then she accompanied them to the stenographer's room to freshen up, and we went up to Kaiser's room. [1240]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And then, or to your room, whichever you want to call it, is that right?

A. Well, certainly to ours; it makes no difference, my room or his room, whatever you want to call it.

Q. And then you say you stayed in this room how long?

A. Just enough for each of us to wash our hands.

Q. Well, was it five minutes or ten minutes or what?

A. Well, I would say seven or eight minutes.

Q. All right. And then you went up to the bar, as you say? A. That's right.

Q. Where is the bar?

A. That is in the top of the last floor on the building.

Q. And did the same two men go up with you, this agent and Mr. Kaiser? A. That's right.

Q. And how long did you stay there?

A. Oh, we stayed there, had a few drinks, a couple of drinks; I would say we stayed there, oh, an hour.

Q. Who bought the drinks?

A. Well, Mr. Kaiser paid for one round and I think that—no, I think he paid for both rounds. Must have been flush or something, 'cause he paid for both rounds.

Q. All right. Now, while you were up there at the bar, did any other person join you up there, your wife or anyone?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, as I say, when we went in, my wife and Mrs. Gallagher [1241] was already there.

Q. No, I asked you after you went up to the bar, now, did anyone join you up at the bar?

A. Well, you asked me if my wife did. She was already there.

Q. Yes. And then?

A. And we sat down at that table, we had a couple of drinks, we sat there an hour and looked at the view. And by the way, I could look right down there and I saw the Cartwright Hotel, where—that is the hotel I couldn't remember yesterday. That is two blocks below on Sutter Street.

Q. And now you stayed at the bar for about an hour, is that right?

A. Well, that was a rough estimate, yes.

Q. And who was present seated at the table now? There was Kaiser, yourself, the agent, your wife, and anybody else? A. Mrs. Gallagher.

Q. Who is Mrs. Gallagher?

A. She is the wife of George Gallagher, one of the prosecution attorneys.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. Well, we went then from there to—went back to the tenth floor to the dining room. In the meanwhile, Mrs. Gallagher excused herself and that left the four of us.

Q. All right. And you had dinner there?

A. We had—we did, yes. [1242]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And just the same people whom you have mentioned, less Mrs. Gallagher. And then how long were you at dinner?

A. I think it was until—we stayed there until about 9:00 o'clock.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. Well, my wife had to go home and Mr. Kaiser and the agent left to pick up my daughter Suzanne to go home to Menlo Park, and I went up to the hotel, I mean, went up to the room. Went back to the room and took a shower.

Q. So Kaiser and the agent then picked up your daughter and took her down to Menlo Park, is that right?

A. Well, they left with my wife and they went to pick up my daughter, Suzanne, yes.

Q. They drove your wife and daughter back to Menlo Park?

A. That is, they had to go and pick up my daughter first.

Q. In this same government car, I take it? Is that true?

A. I didn't see the car. I don't know whether they flew down there or took a street car or what. I don't know.

Q. Then you went to bed, you say?

A. I took a shower, yes.

Q. At what time did you go to bed?

A. Oh, I would say it was about 9:10. I had a very good sleep, by the way, too.

Q. Did Mr. Kaiser return to the room that night?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, he did, I think. But I don't think I even awakened [1243] when he came in.

Q. Did you see him there in the morning when you waked up?

A. That is what I did: I woke up in the morning and looked and he was there.

Q. He was asleep in bed, or——

A. I wouldn't say he was asleep. He was there.

Q. Are you in custody now, Mr. Schomaker? Have you been in custody of these people?

A. What do you mean, under arrest?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, certainly not. How do you arrive at that conclusion?

Q. Now, you didn't talk to any of these people at all then,—except very casually—any of the things that happened yesterday or that were testified to yesterday, is that right?

A. Well, I would say yes. I didn't discuss any—that is, with these people, what the context of the trial——

Q. I see.

A. Except, as I said, that Mr. Hallinan is a very smart guy.

Q. Well, you said that and you have gotten two laughs already, so don't be——

A. Well, I am just telling you what I said, that is all.

Q. And then Mr. Donohue said that Mr. MacInnis was smarter, so that we are all in on the joke.

A. Well, that's the general idea, yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. These three men never did you any harm or wrong, did they? [1244] A. Who is that?

Q. The three defendants who are on trial.

A. Well, I wouldn't want to go into that now, because, after all——

Q. Well, go ahead into it. What harm have they done you? A. Personally?

Q. Yes.

A. Not a thing, not a thing. In fact,——

Q. You don't blame Harry Bridges that you were defeated for election as president of the union in 1938, do you?

A. Why, certainly not. In fact, as I say, a lot of things that Mr. Bridges did, a lot of things that Mr. Bridges did I admire very much. And the same goes for Mr. Schmidt. In fact, maybe a lot of things that Henry did I thought much more of than what Mr. Bridges did, because of various reasons—physical and otherwise.

Q. And you can take the witness stand and laugh about trying to send them to the penitentiary, isn't that right?

A. No, sir, I am laughing at something entirely different. Doesn't cocnern Mr. Bridges nor Mr. Schmidt whatsoever.

Q. Let's get back to this again. You testified yesterday—I will get away from that.

When were you first brought to San Francisco or came to San Francisco, prior to your testimony here? What was the time immediately preceding your appearance here last Monday that [1245] you came to San Francisco?

A. Well, there is this fellow, an agent that lives in Half Moon Bay, who came by about twenty minutes of eight Monday morning.

Q. What is his name?

A. His first name is Larry, and I generally heard him referred to as Larry, and I don't recall his last name.

Q. When did you last meet him?

A. I don't think I have seen him since when he brought me in.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, Monday morning.

Q. You drove up from Half Moon Bay with him?

A. No, I say he lives in Half Moon Bay.

Q. I mean, you drove up from Menlo Park?

A. That's right; he drove by to pick me up and I wasn't ready and he waited until I got ready and then we came up together.

Q. How many times had you met him prior to that time? A. Oh, five or six.

Q. And you called him an agent—an agent for what?

A. Oh, I mean—that is a general term. I imagine—He does work for the Immigration Service, so I referred to him as an agent.

Q. Have you heard his last name?

A. I have, yes, but I don't recall it.

Q. Who introudced you to him? [1246]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I think Jack McGowan.

Q. When?

A. Oh, that was—oh, I would say roughly two months ago.

Q. And then you met him five or six times from that time up until Monday, is that right?

A. Oh, roughly five or six times, yes.

Q. Well, all right. Now, where did McGowan introduce you to this man Larry?

A. In the Appraisers Building.

Q. And that was about two months ago, you say?

A. Well, roughly, yes; two months ago. October, September—yes, I would say some time in September.

Q. And did the same man drive you down home that same day, or anything like that?

A. No, I brought my other shirt and suitcase with me, and I left it in the—drove to the garage on Sansome Street. I packed that suitcase over to the Appraisers Building.

Q. Well, now, this is Monday?

A. Monday morning, yes.

Q. All right. Now, when you came here Monday did you have an interview with the attorneys for the prosecution?

A. I don't know what you mean by an interview. You mean, sit down——

Q. Did you have a talk with them?

A. Why, no. I don't recall any talk with them. I said—naturally, [1247] when I met them, said good morning, they said good morning and so on.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, had you had a talk with any of them prior to that time, any of the attorneys who are seated here?

A. Why, certainly I talked to them.

Q. All right. Well, now, when was the time that you last talked to them preceding your appearance on the witness stand?

A. Well, the last court appearance was on a Wednesday, wasn't it? That is the day before Thanksgiving, and I must have spoken to them before I went home.

Q. You said you came up here on Monday?

A. That's right.

Q. With this Larry? A. That's right.

Q. Had you been up here before that time while this case was in progress?

A. Well, I was here the week previous. You should remember that.

Q. What was that?

A. I was here the week previous, Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday, wasn't I? And we adjourned for Thanksgiving and then come back here Monday.

Q. Well, were you up here the preceding week also?

A. Brother, you've got me. I don't know. Didn't I testify here? I don't know. [1248]

Q. You were here—you have been here Monday, Tuesday and this is Wednesday. Now, were you here all last week also?

A. Well, I was here—wasn't I here Monday?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

In fact, I came up that preceding Friday and I wasn't called to the stand, so I went back to the home. On Saturday and Sunday. And I came back here the next—that time I come up on a Sunday night, and I think Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, then went back Wednesday night.

Q. All right. So you have been here for all last week and part of this week. Now, what is the——

A. I wouldn't say all last week, no. I was here until Wednesday, Thanksgiving Eve.

Q. Now, when was it that this agent, Larry, drove you up? Was it on your return after Thanksgiving or your first appearance?

A. Well, it was this Monday, last Monday.

Q. That was the day before yesterday?

A. Well, what is this, Wednesday? Well, if today is Wednesday, certainly Monday must have been preceding from Tuesday, isn't it?

Q. That is the time that this Larry drove you up here, is that right?

A. That is absolutely correct.

Q. Now, did somebody drive you up on the preceding Monday?

A. No, on the preceding Monday they drove me up on Sunday. [1249]

Q. Who drove you up then?

A. Well, I think Mr. Maxwell came down, came down and picked me up.

Q. What is Mr. Maxwell's first name?

A. Gee, I don't know. All they called him is "Max," and I called him "Max," too.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And you say you think it was Mr. Maxwell, is that right?

A. Well, I am positive it was Mr. Maxwell.

Q. You are positive it was him. All right. So Sunday Mr. Maxwell came down, about what time?

A. Oh, it was around 4:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Q. And was anybody with him?

A. No, he was alone.

Q. All right. And what time did you leave your home?

A. I say, well, he got there around 4:15.

Q. Was that by a prior arrangement?

A. That's right. I think McGowan called me up in the morning, and asked if I wanted to come up Sunday night, and I said it was O.K. with me.

Q. And then Maxwell appeared Sunday, took you in his car and drove you to San Francisco, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. Where did he take you?

A. He took me to the Appraisers Building.

Q. Now, whom did you meet there? [1250]

A. Well, there was Jack McGowan and a Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Well, there were other people there, but they weren't in the office where I was.

Q. Well, did anybody else question you or talk to you at that time? A. No, no.

Q. You say there are other people, but they weren't in the office that you were in?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, maybe I can get it better, explain it—there is an office, other offices there. And used to be a hospital, I think. And they have got a cage there where——

Q. Well, you just mean that people were working there, stenographers and so forth?

A. Well, there were people there. I wouldn't know whether they were working or walking back and forth. So I wasn't any Dick Tracy, running around seeing what each guy was doing.

Q. That was Sunday afternoon?

A. That's right.

Q. After 5:00 o'clock? A. That's right.

Q. People were working in that Appraisers Building, is that right?

A. Well, I said—now, whether they were working or shooting craps or playing pinochle, I don't know. I didn't—— [1251]

Q. You didn't know that?

A. No. Well, that was none of my business.

Q. All right. Now, when you got up there, Mr. McGowan and Mr. Kaiser were there. Did you have a talk with them then about your testimony here or what you were going to testify to or what you knew about this matter? A. No, sir, no.

Q. Did you read over any statement that you had written?

A. No, I didn't read over anything except the paper.

Q. Did you read any memoranda that they had prepared or that they presented?

A. Memoranda? I don't quite understand what you mean.

Q. Well, then, after that, what time did you leave the Appraisers Building?

A. Well, I don't think we stayed there very long. Mr. Kaiser says, "We might as well go over to the hotel." That is, the Marines Memorial. And that is where we proceeded.

Q. What time did you get to the Appraisers Building?

A. Well, at 4:15,—we must have got there around 5:30.

Q. All right. What time did you leave there?

A. Oh, it must have been around 6:00.

Q. And what time did you—then you went directly to the Marines hotel, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. All right. Did you meet anybody else there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, were you taken any other place or did you go any other place that evening?

A. Well, we went up and had a bottle of beer.

Q. Did you leave the building?

A. No, sir, I didn't leave the building, no.

Q. Did you have any interview with any lawyer that night?

A. No, no, I couldn't say any lawyer.

Q. No one connected with the prosecution?

A. If you call Mr. Kaiser a lawyer—I don't know.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, is he?

A. That is something I couldn't say.

Q. You call him "Bill," don't you?

A. Yes, Bill—William.

Q. You don't know if he is a lawyer or what his official capacity is, is that right?

A. All I know, he is connected with the Immigration Service, and I imagine he is an agent.

Q. All right. Now, you say that Mr. Maxwell came down on Sunday under an arrangement that you had made with Mr. McGowan, is that correct?

A. That's right. That is substantially correct.

Q. All right. Now, when, prior to Sunday, to that Sunday, had you seen any of these people?

A. Well, I was here the preceding Friday. [1253]

Q. Well, but then you were up here in San Francisco the preceding Friday? A. That's right.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. Well, I came home from work—see, we work six hours down there, that is, the hod carriers and plasterers work—they have a six hour day.

Q. Whom were you working for?

A. For a plastering contractor.

Q. What is his name?

A. His name is Paul E. Keene.

Q. What kind of a job is he working on? Is it a government job or anything like that?

A. No.

Q. All right.

A. We did the racetrack. That is the Bay

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Meadows racetrack. We did, that is, the remodeling of it.

Q. All right. Now, so was this the Friday after Thanksgiving or the preceding Friday?

A. That was the Friday preceding the Monday that I came up here.

Q. All right. Now, and whom did you see on that day?

A. Well, as I say, I came home from work and my wife said that Mr. McGowan had called and "he wants you to come to the city tonight because you may take the stand tomorrow." [1254]

Q. And did you go to the City?

A. I did. He said, "There will be someone down to pick you up," and to be ready.

Q. And did someone pick you up?

A. They did.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Maxwell.

Q. And where did you go then?

A. What do you mean, where did I go? After——

Q. Where did he take you?

A. The same deal, same deal—went to the Appraisers Building.

Q. That was on Friday night?

A. That's right. Wait a minute now. That wasn't on Friday, that was on Thursday night. I said I came home on Thursday after working.

Q. No. I am pretty sure you said that was Friday.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, you can't put words in my mouth. After all,——

Q. Well, now,——

A. Just coasting along here.

Q. Well, which is it, Thursday or Friday?

A. Well,——

Q. I don't care which.

A. Maybe you don't, but I do. So I came home on Thursday.

Q. It was Thursday, not Friday?

A. That's right, because the reason I remember, because Friday [1255] is payday and I thought, "Well, I'll have to go to the city and I won't be able to get my check for Friday," you know.

Q. Uh-huh. So then you came up to the Appraisers Building on Thursday evening?

A. Thursday night.

Q. What time did you get here?

A. Well, I say, I got home from work around 4:00 and I took a shower and monkeyed around and so he came around 5:00, I guess—a little after 5:00 and drove up here to the Appraisers Building.

Q. And you—did you get here, then, around 5:30 or 6:00 o'clock some place?

A. Well, so long as it takes to drive from Menlo Park here. I imagine an hour and a half.

Q. And whom did you meet at the Appraisers Building Thursday night?

A. On Thursday night we met Mr. Kaiser and Mr. McGowan.

Q. No one else?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Oh, there was other people there, yes.

Q. That you met?

A. Well, no; I just met Mr. Kaiser and Mr. McGowan.

Q. Yes. Did you see any of the attorneys present?

A. No, I didn't see any of the attorneys.

Q. All right. Then did you have a conversation with those gentlemen on that night, Kaiser and McGowan? [1256]

A. Well, general conversation, yes.

Q. All right. And what time did you leave the Appraisers Building?

A. Well, on that night I think we went out to dinner.

Q. Where?

A. It was a restaurant near there. I have never been there before.

Q. Just you three?

A. No, I think there was some other person joined the party, but I don't remember who it was now. I can't recall him.

Q. A man or a woman? A. A man.

Q. What was his name?

A. I say, it is pretty vague. I didn't pay much attention.

Q. How long were you at dinner?

A. Oh, about an hour and a half, I guess.

Q. How did you address this man?

A. I don't think I addressed him.

Q. Were you introduced to him?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Yes, I think I knew him previously, but I didn't pay any attention to him.

Q. Where had you known him from previously?

A. From around the Appraisers Building.

Q. Was he an agent also?

A. Well, I wouldn't know if he was an agent or just what he was, [1257] what capacity he fulfills, but he was a person——

Q. What was the name of the restaurant that you four went to dinner at?

A. It was near—I think it was on Montgomery Street, right directly across from the old ILWU headquarters. I think it is a French restaurant—serve French Food, or supposed to be French food.

Q. On Montgomery Street?

A. Well, I am pretty sure that is Montgomery Street; yes.

Q. Between what other streets?

A. Gee, I didn't pay any particular attention.

Q. And then what time did you leave there, leave that restaurant?

A. Well, just long enough, when we ate.

Q. You say you stayed about an hour and a half?

A. Well, generally—how long it took us to eat dinner.

Q. All right. Then where did you go?

A. Well, I think we went back to the Appraisers Building and I picked up my suitcase and Mr. Kaiser and I drove over to the Marines Memorial.

Q. And you stayed there then at the Marine

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Memorial that night? A. That's right.

Q. In the same room that you have testified that you went to yesterday, is that right? [1258]

A. In the same room, but different beds.

Q. I see. And did you see anybody else that night then connected with the government, any agent or lawyer or anyone else of that kind?

A. No, I didn't, no.

Q. After you had finished dinner, you just went up to the room and shortly went to bed without leaving the place again, without leaving the hotel again?

A. Well, I think Mr. Kaiser showed me over, first time I had been there, he showed me the different rooms, the bar and the library and so on.

Q. Did you go up and have some drinks with Mr. Kaiser that night?

A. I think we had a bottle of beer, is all.

Q. Did you have drinks at dinner?

A. I think I had a bottle of beer, yes.

Q. All right. Now, when did you leave that hotel and did you go back down to Menlo Park the next day? A. Why, no, next day was Friday.

Q. All right. Then Friday you didn't testify?

A. That's right.

Q. But did you have any talk with anybody else on Friday?

A. Why, no, I didn't have a talk with anyone.

Q. What did you do Friday?

A. Why, I spent a very miserable day—as far as I was concerned. [1259] Friday morning I went down to the Appraisers Building and I read back over some of the old Voices of the Federation. They had a file there. and I read the Voices of the Federation.

Q. How long were you in the Appraisers Building on Friday on this occasion, the first time you went there?

A. That Friday I stayed there the biggest part of the day.

Q. A good part of the day, you say. What time did you get there in the morning?

A. Oh, around 9:00 o'clock. [1260]

Q. And then did you leave for lunch?

A. Yes, we went out and had a sandwich.

Q. Whom did you have lunch with?

A. Mr. Maxwell and I went out and had a sandwich together.

Q. Just you two? A. Just us two, yes.

Q. What room were you in on Friday in the Appraisers Building?

A. Gee, I don't think they are even numbered.

Q. What floor was it on?

A. The thirteenth floor.

Q. Who stayed in the room with you, if anybody, from nine o'clock until noon when you went out to eat? A. No one.

Q. You were given some material to read, were you? A. I wasn't given it. I asked for it.

Q. What was it that you asked for?

A. Old copies—they had a file of the Voice of the Federation. Since I was once on the editorial board, I wanted to see some of my previous writings.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. What years did you ask for?

A. I looked at all of them, from the very first to the very last.

Q. What years do they cover?

A. Well, from '35 to '41.

Q. Did you read anything else, any other magazines or [1261] documents at that time?

A. If you read all those Voice of Federation papers from 1935 to 1941, why, you got quite a job on your hands.

Q. After lunch you went back there again?

A. That is right.

Q. How long did you stay there then?

A. I think around two o'clock.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. They called up and said, "You had better come over to the Post Office," and so I was brought over here.

Q. Who brought you over? A. Maxwell.

Q. Drove you over?

A. No. Mr. Wooley drove, and Mr. Maxwell and I rode.

Q. When you got to the Post Office, where did you go? A. We went to Room 434.

Q. Whom did you meet there?

A. I wouldn't say "meet." I saw people here.

Q. Did you talk to anybody there?

A. Naturally you can't walk in a room and see people standing there and not talk to them.

Q. How long did you stay in Room 434?

A. I stayed there the rest of the afternoon, I guess.

Q. Until what time?

A. Until what time? I think we came down—about three o'clock [1262] we came down and went to Mr. Erskine's court and sat there for quite a while.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. Stayed in court.

Q. Then I say after you left this court what did you do?

A. Went back home. I didn't go home right away; I went back to Room 434.

Q. What time did you get back in Room 434 again?

A. I would say it was around—after four o'clock.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. Oh, about five o'clock.

Q. What were you doing then?

A. Sitting down.

Q. Were you reading anything?

A. I may have casually glanced—yes, I think I was reading a story in the Saturday Evening Post.

Q. Did you read anything connected with this case? A. In the Saturday Evening Post?

Q. In any document. A. No, no.

Q. Did you read anything connected with this case from two o'clock to three when you went down to Judge Erskine's court?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I don't think it is proper to read in a courtroom, is it?

Q. Did you have a talk with anybody? Were you talking with any of the attorneys in Room 434?

A. I may have spoken to them, yes.

Q. Did you talk to them about your testimony, what you were going to say or anything like that?

A. I can truthfully say I didn't say one word to them about my testimony.

Q. What attorney did you talk to on that occasion? A. I evidently talked to Mr. Paisley.

Q. Anyone else? A. Mr. Donohue.

Q. Anyone else? A. And Mr. Boyd.

Q. Anyone else?

A. I may have talked to other people in there, yes.

Q. Who?

A. Mr. Maxwell, I guess. We talked about football and things of that sort.

Q. Anyone else?

A. I don't think so, no. I remember Mr. Paisley said, "My God, that man can sure talk!" That is referring to Mr. Hallinan. I remember that very well, because I hadn't been in here and I didn't know anything about the courtroom.

Q. Then you say you went back home, did you?

A. Went back to Menlo Park.

Q. How did you get down there?

A. Mr. Wooley drove me home. [1264]

Q. What time did you get there?

A. Oh, it must have been about 6:30, I guess.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Then did he leave immediately?

A. Yes, he did; he left right away, yes.

Q. Was anybody in the car with him on the way down besides yourself? A. No, just he and I.

Q. When did you next see anyone connected with the prosecution or any agent of the Immigration Service?

A. As I say, next Sunday then—that was Friday —Saturday and Sunday I was home.

Q. You didn't see any of them on Saturday?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any telephone communication with any of them on Saturday?

A. On Saturday? I can't recall of any, no.

Q. Then Sunday you came up here again, is that right?

A. Yes. I think Jack McGowan called and said, "Someone will be there around four o'clock, if you want to come up." I said, "O.K."

Q. A week ago last Friday—we have now identified to a week ago last Friday your activities, and you came up the Thursday before. When prior to that had you last seen any of these gentlemen?

A. Well, I would say it had been thirty days. Prior to that—— [1265]

Q. That is about two weeks from tomorrow; two weeks ago tomorrow you were picked up and brought up here to San Francisco, and you have narrated your activities from that time. I want to get the time preceding.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. That is what I am trying to recall. It must have been a considerable time in days.

Q. How many days?

A. I would estimate it to be around thirty days.

Q. Do you know what date it was that you saw these gentlemen on that Thursday? That would be the 17th of November, the Thursday that you came up? A. That is right, yes.

Q. Was it the Thursday preceding Thanksgiving? A. That is correct.

Q. That was the 17th of November. Now, you last saw prior to that time—the time that you had last seen anyone connected with the prosecution was around October 17, is that right?

A. Roughly, yes. As I say, there is nothing that stands out in my mind, no particular event that makes it stand out. I can't say exactly.

Q. Taking that as the date, whom did you see on that occasion?

A. Mr. McGowan—let's see. There is an angle in there somewhere. It was about thirty days, I would say, I saw Mr. [1266] McGowan and Larry.

Q. Who?

A. The Larry I referred to before.

Q. That was the agent who lives in Half Moon Bay whose name you can't remember?

A. That is right.

Q. Where did you see them?

A. They were at the Appraisers Building.

Q. What day of the week was that, do you know?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. It was in the latter part of the week. It was a Friday or Saturday.

Q. How had you gotten to the Appraisers Building that day?

A. I think—on that occasion I think that Mr. Maxwell came down and picked me up.

Q. Aren't you sure?

A. As I say, these people—you can't remember every action that you take in your life, when there is no particular event that makes it stand out. I am pretty certain it was Mr. Maxwell who came down and picked me up, yes.

Q. What time did he pick you up?

A. It was after work one night.

Q. What time.

A. Well, I worked six hours a day, go home around 4:15, 4:30, so it must have been about 5 o'clock.

Q. He took you up to the Appraisers Building, is that right? [1267] A. That is right.

Q. What room did you go to?

A. The thirteenth floor.

Q. You still haven't noticed what offices those were or who occupied them, is that right?

A. Certainly, I noticed who occupied them. The Immigration Service occupied them.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. I stayed there quite late that night. It must have been midnight, I guess, before I got out.

Q. Whom did you talk to there?

A. I talked to Mr. McGowan.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Anyone else?

A. Well, Larry was there.

Q. Anyone else?

A. There may have been a few more fellows there, but I don't distinctly recall them.

Q. Any persons whom you were introduced to?

A. I say there may have been people there.

Q. How many people participated in any part of the conversation with you, McGowan and Larry?

A. I would say Schomaker, McGowan and Larry.

Q. Any other persons join in? A. No.

Q. How many people were you introduced to that night at [1268] that place?

A. I don't think I was introduced to anyone person that night.

Q. And you talked to McGowan and Larry from about—let us say six o'clock, the time you got up there, until twelve midnight?

A. I wouldn't say it was six..

Q. What time?

A. We got there maybe about 7:30.

Q. Had you had dinner with them?

A. That is right, I had dinner with them.

Q. Where?

A. I think it was some hamburger joint in that neighborhood.

Q. Anyone else present at dinner?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. After dinner you went to the Appraisers Building and you talked to them from about 7:30 to 12 p.m., is that right? A. That is right.

The Court: We will take the morning recess. Ladies and gentlemen, the same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions or form or express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [1269]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you testified just before the recess that approximately a month ago last Thursday, or around October the 17th, that you were at the Appraisers Building from about 7:30 to 12:00 p.m., and you talked there to McGowan and his Larry who had driven you up. Is Larry in the courtroom now? Have you seen him in the courtroom?

A. Well, I don't—sitting here I don't no.

Q. Well, have you seen him in and out of the court within the last few days?

A. Well, no; I don't believe I have.

Q. How about McGowan? Have you seen him in the court today?

A. Well, McGowan walked in the courtroom here at noon—I mean, at the recess he walked in and then he walked out again. I didn't——

Q. How about Kaiser?

A. Well, Kaiser is sitting in the courtroom. I can see him from where I am sitting here.

Q. Which is Mr. Kaiser?

A. He is the gentleman there right behind the rail there on the outside—in the first row, the gentleman with the glasses.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. First man in the first row?

A. That's right.

Q. On your right hand as you are facing him?

A. That is correct.

Q. How about Mr. Wooley? [1270]

A. Mr. Wooley?

Q. Have you seen him in the court?

A. Well, sitting here, from here I can't see him, no.

Q. How about Mr. Phillips?

A. Mr. Phillips?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I have only seen him once in my life, and that was quite a while ago.

Q. How about the other man who was with him? Have you seen him in the court?

A. Well, to be frank with you, I don't think I would even recognize him if I saw him again.

Q. All right. Now, when you were at the Appraisers Building, then, about October 17, and you talked to McGowan and Larry, did they both—were they both talking to you during all that period?

A. No. Well, yes, I guess you would say they were.

Q. Anybody else join in the conversation?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. All right. And you were talking about your testimony on this case, were you?

A. Well, they were taking a statement.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. They were taking a statement?

A. That's right.

Q. And did they take a statement? [1271]

A. They did.

Q. In what form, an oral statement or a written statement?

A. I don't know how you can take an oral statement. I mean, I give it orally; is that what you mean?

Q. You didn't write it out?

A. No, no, didn't write it out.

Q. A stenographer took down what you were saying, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And how long did it take to take that statement?

A. Well, that evening, that particular statement?

Q. Yes, that evening. Did it consume almost the entire four and a half or five hours that you were there, taking your statement?

A. Oh, no, no.

Q. How long?

A. Well, you mean—we have a stop-watch and now "I am going to give a statement," and boom. Is that what you mean?

Q. No. You just tell us approximately how long it took to take that statement from you.

A. Well, I was in the building from 7:30 to—I wouldn't say it was midnight, maybe it was—well, closer to 11:00 than 12:00.

Q. Well, let's say four hours instead of five.

A. Four hours. [1272]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. What part of the four hours was consumed in taking the statement from you?

A. Oh, I would roughly estimate three hours.

Q. All right.

A. Two and a half hours.

Q. Then was the statement reduced to writing that you saw? A. That's right, it was.

Q. That same evening?

A. No, not that same evening, no.

Q. Well, when did you next see the statement?

A. The next time I saw that statement, there was another trip in there. I can't recall exactly how that came about but there was another trip where I saw the statement, yes.

Q. All right. How long was that after this trip of October 17th?

A. Well, I would say it was—oh, a day or so, I think, or three days later.

Q. What was the——

A. It was the same deal.

Q. Three days later, you say?

A. Well, somewhere around there. It happened—it was a series of days, and it wasn't far apart when the statement was taken, and I reread it and signed it and that was it.

Q. Well, now, you think it was on Friday or Saturday that you were brought up by Larry and McGowan and to the Appraisers [1273] Building?

A. That's right.

Q. And you think that Mr. Maxwell picked you up. You went about 5:00 p.m. to the 13th floor, then you went out to some hamburger place and had something to eat and then you got back there around 7:30, and you left some place between 11:00 and midnight? A. That's right.

Q. Now, how did you get back home that day?

A. I was driven home by Larry. Since he lives in Half Moon Bay, he made it all in one trip.

Q. All right. And during that interval, a statement was taken from you that consumed about three hours to take, and that statement was afterwards reduced to writing, but not on that occasion. You came back afterwards and saw the statement written out, is that right?

A. And I read it and initialed it and made corrections and so on.

Q. All right, wait a minute. And you think that you returned about three days afterwards on the occasion that you read the statement, is that right?

A. That is about correct.

Q. Now, how did you happen to come up three days afterwards?

A. Well, McGowan called and said, "We have your statement in writing. Would you care to read it?", and I said, "Yes." [1274]

Q. Did McGowan phone you?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Or did he call? Which did he do?

A. Well, he called up on the telephone.

Q. At your home in Menlo?

A. That's right.

Q. And when?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Oh, I think he called—called while I was at work, and my wife relayed the message to me, said McGowan had called, "and he wants you to sign the statement that you had made."

Q. Then what did you do? Did you come to San Francisco? A. That's right.

Q. How did you get up here?

A. The same deal, where a car came down and picked me up and brought me to the Appraisers Building. And I read the statement, signed it and went back home.

Q. Well, wait a moment. We are a little ahead of ourselves now. A car called. Who was driving the car on that occasion?

A. Well, Mr. Maxwell was driving it.

Q. And what time did he pick you up?

A. Oh, at about the same time, around 5:30.

Q. Around 5:30. Did you have dinner with him?

A. No. Wait a moment. I don't think it was Maxwell in that case. I think it was Larry, came down. He came down in a car.

Q. Larry. All right. [1275] A. Yes.

Q. And then did you have dinner with him?

A. Well, we didn't have dinner, we had a hamburger over here by the SP depot.

Q. All right. And then where did you go, up to the Appraisers Building again?

A. That's right.

Q. What day of the week was this?

A. Well, it was the early part of the week, Tuesday or Wednesday I would say.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Tuesday or Wednesday. Well, then, as you were up here on the preceding occasion on Friday or Saturday, it was not three days but four or five days afterwards, would you say that?

A. Well, I would say it was an interval of time, and the best of my recollection, that is what it was.

Q. All right.

A. I can't be precise on these things.

Q. All right. Because three days would take it to either Sunday or Monday, and five days would take it to a Wednesday; but you are not sure which it was? A. No, you can figure it out there.

Q. All right. Now, what time did you get to the Appraisers Building that evening?

A. Well, we stopped and had this hamburger, as I said; it was around 7:30 or 8:00 o'clock. [1276]

Q. And what time did you leave there?

A. Leave the Appraisers Building?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it didn't take long to read that statement and to sign it, and I went back home.

Q. I asked you what time did you leave the Appraisers Building?

A. Oh, around 9:00 o'clock, I imagine—9:30.

Q. All right. Now, on that occasion whom did you talk to? A. Well, McGowan and Larry.

Q. And the statement then had been typed out already, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And you read it? A. I did.

Q. How many pages was it?

A. It was quite long.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. How many?

A. Well, I would say—it was quite a lengthy statement.

Q. How many pages was it?

A. How many pages? Now let me see. It was quite long; it must have been close to 100 pages, I would say.

Q. How long did it take you to read it?

A. Well, it took me quite a while. Well, I mean,—quite a while—like reading a story. If I got there at 7:00 and then [1277] 8:30,——

Q. How long did it take you to read it?

A. Oh, I would say an hour.

Q. Did you sign it? A. I did, yes.

Q. Did you sign it on each page?

A. No, I don't think I signed each page. I made corrections and I initialed those corrections. Now, I don't—whether I signed on each page, I don't think so. I know I signed the last page and a few of the first pages.

Q. A few? How many of the first pages?

A. Oh, four or five, I would say.

Q. How did you happen to sign the first four or five pages? Did somebody ask you to do so?

A. Yes, McGowan said, "Sign each page." And after I signed five of them and saw the length of them, I said, "Well, that is just a little too long. I will just sign the last one."

Q. Didn't he insist that you sign each page?

A. No, he didn't. It wasn't——

Q. He asked you to sign each page, but after you had signed four or five, you refused to continue, is that right?

A. No, I didn't refuse it. I just thought to myself, he gave me the statement and sat down in this office and I began to read it and I saw the length of it and I began to sign. And I signed about five pages and I says, "What the——;" I couldn't see the point to signing each page, so I didn't do it. So I gave the statement back to him and he didn't say nothing, he took it and that was it.

Q. You say you made some corrections on it?

A. Well, you know—made some corrections, yes.

Q. How many? A. Oh, a couple is all.

Q. Were they just clerical errors or were they errors of fact?

A. No, they were not factual errors; it was just clerical errors.

Q. And you initialed those? A. I did, yes.

Q. And that statement was about 100 pages long, is that right?

A. Well, I wouldn't say a hundred exactly. It may have been a few pages less or it may have been a few pages more.

Q. And then when you left, how did you get home again?

A. Well, Larry—since he lives in Half Moon Bay drove me home. [1279]

Q. Then we have a meeting at the Appraisers Building about October 17 of this year; then another one three to five days afterwards. Now, when had you had any meeting prior to October 17?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. On October 16.

Q. Where? A. In the same building.

Q. How did you happen to go there on that occasion? A. By previous appointment.

Q. Who made the appointment?

A. Jack McGowan.

Q. By telephone or directly to you?

A. No, by word of mouth.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. In the Appraisers Building.

Q. On October 16 you had a meeting——

A. I won't say that is the exact date.

Q. No, but the day before the one you gave the statement on.

A. Yes, before I gave the statement.

Q. Who was present at that meeting?

A. McGowan and Larry.

Q. No one else? A. And the stenographer.

Q. What time was that meeting held?

A. Approximately the same time. [1280]

Q. In the evening also? A. Yes.

Q. How long did it last?

A. Well, from around 8 o'clock to between 11 and 12.

Q. Was a statement taken then?

A. A partial statement, yes.

Q. Did you see that reduced to writing?

A. That is correct.

Q. The stenographer took that down also?

A. That is correct.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. The following night she took down a different statement, a new statement, is that right?

A. It is what you call a supplement of the previous statement, an addition or whatever you want to call it.

Q. In other words, you gave a statement on October 16. Was that reduced to writing? Did you see that reduced to writing? A. Yes, I did.

Q. How many pages was that?

A. The 100 pages comprise the total statement.

Q. In other words, the statement that was reduced to writing and comprised 100 pages included part of the statement you had given one day and part of the statement you had given the next day?

A. That is correct.

Q. It was not all given at one session? [1281]

A. That is correct, absolutely correct.

Q. So on October 16, then, using that date as a basis, you gave a statement that lasted about as long as the one you gave the following evening?

A. That is correct.

Q. The two of them were combined in the one written statement about 100 pages in length and you signed it? A. That is absolutely correct.

Q. You had gotten directions from Jack McGowan to be at the Appraisers Building on the October 16 date; he would bring you up or you were to be brought there?

A. He said, "I will give you a ring tomorrow night, and if you wish to come in, we'll come down, get a car there and you can come up."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Did they do that? A. Yes, they did.

Q. Who drove the car that brought you up?

A. I think Mr. Maxwell.

Q. Anybody with him?

A. I don't believe there was, no.

Q. You say that you had gotten a notification from Mr. McGowan that you were to be picked up on the 16th from McGowan personally at the Appraisers Building, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. When were you at the Appraisers Building prior to October [1282] 16, taking the 16th just arbitrarily? A. The night before.

Q. Let us call that October 15. How long were you at the Appraisers Building October 15?

A. Approximately the same length of time.

Q. That would be from about 8 to 12, or 7:30 to 12? A. I wouldn't say 12.

Q. 11:30. A. Yes, between 11 and 12.

Q. Who was there on that day?

A. Well, the stenographer and Mr. McGowan and Larry.

Q. Had you gotten there by the same route that somebody drove you up? A. That is correct.

Q. Who drove you up?

A. Maxwell, I imagine, drove me up. As close as I can recall, it was Maxwell.

Q. What time did Mr. Maxwell pick you up?

A. Around 5 o'clock, 5:15.

Q. Did you have dinner again with him?

A. We stopped and had dinner, yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Where?

A. I think it was a restaurant over close to the Appraisers Building.

Q. How many of you went to dinner there?

A. I think it was Larry, I, and McGowan that went to dinner that particular night.

Q. But not Maxwell? A. No, he didn't go.

Q. Then on that occasion what were you doing in the Appraisers Building from 8 to 11:30?

A. I was giving a statement.

Q. Did the statement take about the same length of time that the succeeding two did?

A. We sat there and talked, took time out for coffee—you know, didn't sit down from 8 o'clock, or whatever time it was, 8:30 until 11 and give the statement.

Q. Was the stenographer taking down that statement also?

A. She took down what statement was to be taken; she took it, yes.

Q. Was that conversation included in the 100 pages that you referred to?

A. That is correct.

Q. Prior to that time when had you met anybody connected with the prosecution?

A. Prior to that? Well, as close as I can recall, I think McGowan may have come down previous to that, yes, maybe two weeks previous to that.

Q. You have told us how you happened to get to the Appraisers Building on the 17th; that is, you were told by Mr. McGowan [1284] someone would pick you up, and you told us how you happened to get there on the 16th, that McGowan had told you on the previous evening someone would pick you up. How did you happen to go there on the 15th of October? A. He called up, telephoned.

Q. Did he talk to you personally?

A. On that occasion he did, yes.

Q. Where did he talk to you?

A. He was on the telephone, wherever he was. I don't know where he was.

Q. Where were you? A. I was home.

Q. What did he say to you then?

A. He said, "Hello."

And I said, "Hello."

He said, "How is the family?"

I said, "Fine. How is your family?"

Q. What did he say about coming up to the Appraisers Building?

A. He said, "How about picking you up tomorrow night and coming up to the Appraisers Building?"

Q. And did he pick you up?

A. You mean that night?

Q. The following night.

A. He didn't, no, but I was picked up by a driver, yes. [1285]

Q. What was the driver's name?

A. I am pretty sure it was Maxwell.

Q. Do you remember what time he picked you up?

A. As I say, it was after work, around 5 o'clock.

Q. Did you have dinner again that night?

Q. Yes, we had dinner.

Q. Who?

A. Myself, McGowan and this Larry.

Q. Where did you eat dinner that night?

A. In a restaurant, I think it was on Broadway—the New Broadway, I think it was—not the New Broadway; New Joes', I think it was.

Q. Taking, as I say, this night of October 15 arbitrarily as being the first of the three nights upon which you gave this statement, and then McGowan having phoned you the day before that he would pick you up, he would send somebody to pick you up, when prior to that had you last seen anyone connected with this investigation or the prosecution?

A. I think it was on a Sunday that McGowan happened to drive up and he stopped in.

Q. How long prior to this date that we have selected of October 15?

A. That was, I imagine, two or three weeks prior.

Q. Can you come closer than that, whether it was two or three weeks? [1286]

A. It is the best of my recollection, it was somewhere along in there. I wouldn't want to pin it down.

Q. It was a Sunday, and would you say it was about October 1?

A. Well, I would say it was two or three weeks prior to my coming in to take the statement.

Q. About two or three weeks prior to your coming up to take the statement?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. That is right.

Q. Let's say it would be about Sunday, October 1. You say McGowan called. Who was McGowan? We have used his name without identifying him. What is he? A. His name is John McGowan.

Q. Where does he live? Do you know that?

A. He lives in San Francisco some place; I don't know.

Q. Do you know what his occupation is?

A. Well, he is with the Immigration Service.

Q. Mr. McGowan came to your home then—selecting an arbitrary day again, October 1—about what time of day?

A. It was in the afternoon.

Q. About what time?

A. Oh, I would say around three o'clock.

Q. Was he alone or accompanied by anybody else? A. I think he was alone.

Q. How long did he stay?

A. Oh, he didn't stay long. He said he was down there on [1287] other business and he thought he would drop in and say hello.

Q. How long did he stay?

A. Oh, I would say 45 minutes.

Q. How long? A. I would say 45 minutes.

Q. At that time did you discuss anything that you knew about this matter or your possible testimony in a proceeding of this kind?

A. I don't think we did, no. He was looking for a place to live, that is, he though he might want to move down the Peninsula, and since I got around quite a bit in the building trades, I was giving him an idea of what homes were costing in that area, and we discussed mainly housing.

Q. So then taking Sunday, October 1, as the day that he called in, you have told us that you then went up and saw these people in the Appraisers Building on the 15th of October, then on the 16th of October, then on the 17th of October, and thereafter certain dates that lead up to the present time. When last prior to October 1, using that date as the date on which McGowan called at your home, had you seen anybody connected with this case or the prosecution?

A. Well, as I say, generally—not generally, but occasionally when McGowan would be down the Peninsula on other business he would drop in.

Q. Can you tell me when prior to this October 1 date had you [1288] last seen anyone connected with this case?

A. That is pretty tough, because, as I say, it didn't impress me where it would indent itself in my memory, because there was no reason for it. It is like a friend dropping in and saying hello, and that is all there was to it.

Q. Can you tell us when it was that he dropped in prior to October 1?

A. I couldn't—I would rather—I can give a blanket—say in the last six months he dropped in four or five times, I would say.

Q. Your testimony before the Grand Jury was in May, wasn't it?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Yes, that was in May, I suppose.

Q. Shortly before your testimony before the Grand Jury you had made out a statement; you had signed a statement, hadn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. Taking, let us say, May 15 arbitrarily—that would be about four and a half months from your appearance before the Grand Jury in May—let us say five months—to this date of October 1, within that length of time how many times would you say you met McGowan?

A. Oh, I would say to the best of my recollection it was six or seven times.

Q. And on each such occasion did he call at your home? A. Yes, he did, yes. [1289]

Q. And during the same period what other agents, if any, or persons connected with the Immigration Department or the Government did you meet? A. Mr. Barber came several times.

Q. What is Mr. Barber's first name?

A. Bruce—Bruce Barber.

Q. What is his occupation, do you know?

A. Well, I think it is connected with the Adjudications Department of the Immigration Service, if I get it correctly. Adjudications, is it? Whatever that is. It is some legal term, anyway.

Q. I have noticed, I think, some of your editorials that I will produce later, and you can use quite elegant English, can't you?

A. I can write better than I can speak.

Q. Did anybody tell you it would be more impressive to go down to a workman's south-of-market act?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. After all, a hod carrier is not a guy who has a great capacity for words. I don't think he is a brilliant legal genius. He couldn't be.

Q. This morning in describing a word you said it was "phonetic." That was a slip of the tongue?

A. No, that is one word I can pronounce. I like to use it. "Phoentic" sounds good.

Q. You were the editor of this Voice of the Federation? [1290]

A. Editor? No, sir, I was not.

Q. What were you?

A. I was on the editorial board in the Voice.

Q. You wrote a good many editorials, didn't you?

A. I don't know about editorials. I wrote a lot of stuff for the Voice which I thought was pretty good.

Q. The stuff that you were reading down in the Appraisers Building that night?

A. That is right, and I got a lot of laughs out of that, too.

Q. We will see if we can't get a few, too. Mr. Barber—you say that he dropped in to see you, too. Let us take that period from the time you finished testifying before the Grand Jury up to this October 1. How many times did Mr. Barber drop in to see you?

A. Well, I don't think it was over four. That is approximately—four or five times, I would say.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. On any occasion when he came was he accompanied by any other person?

A. The only person he came there with was McGowan. Now, whether or not he came when Mr. Boyd came down, I can't recall. But generally the times I remember he was always with Jack McGowan.

Q. Now, on the occasion Mr. McGowan came in there, the six times, was he accompanied by anybody else?

A. Well, no. I say including the six times, whatever that [1291] approximate figure was the times that he and Barber came.

Q. In other words, the four times that Mr. Barber came, or not over four times, he accompanied McGowan? A. That is correct, yes.

Q. He never came alone? A. Mr. Barber?

Q. Yes, during that period.

A. I don't recall of him ever being there alone.

Q. Is McGowan a married man, so far as you know? A. As far as I know, he is, yes.

Q. Did you meet his wife? A. I have, yes.

Q. When?

A. Well, I think that they were out house hunting and they dropped in one day.

Q. Did she stay for the 45 minutes, too, that he stayed?

A. Oh, no, they only stayed a few minutes on that particular day. They were looking at a house in the neighborhood there.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And you said that he stayed about 45 minutes. Do you change that now?

A. That was a different occasion.

Q. You say that Mr. Barber was there. Can you tell us a little more accurately the approximate dates that he was there during that period?

A. We moved where we live now in September or August of 1948, [1292] and Mr. Barber came—visited since we have lived in the place where we are living now. So just what the dates were——

Q. In August of 1948?

A. This is 1949, a year previous, yes. We were living there since August, 1948.

Q. We are talking now about a period from May 15, taking that as being the date. You say you testified before the Grand Jury, up to October 1, 1949. You said that in that period Mr. Barber called on you about four times?

A. My impression was he was not talking—the impression that I have, at least, that you were discussing all the times that McGowan or Mr. Barber had seen me where I am living. I didn't get the impression that you were asking from May until October. If that was the case, that would have been ten visits and, my God, that would have been almost every night, and there were lapses of maybe thirty days before I saw anyone, McGowan, Barber, or anybody else, that is, from the Immigration Department. [1293]

Q. Well, we will start again then, taking May 15 this year. A. That was the grand jury.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Do you know when it was?

A. That was the grand jury.

Q. Well, do you remember when you testified before the grand jury?

A. Remember I testified before the grand jury, yes.

Q. When? A. Well, the year of 1949.

Q. What month?

A. The closest I can recall, it was in May.

Q. What part of May?

A. Well, I would say the middle of May.

Q. All right. Well, then, from that time up to October 1st, how many times did Mr. McGowan call at your home?

A. Oh, it wouldn't have been over two or three times.

Q. In that same period—Now, when was the time, last prior to Sunday, October 1st, that he called at your home?

A. Well, as I say—now I can't give you any specific date, but between the grand jury, when I got the subpoena to appear before the grand jury, and the taking of this statement, well, I couldn't give any specific date when he did call. There was times when he did call, that's all.

Q. And was it in that period that he appeared there with his wife on two occasions. [1294]

A. No, it was prior to that.

Q. Prior to that? A. Yes.

Q. Since——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. On two occasions—? I said he appeared there once with his wife.

Q. Oh, I thought you said once he appeared and stayed for about ten minutes and then that he stayed for about 45 minutes.

A. That's right; he was alone.

Q. I see. On the 45-minute occasion?

A. His wife was there once, if I can recall it correctly.

Q. All right. Now, from the period May the 15th to October 1st, how many times did Mr. Barber call?

A. I am trying to think. I don't believe he called at all in that particular period.

Q. Not, since you testified before the grand jury? A. That's right.

Q. All right. Well, now, who, if anybody, else connected with the government or the Immigration Department or interested in this matter called upon you in that period?

A. Well, just prior to the grand jury?

Q. No, after the grand jury.

A. Oh, after the grand jury. Well, I don't—the only person I can recall after the grand jury hearing was Mr. McGowan.

Q. All right. Now, prior to the grand jury hearing, however, [1295] some other person had called, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And taking the date of May 15th as the day you came up and testified here, when, last prior to that, had somebody connected with the United States government called upon you?

A. Well, my appearance before the grand jury, I am pretty sure was on a Wednesday. No, on a Tuesday, I think. And the previous Sunday Mr. Boyd came down with Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Now, you told us already, but just because it has slipped my mind, when was it? How long before or prior to your testimony before the grand jury did you give the statement that you signed?

A. Well, that was the——

Q. Another statement that you signed?

A. That was the first statement, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. That was the night before I appeared before the grand jury.

Q. So if you testified before the grand jury on May 15th, you gave and signed a statement on May 14th, is that right? A. That's right, yes.

The Court: We will take the noon adjournment. Ladies and gentlemen, we will resume at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [1296]

Wednesday, November 30, 1949
2:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. During the noon recess did you have any talk with anyone connected with the prosecution about the testimony you had given on the stand?

A. I did, yes.

Q. With whom?

A. Well, with Mr. Jack McGowan and Mr. Kaiser and Mr. Maxwell.

Q. Where did the conversation take place?

A. Well, principally in the restaurant where we were having lunch.

Q. You had lunch with those three gentlemen?

A. I did, yes.

Q. Anybody else present?

A. Well, what do you mean, present?

Q. You know what I mean. Did anyone else accompany you to lunch besides those three men?

A. No, I mentioned the people who were with me.

Q. Yes. And what restaurant did you go to?

A. It was the restaurant on Sixth Street.

Q. Do you know the name of it? [1297]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. No, it was one of those greasy spoons down there. I guess that is what you would call it.

Q. And how long were you with those gentlemen? A. Well, oh, I imagine an hour.

Q. And during that time you discussed the testimony that you had given on the witness stand, is that right? A. I did, yes.

Q. Was anything said about the incident of the alleged meeting at Shaw's house?

A. No, there wasn't.

Q. Was there anything that they suggested to you that you should in the interests of helping procure a conviction, change?

A. No, sir; concerning the testimony that was given this morning.

Q. All right. Now, did they make some corrections in the testimony you have given this morning?

A. Well, I couldn't call it a correction.

Q. They just pointed out to you where you have been in error, is that correct?

A. No, that wasn't it at all.

Q. All right. Well, now, you were back to——

The Court: You are entitled to answer what, if anything, you did discuss, in view of the inference or implication that might be contained therein.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, Your Honor, of course, I just said [1298] they didn't.

The Court: I know, but there is an implication. He is entitled to make an explanation.

The Witness: Well, what Mr. Kaiser said, he said, "Not only do I think Mr. MacInnis is a smarter lawyer"——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: I object to this as being hearsay, Your Honor.

The Court: Motion denied; objection overruled.

The Witness: Well, I am telling you what the man said concerning the testimony. He says, "Not only do I think Mr. MacInnis is a smarter attorney," he says, "I think he is better looking."

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Have you any more little comic things?

A. That is exactly what was stated, and I am telling the truth.

Q. Now, you said in your last testimony that from May 15th until October 1st, approximately, Mr. McGowan had called at your home not over three times, that Mr. Barber had not called during that period. Did anybody else connected with the government call during that period?

A. Well, there was a fellow came down there one Saturday night, and he said he represented the Bridges, Schmidt, Robertson defense, and he was from Mr. Hallinan's office.

Q. Well, now, that isn't anyone connected with the government. We are coming to that in about an hour or two. So just hold your horses, if you will. Now what about government agents [1299] or persons connected with the government? Anybody else besides Mr. McGowan that came down and interviewed you between your testimony before the grand jury and October 1st?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. The only person—well, the closest I can recall, the only person, if they came down, it was McGowan, in that period from May, the grand jury —when I was subpoenaed before the grand jury and until I gave the statement, the only person that I can recall now that came down there from the government was Jack McGowan. [1300]

Q. Now, prior to May 15, prior to your appearance and testifying before the Grand Jury, who had last called upon you representing the Government?

A. As I say, it is all pretty vague. Well, I would say it was Mr. McGowan accompanied by Mr. Barber.

Q. Mr. McGowan accompanied by whom?

A. Mr. Barber, or Mr. Barber accompanied by Mr. McGowan, either way.

Q. When did they appear next preceding coming to San Francisco to make the statement which preceded your testimony before the grand jury? How long before that?

A. You mean the visit they made, and what visit they had made before that?

Q. The last visit they made before you came to San Francisco and gave that statement.

A. They did not. At the time I appeared before the Grand Jury, and the statement in October, I said the only person that I can recall, if there was in that period, was McGowan.

Q. That is not what I asked you. I asked you preceding, before your testimony before the Grand Jury.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I just answered it was McGowan and Barber.

Q. Yes, and I asked you when they came to your place prior to your appearing before the Grand Jury.

A. You mean the length of time between their appearance and my appearance before the Grand Jury? [1301]

Q. That is right.

A. The last—the Sunday prior to the Tuesday on which I appeared before the Grand Jury Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser came down.

Q. You said that Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber were the ones who came next preceding your appearance before the Grand Jury?

A. Yes, before; before.

Q. Now, did they come before Mr. Boyd or afterwards?

A. By "before" do you mean weeks before the Grand Jury hearing?

Q. Listen. You came up here and testified before the Grand Jury approximately on the 15th of May. We agreed we would take that date more or less arbitrarily, and you said the date before that you had given a 22-page statement which you had signed. A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. In the office of the Department here. Now, before you gave that statement you say Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber were the last persons representing the Government who had called on your house, is that correct?

A. That is not correct.

Q. Who were the last ones?

A. The last ones who called before I appeared before the Grand Jury was Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser, and they appeared the Sunday prior to the Tuesday.

Q. Did they come to your house by appointment or otherwise?

A. No, they just came down, that is all. [1302]

Q. You had no appointment with them?

A. No, I had not, no. ✓

Q. What time of day did they arrive?

A. They came down—it was early afternoon, I imagine around two o'clock.

Q. How long did they stay?

A. They didn't stay—I would say about an hour.

Q. Was anybody else present during your conversation with them?

A. Yes, I think my wife was present.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Well, no, just they and us.

Q. Now, they stayed about an hour. That was the Sunday preceding your appearance before the Grand Jury? A. That is right.

Q. When next preceding that did you talk to anybody connected with the case?

A. That was the Barber-McGowan visit then.

Q. When?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I can't put the exact date. As I say, we moved there in September——

Q. Approximately how long before the visit of Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser?

A. I would say—let's see—the approximate date, I would say at least thirty days. [1303]

Q. About thirty days before that. Were they alone or accompanied by anyone else?

A. They were together. Barber and McGowan were together.

Q. How long did they stay there?

A. They stayed about three hours, I believe.

Q. Was anybody else present during their visit in your house? A. My wife was present, yes.

Q. What time did they arrive there?

A. Oh, it was after supper. It was around, oh, I would say seven o'clock.

Q. That would take it back, then, to around April 10, let's say. Do you think it would be around that time?

A. I wouldn't want to make a specific date, because I couldn't swear to that.

Q. You say on Sunday prior to your appearance before the Grand Jury, which we assume to be May 10, Messrs. Boyd and Kaiser appeared, and about six days prior to that Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber came, so that would bring it to approximately April 10? A. Yes.

Q. When next prior to that had anyone called upon you?

A. You are going a little bit—I say, we moved

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

there in September, and in that length of time they came six or seven times. I wouldn't know whether it was a week apart, two weeks apart, or a month. [1304]

Q. What was the address to which you moved in September?

A. 698 Menlo Oaks Drive, Menlo Park.

Q. 698 What? A. Menlo Oaks.

Q. You moved there when?

A. It wasn't September—rather in August.

Q. What part of August, do you know?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I understand, of course, the scope of cross-examination is largely within ~~the discretion~~ of the Court. For that reason I have sought not to intrude, but I seriously question if there is any real purpose to this cross-examination.

The Court: What is the basis of your objection?

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, I say that it bears no materiality to any issue that is before this Court. If Mr. Hallinan would state to his Honor he had some objective, I would withdraw my objection. It seems to me we are wasting time.

Mr. Hallinan: I have an objective.

The Court: You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): What part of August?

A. I would say it was—as close as I recall, it was the first part of August.

Q. 1948? A. That is correct.

Q. From that time up until your testimony before the Grand [1305] Jury, you say you had about a half dozen visits from different officials of the Government, is that right?

A. More or less, yes.

Q. Will you give us the names of all the persons who appeared at your home from the time you moved in August, 1948, until your appearance before the Grand Jury?

A. You mean all the people——

Q. Agents or officials of the Government who appeared at your home.

A. I think you meant anyone who ever visited us. You mean the Government people who came down there? That is what you mean's isn't it?

Q. At least that is what I asked.

A. Heh-heh-heh. There was Mr. Jack McGowan and Mr. Bruce Barber, Mr. John Boyd——

Mr. Paisley: Shouldn't he be required, your Honor, to ask if there were others? What is the use of sitting here and going over the same list? He has mentioned them a half dozen times.

Mr. Hallinan: One thing, it helps test his memory. It gives a list of persons. If he repeats, there aren't so many that it will harm to repeat them again.

The Witness: And Mr. Donohue, I think.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): What is Mr. Donohue's first name?

A. Gee, I really don't know. [1306]

Q. Do you mean the attorney in court here now, or do you mean some official connected with the Immigration Department?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. He is the attorney who is sitting behind you, if my eyes don't deceive me.

Q. That is Mr. F. Joseph Donohue. You do not know his first name?

A. Mr. Donohue is all.

Q. You did not know his name was F. Joseph?

A. I did not, no, sir.

Q. You did not observe that in the newspapers or anything of that kind?

A. There was no particular reason why I should.

Q. You didn't know it. Who else?

A. Mr. Barber, Mr. McGowan, Mr. Donohue, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Who else?

A. I think to the best of my recollection, that is the sum of it.

Q. You have named already Mr. Maxwell, haven't you?

A. He came, but he stayed generally outside. He didn't come in the house.

Q. I don't care whether he stayed. I want to know what Government agents appeared. Mr. Maxwell?

A. If you want to consider Mr. Maxwell, yes, and Mr. Wooley and Larry—I can't recall his last name—but I don't think they ever even entered the house. [1307]

Q. When did Mr. Donohue appear?

A. I believe it was one Sunday afternoon he happened to be driving by and he dropped in to say hello, and that was it. He said hello and departed as gracefully as he came.

Q. Is your house very contiguous to the ordinary traffic routes down around that section?

A. You have to explain what "contiguous" is. That beats me.

Q. Is it right close to some main traveled highway?

A. It is, I would say, a quarter of a mile from the Bayshore.

Q. A quarter of a mile from the Bayshore?

A. Approximately now.

Q. In which direction?

A. Well, from the Bayshore it would be towards the foothills.

Q. And Mr. Donohue, like some of these other gentlemen, just happened to be passing by and dropped by to see you?

A. He dropped in. He said, "I happened to be driving by, had dinner down here and dropped by to say hello." He said hello and departed.

Q. Was anybody with him?

A. I think his wife was in the car. She didn't get out.

Q. When was this?

A. I think just before the trial. I mean about a week previous to the trial, just before the trial begun anyway, maybe four or five days before the trial begun. [1308]

Q. Why didn't you tell us about that before?

A. Well, it was so unimportant, I believe it was so unimportant. He dropped in and said hello. He wasn't there over three or four minutes and he left.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Are we to gather that you have omitted other people you considered unimportant?

A. I don't think I have, no.

Q. You decided it would be unimportant for the jury to know that Mr. Donohue had been down there and you omitted him?

(Mr. Donohue arose.)

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): So about a week before the trial Mr. Donohue dropped in. Do you mean a week before you appeared or a week before the date the trial was first set for?

A. I say now approximately a week before the trial began, before the opening date of the trial.

Q. The trial began on the 14th of November and that would be about the 6th of November, the Sunday preceding the week before the trial?

A. It was a holiday. It may have been Armistice Day.

Q: What date was that?

A. The 11th day of November was Armistice Day.

Q. Which date was it?

A. I didn't set a specific date, because when a person drops in, you don't run to a calendar and check it down. This guy [1309] came about 2 o'clock and left at 2:15.

Q. Mr. Donohue dropped in. It may have been

Armistice Day or it may have been a day five or six days before that?

A. No, it wouldn't be that far. Around that period of time, the 10th or 11th, in that particular week, I would say. I don't know the exact date, no.

Q. What time of day was it?

A. It was late afternoon—I would say 4 or 4:30.

Q. Were you home at the time?

A. How could I see the guy if I wasn't home? Will you tell me that?

Q. Had you been working that day?

A. It was a holiday. I was home. I hadn't worked that day.

Q. Are you sure it was not Saturday?

A. It could have been Saturday or it could have been Armistice Day.

Q. Or it could have been Sunday, November 6?

A. I don't know if it was Sunday, November 6, or not. [1310]

Q. Could it have been as far back as October the 30th? A. Why, certainly.

Q. What is that?

A. Why—how could it be—it was the week previous to the trial, so how could it be any other date than that particular week?

Q. Well, the 11th isn't a week previous to the trial, but only three days previous.

A. I said the week previous.

Q. It was in the week previous to the trial?

A. That's correct.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. But you can't tell us what day it was, except that you know that it was a holiday?

A. And I was home, yes.

Q. Now, could it have been the 13th? That would be the day before the trial.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, shouldn't counsel be required to state to the Court what his purpose is in this lengthy cross-examination about obviously immaterial matters?

Mr. Hallinan: I think the Court sees the purpose, and it is always held in cross-examination counsel not be required to state a purpose.

Mr. Paisley: Well, he could come to the bench and state it. Your Honor, the jury's time is worth something in this case.

Mr. Hallinan: I think His Honor sees it just about as well as anyone does. [1311]

The Court: Well, whatever I may see can not be ascribed to me by you, Mr. Hallinan, alone. I may describe whatever I may see personally and individually.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't see any reason why I should go up to the bench and whisper.

The Court: There is no reason at all. If you state you have legitimate purpose, to me, you may continue.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now I take it he came in an automobile?

A. It was a black automobile.

Q. And where did he park it, as far as you were able to observe?

A. Parked it in front of the house.

Q. Did he come into your house?

A. I think I was taking a shower when he came in.

Q. I say, did he come into your house?

A. I was taking a shower, and I heard my wife speaking to someone in the kitchen and she said, "John, come out here." I said, "Let's take it easy; I am taking a shower. I will be out there as soon as I get ready." And I continued to take the shower, and she shouted again, "Come out here, someone to see you." I said, "Just take it easy, I will get out there when I finish." So after I had finished, I walked out and there Mr. Donohue was sitting in the kitchen.

Q. And how long did he remain there?

A. Well, it was only a few minutes. He said, "I just came in, [1312] happened to be down this way."

Q. How many minutes did he stay there after you got out of the shower?

A. Well, I say, if I had a stop-watch I would have——

Q. No, give us an estimate.

A. Oh, it wasn't over five, ten minutes at the very most.

Q. He told you he just happened to be down there and dropped in to see you?

A. Exactly what he said, yes.

Q. All right. Now, was that the first time you had ever met him?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Why, certainly not. He was at the grand jury.

Q. Well, was the grand jury session the first time you ever met him?

A. I think it was, yes.

Q. Was he present at the time that you gave the statement on the night preceding your appearance before the grand jury?

A. No, he wasn't, no.

Q. And the night that the grand jury met, at what time did you meet Mr. Donohue?

A. The night the grand jury met?

Q. Yes, the night you testified before it.

A. It was no nighttime.

Q. Was it in the daytime?

A. It was in the daytime. [1313]

Q. All right. What time did you testify?

A. I think it was in the afternoon, if I recall, if I—I think it was around 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Do you know what day of the week it was?

A. Well, as close as I can recall, it was either a Tuesday or a Wednesday.

Q. All right. And how long prior to going to the grand jury room, if at all, did you meet Mr. Donohue?

A. I didn't meet Mr. Donohue that day at all. I didn't know Mr. Donohue from a—anyone else, any other stranger.

Q. So when you went into the grand jury room, you had not yet met Mr. Donohue, is that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, even when I got in there, I didn't know who Mr. Donohue was.

Q. And then after the grand jury, after your testimony had finished to the grand jury, did you then meet Mr. Donohue?

A. No, I did not meet, after I testified, I did not meet Mr. Donohue.

Q. So then you never met Mr. Donohue except on the one occasion that he dropped in at your house at Menlo Park a week or so before this trial opened, is that right?

A. Well, when he was at the grand jury hearing, why, he questioned me, yes. I met him then.

Q. But then you didn't stand and talk with him, have any personal interview with him on that occasion, did you? [1314]

A. No, no, I had no personal——

Q. How long were you in the grand jury room with Mr. Donohue?

A. Oh, I would say about 45 minutes, somewhere in that length of time. I wouldn't pin it down to so many minutes, but it was around 45 minutes.

Q. And Mr. Donohue, of course, was in the room during all that time with you?

A. Well, along with me and the other people, 20 or 30 people that were in there.

Q. But then when your testimony was finished, did you leave immediately?

A. Leave the room?

Q. Leave the building. Did you return home?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, I think I went down to another room and then——

Q. What room?

A. And then my wife she went in to testify.

Q. Did your wife testify, too?

A. Yes, she went into the grand jury room, yes.

Q. I see. And how long was she in there?

A. Oh, I wouldn't say. Now, wait a minute. That is incorrect. I was recalled then after—I appeared before the grand jury twice. That is how this thing occurred. That is, the second time—after Mr. Andersen and B. B. and Slim Melin come down, then I was recalled to the grand jury, and that is when my wife accompanied me on the second visit. [1315]

Q. I see. Now, how long was that after you first appeared, after your first appearance before the grand jury?

A. Well, as close as I can—let's see; as close as I can recall, the second visit to the grand jury occurred, I would say, about a week after my first appearance.

Q. All right. Now, in the second appearance, how long were you in the grand jury room?

A. Oh, I would say about 20 minutes.

Q. About 20 minutes?

A. Approximately 20 minutes.

Q. Now, had you met Mr. Donohue before going in on that occasion? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you meet him afterwards?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Now, when you went to the grand jury room on the first occasion, how did you get there? Did somebody drive you up as usual, one of these agents?

A. Yes, I stayed at the Cartwright Hotel. That is the hotel I couldn't think of yesterday. The Cartwright. And I was driven over here in a Yellow taxicab.

Q. And when did you arrive at the Cartwright Hotel? A. When?

Q. Yes, preceding your testimony before the grand jury.

A. That was the night before I came in on the train. [1316]

Q. I see. You came up on the train on that occasion, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. And you stayed at the Cartwright Hotel?

A. That's correct..

Q. But before staying for the night at the Cartwright Hotel, you had appeared and given the 22 page statement that you testified to, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And where was that statement given?

A. At the—yes, I couldn't recall the name, but today I recall it, it was the Cartwright Hotel on Sutter Street.

Q. And was the statement given there? Yes, the statement was given at the Cartwright Hotel, wasn't it? A. That's right.

Q. And did you stay at the Cartwright Hotel also on that occasion? A. I did, yes.

Q. And what room did you have there?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I don't recall what room it was. I mean, the number. No, I don't recall the number.

Q. Did you rent the room yourself?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Whose name was the room in, do you know?

A. I do not know. [1317]

Q. Who showed you the room?

A. Mr. Kaiser said, "Here's where you are going to sleep tonight." And I tested the bed and it seemed O.K., so that was O.K. with me.

Q. That was his room also?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did anybody occupy the room with you that night?

A. No, nobody did. In fact, I was routed out of bed in the morning, because a stenographer was using it as an office in the daytime.

Q. I see. All right. Now you came up on the train and went to the Cartwright Hotel that night; that is, the night preceding the testimony before the grand jury? A. That's right.

Q. And then you testified before the grand jury, and how did you get home after testifying before the grand jury? Were you driven down there? Did you get down on the train or what?

A. Oh, I left here and I went back on the train. I went over and saw a movie and then went home.

Q. Now, when you returned the next time to testify before the grand jury, how did you arrive? How did you come to San Francisco?

A. Well, my wife accompanied me that time and they—I am trying to think. I had to think about what we did with the children that particular day. Whether we brought them along [1318] or did we leave—I can't—trying to think what we did with the children. And we drove in. Yes, we drove in and left the children with—no, that's—they sent a car for us and we came in in the automobile of the government, that the prosecution had down there.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Who drove that car?

A. Mr. McGowan, I believe.

Q. Was he alone?

A. Well, he wasn't alone after we got in the car, no.

Q. When he came down there, was he?

A. When he came down, alone, yes.

Q. All right. And who drove up in your car, just you and the wife?

A. The wife and I, yes.

Q. What about the children?

A. Well, the woman across the street, she took them that particular day, as we exchange back and forth.

Q. And then what time did you go back home again that day?

A. We went back, it was dark, and I remember that the children were asleep and we had to carry them across, that is, had to waken them and bring them home with us.

Q. Who took you back?

A. Oh, Mr. McGowan.

Q. Now, do you remember what time of the day

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

that you got to the grand jury room that day? [1319]

A. It was the—I would say right after lunch.

Q. And what time do you mean by that?

A. Well, 12:00 o'clock—it was about 1:00 o'clock, I would say, or 1:30, or something like that.

Q. And what time did you leave the grand jury room, you and your wife?

A. Oh, it was early in the afternoon.

Q. About what time? A. Well, 2:30 or so.

Q. Now, where were you from that time until the time you started for home?

A. Well, as I say, we went to a show and we had dinner, and we met Mr. McGowan and by appointment he drove us home.

Q. Mr. McGowan wasn't with you at dinner?

A. No. We had to do some shopping.

Q. Or none of the officials of the government?

A. No, we were alone in the afternoon.

Q. Now, prior to your appearance—on the second appearance before the grand jury, you say that that was after B. B. Jones and Ralph Melin, is that his name? A. No, Slim Melin.

Q. Slim Melin and George Andersen?

A. That is George Andersen.

Q. Had called upon you?

A. That's right. [1320]

Q. They had called upon you shortly after your appearance, your first appearance before the grand jury, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And how long had you known Mr. Melin?

A. You mean Slim?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Yes.

A. Why, he is a boss on the waterfront. I have known him since 1933.

Q. And how long had you known Mr. Jones?

A. Oh, I have known B.B. since the middle of the depression, 1931.

Q. And how long had you known Mr. Andersen?

A. You mean George Andersen? That is the attorney. Well, I knew George—well, about since 1932 or so.

Q. Now, after they left your place, what did you do, phone to some government agent and tell him that they had been there?

A. What did I do? I didn't do anything.

Q. I say, did you phone to some government agent and tell them those three men had been there?

A. No, no, I didn't phone to anyone.

Q. Well, who did? Who did phone?

A. Well, listen. Your guess is as good as mine. The guys come down to visit me, I don't know who did phone to them or didn't.

Q. No, I say—after they left you phoned to someone didn't you? [1321]

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Didn't you phone to one of the government officials and tell them that those three men had been there to visit you? A. I did not, no.

Q. Well, do you know how you happened to be recalled to the grand jury to testify about that visit?

A. Well, don't ask me how I happened to be called. I can't stop George Andersen from giving a statement to the press or anyone else.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, who asked you to come back up and testify again before the grand jury?

A. Who asked me?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, they told me that I was going to be subpoenaed before the grand jury again.

Q. And were you given a subpoena?

A. Not in that sense, no. I wasn't given an actual subpoena, but they come down and told me I was going to appear.

Q. Who came down?

A. I told you, Jack McGowan came down.

Q. Well, you said they came down.

A. Well, I mean, they is—as I say, I had no legal background. I can't distinguish—

Q. And how long between Mr. Andersen, Melin and Jones had [1322] left, did Mr. McGowan show up?

A. Why, he never did show up until the next—well, I think he appeared on a Sunday, and George Andersen gave the statement to the press on Monday, and I guess McGowan showed up about Wednesday, I would say, or Thursday, that week.

Q. And then you went back and testified before the grand jury about the visit of these three gentlemen to your house, is that right?

A. They asked me questions about the visit, yes, and I answered truthfully.

Q. Now, in the meantime, had you met anybody else connected with the prosecution, between those two visits to the grand jury?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Between the visit of Andersen?

Q. Yes. A. And the visit of McGowan?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. All right. Now, who were the persons that you spoke to, who were the next persons you spoke to connected with the government, next preceding the visit which resulted in your coming to San Francisco to testify before the grand jury the first time?

A. You mean, that would be the visit of Boyd and Kaiser?

Q. Well, I don't know. Was that who it [1323] was?

A. Well, Sunday, yes; the Sunday previous to my appearance in the grand jury was Boyd, Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser.

Q. All right.

A. And then preceding that was the visit of Mr. Barbour and Mr. Kaiser.

Q. All right. Now, how long before Boyd—Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser called, did Mr. Kaiser and Mr. Barbour call?

A. Well, Mr. Kaiser and Mr. Barber did not call together, it was Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber.

Q. You just said Mr. Kaiser and Mr. Barber?

A. I am sorry; I made a mistake; I am sorry.

Q. Well, how long prior to Mr. Boyd and Mr. Kaiser calling, did Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber call?

A. Well, as I say, I don't recall the exact time, but it was 30 days or so.

Q. Well, now, let me ask you this: Prior to your statement the night preceding the testimony before the grand jury, had you given any of those gentlemen another statement?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. If I had given a statement prior to the statement I give to——?

Q. Yes. A. Why, no, I did not.

Q. You had never written out, you had never signed any written statement, is that correct?

A. I had signed written statements, yes, but not prior to that particular one, no. [1324]

Q. No. Prior to the one—the one on May 15th or May 14th, you had never signed any written statement, is that right, to the Government on this subject?

A. No, not that I can recall, any at this particular time, no.

Q. Were you ever shown any that you were alleged to have signed?

A. No, sir, I never was shown any statement. In fact, the other statements that I did sign I only saw the day I signed them. I haven't seen them since. Maybe they are not in existence even. I don't know.

Q. Now, in addition to the one that was signed on May 15th and the one that was signed in October, have you seen any other statement?

A. Well, in this statement, that extremely long one, there was supplements—you know what I mean, they were written——

Q. Well, you spent three days, three evenings, rather—October 15th, 16th and 17th, we took to be the days? A. Yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Now, subsequent to that time, have you signed other statements also?

A. No, except the one the night——

Q. Except what?

A. I say, that one statement I signed on what you call May 15th. I signed that statement, yes.

Q. But no other than those? [1325]

A. Well, I say, not to my knowledge, my memory, that I can recall at this particular time, no.

Q. Well, now, dropping back from the time that Mr. Boyd came to see you before your appearance before the grand jury, that being preceded by a visit from Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber, how long prior to that had somebody been to see you last, connected with the Government?

A. Well, I don't—I didn't space these visits, or I didn't exactly——

Q. Well, approximately.

A. Well, approximately, it would be more or less a guess. Any more than a friend, maybe a friend drops in now and then. That is the way these people dropped in, occasionally.

Q. Can you tell me about how long prior to the visit, the Sunday visit of Mr. Boyd and Kaiser, Mr. McGowan and Mr. Barber had called upon you?

A. Well, I would say it was not less than 30 days.

Q. About 30 days?

A. I said not less. It may have been more, I don't think it was any less.

Q. All right. Well, then, that would take it back to some time around April, around April 10th or so.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Now, how long prior to that had it been that somebody from the Government had called upon you?

A. Well, I am trying to explain that from September, or August, [1326] rather, to the present time, it was maybe six or seven visits.

Q. All right. Well, then, let's go back to September, 1948, before you moved to this new house. Where were you living prior to that time?

A. On MacKendrie Drive.

Q. MacKendrie? A. MacKendrie Drive.

Q. Where is that, what town?

A. The post office address is in Palo Alto.

Q. All right. And you moved from there in September, 1948. Now, how long prior to your moving from there had any government agent or official called on you?

A. Well, we lived in MacKendrie Drive, there was two people came down, Mr. Phillips and some other person, and they visited us while we lived there.

Q. What was the other person's name?

A. I can not recall it.

Q. And how long did they stay?

A. Oh, I would say about an hour and a half.

Q. Now, do you know what department those gentlemen were connected with, or did they tell you?

A. Well, as I say, we were out and they left their card in the mail box. And it said, I think, "Immigration and—"; I believe it said "Immigration and Naturalization Service."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And then you called up Mr. Phillips, did you? [1327]

A. Well, I didn't; my wife did.

Q. And he came over to see you?

A. And he made an appointment and came out one evening after I came home from work.

Q. And he had a talk with you, did he?

A. Oh, we had a discussion, yes.

Q. Did it relate to Harry Bridges?

A. Well, I don't—we discussed so many things.

Q. Did they ask you anything about Harry Bridges?

A. I know they asked me about my—if I was ever a member of the Communist Party. I remember that.

Q. Did they ask you anything about Harry Bridges?

A. That is what I am trying to recall. And there were so many things discussed, it was a general conversation. And whether or not they asked me about Harry Bridges, I couldn't answer that.

Q. Now, that was sometime in April, 1948, you think, is that right.

A. Oh, no, it was, I would say, in May or June of 1948.

Q. I see. And from that time, from May or June, 1948, up until you moved to the other house, no other government agents called upon you, from that visit up until you moved, is that right?

A. Anything prior to that, no; no one ever had talked to me.

Q. No, I say subsequent to that. Not prior to that, prior to [1328] May or June, 1948, had any government agent called upon you?

A. You mean before that?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. None at all? A. None at all.

Q. You had never discussed with any other government agent, except, let us say, back in 1940 or '41, when you were up to that office, the matter of Harry Bridges, is that right?

A. Well, at that particular time I can't recall of any discussion I had with any government agent prior to that. I can not recall it at this particular time, no. [1329]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Prior to the time, then, that Mr. Phillips left his card, in May or June, 1948, no Government agent had called upon you in any connection, is that right?

A. In any connection? That is pretty broad. I don't know—you have got to explain what a government agent is. Maybe some Post Office——

Q. I don't mean that. I mean some person who came down to question you either about Communist affiliations of your own or anything connected with Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt or Bob Robertson.

A. As I say, I cannot recall any at this particular time, no.

Q. Now, you say that you never had any conversation with Mr. Donohue of any kind except that he questioned you before the grand jury, is that right?

A. When I walked in the grand jury?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Yes.

A. The gentleman was standing there. I didn't know who he was.

Q. Two days thereafter Mr. Donohue dropped in your house one Sunday afternoon about a week before this trial, to say hello, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you sit down and talk with him then?

A. I did not, no.

Q. You had no conversation with him then up to that time, [1330] had you?

A. Not that I can recall, no.

Q. Have you had any conversations with Mr. Donohue since that time.

A. Since the grand jury, you mean?

Q. No, since the day he dropped in at your house, about a week before this trial?

A. I see him every day now since I have been up here.

Q. But you have not had any conversations with him, is that right?

A. Certainly I have had conversations with him.

Q. About the facts of this case?

A. We have discussed the case, yes.

Q. When was the last time that you discussed the case with him?

A. I think this morning when he came into his office.

Q. What time was that?

A. What time did he come there?

Q. No, what time did you have the discussion?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Oh, it was a short discussion. That was when he mentioned the fact that he thought Mr. MacInnis was a smarter man than Mr. Hallinan.

Q. That was this morning?

A. That was this morning, yes.

Q. About what time? [1331]

A. I would say—I was there about ten minutes to nine, and he must have—about 9:15, I would estimate, somewhere in that period of time.

Q. You got there about ten minutes to nine?

A. Somewhere around nine o'clock, yes.

Q. Did you remain in that office until you appeared here in court to testify?

A. I think I went out in the hall.

Q. Were you talking to any of the officials or men connected with the Government during that time?

A. Well, I talked with Mr. Donohue, I talked to Mr. Paisley, I talked to Mr. Boyd, I talked to Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Did you talk to them about this case?

A. Why, naturally, we mentioned the case.

Q. Did you talk to them about any of the facts that were being testified to in the case?

A. Concerning my testimony?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't think so. It was a general discussion.

Q. You say "I don't think so." Do you remember?

A. I do remember. But you say "facts." Well, maybe your definition of a fact is different from my definition of a fact.

Q. Have you had any other conversation with Mr. Donohue from the time that he saw you in your home about a week before the trial up to the present time aside from the one that you had [1332] this morning?

A. I say every day I speak to him.

Q. Let us take yesterday. Did you have a conversation with him yesterday?

A. I would say yes; every day since I have been here.

Q. Where did you have a conversation with him yesterday? A. In the office.

Q. At what time?

A. Well, it was in the morning, again in the evening.

Q. What time did you have it in the morning?

A. It had to be before ten o'clock, between nine and ten.

Q. What time did you get to his office?

A. It was around nine o'clock.

Q. Did you see him at that time?

A. To have a conversation with him, I certainly must have seen him.

Q. At nine o'clock he arrived, is that right?

A. I wouldn't say nine o'clock. It was around there, yes.

Q. Dow long did the conversation last?

A. I know one thing, I am going to keep a stopwatch on this conversation angle after this.

Q. Yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. About ten minutes, I would say. I don't know.

Q. Only ten minutes? A. Yes. [1333]

Q. Did it relate to any testimony that you were going to give here today?

A. No, I don't think it did. No,—because he doesn't know what testimony I am going to give, I don't think, or no one else does.

Q. Then you had another conversation with him in the evening, you say? A. I think I did, yes.

Q. What time did that conversation take place?

A. Court adjourned around 4 o'clock, 4:15. I went upstairs and my wife was there and we had a little conversation.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. We didn't stay there very long. What I mean by "long," I would say from—I left there 20 minutes to 5 or so.

Q. All right. Now, the day prior to that did you have a conversation with Mr. Donohue?

A. That would be Monday, wouldn't it?

Q. Yes. A. Sure we did.

Q. When?

A. In the morning and again in the afternoon.

Q. You got there at nine o'clock?

A. Around nine o'clock.

Q. How long did you talk to him then?

A. You know—I said "Good morning." He said, "Good morning. [1334] How well you are looking, looking fine."

"Did you sleep well last night?"

"I did."

"What do you think of Mr. Hallinan?"

"I think he is a very smart guy." And "I don't think he is a smart guy."

Q. I am not complimented.

A. I am telling you how we talked. You are asking me and I am answering you. That is all I can do.

Q. How long did the conversation last?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I guess he is still promising us he is going to show us where this is material.

Mr. Hallinan: I am entitled to inquire in the conversations he has had with adverse counsel.

Q. What is your answer on that?

A. Will you please restate the question?

Q. You say you had a conversation with him Monday morning before court starting at nine o'clock. How long did the conversation last?

A. I would say ten minutes.

Q. Then did you have another conversation with him in the evening after court?

A. Naturally I did.

Q. For how long did that conversation last?

A. It wasn't very long. I don't think I am that important [1335] that he is going to stop and discuss the legal aspects of this case. He said—maybe ten minutes, that is all.

Q. What did he say? You are what, "doing very well"? "Keep it up"? Something like that?

A. He said, "I have seen better witnesses and I have seen worse."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. I want to read you just a short excerpt from your testimony this morning, and I asked you if you had a discussion with any of these gentlemen last evening, that is, yesterday, after you had finished testifying here, and you said you did. Then I asked you these questions——

Mr. Paisley: I think that is improper, your Honor. Shouldn't he be required to ask the witness, "Didn't you testify so-and-so on such-and-such an occasion"?

The Court: You might address him with respect to the record.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): In answer to these questions did you not give these answers: I think that is also another formal way of putting it. This is from page 1228 of this morning's testimony:

> "In the conversation you had with these gentlemen last night you discussed matters concerning what you had testified to, did you?
> "A. (By you): Well, I imagine we must have. I don't recall any particular incident, but I would say they [1336] might have referred to them. I don't know.
> "Q. You may have referred to them?
>
> "A. I don't know.
> "Q. You aren't sure?
>
> "A. Well, I wouldn't—I wouldn't depend on it. I say I wouldn't swear my life on it. But I talked to them, referring to any particular incident."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

That was your testimony this morning, wasn't it?

A. Well, if you are reading from the transcript, it certainly must be.

Q. Don't you remember yourself that you gave that testimony?

A. I say if you are reading from the transcript, that must be my testimony.

Q. Aside from my reading it, do you remember so testifying?

A. It sounds very much like my language, yes.

Q. Forgetting that you do not remember Larry's first name or the name of the man who accompanied Mr. Phillips or any of those other things that happened, I want to read you some testimony that you gave on Monday, November 28, and ask you whether or not you now remember in answer to these questions giving this testimony:

> "Mr. Donohue: Will you tell us what the instructions were which you received.
>
> "A. Pardon me."

This is back in 1936, thirteen years ago. [1337]

The Witness: That is a long time all right.

Mr. Hallinan: Thirteen years ago. Now listen to this:

> "Well, Walter Lambert told us to proceed to Grants Pass and to be parked in the courthouse square at twelve o'clock noon and there someone would come and direct us where to go.
> "Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us if you recall about what time of day you left San Francisco?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

"A. We left about—it was around 9:30. It was about 9:30 in the morning.

"Q. Now, how did you proceed to Grants Pass?

"A. Well, I met Bridges at 11th and Mission Streets. There is a service station there. I was picked up and we proceeded to drive in a Ford, a V-8 Ford. It was a coach model with only one door on each side, and we drove to Grants Pass, Oregon."

skipping a page.

"Well, as I say, we ran into a hailstorm and we had to stop while the—was it the meteorological or whatever it was, this hailstorm stopped, and after it stopped we proceeded, and then at night we stopped at one of those roadside cabins and stayed there that night and proceeded on the next day.

"Q. Now, what occurred when you reached the point to which you had been directed? [1338]

"A." ——

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, what is this, a filibuster, or is he asking a question? He is reading some of his testimony given——

Mr. Hallinan: I am going to ask his explanation for his keen recollection of such events thirteen years ago contrasted with his inability to remember a subject this morning.

Mr. Paisley: He can argue that to the jury.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: The objection is sustained. The question is argumentative.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to ask him if he made this statement.

The Court: He did; he conceded he did.

Mr. Hallinan: He has not heard it yet, Judge.

Mr. Paisley: On that theory, your Honor, he could read his entire testimony.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, I think we could.

The Court: The witness said if it be reported, if it is contained in the transcript, he concedes he made it. Correct?

The Witness: That is absolutely correct, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: You said originally in your cross-examination that you did not have any memorandum of these events that you have testified to, isn't that right?

A. Do you mean if I had any memorandum on my person?

Q. Yes. [1339]

A. Why, certainly I haven't.

Q. And you did not have any memorandum that you had read, isn't that right?

A. If there is any memorandum I have read?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, no, there isn't any memorandum I have read.

Q. And you said nobody had refreshed your recollection as to the events, no third person, isn't that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I don't think that is correct, no.

Q. And you said that you were testifying from your recollection, your own independent recollection, didn't you?

A. Well, let us get this straight now. I discussed this with other people.

Q. Let me ask you this: Did anybody tell you to say this: "Well, we pulled up into the courthouse square in Grants Pass and we parked and some fellow came alongside, just looked at us and said, 'Follow me' and we followed him." Now, did you remember that incident, or did somebody tell you to say that, or were you just making it up?

A. If anyone told me to say it, it would be Mr. Harry Bridges, because he and I and this third party were the only people there. How could anybody tell me to say that?

Q. So you remember this from your own recollection?

A. I certainly do, and I remember a lot of other things, too.

Q. Did you remember this without any memorandum: [1340]

> "Q. And where did you go?
> "A. Well, we drove out of Grants Pass. It wasn't very far, two or three miles, I imagine, and we came to, oh—turned into a lane and parked the car at this farmhouse under a big tree, parked the car and stopped."

Did you remember that of your own recollection?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I certainly did.

Q. And then did you remember this of your own recollection:

> "Mr. Donohue: Mr. Schomaker, can you tell us what conversation took place among you four persons at the time and place you have just stated?"

And this, as I say, sir, is thirteen years ago.

> "A. Well, as I say, we pulled up to the lane and parked under this tree, and I got out on the right side and Bridges got out on the left, and we walked around the car."

Did you remember that of your own recollection?

A. He was more left that I was, I guess.

Q. You remembered that of your own recollection, did you? A. I certainly did.

Q. "And Rappaport and Bert Nelson came toward us, and Rappaport, the first thing he said was, 'Well, you old wolf. I see you made it.' "

A. That is what he said.

Q. You remember Mr. Rappaport saying [1341] that? A. I remember it very distinctly.

Q. You remember the two men coming toward you and that Mr. Rappaport said that?

A. I certainly do.

Q. And then do you remember this:

> "Everybody left. I didn't know what he was supposed to make, but everybody left, and then Bridges says, 'Well, how's things in the Northwest?' "

Do you remember his saying that?

A. I do.

Q. " 'Oh' he says, 'everything is fine. Didn't we elect a new president of the ILA?' "

Do you remember saying that?

A. That is the reason I remember that incident, because, after all, after that long, hard struggle we had, at last we elected Bridges president of the ILA. That is why I remember.

Q. That is not what I asked you. Do you remember that having been said at that time, that language?

A. That is the reason why I remembered it.

Mr. Paisley: The witness has a right to say why he remembers it.

The Court: He stated the reason.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Then do you remember this: "And then he says, 'Yes,' he says, 'but the guys at Tacoma'—and Rappaport again says, 'Yes, but the guys at Tacoma aren't [1342] satisfied and they are making things kind of tough up here for us.' " Do you remember Mr. Rappaport saying that?

A. Would you be satisfied after you lost your district secretaryship as Patty Morris did? Would you be happy over it?

Q. Do you remember making that statement: " 'Yes, but the guys in Tacoma aren't satisfied and they are making things kind of tough up here'."

A. And the guys in Tacoma are still making things tough for Mr. Bridges.

Q. I asked you, did you remember Mr. Rappaport making that statement?

A. Yes, I recall that, yes.

Q. After these thirteen years?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. "So then he says"—now, let's see if you remember his saying this: " 'How about Bert here?' " he says. " 'I don't think you have met Bert, one of our—he is section organizer on the waterfront in Seattle.' " Do you remember Mr. Rappaport making that statement?

A. Yes, because that was the first time I had ever seen Bert Nelson.

Q. "So he introduces Bert to Bridges and myself and then we walk over. There was a chicken house there, and walked over into this chicken house"——

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, this has degenerated into [1343] an argument between counsel and the witness as to how he can remember.

Mr. Hallinan: I just asked him if he remembers these things of his own recollection. The Court and jury can compare those with the manifest deficiencies in his recollection of the things that happened in the last few hours.

Mr. Donohue: That is unfair.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to know if he remembers these things or he is just giving some reviewed stories.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, and I ask your Honor to instruct the jury to disregard

Mr. Hallinan's improper suggestion that there are manifest differences in his ability to remember.

The Court: I think the jury understands, up to this point at least, my earlier admonition in this case that the discussions of counsel on the admissibility of evidence may not be regarded by you as testimony or as evidence, and any characterization by Mr. Hallinan may not be regarded by you as evidence in this matter. The evidence is elicited through the witness. You are the sole judges of this man's credibility as well as the credibility of every witness in this case. I need say no more on that score. I think that is clear and well-defined admonition: I have said it now three or four times. I see no occasion to repeat it, unless there be some specific reason underlying the request. I shall permit Mr. Hallinan [1344] to continue on this one extra question. Have you one other matter?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, there is one, and then I will finish.

The Court: Then we will take a recess.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Can you relate to us at this time any portion of the discussion—you understand, Mr. Witness, what you are now being asked for is a discussion that took place between you, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Rappaport, and Mr. Bert Nelson, in Grants Pass, Oregon, more than thirteen years ago. You understand that, don't you?

A. I understand it very well, yes.

Q. When you gave this answer were you stating this from your recollection of the events as you sat on that witness stand:

> "A. Well, yes. The discussion was around the question of determination of the waterfront agreements with the employers, and Rappaport particularly stressed the fact that the people at Tacoma, that is, the longshore group in Tacoma, were rather hostile to the way the elections went. That was the first year that the rank and file had a chance to vote for the district officials, and the result was that the old-line officers were butted out and the so-called progressive militants were put into office, and he says, 'I think they are going to cause considerable trouble when the agreement terminates, particularly among the seafaring crafts,' and we discussed ways and [1345] means to bring that about, that is, the Northwest maritime groups, closer to the California and Southern California groups, and that was the extent of the discussion, what was needed to be done, to do it, at my—well, that was the general text of the discussion along those lines."

Do you remember that conversation taking place up there at that time?

A. Could anyone not remember the depression days and the hunger and starvation that existed in the country at the time? That is the reason——

Q. Will you please answer the question I am asking you.

A. That is what I am answering. I am answering that certainly I remember that, because after all this struggle that we had had, since 1933, in organizing the union and fighting the people who were using the organization not for the benefit of the membership but for themselves, and the struggle that we had to get a rank and file vote, to get people who were progressive and militant, we won that in the conventions and we had Bridges elected, why certainly I remember it. How could I forget it?

Q. That was thirteen years ago and you do not remember whether Mr. Donohue came down to see you on the 11th or the 6th, the first, last and only time he was in your house, a week before you appeared here to testify; isn't that right?

A. I have friends—— [1346]

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question.

The Court: The objection is sustained. Argumentative.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon recess. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case.

(Recess.) [1346-A]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, Mr. Schomaker, on the subject that I hadn't quite finished yet, you testified to certain instructions that had been given to you by Sam Darcy to convey to Harry Bridges, and pursuing that a step further, you also gave this testimony. Now, see if you can remember this:

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

"Will you tell His Honor and the members of the jury what instructions you carried to the defendant Harry Bridges from William Schneidermann?"

Answer: "Practically of the same nature."

That follows the discussion of the instructions that you carried, if you did carry them, from Mr. Darcy to Mr. Bridges. Now, do you remember any instructions that you carried to the defendant Harry Bridges from William Schneidermann?

A. You mean personally, personal instructions?

Q. Yes. A. Why, yes, I do.

Q. All right. Well, now, will you tell us what you said to Harry Bridges in delivering such instructions?

A. Well, in one particular case that I can recall, I was living on Pine Street then, and it had to do with—there was a thief on the waterfront about the Grace Line ships. Something, I think it was the Californian, loaded with hot cargo, and it avoided, I think this is the instance. Now, maybe—I mean, that started this trend of events to work. And it skipped Pedro and came to San Francisco. And there was quite a beef [1347] about it. And it resulted in a stoppage of work. And so the Labor Relations Committee, Bill Marlowe and I think it was Frenchy Gallet, and some other older person I don't—I can't recall his name, he was on the Labor Relations Committee at that particular time. So they had a meeting with the employers and they signed a memorandum which called for, that the Central Labor Council of the American Federation of Labor here in San Francisco or, rather, the California—whether it was the California State Federation of Labor or the San Francisco Labor Council, should underwrite all the agreements signed by the ILA. So Bill Schneidermann or Walter Lambert brought word to me that—well, anyway, I am a little ahead of my story. Now, this memorandum was signed by Bill Marlowe and I am pretty sure it was Frenchy Gallet, and it was late at night when this meeting was held. And they signed it without bringing it back to the membership to discuss it, see. So it was late at night when they come out of the conference, and evidently—Bridges was president of the local at that particular time. He lived on Pine Street, too. So Marlowe, and as I say, the other members of the board, I can't recall any too clearly. Anyway, Marlowe came to my house. It was about 2:00 o'clock in the morning and he rung the bell. So I answered it and went out and it was a surprise to me to see Marlowe because he and I were on opposite sides of the fence. So I says—he says, "Come here, John; read this thing over." And I said, "Read what over?" And he says, "Read [1348] this memo and see if you can see anything wrong with it." So I put on some clothes and went over to Bridges' house. It was only two doors down. And so I read it and I saw this in there, where the agreement should be underwritten by the California State —either—well, anyway, Vandeleur was at the head of it. Now, whether he was president of the San Francisco Labor Council and later he was president of the California State Federation of Labor—now, whether it was the California State Federation of Labor should underwrite these contracts or not, I don't recall that. Well, anyway, he says, "Can you see anything wrong with them?" I said, "No." Well, I says, "It doesn't mean anything anyway." That in my opinion it wouldn't mean anything. So Bill said, "See? It doesn't mean a thing." Well, Bridges took the opposite view. So it created quite a furor, quite a bit of dissension, with Bridges saying it did, and as far as I was concerned, it didn't make much difference to me, in my opinion. So the next day Walter Lambert got wind of this and he saw me and says, "Get ahold of Bridges and let's discuss this memorandum." And I says, "O.K." So I got ahold of Bridges, and so that night at my house on Pine Street, Bridges and I and Bill Schneidermann discussed this memo. So that was one particular instance

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Well, now, here was what you testified to about carrying messages:

> "By Mr. Donohue: When Mr. Schneidermann took over in Mr. [1349] Darcy's place, did you carry any instructions from Mr. Schneidermann to Mr. Bridges?"
> Answer: "Not only did I carry instructions——."
> The Court: "Did you carry instructions?"
> Answer: "I did, yes."

"Mr. Donohue: Will you tell His Honor and the members of the jury what instructions you carried to the defendant Harry Bridges from William Schneidermann?"

The Answer: "Practically of the same nature."

Now, you have just told us of some meeting that took place in which you, Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schneidermann discussed the advisability of taking a certain position on a certain quarrel that some people had with one of the shipowners.

A. Well, it wasn't just that, it was more than that to it.

Q. Yes. But what I asked you is to tell us—you repeated that you did carry instructions from William Schneidermann to Harry Bridges of the same nature as the instructions that you said you carried from Sam Darcy to him. I asked you to tell us what you said to Harry Bridges in carrying that instruction from William Schneidermann to Harry Bridges. Now, do you understand the question? Do you understand what I am trying to get at? Or do you simply desire to evade it?

A. I am not evading anything, I am trying to answer to the best of my ability. As I say, you have one interpretation of instructions, and I evidently have another. [1350]

Q. Well, yes. Well, let me give you what interpretation there may be, so there is no misunderstanding.

A. Well, go right ahead.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. From what you testified here at this time about carrying instructions, you attempted to make it look as though Mr. Bridges was taking some instructions from these persons and then carrying out a program in conformity with the——

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, what I want to do is find out if that be so, what were those instructions that were delivered. And you have failed yet to tell us what any one of them was.

The Court: The objection is sustained; argumentative, characterization of the witness' testimony.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you were a member of the Communist Party and you were also a member of the Longshore Workers Union, is that right?

A. Well, it wasn't a longshore workers' union, it was the International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. The ILA, whatever—All right. Mr. Bridges was a member of the ILA. That's right, isn't it?

A. And a member of the Communist Party.

Q. We will skip that for the moment. We will come to that. He was a member of the ILA, wasn't he?

A. And a member of the Communist Party, yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I will ask that be stricken out and the [1351] witness directed to answer the question, if the Court please.

The Court: What was the specific question?

Mr. Hallinan: I asked him if Mr. Bridges was also a member of the ILA. That calls for a yes or no answer.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Yes, the answer may go out..

A. Well, he was a member of the International Longshoremen's Association, yes.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, Mr. Schneidermann was a member of the Communist Party, wasn't he?

A. He was a district organizer of the Communist Party.

Q. Was he a member of the ILA?

A. Well, not to my knowledge, he wasn't. Now there was honorary memberships given.

Q. But so far as now appears, Mr. Bridges denying that he was a member of the Communist Party, you were the only one who was admittedly a member of both organizations of those three, isn't that right?

A. Well, I wouldn't—I knew that Mr. Schneidermann was a member of the Communist Party and I knew that Mr. Bridges was a member of the Communist Party and I knew that I was a member of the Communist Party. And there we were, we all sit there and discuss this particular problem.

Q. And as a matter of fact, you did convey messages to Mr. Darcy, from Mr. Darcy, Mr. Schneidermann to Mr. Bridges, but only for this reason, that you were a member of both parties, the [1352] Communist Party and the ILA; Bridges was a member only of the ILA and Schneidermann and Darcy were only members of the Communist Party. So they sent the message through a third person who happened to be a member of both, isn't that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor pleases; patently argumentative.

The Court: Yes, it is argumentative.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now let me ask you this question, too: At the time that this—well, withdraw that.

When you would have a message for Mr. Bridges from Mr. Darcy, I would like to know just what you did. You would go galloping off to Mr. Bridges and tell him that you had a message, or this instruction from Mr. Darcy, would you?

A. Why, no, you have got entirely the wrong picture of it. The decision of the Communist Party would be made and because I was responsible for the Communist Party work on the waterfront, why, I expected all the Communist Party members to carry out those decisions, and because Mr. Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, he had to carry out those decisions, too.

Q. So then you transmitted those decisions to Mr. Bridges?

A. And Mr. Bridges and other members of the Communist Party who didn't attend any meetings where any decision was made.

Q. Yes. And then I suppose you would go galloping back to Sam Darcy or William Schneidermann and say, "Tovarich," meaning, "It is accomplished," or something like that, is that right? [1353]

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please;

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

his supposition is unimportant, it is purely argumentative.

The Court: Does he understand the definition of "Tovarich"?

Mr. Hallinan: I asked him if that is what it meant.

Q. Is that what it means?

A. I can't speak any foreign language; I can barely speak the English language.

Q. Let me ask you this, or whether you know whether the telephone was invented and it was in use at that time.

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if Your Honor pleases; it certainly has no bearing.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you know any reason, do you know whether Mr. Darcy or Mr. Schneiderman was able to use the telephone or had a telephone?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Well, the fact of the matter was that, being a section organizer and a link between the district, the Communist Party and the lower part of the Communist Party, it was my duty to see that those decisions were transmitted.

Q. You were a high part of the Communist Party and Mr. Bridges was a low part of the Communist Party?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that, no; absolutely not. If I give that impression, I want to correct it if I can. I didn't want [1354] to give that impression whatsoever. We were all members of the Communist Party together.

Q. Now, you told us some of the things that the Communist Party recommended with regard to handling this strike, and as nearly as I had it established, the—— Withdraw that for a minute. You told about these conditions that existed down on the waterfront in which men were making as little as $10 a week, some men, standing around in the cold and the rain or the sun for hours and hours and hours, not knowing whether they would get employment or not.

Mr. Paisley: Object to the form of the question, Your Honor, as characterizing the testimony.

The Court: Well, wait until Mr. Hallinan finishes.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I am trying to save time, Your Honor, obviously.

The Court: All right. Have you finished?

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): And then being picked out by certain bosses, some of whom would go, some of the men would go to work and the others simply go without work. You have told us about that, is that right?

A. That's correct, absolutely correct.

Q. And then you told us how the weights that they were supposed to lift were too great and some of them had broken and killed some men, is that right? What is your answer?

A. That is right, certainly. [1355]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. And then they had a speed-up system under which certain——

The Court: Counsel is going to object, and I think that I will sustain the objection. I anticipated what you have in mind, counsel. This is a mere narration.

Mr. Paisley. Repetitious. [1355-A]

Q. Then it is your testimony that they had some sort of speedup system in which men were required to work against each other so as to get each ounce of energy out of the——

The Court: The objection is sustained on the basis it is argumentative, a narration of the transcript, and not proper cross-examination.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): These conditions that existed on the waterfront, whatever they may be, wouldn't it have been possible to have settled them all and gotten increased wages and had some kind of reasonable means of allocating the work to the men by simply going and asking the employers for those concessions?

A. You are asking me that?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, certainly, I think it would have been a pleasure for everyone and much easier for everyone if such a thing had occurred.

Q. Why didn't you do that?

A. For some reason the ILA was not recognized as the bargaining agent for the longshoremen in San Francisco or in any port on the Pacific Coast.

Q. Was it your impression if they had been so recognized they could have gotten those concessions by asking for them?

Mr. Donohue: First we are asked for an opinion and then for an impression. [1356]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, is it your impression?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the opinion also.

Mr. Hallinan: He has testified fully on the matter.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): What is your answer to that?

A. Will you please restate it?

Q. I asked you if in your opinion it would have been sufficient to secure any amelioration of those conditions or any lessening of those conditions to just ask the employers?

A. Listen. If I could look into the minds of the Waterfront Employers and look into your mind or anyone else's mind I would be a genius or something. I don't know.

Q. Let me ask you this: In your opinion was the strike the struggle, a necessary one to get what was obtained?

A. It was an absolute necessity.

Mr. Donohue: This is immaterial. We are not trying that issue.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): With regard to what the Communist Party advised, or members of the Communist Party advised that you have already testified that they advised as to delaying this strike so that the President's board would have a chance to intervene—is that right?

A. No, sir, that is not correct.

Q. What did they advise on that subject? [1357]

A. You mean at that particular time in 1934?

Q. What did the Communist Party advise with regard to having the strike or withholding the strike? A. Delayed, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. As I say, in those days the Communist Party was a party that in my opinion really represented the American workers, and before they took any action there was a thorough discussion on it, and they went to every angle on it, and at that particular time when Burglar Lewis received a telegram from Washington to delay the strike, after the strike date had been set, he did it without consulting anyone. So in the period then from when the original strike date until the strike date of May 9 —I mean the strike date which was later set at May 9—when this period of time elapsed, why, Sam Darcy, Walter Lambert and others, I suppose, discussed this and there was a possibility, due to this loss of time, that the workers who were going to be involved in the strike may have lost a certain amount of interest or enthusiasm for it and they were considering that angle, and that is the reason that resolution was drawn up by Sam Darcy and one copy given to me and one copy given to Bridges, that in case sentiment in the meeting was such that the workers were hesitant about going on strike, we should submit this resolution to delay it, and then build up enthusiasm for it so it could be called at a [1358] later date.

Q. But that would be an ordinary trade labor tactic wouldn't it?

A. Sam Darcy and Walter Lambert were extremely able trade union tacticians and strategists, extremely able.

Q. So that in that particular matter, in the matter of this strike on the longshore front, Sam Darcy, Walter Lambert and the other men you mentioned were interested in securing the benefits that the longshoremen felt they were entitled to and not merely in furthering the interests of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. At that particular time the aim of the Communist Party was to better the conditions of the American workers, and, as I say, on the waterfront strike that is exactly what they did.

Q. And then they afterwards made suggestions as to the minimum demands which should be made against the shipowners, is that right?

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And that included raise in pay, shorter hours, lighter loads, and particularly the hiring hall, is that correct?

A. That is correct, hours, wages and working conditions and the hiring hall specifically.

Q. And then those things were also only ordinary trade union tactics, weren't they?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. As I say, Sam Darcy, Walter Lambert and Harry Jackson were [1359] extremely able people.

Q. And this had nothing to do with Communism, did it?

A. Certainly it didn't have anything to do with Communism.

Q. Then afterwards when a board was appointed by President Roosevelt those same gentlemen whose names you have mentioned recommended to Mr. Bridges and the other men that they accept such decisions as that board would render, didn't they?

A. That is not exactly correct, to say it, put it in such a fashion.

Q. What did they do in that connection?

A. I remember we had a meeting. Bridges was there. Darcy and various other members were there, and we discussed this, how far they thought the Labor Board would go, and would it be possible, if they refused the demands of the men, what should be done. However, when the men went back to work, they didn't go back to work, that is, they stayed away from the docks, and all the hiring that was done was done through the union hall, and we established our own hiring hall, and that was a tactic that was devised by the Communist Party.

Q. And that was a good trade union tactic?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And it had nothing to do with Communism, did it?

A. Except the officers of the Communist Party developed this tactic.

Q. As trade unionists? [1360]

A. That is correct, as trade unionists.

Q. And then when the final negotiations had been finished, and so forth, and this board had made its award, these men advised that they be accepted, is that correct?

A. That is true. Of course, we knew under the circumstances—because I remember very distinctly that Harry Bridges and myself and Walter Lambert and Sam Darcy went out Third Street, out there in the direction of Candlestick Cove. We got out of the car and walked around that cove. There was a road there and some eucalyptus trees. We walked up that road and we discussed this, and Sam stated very clearly, he said, "This is turning out much better than what I anticipated, but as long as the workers can control the hiring, why, you guys are sitting together."

So, as I say, we walked along that road. There was no houses at that time in those days to what there are now, and we discussed—it was twilight in the evening—we discussed this thing, and that was the sum of the conclusion of the discussion.

Q. Was it also the condition at that time throughout the strike that in your opinion, the opinion of other leaders of the strike, the position of the workingmen was being misrepresented to the public?

A. I don't understand that question.

Q. That the men were being put in a bad light, that they were [1361] not getting the publicity that the cause deserved? Was that one of the problems that confronted you?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, there was a lot of problems and the question of bringing our story to the public was a problem which we met and solved.

Q. Wasn't that an important problem?

A. A very important problem.

Q. Was that one of the things which these gentlemen like Mr. Darcy told Mr. Bridges and the other less experienced men how to go about?

A. I think that is one reason why Norma Perry was brought down there.

Q. What was done in that connection? What was done towards exciting public interest and sympathy for the strikers?

A. Well, there was a paper here. The Communist Party publication at that time here was the Western Worker, and the editor of the Western Worker, who was George Morris, appeared before the Longshoremen's strike committee to explain that the paper was there for their use. So the result was the strike committee adopted the Western Worker as the official organ of the San Francisco longshoremen's strike committee, and, as I say, I went up and saw Sam and he said we should have a secretary. There was none down there that could do secretarial work. He got hold of Norma Perry and she came down there under the precise orders of Sam Darcy. [1362]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. So this Western Worker took up the banners for the striking longshoremen?

A. In a very vigorous and efficient manner, yes.

Q. Were there any other newspapers that did it?

A. There was a Catholic publication that give us a pretty fair shake.

Q. That was Father York's Leader, I suppose, wasn't it?

A. I can't really recall the name of it, but it was a Catholic publication anyway.

Q. What side did the big daily papers take?

A. At that time Mr. Hearst was very anti-labor. I guess he still is, for that matter.

Q. How about the other papers?

A. Well, you have the Chronicle. That wasn't too bad. And the San Francisco News wasn't too bad either. But the Call-Bulletin, of course, being controlled by Hearst, didn't give us much of a shake on it. But, of course, they have changed their policy considerable since.

Q. They have been kinder to you?

A. Kinder to me! Heh-heh-heh! I don't know why they should be kinder to me than kinder to you.

Q. Sometime around the year 1937 there was a great deal of conflict within the union circles themselves relating to the division of the CIO from the AFL; do you remember that?

A. I remember it very well. [1363]

Q. Now, certain persons, certain officials of the AFL unions at that time were also trying to get something upon Harry Bridges which would cause his deportation, isn't that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please.

Mr. Hallinan: It goes to the same thing.

Mr. Donohue: I understood we were not to try any union differences either between or within a union.

Mr. Hallinan: What I am trying to do, your Honor, is the same thing that relates to these previous efforts, the dictagraph, and so forth, to show the improbability of these express and open avowals of Communist affiliation by Mr. Bridges, when he was being looked at and searched by everyone. I want to show, and I can show through this witness exactly what was being done.

Mr. Donohue: I believe it is quite apparent, if your Honor please, that counsel is attempting to do by the cross-examination of this witness what your Honor has heretofore stated he may not do.

Mr. Hallinan: I think what the Court said was that we would be permitted a wide scope on cross-examination if these things were material to show the interests of the witnesses, and so forth, that we could inquire into them. The Court's objection was to making them in an opening statement. Is that about correct? [1364]

Mr. Donohue: I somehow cannot describe the scope of this cross-examination to be anything except wild.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: I have granted considerable latitude.

Mr. Hallinan: I grant that.

The Court: I believe this question is objectionable on the basis I have heretofore outlined as not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case, as I see it. Accordingly, the objection will be sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, I questioned you prior to this as to certain releases you had made while in charge of the publicity department of the Bulletin and as to whether or not you had made certain statements relating to the people who testified against Harry Bridges. Now, I want to ask you if you remember this release with you as publicity director. See if you recognize the language.

Mr. Donohue: I must object, if your Honor please. I know no authority in the law by which Mr. Hallinan may be permitted to seek to contradict the testimony of this witness by reference to some publication——

The Court: Mr. Hallinan takes the position, as I understand it, that this gentleman is the author of these articles.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, and furthermore, I have other ones that I want to show.

The Court: Have you a legal discussion?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor. [1365]

The Court: It is four o'clock. We may take it up. But I understand Mr. Hallinan's position is he was the author of these articles.

Mr. Hallinan: That is correct.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we have reached the four o'clock period. We have a legal matter which will be heard in your absence. You may now retire. You are not to discuss the case under any circumstances nor suffer any person to discuss it with you and not to form or express an opinion on the matter until it is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon the jury was excused until Thursday, December 1, 1949, at 10:00 a.m., and in the absence the following occurred:)

The Court: Let me first, Mr. Donohue, understand Mr. Hallinan's precise position.

Mr. Hallinan: No, you have expressed it.

The Court: Is that clear?

Mr. Hallinan: Surely.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, as I understand Mr. Hallinan's position, he is seeking to impeach or question the credibility of this witness with respect to an answer made by this witness on the stand by introducing through his reading a statement which obviously was written by this witness in a publication at some other time. On this point, if your Honor please, I would like to read rather briefly from the case of [1366] United States v. Klass, cited in 166 Fed. (2d) at page 373, decided February 11, 1948, in the Third Circuit, in which the court said this:

> "Insofar as the extent of the cross-examination is a matter resting within the sound dis> cretion of the trial court, the learned trial judge properly ruled that the testimony with which we are now concerned was inadmissible for the purpose of attacking the credibility of the appellants. There is indeed a conflict as to whether acts of misconduct not resulting in conviction are the proper subject of cross-examination to impeach a witness."

Citing numerous cases and also citing Wigmore on Evidence.

> "We believe the rule with respect to impeachment for former conviction"—it will become more pertinent in a moment, your Honor —"as generally applied by federal courts in criminal cases"——

The Court: Didn't you cite this on the doctrine of res adjudicata some time ago? Didn't you include this?

Mr. Donohue: I may have.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, it was.

The Court: I remember now the Klass case. I made a note of it.

> Mr. Donohue: "We believe the rule with respect to impeachment for former conviction as generally applied by federal courts in criminal cases to be that it is only [1367] convictions for felonies or misdemeanors amounting to crimini falsi which are admissible to impeach a witness' credibility. This reflects the true purpose of impeaching evidence, to disclose the > personal turpitude of the witness, and his insensibility to the obligation of his oath to speak the truth," citing Goldstein v. the United States, which is perhaps the authority I have heretofore cited.

There is no reason why the standard should be less exacting——

The Court: Yes, U. S. v. Klass was cited November 21 in the afternoon session 166 Fed. (2d) 373 at 376, Third Circuit.

Mr. Donohue: Yes. Now I would like to read, if I may, the last paragraph on page 376:

> "In this instant case the government urged that the impeaching substance lay not only in the commission of another similar offense but also in the contradiction of the appellant's testimony on cross-examination by the rebuttal testimony of two named witnesses. Except in the event of a record of conviction contradictory extrinsic evidence is not admissible, it being long settled that the answer of the witness on cross-examination with respect to a collateral matter introduced for impeachment purposes concludes the inquiry."

Citing as its authority the case of United States v. Novak, [1368] decided at 124 Fed. (2d) 104, in which certiorari was denied by the Supreme Court in 315 U. S. 813; also the cases of United States v. Mittel, Cohen v. United States, and others.

Now, it is conceded, I think, that the witness'

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

testimony which he now seeks to impeach is on a collateral matter, not on a matter which is pertinent to the substance and subject matter of this indictment. If that be true——

The Court: What is the basis for your statement that this course of conduct on Mr. Hallinan's part seems to impinge on a collateral matter?

Mr. Donohue: Are we in accord, your Honor, that if it be a collateral matter, whether this witness may or may not at some other time have said that persons who testified against Harry Bridges are perjurers?

The Court: I of course cannot anticipate precisely what Mr. Hallinan is coming to in these declarations.

Mr. Donohue: He has stated as his premise that in order to impeach his credibility upon the basis of the statement that he made at some prior time, he made a statement, or at least Mr. Hallinan asked if he had made the statement, that persons who testified against Harry Bridges are perjurers and liars, and he asked him, by the way, if he had made a statement at a public meeting in some hall and, as I recall, and I think my recollection is fairly accurate, his answer was he was sure he did not make any such statement in a public [1369] hall, although he may have said something in a personal conversation. Now, apparently from what Mr. Hallinan said he seeks to impeach his credibility by reading from some purported and, let us say, some factual statement which was written or edited by this witness in a publication, which I assume tends to show that he did at some time say that persons who testified against Harry Bridges were perjurers or stool pigeons or whatever the context of the statement may be. I say, if that be true, that he is seeking by extrinsic evidence to impeach the credibility of the witness on cross-examination on a collateral matter, and if my conclusion or my premise be true, and this being the law, except in the event of a record of conviction, contradictory extrinsic evidence is not admissible, it being long settled that the answer of the witness on cross-examination with respect to a collateral matter introduced for impeachment purposes concludes the inquiry.

In other words, whenever Mr. Hallinan asks this witness for the purpose of impeaching or contradicting his prior testimony any question which refers to a collateral matter, then he may proceed no further than procuring the answer of the witness. He may not then by extrinsic evidence seek further to impeach his credibility. And I think the reason for the rule is apparent, because if it were not for the rule we could never try a single case. We would be trying a hundred other cases arising out of cross-examination on [1371] these contradictory matters which are raised wholly with respect to a collateral issue. If this question were raised with respect to the direct issue here, that is, whether or not in fact the defendant Harry Bridges and his two co-defendants did conspire as charged in the first count, if Harry Bridges did falsely swear as charged in the second count, and if his two co-defendants did aid and abet Harry Bridges in the fraudulent procurement of his naturalization, then I would not raise the same objection, but obviously what the witness may have said with respect to a witness who may or may not appear against the defendant Bridges on some other occasion is a matter which is collateral and not pertinent to this issue, and ~~as such~~ this offer of evidence or this kind of cross-examination is improper. I object to the question. [1372]

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, if the question of Mr. Bridges being a member of the Communist Party is a collateral matter, then that would be correct. But these things go directly. Suppose we had, for instance, an affidavit from this witness saying that anyone who ever said Mr. Bridges was a member of the Communist Party was a perjuror. He says it is not admissible.

The Court: What is the precise question that you addressed?

Mr. Hallinan: That he stated that anyone who said Bridges is a Communist is a perjurer and a stool pigeon. If that is collateral, I do not know the meaning of it. A collateral matter would be something relating to some past transaction that might affect the thing slightly one way or another, but here is a matter directly in issue. Here is the man committing himself in the past to definite statements, and this gentleman says that is a collateral matter.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, it would seem to me that what Mr. Schomaker said with respect to a characterization of any person or persons who may testify against Mr. Bridges is not evidence either that Mr. Bridges is or is not a Communist, because one who is not a Communist might be just as likely to make the statement as one who is. It certainly is not probative evidence in this matter. It is certainly a question which seeks to introduce into this court a collateral issue. [1373]

And if we are thus to try these collateral issues judging by the extent of the cross-examination in the last two days, we will be wearing long gray beards before we ever get down to trying the issue.

Mr. Hallinan: There goes the rule against prior inconsistent statements.

The Court: I will take the matter under submission. I will read the transcript of this matter. Have you any other authorities?

Mr. Donohue: Not on that point, if Your Honor please. I am sorry to say that I didn't until this noon procure this issue. But there are four federal cases cited, and we will be glad, if Your Honor would like, to——

The Court: I am familiar with the rule on impeachment on collateral matters; that is an elemental rule.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir. And——

The Court: And the only question that arises is whether or not this is collateral matter.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, sir.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: What is your view, Mr. Paisley? You are a——

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, I think, as Your Honor says, this principle is well established.

The Court: There is no question; we accept that.

Mr. Paisley: The witness has testified that Bridges and Schmidt, and I believe perhaps the other defendant, were members [1374] of the Communist Party. Now, if counsel can confront him with a statement that he has made out of court that they were not members of the Communist Party he may lay a foundation to impeach him. Certainly he may do that. But what I am wondering is whether he is going to get beyond that. Now, when he gets beyond that, why, we reserve the right to object. I certainly think that would be competent. He could ask him on cross-examination, "Didn't you at a certain time and place make a contrary statement?"

The Court: Well, there isn't any question about that.

Mr. Donohue: No, that isn't the question, though.

The Court: There isn't any question—that is not the question before me.

Mr. Donohue: Not did John Schomaker ever say that Harry Bridges was not a Communist, but did John Schomaker say that anyone who testifies against Harry Bridges is, or who says he is a Communist, is a perjurer or stool pigeon. That is not the same thing.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: It is the same thing in just a different direction.

Mr. Donohue: Oh, no.

Mr. Hallinan: In other words, the only way that you could impeach a person is not by showing an inconsistent statement but a direct contradiction. For instance suppose that the statement had been, "I know that all these charges about Harry [1375] Bridges being a Communist are false." Well, would that be admissible? Or, "Anyone who says that Harry Bridges is a Communist doesn't know what he is talking about." Would that be an inconsistent statement? Anything that the Court can reasonably interpret as showing a contrary opinion at another time is a prior inconsistent statement. Now, if it is a collateral matter, might be—suppose that we asked the man, "What is your wife's name?" and he said, "Her name is Rose." And then we tried to impeach him by proving that some time before he said it was Florence. That would be a collateral matter. But here is a matter directly at issue. Why, this is the very question. The only thing that this witness testifies to is that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. Now, if we can show that he said that anyone who said that was a perjuror, can anything be more inconsistent? The whole thing is that these gentlemen think that they can make some kind of a little pattern and the defense must fit its testimony into that matter, and if it doesn't do so, that then they can persuade Your Honor that we are not entitled to proceed in our way to prove the matter, in a proper fashion.

Mr. Donohue: The lack of truth in that assertion, if Your Honor pleases, is evidenced by the fact that every question I asked this witness on direct examination, Mr. Hallinan objected to, almost without exception—to the form of the question and to the substance. He objected if I repeated a question. For two [1376] days he has repeated himself consistently in the most minute, picayunish way. Now, I don't think Your Honor is going to permit us to substitute Hallinan on criminal procedure; I think Your Honor is going to insist that we follow the rules.

Mr. Hallinan: It would be safer than Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: I am not so sure of that, Professor.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, we started out to read something. I presume some periodical that the witness has published. My point is that he ought to ask him, "Are you the author of this article?" If he puts it that way, I would have no objection.

The Court: He states, Mr. Hallinan states that the witness is the author of the article.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, but he can't testify. I think he ought to ask the witness.

The Court: No, I know; I assume that as a predicate.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir.

The Court: That Mr. Hallinan shows good faith with the Court on that particular offer that he is going to establish at some stage that the witness was and is the author. I don't doubt that for a moment. He said he would do that.

Mr. Paisley: Or if he says he was not the author, I think he could ask him, "Did you subscribe to that editorial when it was published?"

The Court: Pardon me, Mr. Hallinan. Then Mr. Paisley, is your objection withdrawn or invalidated to the extent that Mr. [1377] Hallinan may establish the witness to be the author of the particular periodical or statement?

Mr. Paisley: Well, that is my view of it, Your Honor. I think he can lay a foundation to impeach him by contradictory statements.

The Court: Inconsistent statements heretofore made.

Mr. Paisley: Heretofore made.

The Court: And to what extent were the statement or statements contained in the literature at hand inconsistent with any statement made by the witness.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I should think we would have to wait to hear the question.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hallinan: And furthermore, Your Honor, now Mr. Paisley made the point exactly that I was going to make. It isn't necessary for a person to be the author. If he embraces or endorses the statement. For instance, in recent cases they have been sending people to the penitentiary because organizations to which they belong send out certain material, certain books containing violent advice or subversive suggestions or something of that kind. Now, we have other evidence that this witness embraced and recommended and took unto himself utterances of other people, not the one that I am reading now, but I intend to offer those afterwards. And I don't—I suppose you don't doubt that that would make them admissible? [1378]

Mr. Donohue: No, I think every Communist does that, if Your Honor pleases. I think that is accepted.

The Court: Well, this witness, Mr. Hallinan, I assume, is not bound by gratuitous statements made by other persons on the waterfront with respect to policies and the like, nor could you impeach him on that basis.

Mr. Hallinan: Unless he embraces it.

The Court: Not in this type of examination. Not in this type of examination.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I will find some authority —I think that on the matter of his one contradictory statement, his own inconsistent statements, there is no question about that.

The Court: Well, as I understand Mr. Paisley's position now, he takes the position that if in fact you can establish by the direct question, "Did you or were you the author of the particular statement which you have in your hand?" and if the witness admits he was, and if that be in the nature of an impeaching statement or impeachment of any matter heretofore stated, that you haven't any objection to that type of examination?

Mr. Paisley: I would not, Your Honor. I should think he would.

The Court: On the basis of prior or alleged prior inconsistent statements.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir. Or if he says this: "If people [1379] say Bridges is a Communist, they are perjurors." If he can prove that—he can prove that, in my opinion.

Mr. Hallinan: And furthermore, on some of these matters this man was on a publicity committee that edited a certain document or certain papers. Now, by editing the paper as part of the committee, he embraces the document in it. So he wouldn't have to be the direct author of it. It comes out under his direction and under his authority.

The Court: Well, I think that you would have to accompany that type of examination with some explanatory note and permission on the part of the witness to make a full and complete exposition concerning the surrounding circumstances.

Mr. Hallinan: That may be true.

The Court: And point up the examination to the extent that you have a full and complete, detailed examination with respect to all of the implemented situations and surrounding circumstances.

Mr. Hallinan: I think that would be so. In other words——

The Court: I, of course, am in the usual and traditional position of a trial court. I can not anticipate what you have in mind altogether and I am naturally going to protect the record to the extent that I shall rule as and when you make your particular offer and as and when you examine the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, might I suggest this: Suppose, [1380] for instance, that I appeared with an editorial from a paper and handed it to you and said, "Here, read this and follow that; this is the truth; here is a true statement of the situation." Then afterwards, if I took a position contrary to that, and the matter were not collateral, that statement could be introduced to impeach me anyhow, because I had embraced it. Now, I think Mr. Paisley, for whatever I may say about his courtesy to other lawyers, seems to have a sound notion of the law and evidence. I will ask him if that isn't the true rule.

Mr. Paisley: I wasn't following you, counsel.

The Court: Well, of course, whatever Mr. Paisley has to say will not lead the Court one way or the other. I merely asked the opinion of counsel.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I think we agree upon it.

The Court: I merely asked the opinion of counsel for whatever it is worth. I will not go so far, I will tell you in advance, as to subscribe to whatever theory that the witness may embrace, as a generic quantity; and I will rule as the matter arises. I will take the matter under submission.

Mr. Hallinan: Would Your Honor look into that point of embracing things? Because that point will come up immediately. I will get some authorities upon it if there is any question.

The Court: As far as the looking up of law is concerned, I am a little weary of looking up the law. I will ask counsel [1381] to look it up.

All right, we will take the afternoon adjournment.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Thursday, December 1, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [1381-A]

Thursday, December 1, 1949—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Before calling the jury, we have further discussion in the matter of the legal question arising with respect to the question propounded to the witness Schomaker.

Mr. Hallinan: I would like to call your Honor's attention to one or two matters in connection with that. In a case, Estate of Gaines, 15 Cal. (2d), Supreme Court case, at page 262, this is a general rule:

> "One does not admit everything he recounts or describes merely by reason of the relating of it. On the other hand, it is equally well settled that there may be admissions other than statements made by the party himself; that is, statements of another may in some circumstances be treated as admissions of the parties. The situations are (1) where the person who makes the statement is in privity with the party against whom it is offered, as in the case of agency, partnership, etc., and (2) where the statement of the other is adopted by the party as his own, either expressly or by conduct. Familiar examples of this second situation are the admissions by silence, where declarations of third persons made in the presence of a party give rise to admissions, [1382] the conduct of the party in the face of the declaration constituting the adoption of the statement to form an admission (See 2 Wigmore, Evidence, Sections 1062, 1069 and 1071.)

"It would seem that in the instant case, when appellant repeated the declaration of decedent without challenging it, it became an admission against him."

Now, in 37 Corpus Juris at page 15 the general rule on adoption of matters of this kind includes also that of libel.

> "A vendor or publisher is liable in libel if he had knowledge that the newspaper distributed contained libelous matter."

And that is even a criminal prosecution for libel.

> "And in many cases in which the criminal syndicalism act was invoked, the distribution of literature with such circumstances as to indi> cate the distributor had knowledge of the contents. was held sufficient to support criminal convictions."

And here is the general rule, 3 Wigmore on Evidence, Third Edition, Section 1041:

> "There is only one proper inquiry, namely, Is there within the broad statement of opinion on the general question some implied assertion of fact inconsistent with the assertion made on the stand? If there is, it ought to be received whether or not it is clothed in or [1383] associated with the expression of opinion."

And I cite four cases sustaining that: Woody v. Utah Power and Light Company, 54 Fed. (2d) 227; Order of Commercial Travelers of Averica v. Tripp, 63 Fed. (2d) 37; Martin v. Cobb, 110 Fed. (2d) 159; and Snohomish v. Great Northern Railway, 130 Fed. (2d) 996.

There are dozens of State cases, but those are the four United States cases that I found within the short time I have devoted to it.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, so we may have a definition of the situation and a clarification, so that my ruling may be properly understood, you take a dual position, as I understand it:

(1) A proper foundation may be laid for the asserted impeachment of the witness Schomaker through writings heretofore made by the witness Schomaker allegedly inconsistent with statements made on the stand and allegedly inconsistent with matters implicit in his testimony.

Your secondary position, as I understand it, is briefly that you will seek or attempt to seek to impeach him with respect to matters which the prosecution regards as collateral, having to do with statements and utterances made by others in this publication in which he may have impliedly or by necessary implication joined.

Is that about your position? [1384]

Mr. Hallinan: Well, except as to the collateral matter.

The Court: Of course, that is the contention of the prosecution.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, I concede in a collateral matter you can't impeach a witness, but these are direct statements as to whether or not Harry Bridges was a Communist during the time which this witness testified that he was. In other words, I want to show that this man distributed and approved statements in publications authored by other persons but distributed by him, in which the flat assertion was made that Harry Bridges was not a member of the Communist Party, and which the flat assertion was made that anyone who said that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party was a perjurer and stool pigeon. That is my position.

The Court: Counsel for the Government? [1385]

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, as I see the problem, it is twofold: number one, with respect to the question of whether or not this witness may have assisted in the distribution of literature or publications——

The Court: Let us take the first proposition, in natural sequence.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: Let us take the first proposition in the light of your colleague's statement last evening; that is, Mr. Paisley's statement. What is your attitude as to the proposition, number one, with respect to the statement made by the defendant himself, allegedly made?

Mr. Donohue: I think there is no question, if Your Honor pleases, but that any statement made by the defendant himself on the stand may be impeached upon a proper foundation having been laid by proof that at some time he made a statement to the contrary. But with respect to that statement, may I respectfully invite Your Honor's attention to page 1187 of the record, wherein this question, upon the answer to which counsel now seeks to impeach the witness, was asked.

The Court: One moment. 1187?

Mr. Donohue: 1187, if Your Honor pleases, beginning at line 17.

Mr. Hallinan: "Question: At a meeting of the membership of the ILWU, held in the Coliseum Bowl on September 16, 1939, [1386] while the Landis hearing was proceeding, did you or did you not state orally to the meeting that witnesses who testified that Bridges was a Communist were perjurers and stool pigeons?"

By the Witness: "Well, I can't recall making such a statement."

Question: "At any time?"

The answer: "Well, there is one thing to making a statement in a conversation and another thing to making a statement in an open meeting. As I say, just cold like that, I can't recall it, no."

The Court: Well, to that extent the examiner, to impeach, was bound by the statement made by the witness. There is no question about that. That is elementary.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: And that is not our precise problem now. Our precise problem now, as I understand it, is where the impeacher, Mr. Hallinan, seeks by the proffer of a record, matters which it is alleged or asserted by him were written in effect by the defendant, or witness, Schomaker, and dissemination given thereto through the medium of a paper.

Mr. Donohue: Well, I see no basis upon which that can be used for an impeachment purpose, if Your Honor pleases, unless the witness is first asked, "Did you write——"

The Court: We must assume, I would assume that we dispose of the elemental things that we all agree upon. [1387]

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: The only differences we may have are those wherein refinements upon refinements may be made; but we all agree on the elementals of that. Number one, the proper foundation must be laid for the impeachment, or the attempted impeachment of the witness, and that has been held in this Circuit, in the Zamorra case, Zamorra v. United States, Judge Garrecht, our late and distinguished Judge Garrecht, said:

"Aside from any statute——" and we, of course, are mindful of the statute, the California statute on the subject.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: "——it is the general law that a sufficient foundation must be laid before the credibility of a witness may be attacked."

Citing the Osborne case, 17 Fed. 2d 246, wherein the late Judge Rudkin was the author of the opinion for the Circuit Court.

Now, we establish that premise. And then we take the second, again elemental, position with respect to foundation:

> "Most courts regard it as important that the practice should be so regular that the witness may have full opportunity to admit, deny or explain any statement which is assailed in such manner. Accordingly, it is held in the great majority of jurisdictions, at least where the matter is not already in the record in proper form as a result of [1388] direct examination, that a foundation must be laid on cross-examination of the particular witness by calling his attention specifically——" (Not generically, but specifically) "——to the acts or statements sought or intended to be shown as inconsistent with his previous testimony before such inconsistent acts or statements may be shown by other witnesses or evidence."

Now, that is from Jones on Evidence, Volume 6, at Section 3402 at page 4734. The text is identical as I read it, save and except for the interpolated matters, the matters which I have interpolated.

Now, coming to the Estate case, which Mr. Hallinan refers to, note how the Court pointed out the relationship of partnership or some privity of relationship that is not present in the case at bar. To be bound by a declaration of, let us say, Harry Bridges—to bind this witness, Mr. Schomaker, by a statement made by the defendant Harry Bridges, would not be within the ken of the relationship. Now, Mr. Bridges, according to Mr. Schomaker, wrote editorials. He had occasion to make statements. Whether or not Mr. Bridges said in those editorials, "Any man who testifies against Harry Bridges is a stool pigeon, a liar, a knave or a cheat," as it may appear, is a matter that we may determine upon. Let us assume that Mr. Bridges wrote that. Would Mr. Schomaker be bound by that?

Mr. Donohue: Obviously not, Your Honor. [1389]

The Court: Would that be impeachment?

Mr. Donohue: No, Your Honor.

The Court: Then, therefore, we come to the conclusion which I have reached: one, that the record must be presented to the witness, Mr. Schomaker; that he have an opportunity to examine the alleged impeachment matter, that he be asked the question categorically, did he make such and such a statement at such and such a time, fixing the time, place and parties present, or the periodical in question; that he then answer the question and have a full and complete opportunity to make such explanation as he may determine upon or as he may be advised. That will be the rule.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I be heard one moment before you conclude yourself? I have a short suggestion. The question of impeachment is so well known and the method of impeaching a witness, that long discussion on it would seem to be out of place in a court—more confined to a school of evidence. However, every question asked of a witness intended to show contradictory statements is not an impeaching question. Impeachment has one definite meaning; in other words, that you intend afterwards to produce some statement or document of the witness which contradicts the testimony that he gives. However, the right to ask a witness questions as to whether he made prior inconsistent statements is not confirmed to impeachment. Now, if you simply look up the matter of impeachment, then you will find [1390] the rule exactly as you stated. But Witkins Sixth Edition, gives some cases here:

> "Now where foundation is unnecessary. Not every question asked concerning a witness' prior statements is intended as an impeachment; and therefore a preliminary question may not be objectionable for failure to lay the foundation for impeachment. This point was explained in People v. Jones, 116 Cal. 359, where defendant's counsel asked a prosecution witness, 'did you not testify that you did not know the man until later at the preliminary examination?' Frequently such questions are designed to test the recollection of the witness, and frequently, as in the instance before us, the question is proper, though ultimately, and according > to the answer which may be made, it will or will not be followed by a strictly impeaching question. Thus it was proper to ask the witness if he had so testified. His answer might have been that he did not. When an impeaching question would properly follow, his answer might have been that he did so testify, with explanation of the variances between his answers; in which case no impeaching question would be necessary."

And that part is in quotations from the Supreme Court's decision.

> "See also LaSeuer v. Dow, 30 C.A., holding:
> "'No need to lay foundations before party can be asked if he [1391] had a conversation or what the conversation was or if he made a statement, what the statement was.' 13 Cal. Law Review."

So that the rule is this: Now you can question a witness. Suppose the witness is a dishonest witness, and he knows that he has put nothing in writing, or he questions whether you can produce a witness to impeach him directly. But he doesn't know whether you have or not. And you ask him the question, "Now have you ever made a statement to this effect?" The witness is puzzled as to whether he could be caught if he says yes or no. So he finally says, "Yes, I made such a statement." All right. Then you inquire, "Well, to whom did you make that statement?" He tells you. "When?" "Well, how do you explain that statement and its inconsistency with the statement you made just now?" if you want to pursue it that far. But now suppose the witness says, "No, I never made such a statement." Now, then, if you want to pursue it further and lay the ground for impeachment, then you have to say to him, "All right, now——" (because of the code section) "——on such and such a time as close as you can approximate, to such and such a person, did you not make this statement?" Then if the witness says, "No, I didn't make the statement," then you bring that person to impeach him. But an inquiry as to whether he ever made such a statement, whether he made it to different persons or at different times, statements inconsistent with his present statement, [1392] are not impeachment, but only cross-examination.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I have to assume, from the bale of paper you had before you, earmarked as they are, that you were assuming to examine this witness on editorial matter, and the like, to which he may or may not have participated. That was my own fault. I can not conjecture as to what you have in mind.

Mr. Hallinan: That isn't my only purpose, Judge.

The Court: And I say that under those conditions, the man is entitled to have shown to him the statements alleged to have been made by him.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, for instance, I want to show him documents which he distributed, sent out, in which he says this, or the author of the documents, said:

> "Actually Bridges is not a member of the Communist Party, in spite of forged documents and faked evidence to the contrary."

Now, I am entitled under this rule, and what I propose to do, and there is no use of arguing it out if Your Honor is sold on the particular proposition of law, though I doubt if you would be so intransigeant that you would take a position that was invariable; I want to ask him, "Did you not distribute these documents, didn't you hand them out at meetings, and didn't you suggest and recommend and send to other people to have them distributed, these documents, making this statement?" Now, I [1393] don't know what he is going to say, whether he will say yes or no. But my intent is to show that he has adopted the language in these documents by having distributed them. Now, I am not going to say to him, "Did you on the 30th day of September, 1937, in John Smith's——"

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I certainly can't anticipate at this juncture precisely what you have in mind in the course of your examination. I must meet these matters as they arise and meet them in the light of the rules as I may apply them.

Mr. Hallinan: But that is the point of law, I mean——

The Court: Of course, this is the first time that I have had any knowledge as to the precise matter that you have in mind. This is the first time you have disclosed it to me, thus far. I haven't inspected any of these documents.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, Your Honor, isn't this true, too, that a person has to take a sort of general attitude on those things, because you told the prosecution what the point is. Well, of course, they may not say anything to the witness, but they may go out and say to the witness, "Now, as soon as this is presented, 'no,' you say, 'I never saw it.' 'Say you never saw it.'" Now, that is the trap we walk into by having to explain the purpose of our cross-examination, and that is why the Court is, under the rules, required or supposed to repose some confidence in the cross-examiner's integrity that he has some purpose in it. Now, I really esteem that because of the [1394] lapse of time overnight, that all these will be met by this witness saying, "I never saw them"; whereas, if I had been able to confront him them without all the discussion, without giving him an opportunity to be forearmed——

The Court: Well, I do not regard your veiled allusions, as well taken, nor the ascribing to the prosecution any of the matter that you ascribe to them in connection with overnight matters and the like. I have been looking for the solution to a problem of law, and I have been looking for a sound rule of discretion. Now this is the first time that I had any disclosure from you as to what you proposed to do.

Mr. Hallinan: But, Your Honor, the point that disturbs me on the rulings that you have made on these things is, they do not relate to this directly but to the more general principle. And I have seen all sorts—I have had the exact same ruling that you have made, I have been confronted with it a hundred times. A judge will take the position that any question addressed to the witness as to a prior inconsistent statement is the basis for impeachment only.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, up to this juncture, will you say and admit to this Court that your cross-examination has not been circumscribed by this Court?

Mr. Hallinan: I think it is as fair as I have ever met.

The Court: All right. Now, the background is clear.

Mr. Hallinan: And I am not saying, [1395] Judge——

The Court: Let us try to continue that way.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. Well, Judge, you do not understand that I do not by any manner suggest or suppose or assume or intend that that suggestion on the distinction between a question of the witness to test his credibility or to draw an admission and that on impeachment, that Your Honor is taking any flat position. I only say that I think you have not made, as to this witness, the necessary distinction; that what I am trying to do, first, is to see whether the witness admit prior inconsistent statements.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, will your now admit to me that this is the first time I have had any notion what you have in mind?

Mr. Hallinan: I do, yes.

The Court: You made your disclosure to me just now. This is the first time I have had any notion or knowledge. Mr. Paisley, what have you to say about this matter?

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, I think we all understand what the law is.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Paisley: What I hope we can avoid in this case is, it may be that counsel doesn't intend to do it, but I don't think he has the right to take these editorials and these papers—I have never seen one of them, they may be one paper, they may be 20 pages—I don't think he can stand up here and read at [1396] length from some editorial or from some news item in the paper, or whatever it is, and thus get before the jury a lot of immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent matter that the jury shouldn't have before it. I think he should, if he has something in writing, submit it to the witness, submit it to counsel; rather than get up here and read it in the presence of the jury. That is what I anticipate—I hope I am wrong, and I hope I can avoid that. That is my feeling.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, there isn't any question that if the matter doesn't relate to a contradiction—although I do say this: I have other cases and a great many of them, where the contradiction is not a direct contradiction of what the witness said, but even the statement of an opinion, which contains a contradiction of what he said; that that is admissible, too.

The Court: Well, now, the point I have in mind is one step perhaps beyond anything we have said thus far. And it has to do with, no doubt, encomiums of praise contained in those editorials concerning

Mr. Bridges, benign statements and the like, no doubt set forth with good faith by the editorial writer. Now, to say that Mr. Schomaker is to be bound in this current examination by these extrajudicial statements, made long since and years ago by other persons, certainly is not within the ken of any rule I know.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I think you are right on that.

The Court: No. [1397]

Mr. Hallinan: It is only that whether he has embraced the thing or adopted it. Now, here is——

The Court: And that would be a matter of proper foundation by asking the precise question.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. But then, of course, it comes down to this, that finally, whether a witness has adopted the statement or opinion of another, is pretty much a matter of fact for the jury. The court can say, "Well, here is the limit that I won't exceed, to the jury. There is so little evidence of adoption by this conduct that I don't think the jury should be entitled to weigh it." But from that point on, whether or not the witness has adopted that opinion is a question for the jury. Now, here is a matter from the same book I read, a prior opinion.

> "The inconsistent statement may be an opinion."

In Hanton v. Pacific Electric Railway Company, 178 Cal. 616, a personal injury suit. Plaintiff's witness testified that she saw plaintiff close to and walking fast toward the car, lost sight of him and about fifteen seconds later the car started. On cross-examination her prior written statement was produced, in which she said the car had started, "and I am sure it was moving before he could have gotten to it." That was held to be inadmissible.

The Court: I read that case.

Mr. Hallinan: I had some case, Gaksteder against the Market [1398] Street Railway Company.

The Court: I am familiar with that.

Mr. Hallinan: It was tried about five times.

The Court: It was tried twice.

Mr. Hallinan: No, it was tried five times.

The Court: Five times, was it.

Mr. Hallinan: And in one of them a police officer whom I had as a witness testified that the car was going 30 miles an hour. That was all he said. And that the motorman told him the child came from the opposite side of the street. They asked him on cross-examination, "Didn't you state that in your opinion the motorman made a fine stop and was not at fault?" So I objected, that was not inconsistent; the objection was sustained, and it was reversed on that point alone. They held that the statement,—that the jury were entitled to consider whether the statement that the conductor was not at fault was or was not consistent with his previous testimony, that the car was going 30 miles an hour. [1399]

The Court: Let us call Mr. Schomaker and the jury. I think we have a fairly good definition of what we have in mind, and we will meet the objections to the offers when we arrive at them.

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, may

I interrupt for just a moment in order to avoid some possible confusion as to the application of the rules of evidence in a criminal trial in the Federal Court. It will be remembered that Mr. Hallinan has been referring to a great many California cases. The Estate matter to which he referred arose under a statute of California. He has referred to Witkin's summary of California law. The other decisions he referred to are all California cases. I am familiar with the case of People v. Hart; I am familiar with the case of People v. Jones. One is by Judge Melville and the other was by Judge Henshaw as to the proposition of law that you can examine a witness, testing his credibility and his recollection, without laying a foundation for impeachment. It is only after he gives his answer that you may lay that foundation.

The Court: Counsel, I read the Federal rule of Judge Rudkin and Judge Garrecht.

Mr. McMillan: That is exactly what I want to call to your Honor's attention. We are dealing with California cases, damage cases and others mentioned by Mr. Hallinan, civil cases. Here is the rule in the Federal Court that must never [1400] be lost sight of in the application of the rules of evidence and the principles of evidence in the Federal Court. This is Rule 26 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure:

> "In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by an act of Congress or by these rules. The admissibility of evidence and the competency and privileges of witnesses shall be governed, except when an act of Congress or these rules otherwise provide, by the principles of the common law as they may be interpreted by the courts of the United States in the light of reason and experience."

Now, it is true under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that you may adopt, where there is no rule or decision or act of Congress with reference to a rule of evidence in a civil matter, you may then adopt the rule prevailing in the State in which the action is tried, but that is not true with reference to criminal cases.

The Court: That is so under the doctrine of Erie v. Tompkins.

Mr. McMillan: That is right. Your Honor has correctly expressed the rule that governs in the Federal Court when your Honor referred to the decision of the Osborn case by Judge Rudkin and also referred to that decision by His Honor Judge Garrecht. We are governed here by the rules of the common [1401] law and also by Federal decisions and acts of Congress, not by the rules of the State practice.

The Court: Mr. McMillan, I appreciate your comment. I shall attempt to adhere to the rules that are traditional to these courts.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, could I bother you to read one short excerpt more that sustains the position I was taking:

"Inconsistency in effect rather than contradiction in express terms is the test. Even though no particular contradiction is found, if the general purport of the testimony is compared with the whole statement and they appear to be the result of inconsistent application, the prior statement is admissible."

Now, as you pointed out, in some of these documents there were statements laudatory of Harry Bridges and encomiums about him. I think under this rule they would be admissible, but I do not propose to offer those, at least with this witness. As I say, I think that the cross-examination has been treated with great fairness. You have given us scope and extent in it, and I hope I justified the reason I had in mind.

The Court: The reason for this extended discussion is to understand our road and where we are going.

Mr. Hallinan: I say I want to be fair with the Court and not put in something that would be inadmissible, in my opinion. [1402]

The Court: Thank you, Mr. Hallinan.

Call the jury and the witness.

(Thereupon the jury returned to the courtroom and, being seated in the jury box, the following proceedings were had:)

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is John H. Schomaker, heretofore sworn.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Hallinan, with further cross-examination.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Schomaker, you testified about a certain card that you say was signed by Harry Bridges sometime back in 1933 in a restaurant at which you and B. B. Jones were present, and I think you said what, so far as you know, became of that card. What was done with the card, as far as you remember?

A. You mean after it came in Jones's possession?

Q. Yes. You told about walking up the street, and so forth. What was its final disposition, and so forth, so far as you observed?

A. Well, we walked up Market Street——

Q. No, you testified to that. You said you got to Communist headquarters and then something was done with the card. What was that? [1403]

A. We entered 37 Grove Street. That was the address, 37 Grove Street.

Q. What was done with the card?

A. Well, we entered 37 Grove Street and went up onto the mezzanine floor and to the office of Sam Darcy.

Q. And what was done with the card?

A. Oh, then Jones turned it in to Sam Darcy.

Q. Had you ever turned in similar cards before, cards of other persons? A. I had, yes.

Q. How many, approximately?

A. Well, it was a considerable number. Over a period of years it would run into a considerable number, yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. As many as a hundred or two hundred?

A. I would say, to be conservative, I would say 100.

Q. Do you know what was done with those cards when they were turned in there? To whom were they turned in? Mr. Darcy? Withdraw that.

Don't you remember that you testified it was given to some secretary or some girl there?

A. I testified to that?

Q. Yes. Wasn't that your testimony? Well, do you remember?

A. I certainly do remember. Certainly I remember.

Q. To whom was it handed?

A. In this particular case Jones and I went into 37 Grove, [1404] went up on the mezzanine floor, and Jones, with a smile, gave the card to Samuel Darcy.

Q. To Darcy himself?

A. The district organizer of the Communist Party.

Q. When did you get the book that you said bore the name Harry Dorgan on it?

A. Well, every Saturday they had a meeting and the section organizers attended, and there they got —well, they had a meeting and they discussed the situations in the various sections——

Q. That is not what I asked you. Will you confine your answers to the questions. I asked you, When did you get the book with "Harry Dorgan" on it? When?

A. Do you mean the exact date?

Q. About. How long after you turned in this application that you talked about?

A. I am just trying to give you the background.

Q. Just approximately in time.

A. Well, in the case of the Bridges book there was a peculiar incident about that, because it was——

Q. I am coming to that later.

Mr. Paisley: I think he can answer.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, that is not an answer to the question.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan asked a specific question. I think he is entitled to an answer to it and any explanation [1405] the witness may make is quite all right, but he is entitled to an answer.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Was it a week after, a month after, or what was it that you got the Harry Dorgan book that you testified to?

A. It was longer than the average time that would elapse to get an ordinary book, yes.

Q. What was the average time?

A. The average time would be, if you turned the application in on a Monday, why, that next Saturday the book would be issued.

Q. Was there some sort of a meeting that would pass upon the application?

A. That is correct. It was a membership—I think they referred to it as a membership committee or application committee, and any applicants that would apply to join the Communist Party had to be proposed by someone, and from there it would go to a membership committee, who would carry on an investigation as best as possible, and then the book would be issued if the person was considered safe-worth, and so forth—met the qualifications of being a Communist.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. How many people were on the membership committee?

A. I didn't have too much connection with the membership committee.

Q. Approximately. [1406]

A. I would say three or four persons..

Q. Was this procedure that you have testified to the procedure in all cases of admission to the Communist Party you knew of?

A. No, it was not. The Bridges case was an exceptional case.

Q. So ordinarily this application would be submitted to three or four persons, is that right?

A. Well, no, it would not be submitted.

Q. I say ordinarily an application would be submitted to three or four persons?

A. No, that is not correct. The way you pose the question is not correct. The persons who made the applications out, who recruited a certain person to join, for membership in the Communist Party, they turned the applications in to the unit organizer, and the unit organizer turned it over to the section organizer. The section organizer turned it in to 37 Grove Street, and later to 121 Haight Street, and there they had a membership committee which met and would carry on an investigation as best as possible of the proposed member. But in the Bridges instance it was entirely different.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. I am asking about the ordinary one, not the Bridges one.

A. I am telling you the ordinary one and I am telling you the exception.

Q. We will come to that in a moment. So that ordinarily a membership application was delivered first to a unit organizer [1407] and by him to a section organizer and by him it was delivered or it was turned over to a membership committee to pass upon the application, is that right—ordinarily?

A. That was the general rule, yes.

Q. When the application was passed upon verbally, what was done with the application card?

A. Well, I never saw the application card again.

Q. Do you know what was done with it? Was it filed? Was it sent to some central headquarters, sent elsewhere, or what?

A. As far as I know, it was filed for a certain length of time and then destroyed.

Q. How long was it filed?

A. That is something I cannot answer. I don't know.

Q. Would it be for several years?

A. I don't know. I don't have the slightest idea.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Who had charge of the files in which they were contained?

A. I was down on the waterfront as a section organizer and had no connection whatsoever with the filing or any of the office work that was carried on there at 37 Grove Street or 121 Haight Street. I have no conception whatsoever of what they did there.

Q. In addition to Mr. Darcy at 37 Grove Street, were there other officials of the Communist Party who had their offices there and who functioned from that address? A. Well, yes, there was. [1408]

Q. How many?

A. I think that your conception of the Communist Party is so——

Q. If you don't mind, we won't bother with my conception of the Communist Party. I asked you how many officials of the Communist Party in addition to Mr. Darcy performed their functions from No. 37 Grove Street, that is, that they had offices there, had office space, or they came and went and did certain work in that building. How many?

A. As I say, in those days the Communist Party was a vest-pocket organization.

Q. How many?

A. Well, the Western Worker had their offices there.

Q. How many people were in the Western Worker?

A. Well, they had the editor and they had the assistant editor.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Anyone else?

A. Well, then the circulation manager—the circulation manager and the advertising manager was the same.

Q. Who else?

A. Then you had the trade union director.

Q. Anyone else?

A. And you had the membership director.

Q. Anyone else?

A. And you had the agitation and propaganda director. [1409]

Q. All right. Who else?

A. To the best of my recollection, there was more, but that is the best of my recollection.

Q. Were there any stenographers working there?

A. Well, yes. I thought you just wanted the directors of the Communist Party.

Q. These are all the directors that you can remember, is that correct. A. That is correct.

Q. You think there were some more, but you can't remember them, is that right?

A. I say, to the best of my recollection that was the total of the functionaries of the Communist Party at the headquarters.

Q. That would be, then, in addition to Mr. Darcy there were five other persons whom you remember?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Were there office stenographers there?

A. There was, yes.

Q. How many?

A. Mr. Darcy had a stenographer. She did other work, too, but, as I say, the Communist Party was a vest-pocket organization.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Any other stenographer?

A. I don't know if you could classify them as stenographers [1410] or they doubled for other jobs, too.

Q. How many? How many people were doing that kind of work, either stenographers or doubling in their jobs?

A. That kind of work was mostly voluntarily and if a person had a day off on their jobs they would come down and help out, so it would vary from day to day.

Q. Would there be as many as ten or fifteen people who did that off and on?

A. I wouldn't want to give a figure, because——

Q. Well, roughly.

A. As I say, I came to the office maybe once a day some days, maybe two or three times a day on other days. I was in and out. I didn't stick my nose in each office and check up on each person and what he was doing there. It didn't concern me.

Q. There were people who would act as volunteer workers when they had a day or two off?

A. That is right.

Q. You do not know how many there may have been. There might have been as many as twenty or as few as five or six?

A. It varied with the campaign that was under way. If there was a vigorous campaign under way there would be more. When things slacked off there would be less.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Was there any file clerk or anything like that?

A. I wouldn't know whether there was or not. [1411]

Q. When you had books issued for the numerous people you described, who gave you those books?

A. As I say, we had meetings of the section organizers.

Q. Let us forget that for a minute.

A. I am trying to explain how the books were issued.

Q. You said at the end of the year, for instance, you turned in the old books and had new books issued. To whom did you turn in the old books?

A. That is what I am trying to explain if you will permit me.

Q. What was the name of the person to whom you turned them in?

A. There was a Kay McGee at one time.

Q. What was her job there or her office?

A. She generally was secretary to Sam Darcy, at times, I say. I think she was the director of the membership drives.

Q. Then who were some of the other people who occupied that same position?

A. Betty Gannett occupied the position of membership director.

Q. Did you get some of the books from her or turn in some books to her on occasion?

A. That is right.

Q. Anybody else?

A. It was mostly a woman, that is, generally a woman, and at this time those are the two people that stand out prominently that I remember. [1412]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. But there may have been more, is that right?

A. There may have been more, yes.

Q. You do not know where in the office they filed these applications, is that right?

A. Well, to be very frank, I don't think they filed them in that office.

Q. Where did they send them?

A. I haven't the slightest idea. For security reasons they didn't tell me what they were going to do with the confidential data they had.

Q. You do not know where those applications were sent?

A. It was no concern of myself at all. It was no concern of myself whatsoever.

Q. You said that a book was issued in the name of Harry Dorgan and that book was turned over to you and you delivered it to Harry Bridges?

A. Personally; that is correct.

Q. And that book had the name of the member, as I take it, Harry Dorgan? A. That is right.

Q. But there was no place for the signature of Harry Dorgan, is that right?

A. As close as I can recall, at the head of the book there was the name that was either typed or written in, and then at the bottom I think the member could sign it. [1413]

Q. But he didn't have to sign it?

A. That is correct. That is as much as I can recall. I haven't seen a book for so long that——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Do you have your own book, the book that was issued to you at the time? A. No, I have not.

Q. How many separate books were issued to you?

A. Well, at the end of each year they called in the old books and issued new ones.

Q. Where was the last one that you got?

A. The last one I got was at Jack Shaw's house.

Q. I say, where is it now?

A. I haven't got the slightest idea where it is.

Q. What did you do with it when you got it?

A. When I got it?

Q. Yes. A. I kept it.

Q. What name was it issued in?

A. John Delaney.

Q. Was it signed by you?

A. As I say, the page of the book—whether a member had it signed—I know that Sam Darcy signed it and later Schneidermann, and it was initialed, the membership stamp was initialed by what they called the control director. Now, whether or not the member had to sign it, that is—I can't [1414] recall whether he did or not.

Q. You say that some books, some membership books were held in the office of the Communist Party itself, is that right?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. You testified that at the end of the year you would pick up the books of people with whom you were in contact, take them out, and the new books would be issued and you would deliver those books back, but you said some of the books were not delivered back to the persons because they wanted them held at the headquarters of the Communist Party itself. Do you remember so testifying?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. So that a person could leave his book in the files or in the office of the Communist Party and not have it in his home or in his personal office at all, is that right?

A. Not exactly correct, no. What would happen, the section organizer would pick up the books at the headquarters and deliver them to the unit, the unit dues secretary or the unit organizer, and there it was up to the disposition of each member whether he or she wanted their books to be held by the unit dues secretary or when the meeting was held he would pick it himself, if they wanted to carry it themselves.

Q. But if he didn't want to carry it himself, the Party would hold it for him, is that right?

A. That is, the unit dues secretary would hold it for him. [1415]

Q. Where would the unit dues secretary keep those books?

A. Your guess is just as good as mine on that.

Q. During the time you were acting in the capacity that you have testified were there certain members whom you had recorded or with whom you were in touch whose books were retained by the dues secretary? A. Why, there was, yes.

Q. About how many?

A. Well, it varied according to the membership.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. The only books that you ever saw issued, you say, to Harry Bridges bore the name Harry Dorgan, is that right?

A. That is all I saw, yes.

Q. You never saw any book issued to him under any other name, did you?

A. No, I did not, not during my term in the Communist Party I did not, no.

Q. You left the Communist Party in 1939 or 1940, did you?

A. That is right, but before I——

Q. Which one? A. Pardon?

Q. Which year?

A. It was either in the fall or winter of 1940. It was during the time of the Russian-Finnish war.

Q. What was the highest position you held in the Communist Party? [1416]

A. Well, it was section organizer and also membership district committee, if you call those high positions; that is what I occupied.

Q. What is the highest position you have held in the ILA?

A. You mean a paid position, do you mean?

Q. Any position.

A. I suppose that would be a matter of opinion.

Q. What were the names of the positions?

A. The positions I held—I was the business agent from 1937 to 1938, that is, one year, and I was the publicity director. I was on the Labor Relations Board. Now, in some people's opinion maybe the Labor Relations Board is more important than being a business agent, I don't know, or being a director is more important than being a labor relations committee man.

Q. You never knew of any cards being issued to Harry Bridges under the name of Harold Harvey, did you?

A. No, I can seriously say I never have, no.

Q. You never heard of any Party book being issued to him under the name of Canfield, did you?

A. That is all news to me.

Q. You never heard of any Party book being issued to him under the name of Rossi, did you?

A. Seems to me Rossi—there was some member in the unit that had that name, but who it was—it wasn't Bridges, I [1417] know, but it was someone else.

Q. You never heard of Bridges being so designated in the Party?

A. No, his Party name was Harry Dorgan.

Q. You never heard of Harry Bridges being elected to any office in the Communist Party, did you?

A. He was a member of the district committee—there was some angle in there some way—of the district committee, whereas like persons like myself, I was a member of the district committee, and I met with these extraordinary sessions that they held, but there was some connection with Bridges there that is kind of vague, that there was some connection with the district committee where he met with the Bureau in some fashion or another, that they would meet, not with the large group of the district committee, but as the Bureau would meet, the Bureau being the executive Committee of the district committee. [1418]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. How big was the district, what geographical space did it cover?

A. Well, it covered, to the best of my recollection, it covered California, parts of Nevada, and a part of Arizona.

Q. Were you ever present at any meeting at which Mr. Bridges attended any such bureau meeting as you just mentioned?

A. Well, you could call the meetings with Sam Darcy and myself and Harry Jackson and Henry Schmidt, in a sense they were bureau meetings.

Q. All right. Now, will you tell me this: You said that Mr. Bridges' application, that there was something extraordinary about it, that they didn't go through, or the application did not go through, the ordinary channels. Is that roughly correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the reason for that, I take it, is that he was an alien and subject to deportation if he were known to be a member of the Communist Party, and hence his membership had to be kept concealed, is that right?

A. Well, not only for those reasons, because every member, his membership was kept concealed. But in Bridges' case, extraordinary precautions were taken.

Q. For that reason that I just enunciated, is that right?

A. Well, primarily, I guess you are correct on that.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. All right. So that at the time—Now, did you narrate the [1419] whole conversation relating to Mr. Bridges joining the Communist Party that you and B. B. Jones had with him in the restaurant?

A. Well, to the best of my recollection, I did, yes.

Q. Now, at that time, then, so we can get it clearly, Mr. Bridges, who was in danger of being deported as an alien, and who, you knew and he knew, would be deported as an alien if it were known that he joined the Communist Party——

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, this type of question is obviously argumentative.

The Court: The question hasn't been completed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Went through a procedure, therefore, a little different from the ordinary means of applying for a membership in the Communist Party, is that correct?

A. That is not wholly correct, no.

Q. All right. Now when Mr. Bridges,—At the time that you say you got an application for the Communist Party for Mr. Bridges, you had had discussions, I take it, with Mr. Bridges or had heard discussions, in which it was pointed out that if he were known to be a member of the Communist Party, he would be immediately deported. That's right, isn't it?

A. Why, it is ridiculous.

Q. All right. Now, at the time that Mr. Bridges signed this application for you, he had known you about a month, isn't that right? [1420]

A. Well, that is approximately correct. The date

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)
—I mean, the time element; whether it was 30 days or 45 days or 60 days, I can not specify a certain time, no. But it was around—I would say between 30 and 60 days, yes.

Q. What happened, what in your experience happened to a member of the Communist Party who failed to pay his dues?

A. That was the cardinal law of the Communist Party. In order to be an active Communist, you had to pay dues and you had to be an active member. Otherwise you weren't a member.

Q. Did you have to have filed an application?

A. You mean, to join the Communist Party?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, certainly. How else could you become a member?

Q. Did you have to have, had a card issued to you? A. That's correct, yes.

Q. Well, do you know of any instances in which persons were accepted into membership in the Communist Party where they hadn't signed an application?

A. Well, in my experience in the Communist Party, I never heard of any such instance, no.

Q. Did you ever hear of any instance in which a person was allowed to remain in the Communist Party without paying any dues?

A. No, I said, that was the cardinal principle of the Communist Party. [1421]

Q. Did you ever know of anybody being in the Communist Party without having any book issued to him?

A. Well, on the waterfront among the longshoremen and seamen and bargemen and scalers, why, it wasn't the case. But in the higher circles it may have been, with the intelligentsia. They may be a member and not a book issued. I don't know anything about that. But in the waterfront where the longshoremen and seamen were, you had to have a book and pay weekly dues and attend weekly meetings.

Q. Well, did you ever know, personally know, regardless of what might have been the rule, did you ever encounter personally a situation in which a person became a member without having a book issued to him and paying dues?

A. No, I say, the cardinal principle of the Communist Party, which was stressed, which made the Communist Party so effective, was the fact that you had to pay weekly dues, you had to attend a weekly meeting and assume the voluntary discipline of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Should we take a recess now, Judge?

The Court: Yes, we might take a short recess this morning, shorter than ordinarily would be taken, so we will recess around 11:40 for the reason that John Fixa is to be installed as the postmaster; the oath of office is to be administered to him here. So with that in mind, we will take a short recess. The same admonition to you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. [1422]

(Recess.)

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You say that shortly after you came to San Francisco you received directions from Mr. Darcy to recruit Harry Bridges for the Communist Party, is that right?

A. Well, it didn't come about just like that.

Q. Well, you did receive directions from him to recruit Harry Bridges, you so testified, didn't you?

A. Well, I say, I didn't walk into the office and Sam Darcy didn't say to me, "Get down to the waterfront and recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party." No, it wasn't like that at all. It came about after meetings, several meetings, and a thorough discussion of the situation on the waterfront.

Q. And he told you then, after all this preliminary, to recruit Harry Bridges, did he?

A. Well, as I say, it didn't come out just like that.

Q. Well, how did it come out?

A. Well, as I say, I moved into San Francisco and just—since I was a member of the Communist Party, after I got settled, I reported to the district headquarters of the Communist Party, and since I had some connections on the waterfront, I was willing to go to work on the waterfront, or seek work there at least. And I was assigned to the waterfront, what they call the "downtown waterfront section." And there Herman Mann was the principal Communist carrying work on on the waterfront.

Q. Well, just a moment. We have gotten into a rambling [1423] background of this. I want to know this: You testified now originally that you received some orders or directions or recommendations or advice—I don't care what you call it—from Sam Darcy to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party. Is that right or is it wrong?

A. Well, if you will allow me to explain, when the question was asked me before, if I can recall correctly, due to the objections it wasn't made clear exactly how this came about.

Q. All right. Well, then,——

A. So at this time I would like to have permission to explain it.

Q. You can explain it afterwards. Answer it first and then if there is any explanation necessary, you can give it. Did or did not Sam Darcy suggest to you or tell you or recommend to you to recruit or attempt to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party? A. Yes, he did.

Q. All right.

A. And now I would like to explain it.

Q. No, I don't think any explanation is necessary.

Mr. Paisley: I think he can, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: An explanation is supposed to be an explanation of an answer which may be ambiguous, not an explanation of why a person did a thing or the conduct of it. We are not interested in that. [1424]

The Witness: Well, you put me in a very unfair advantage, so to say, that I tried to explain before, that this didn't just come about out of thin air; certainly conditions existed on the waterfront that we discussed thoroughly, and that was——

Q. What position do you think you occupied in this case that you are to be placed at an advantage or disadvantage?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I ask that the witness be allowed to explain. He said that the answer in a simple yes or no doesn't explain it.

The Court: He has partially made an explanation now, and now the question posed is as to what position he occupies. He may answer that.

Mr. Paisley: I think he was cut off.

The Court: I think the witness is capable of answering it.

The Witness: What is it?

The Court: The question addressed to you; (to the Reporter) Would you read that, please?

(Record read.)

A. Well, I am up here as a witness, trying to tell the truth, which I am doing to the best of my ability. But by this constant heckling, I am interrupted, and as I say, you take an unfair advantage of me by opposing these objections, because I haven't got a legal background or, why, at times you absolutely confuse me, speaking very frankly.

Q. (By Mr. Halliman, clicking tongue): I regret it [1425] exceedingly. The last thing I would want to do is to do you any harm or cause you any embarrassment. Now let me ask you this: You came to San Francisco in October of 1933, is that right?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, it was, I would say, the latter part or from the middle of—I mean, yes, the middle of October, 1933, is as best I can recollect. And——

Q. And you went to the Communist headquarters, is that right, some time after that?

A. Well, after I got settled I did, yes.

Q. And when you went to the Communist headquarters, did you meet Mr. Sam Darcy?

A. Well, I always met—if he was in, I generally had a talk with him, yes.

Q. Now, I mean, when you first went there, did you meet Mr. Darcy?

A. Oh, yes, that was the general program.

Q. Had you ever known him before?

A. Pardon?

Q. Had you known Mr. Sam Darcy prior to that time?

A. Why, yes, I knew Sam Darcy.

Q. Had you—— A. Personally.

Q. Had you met him before?

A. Why, certainly. How could you know a person—I was intimate [1426] with him, that is what I wanted to say.

Q. When you first came to San Francisco, you had already been intimate with Sam Darcy, is that right?

A. Well, I sat in meetings with him and I discussed a lot of problems with him, yes.

Q. Before coming to San Francisco?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Now, Sam Darcy, then, finally

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

wanted you to recruit Harry Bridges as a member in the Communist Party, is that right?

A. Because the situation——

Q. No. Answer it yes or no.

Mr. Paisley: He has already answered it, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: "Because of the situation——".

Mr. Paisley: He can't ask him the same questions over and over again. Less than two minutes ago he answered that affirmatively. Now he asks him again.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Let me ask you this: Did he tell you to recruit Harry Bridges personally or just to recruit an officer of the union? Which?

A. Well, the way you pose that question, I can't answer it yes or no; it is impossible.

Q. All right, then never mind it. Now, you say that Harry Bridges was considered to be at that time an important candidate or an important person to get into the Communist party, is [1427] that right?

A. Well, no, that is not exactly correct either.

Q. All right. Now, did Sam Darcy say to you that he considered it important to get Harry Bridges into the Communist Party?

A. Well, after a discussion, and we considered other candidates, yes.

Q. All right.

A. Considering other people first, we come to the conclusion that Harry Bridges was the best person to lead the union on the waterfront.

Q. And why?

A. Well, now, can I explain that now?

Q. Tell us what reason you had to arrive at why he would be the person who should be selected.

A. Well, as I say, I didn't know Harry Bridges from a cargo hook when I came to San Francisco, and as I say, because I was a member of the Communist Party and I went to work on the waterfront, or sought work on the waterfront, I joined the union with the first paycheck that I made, and then because I was a Communist, I became active to strengthen the union. And we had a discussion——

Q. Pardon me.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, that isn't what—I asked him why it was discussed or what reason was given why Harry Bridges should be an important person to recruit. Now, not all the [1428] previous history that he has stated and restated.

The Court: Well, the question may require, Mr. Hallinan, in this instance, some background as to——

Mr. Hallinan: But he has given it ten times. He has already told us ten times.

Q. I only want to know this: If any reason was given why Harry Bridges was an important person to recruit.

A. Oh, all I can explain it, that the situation was so complicated on the waterfront——

Q. Just a moment.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I object to that.

Q. Was or was not any reason given to you why Harry Bridges—now not the situation or you or anything else, but any reason given to you why Harry Bridges would be an important person to recruit for the Communist Party.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, Your Honor, I can't answer that until I get some background to explain why the decision was reached. It is impossible.

Q. All right. Well, was anything said that it was important to recruit Harry Bridges into the Communist Party because he was some high officer in the ILA?

A. Well, at that time, to the best of my recollection, Harry Bridges was a member of the executive board of the ILA, Local 3879.

Q. And that is all, isn't it? [1429]

A. No, that was not all, certainly not.

Q. And you found that out since you gave your first testimony in this case, didn't you?

A. Listen, I knew this from 1933 and give me permission to explain it, I can explain it.

The Court: All right. Now at this juncture you may explain it in the light of your answer, what you have in mind. As briefly as possible.

The Witness: As briefly as I can, in these words, that as the situation on the waterfront was extremely complicated. That is, the Wagner Act had just been passed and the so-called "New Deal" was just in its first stages and developing. You had a company union on the one hand with a part of the men belonging to it; you had the ILA union, affiliated to the American Federation of Labor, on the other, with part of the men belonging to that. You had the Marine Workers Industrial Union in the background, and you had the Communist Party. Now, the background was so confused, that is, when the Wagner Act went into effect, why, immediately they began organizing the ILA and Harry Bridges was not a part of that organization committee. They elected officers and there was a program to boycott the election, even, of the ILA, because it wasn't clear what union was to eventually assume leadership. So after that first upsurge of organization, why, then it slacked off because the ILA didn't take any active part, because certain men [1430] were being blacklisted. There was a suit pending with the Labor Relations, the National Labor Relations Board, on account of this blacklisting, and it was an extremely confused situation. That is when I arrived there. So the Communist Party wasn't as active as what Sam Darcy and other people, members, thought it should be. So we discussed the situation. I got a background of it, and at that discussion Herman Mann, myself and Sam Darcy asked —he says, "Who would be the best man down there to head this thing up?" Well, naturally, it wouldn't have been me—just on the 'front a very short time, a very few people knew me, and Herman Mann was in the same position, although Herman was a very capable person. So he said, "Who down there could do it?" So we considered men from the Matson dock. Most of them were young Irish fellows, didn't know much about trade unionism, but they were militant and they were willing to fight because of the extreme conditions that existed on the Matson dock at that time. And we even considered a few of those people. In fact, Herman and I went out to see one in particular who had contributed articles to the Waterfront Worker. So it was no go there, after talking to the guy a few minutes. We could see it was no go, so we come back. And so Sam says, "What did you figure out on this thing?" So Herman says, "The best guy down there is this guy Bridges." And "Why?" "Because he had spoken several times at the street meetings and he had worked with the waterfront workers group." So Sam says, "For Christ sake, [1431] go down and get him." And that is exactly what we did. We proceeded to go down and get him, and that is what we did—we got him, with membership, signed up in the Communist Party, functioning, disciplined member of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You found out since you started testifying here that you had made a wrong guess on Bridges' being an officer of the union at that time, didn't you?

A. I didn't make no wrong guess, because I am telling the truth.

Q. Yes. You testified originally here that the reason that you were sent down to get Harry Bridges in was that he was president of a waterfront union, didn't you?

A. (Laughing): That is absolutely incorrect, because we—the Communist Party, was able to put Harry Bridges in as president of Local 3879. And if you will listen, I will tell you how it was done.

Q. Who was president in 1933?

A. Who was president?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, Lee J. Holman, "Ashcan" Holman they called him later on.

Q. Uh-huh. "Ashcan" Holman. I am going to make a note of that because I can use it a little later on, along with——

A. Well, I used it a lot of times, too. Ashcan.

Q. Ashcan. All right. Now, around that same time a man named Jim Branch, who was an alien, an English citizen, was deported [1432] from the United States because he was a member of the Communist Party, isn't that right?

A. In 1933? You are asking if that happened in 1933?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the best of my recollection, I knew Branch—I have been to his house, and I knew him fairly well.

Q. Was he deported?

A. Well, let me explain. I think it was later than 1933.

Q. Well, was he deported?

A. Well, eventually he was deported, yes, and he died in this last war, I understand—killed in action, the British forces.

Q. And was he deported because he was an alien and a member of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. I do not know the exact circumstances of his deportation, no.

Q. Now, what year did you say you were born in? A. 1903.

Q. 1903. So at that the time that you first met Harry Bridges you were 30. That's correct, more or less? Now, you gave us some of your personal history; you said you had been a miner, and then you said, "I was bumming the country." Now, what did you mean by that?

A. Well, at that time I think Mr. Hearst had carried the banner that said, "See America First," and being a very impressionable youth, I decided to see America first. [1433]

Q. And in what fashion did you go seeing it

A. Well, principally by the boxcar route.

Q. And how long did that last?

A. Well, in the period of that, 1922, I bummed over the biggest part of the western states; that is, west of the Mississippi.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Well, from the spring of 1922 to July the 31st.

Q. You were a tramp, is that right?

A. Absolutely correct, a tramp—a hobo.

Q. All right. Then you worked for some various organizations, and in 1926 you say, "I toured the western states again." That means you were again a tramp, is that right?

A. Well, I was in a little different circumstances then.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Beg your pardon?

A. Financially I was in a little different circumstances in 1926.

Q. Well, in 1926 were you again riding boxcars?

A. No, I came out of the Marine Corps in 1925 and I had worked a year, or approximately a year, in Los Angeles as a hod carrier—I mean, in Santa Barbara, driving a truck and as a hod carrier. And I had a little money. I bought a car and we toured—well, the western states; wound up in Salt Lake City.

Q. Who were "we"?

A. Well, there was two more fellows, ex-Marines, and myself.

Q. Were you carrying your blankets? [1434]

A. In the car, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I think we did have a couple of blankets in there. We had a couple of trunks and a couple of blankets.

Q. Wouldn't you call yourself a tramp for the period of 1926 on that tour? Is that right?

A. Well, maybe some people would have called us tramps, I suppose.

Q. Well, then, you afterwards worked at the Veterans Hospital, is that correct?

A. Yes, 1927 I went to work at the Veterans Hospital.

Q. You were a guard and an attendant and a gardener, you said? A. That's correct.

Q. Were you a patient in that hospital at all prior to that time?

A. Why, no, how could I be? I don't think a patient in a veterans' hospital can work and draw wages. That is my impression there; I may be wrong on that.

Q. Now, could you tell me now what the wages of stevedores on the waterfront is, how much an hour? A. No.

Q. $1.85 an hour, isn't it?

Mr. Paisley: Now, if Your Honor please, we object——

The Court: The objection is sustained; incompetent, irrevevant, immaterial. [1435]

The Witness: I can tell you what the wages of a hod carrier is.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): When you first appeared on the waterfront you weren't known as "John Schomaker," were you? Weren't you using a different name?

A. Well, I don't know. Possibly I was known by "John Delaney Schomaker," yes.

Q. Well, weren't you just known as "John Delaney"?

A. Well, maybe some people did know me as John Delaney.

Q. Well, isn't that the name you gave yourself on the waterfront when you met people?

A. Well, perhaps it was. My party name was John Delaney, and a lot of times I was introduced as John Delaney.

Q. And where did you get the name John Delaney from?

A. Well, I just picked it out of the thin air. I liked it phonetically—liked it—Delaney.

Q. Is it your mother's name?

A. It is not, no.

Q. And it is also the name under which you were registered in the Communist Party, is that right? A. That's correct, John Delaney.

Q. And cards had been issued to you under that name?

A. Well, all cards or all books that I had were issued in the Communist Party under the name of John Delaney. [1436]

Q. Then how long did you work on the waterfront under the name of John Delaney?

A. Well, when I signed up in the union I signed as John Delaney Schomaker. I received my book under that name and then later—that went on to about—I would say about 1940 or so, when I went before—and then when I registered as a longshore, see, after the strike in 1934 they registered all the longshoremen, and to work there you had to have a registration that is agreed to by the longshoremen's union and by the employers, and so I registered under that name, John Delaney Schomaker. Hoowever, later, as close as I can estimate it, in 1940 or so, I went before the Longshore Board and had that middle initial changed to H.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. What does the H stand for? A. Henry.

Q. Did you ever testify under oath that you were not a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, not that I can recall. I don't think I have ever been under oath too many times before this.

Q. Will you give yourself a little more thought. Did you ever testify under oath that you were not a member of the Communist Party?

A. At this time—not that I can recall at this time.

Q. Do you remember an occasion on which you were injured by a goon squad attack on the waterfront? [1437]

A. That is right. I remember it very well.

Q. You subsequently saw some affidavits made by a man named Loughran, who was one of the men who had attacked you, is that right?

A. If I saw the affidavits?

Q. Yes.

A. I may have, but I don't recall at this time.

Q. Do you remember that the situation was that you fell victim, you were one of the victims in a plot by certain of these people to murder Bridges, and Henry Schmidt and yourself?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I think that is an improper question.

Mr. Hallinan: It is preliminary.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor will have the question read back, I think you will find it includes a conclusion on the part of the examiner as to what is in the mind of the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: We will come to the court proceeding presently.

Mr. Donohue: Maybe we will, maybe we won't

Mr. Hallinan: I think we will.

Mr. Donohue: May we have the question read?

(Question read.)

The Court: What is the purpose of this question?

Mr. Hallinan: I want to lead up to his testimony——

The Court: If you are coming to a court proceeding, let [1438] us come to it. Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you remember testifying in a proceeding involving a matter of a plot of that kind?

A. I remember this case—I mean, the particular case where I was attacked and I went to court, but where a murder plot was concerned——

Q. Do you remember testifying in that hearing that you were not a member of the Communist Party?

The Court: What is the hearing?

Mr. Hallinan: In the court hearing that he said he appeared in.

The Court: Where is the court?

Mr. Hallinan: I wanted to ask him those things. This is not impeachment yet. I want to see what his recollection is to see whether it is good or bad.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. As I say, at that hearing I cannot recall at this time whether that question was asked or not, whether I was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. You mean you were prepared if it were asked to testify you were not?

A. No, but since you asked, I am trying to answer to the best of my ability, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Do you remember being questioned at that proceeding about your name?

A. Well, now, listen. Let's get this straight. There were [1439] two hearings. One was conducted by a lawyer by the name of McCarthy and another by a lawyer—the lawyer that conducted the lawsuit against Henry Ford on racial prejudice and won it.

The Court: Aaron Sapiro.

The Witness: Aaron Sapiro, that is correct. He represented the defendants in one and McCarthy, I think, in the other.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you remember being asked these questions and giving these answers in the hearing before Donald Geary, Judge of the Superior Court:

> "Q. Did you ever go under the name of Delaney?
> "A. Yes, I was nicknamed Delaney, yes."

Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I can recall that now, yes.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

> "Q. Were you working on the waterfront in 1934 under the name of John Delaney?
>
> "A. Yes, as a nickname, John Delaney Schomaker.
> "Q. I said John Delaney, is that correct?
>
> "A. No, that is not exactly correct.
> "Q. You were known on the waterfront as John Delaney?
>
> "A. No, not known as John Delaney. I was known as John Delaney Schomaker."

Do you remember those questions?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember being asked this question: [1440]

> "Q. Are you a member of the Communist Party?
> "A. Who? Me? No."

A. That is very possible, but I don't recall——

Q. Did you say it?

A. I don't recall saying it in that words, no.

Q. What words did you use?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Did you deny that you were a member of the Communist Party, whatever words you used?

A. Why, certainly not, but just to pull a statement out of the testimony there, I can't answer that unless I see it and see the preceding questions and see the questions that come after it. I don't even know what hearing you have there, whether that is the McCarthy or the Sapiro.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: In the light of the direct question and answer will you submit that transcript to counsel?

Mr. Hallinan: I have some other questions I want to ask before I do anything like that, your Honor. You wanted to take a recess?

The Court: I would like to, yes. Ladies and gentlemen, we will take the recess and resume at two o'clock this afternoon. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion thereon.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [1441]

Thursday, December 1, 1949, 2 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed.

JOHN H. SCHOMAKER

resumed the stand:

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Now, Mr. Schomaker, just before the Court convened, I asked you if in this hearing in the Loughran case you were asked these questions:

"Are you a member of the Communist Party?" You replied, "Who, me? No," I asked if you made that statement. And you stated that you couldn't tell unless you saw the transcript that I had here. Is that correct?

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, please, Mr. Witness. If Your Honor pleases, at this time may I make a request?

Mr. Hallinan: No. Your Honor, I don't think a request should be made in the presence of the defendant or anything of that kind. We are entitled now to test his credibility.

The Court: Well, I think in deference to the request of Mr. Hallinan that any suggestion be refrained from until the completion of this particular question.

Mr. Hallinan: I think so.

The Court: Having in mind precisely what you have in mind, Mr. Donohue, and I say it, of course, respectfully toward you, [1442] but I think in this particular type of examination Mr. Hallinan should be able to proceed.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to the examination, if Your Honor please, except that——

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I object to any statement, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Donohue: I think I have a right to make a statement.

Mr. Hallinan: Then the witness is apprised of something.

Mr. Donohue: Well, take the witness out, if you are worried about it.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: You are mindful of my suggestion; I will accept the statement.

Mr. Donohue: I think we should have the transcript. I think it should be identified, marked for identification and counsel should be permitted to look at it.

Mr. Hallinan: If Your Honor please, that is telling the witness something. Now, we shouldn't have any such thing. This is for a totally different reason. I have a different object and purpose in mind, and counsel has no right trying to slide me into a purpose of his own.

Mr. Donohue: I am not trying to slide you into any purpose.

Mr. Hallinan: This is just trying to tip off the witness.

Mr. Donohue: He should have followed Your Honor's suggestion and asked the question. The transcript is quoted from, Your Honor, and the damage is being done. [1443]

Mr. Hallinan: "The damage is being done!" Well, that is a funny one. Well, in other words, if the witness' credibility is damaged, why, it is too late then for counsel to restore it.

Mr. Donohue: When it has been well discussed——

The Court: Let us do this now, momentarily, to interrupt you. There is no occasion ~~to~~ admonish the jury again. (To the jury.) You are the sole and exclusive judges of the credibility. Examination is conducted by respective counsel. Now, I do not personally have in mind the nature of this transcript. It hasn't been determined upon. But I assume that at some definite stage in this examination it will be disclosed?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: It may or it may not, now, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: That is just the point, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: If I may be permitted to conduct my examination, then the Court will see the purpose.

The Court: All right, proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: In other words, we have agreed already that questions of this kind are directed not only to impeachment, but to other things in the credibility of the witness.

Mr. Paisley: But, Your Honor, he had reached the point, as I remember it, where he announced that he now was going to lay the ground for impeaching the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, no.

Mr. Paisley: Where,—or he is going to present some paper to the witness. We feel it should be marked, given a number, [1444] and that counsel should see it. They are not lax in wanting to see any papers that we have here, I noticed. We are entitled to the same courtesy, if he has a paper or transcript of the man's testimony; we are entitled to see it.

Mr. Hallinan: All in good time, Your Honor. If I may be permitted——

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: What is the precise——

Mr. Hallinan: If I may be permitted——

The Court: What is the precise question before the Court and jury?

Mr. Hallinan: Instead of that, may I go back a couple of questions and recite the questions that have already been asked?

(To Reporter Sweeney:) Would you please, Joe, take the first part of this inquiry concerning this testimony, not relating to the name, but relating to the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: And will you pay attention to it, please, Mr. Schomaker, to what the Reporter will read?

(Record read by Reporter.)

The Court: I make my ruling: In the light of the answer made by the witness to the question addressed to him by Mr. Hallinan, he is entitled now to be confronted with the transcript and the immediate question and answer elicited and given in connection with the proceeding before Judge Geary.

Mr. Hallinan: That is only in the case of impeachment, [1445] Your Honor; I wanted it for a different purpose now.

The Court: He is entitled to see it.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, what I want to ask this witness now is an explanation of his questions or of his answers, that it is very possible, but I don't recall that he testified in that fashion. [1445-A]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: He is entitled to see the transcript.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, then I would like to ask some further questions of the witness at this time. I never heard that there was any specific time within which a person had to do things even though it were impeachment, and I know of no rule that requires that a lawyer or an examiner, having elicited an answer like that, that then he had to confront the person with the document. He can be satisfied with the answer as it stands.

The Court: Upon that theory an examiner might examine on a vagrant document without foundation in truth or fact, wave it in the presence of the witness and on that theory, that inference at least, lead the witness to believe a certain condition existed which did not exist. The witness has very frankly stated to you he does not recall.

Mr. Hallinan: No, he said, "That is very possible."

The Court: In view of the state of the record——

Mr. Hallinan: Might I argue this with your Honor: Now, here this witness' credibility is an important factor in this case. If we ask questions that show that this witness has a disposition of mind whereby he isn't sure whether he testified falsely on the preceding occasion as to a material thing on this matter, then that affects his credibility very badly. Suppose, for instance, that Harry Bridges should take the stand here and he should be asked, "Mr. [1446] Bridges, have you ever testified under oath that you were a member of the Communist Party?" and he should say, "I don't recall whether I did or not. Show it to me and then I will answer."

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, I think the rule is firm and uniform that in connection with court proceedings and prior proceedings to this trial or any other trial, the witness is entitled to be confronted with the record therein in connection with matters of this character.

Mr. Hallinan: I do not claim, your Honor, that the questions and answers that I asked him were given in any record. I asked him whether he said them or not.

The Court: Oh, no, I misunderstood you, then. I asked you, Mr. Hallinan, whether those proceedings were court proceedings. You said before Judge Geary.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: I think in terms of authenticity of the record and in terms of the integrity of the record, at the present stage of the proceedings we are entitled to have that disclosed to the witness and likewise we are entitled to have it disclosed to counsel representing the other side and marked for identification; for otherwise, Mr. Hallinan, a lawyer might—I am not accusing you—but a lawyer might well bring in a vagrant, unauthenticated document wherein there might appear any sort of situation. [1447]

Mr. Hallinan: Judge, haven't you yourself even gone up to a witness suspected of not telling the truth and saying, "Haven't you written a letter to so-and-so?"

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: That is a different situation.

Mr. Hallinan: And have no letter at all but just depend upon your own judgment?

The Court: We will not argue the technique of strategy in a trial. I am now saying to you that the rule is uniform, memorialized on many occasions in this tribunal, that the witness at the present stage is entitled to see the transcript with respect to the subject matter of your examination.

Mr. Hallinan: Could I ask him one more question in advance of that?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Have you read during the noon hour the transcript of your testimony before Judge Geary?

A. You mean of those hearings?

Q. Yes.

A. Certainly not. I haven't seen those transcripts, well, since 1938 when it occurred.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, I do not claim that the statements that I asked the witness if he made are contained in any transcript. I asked the witness the question to see if the witness would show a disposition, not knowing what he [1448] had testified, to commit perjury when it suited him; in other words, if the witness' disposition is this: when it suited him to deny he was a member of the Communist Party under oath he would do so. When it suited him to affirm he was a member of the Communist Party under oath, he would do so.

The Court: I cannot presently recall what the witness testified.

Mr. Hallinan: Here is his very testimony: "That is very possible, but I don't recall." In other words, we have the witness admitting the possibility, and the admission is only limited by his recollection. He leaves himself an outlet that it is very possible that he committed perjury in Judge Donald Geary's court on the issue whether he was a member of the Communist Party or not. Your Honor, what could be a greater direct frontal assault on a witness' testimony than to say to him, "Now, haven't you testified under oath directly opposite to what you have testified here?" and the witness say, "It is very possible, but I don't recall." What more could we have? That is almost saying, "Yes." Suppose the witness said, "Yes." Then would I have to confront him with the document?

I have no intention of producing a document to confront this witness with, and now I suppose I am divested of the opportunity to ask other questions of a similar nature which I intended to ask and see if I could trick him into saying [1449] things that would disclose his manifest unreliability as a witness; in other words, his willingness under any circumstance to say what suits his purpose at the time. I submit, if I may be permitted to finish with one more sentence, I do not know anything that impeaches a witness more than to ask him a question whether under oath on a previous occasion he did not state the exact opposite of what he has stated under oath here, and the witness replies, "That is very possible, but I don't recall."

Now, I am satisfied with the answer, and that is all I want. If they want to clear up the matter and produce some transcript, let them do it.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask this: In order to determine whether the witness has been tricked by Mr. Hallinan, I ask your Honor to ask the reporter to read the statement that was made by Mr. Hallinan as a premise to asking the witness certain questions to determine whether or not Mr. Hallinan did not lead us all to believe that he was reading from a transcript, and if that is so, I think he should now produce that transcript.

The Court: It certainly was my understanding Mr. Hallinan was reading from a transcript when he addressed those other questions.

Mr. Hallinan: And I will say that is the impression I tried to convey, not to your Honor or the jury, but I tried to [1450] convey it to the witness to see if the witness, as I say, having no reliability, was willing to testify to anything, thinking, "He has a transcript. I had better say 'Yes' or at least give a guarded statement."

The Court: He did not say "Yes." I do not know that his remark would be regarded——

Mr. Hallinan: That is up to the jury.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Mr. Donohue, what have you to say?

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor please, that we were all led to believe by the questions that Mr. Hallinan asked of this witness that he was reading from a transcript of that testimony of this witness at a prior proceeding. This jury have a right to believe that.

The Court: I will say for the record I believed it.

Mr. Donohue: And this jury, if your Honor please, had a right to believe when he waved that document that this witness did make that answer.

The Court: I believed further Mr. Hallinan's assurance to me that he was going forward in good faith. I accepted his statement.

Mr. Donohue: It appears now he never did have such a transcript.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I do not think we should have a discussion of that kind.

The Court: I say I believed. [1451]

Mr. Hallinan: If we have such a discussion, I think I convince your Honor very easily. I told you this, when we had the discussion about impeaching this witness, which I abandoned at the time—I was going into these documents and circulars he had distributed around and I abandoned that for the moment. We had the discussion of their admissibility and I told the Court I would mark off on the document certain portions of them and wouldn't say anything about them; they were other people's encomiums of Harry Bridges, that

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

I would display good faith to the Court in that connection. But to say, your Honor, that counsel is forbidden the ordinary devices that lawyers have employed for hundreds of years to trick witnesses in lies and to show a disposition on the witness' part to lie when it is convenient to do so, that is to take away all the weapons for the discovery of truth. Why, he can be required to expose all of his plots and stratagems to a witness whom he distrusts and whom he does not believe is telling the truth. If these other gentlemen are so naive that they fall into the same thing, I am not required to watch out for them. They can bring their nurses along. But the witness is one skilled in this art and I was confronted with the duty to see if I could get him to make the admission, either direct or implied, that he was willing to testify falsely accordingly as it stands, and I think that it is arguable—it should not have to be argued to the Court, but it is [1452] arguable to the jury that when he was asked, "Did you give this testimony under oath at another proceeding? 'Are you a member of the Communist Party? Who? Me? No.' " that his answer was, "That is very possible, but I don't recall." I think that is complete impeachment and it is a complete assault on the witness' credibility, and no apology has to be made for the manner in which it is elicited. The object is to elicit it. We are not playing games here. We have people's lives and liberties at stake, and we are entitled to trap a witness whose reliability we have no confidence in and who we think is lying in any fashion that is afforded. There is no matter here of courtesies to lawyers in displaying transcripts. Anything I can do to show that this man is lying, I am entitled to do it, and I am entitled to do it in any way I can, and I will stand upon that, your Honor, and I will not accept counsel's statement that dictates a formula of producing documents and showing them. Then certainly he would say, "No, I didn't testify to that."

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: Maybe your Honor would permit me to say that I believed, and I am sure the witness and the jury believed, that when Mr. Hallinan asked the question—and the record will support it—he was reading from what he said he was, a transcript of the testimony. I believed it until I made inquiry during the recess whether there was ever such a transcript, and now he concedes that there is not. This is [1453] not a game at all, but there is a rule of decency that ought to be followed. But you would not know it.

Mr. Hallinan: I can understand counsel's embarrassment.

Mr. Donohue: I am not embarrassed, but you should be embarrassed.

Mr. Hallinan: When the witness commits himself to that statement, "Did you testify under oath in a previous Superior Court proceeding as follows: 'Are you a member of the Communist Party Who? Me? No.' " and he answers, "That is very possible"—Now, that is very possible, that I testified falsely under oath in a previous hearing on the very matter I have been testifying here on, but I don't recall! That is very possible.

In other words, my disposition towards testimony on the witness stand is ~~such that~~ it is possible! I may have testified falsely in any court!

Why, your Honor, he has impeached himself in everything he has said by that one admission, and here I am to be criticized and I am to have procedure pointed out that prevents eliciting the condition and state of mind of the witness so the jury can understand what manner of man he is. We might as well abandon all mentality. We might as well say that any force or vigor of intellect is to be discarded in a courtroom, and that there is some kind of parley between the witness on the stand and the attorney, so you ask him graciously and kindly and give him time to figure out what [1454] his answer is going to be, so it becomes impossible to detect him in a fraud or a lie. I submit to your Honor everything I have asked here is perfectly proper, and that I am under no obligation to provide any transcript, and I am under no obligation to confront him with it. I am satisfied with his answer.

Mr. McMillan: If it please your Honor, fundamentally a witness should always be treated fairly and he cannot, as Mr. Hallinan suggests, by any trickery he may think of, be misled. But the fundamental difficulty is this: No counsel has a right to stand here and indicate he has a transcript and that he is reading questions and answers from a transcript for this reason, regardless of the witness: He has no right to mislead the Court and he has no right to mislead the jury. That is the fundamental vice of this thing.

Mr. Hallinan: In a matter of this kind the court is not in a position to be misled. The Court just makes rulings on the admissibility or non-admissibility of evidence.

The Court: That is not altogether correct.

Mr. Hallinan: The Court does not say, "Here is a witness who is entitled to courtesy. You will try not to expose any lie. You should spread your net in the sight of the bird."

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, the Court is not presumed to sit here as a legal automaton. But I did believe you were reading from the transcript, authenticated at least, and [1455] containing the subject matter of your examination. Otherwise I should have precluded you from advancing into this particular situation.

Mr. Hallinan: You mean I should not have been permitted to ask the witness the questions I asked him?

The Court: Let us depart from this matter. I would like to review the transcript in its full text. We will take it up at the recess. I think everyone has had his say on this particular matter. I will take it up at the recess. I think it is better that I do that rather than take segmented views of it. You may proceed.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Hallinan: I would like to have a discussion, too, on the question we had this morning: the purpose of these questions over and above impeachment.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): As part of your duties in charge of publicity for the union you did distribute certain pamphlets that were printed by the union relating to the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, didn't you?

A. I do not recall of distributing any pamphlets. You should be more specific. What do you mean by "pamphlets"?

Q. I mean printed documents that were distributed to the members of the union relating to the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges.

A. Are you asking if I went down to the Bridges Defense Committee and picked up pamphlets concerning the deportation proceedings [1456] and then passed them out to different people?

Q. Not if you did personally yourself, but you gave them out to people to be distributed, didn't you? A. I may have and I may not have.

Q. In the matter of publicity you were charged in part with the collection, and the authoring and the distribution of such pamphlets, weren't you?

A. Well, I don't recall that as being one of my duties, no. [1457]

Q. Did you have any talk with any of the gentlemen representing the prosecution at noontime on that subject?

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. On that particular subject?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, it never even entered my mind.

Q. Did it enter theirs, so far as you know?

A. As I say, I can't pry into people's minds and see what is lurking there.

Q. They didn't say anything to you about disclaiming any activity in that direction?

A. I swear on my honor I have never talked over the——

Q. You can swear on your what?

A. On your honor or on my honor, that I have never discussed a question—that Bridges' defense with anyone, particularly the prosecution attorneys or——

Q. Now, as head of this publicity department, or as a member of this publicity department, what were you doing?

A. On what particular time?

Q. Well, during the time that deportation proceedings were pending against Harry Bridges. Let's take from the year 1938 through the year 1941; were you on the publicity committee then?

A. 1938—'38, '39, '40—it's possible that I was.

Q. And '41, isn't that right?

A. '41; it is very possible that I was. In certain years I [1458] know that I was a member of the publicity committee.

Q. What is that, certainly what?

A. In certain years, yes; I wouldn't say I was a member all four years, but I know in one or two years I must have been.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. All right. Now, as part of your publicity obligations, you distributed or caused to be distributed some of these circulars that were printed, didn't you? A. Oh, not necessarily, no.

Q. Did you read any of the circulars that were printed?

A. It is very possible that I read some.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you show him this one, Mr. Mitchell?

Mr. Donohue: We would like an opportunity to see it.

The Court: You may.

(Handed to Mr. Hallinan by Clerk. Examined by Government counsel.)

Mr. Donohue: Thanks. I might say, if Your Honor please, we object to any question being asked about this document unless it can be established that this witness had something to do with it. It doesn't so appear from the document.

The Court: Unless the witness had something to do with it; that is a very bland, general statement.

Mr. Donohue: I apologize.

Mr. Hallinan: I will see if I can lay a proper foundation. It may be possible that I can not, but I will try.

Q. Now, do you recognize that document? [1459]

The Court: You keep it, Mr. Witness.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. Well, I have seen documents like that, or similar to it.

Q. Yes. Well, now, didn't you cause copies of that document to be distributed?

A. Well, maybe you have a wrong impression of the publicity committee. The publicity committee, that is in our local, Local 3879, wasn't a question—it was different than the agitation and propaganda department of the Communist Party, for instance.

Q. I am talking about the publicity committee of the union.

A. That's correct, that is what I am trying to explain. It was different.

Q. Well, now, as part of your duties as a publicity director of the union, didn't you cause that precise document there to be distributed among the members? A. No.

Q. You did not? A. I did not.

Q. And nobody has told you to say "No," is that right?

A. The duties of the publicity committee of the local was to write publicity, not distribute it.

Q. Well, the duties of the local, of the publicity committee, was also to go over and determine what should be written and distributed, isn't that right?

A. Why, as I say, you have completely the wrong impression of [1460] the publicity committee. The publicity committee in the local, the Harry Bridges Defense Committee, was a separate organization, had nothing to do with the Harry Bridges Defense Committee at any time.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. But then the Harry Bridges Defense Committee gave to the publicity committee these circulars, didn't they?

A. No, not to my knowledge they didn't. I believe, if I can recall correctly, that the financial secretary, Ed Wright, was one of the members of the publicity committee and they handled the literature. I was a working longshoreman and all I do was, once a week, write an article for the weekly bulletin, or on some extraordinary situation, if it came up, why, I took a day off and was paid by the local $9.00, and I wrote additional publicity. It wasn't that of a distributor.

Q. What do you mean by a "local bulletin"?

A. Well, the longshoremen put out a weekly bulletin.

Q. What was it called?

A. Well, it was the ILA, 3879 Bulletin.

Q. Well, now, would you ask him this——

Mr. Hallinan: Would you show him that, if you will?

Mr. Paisley: Shouldn't it be marked for identification?

Mr. Hallinan: Not unless we are going to introduce it in evidence or it is going to be declined in evidence.

The Court: This is for foundational purposes merely, as I understand it. [1461]

Mr. Hallinan: That is all. If we are going to offer it, and it is refused in evidence, then we just retain it unless we want it marked to put in the record.

Mr. Donohue: If he is going to ask him questions about papers and slip the papers back into his bags,——

Mr. Hallinan: I am not slipping them back in the bags, they are right here on the desk.

Mr. Paisley: Both sides are entitled to see and have marked in evidence any paper that is used to refresh——

The Court: Not in evidence, sir, no.

Mr. Paisley: I mean, for identification. It may not later be admitted in evidence, but if he is asking about some paper, then on redirect we are entitled to have the paper.

The Court: He has not addressed any question to the witness at all concerning that paper.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I presumed that he was just about to do so, Your Honor.

The Court: I think he was.

Mr. Paisley: I don't know why he passed it up there then.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you get it back from him, then?

(Paper returned to counsel by the Clerk.)

The Court: Well, we had determination with respect to the rule I laid down, that unless the foundation were laid, no question would be addressed to the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Exactly. [1462]

(Document examined by the witness.)

Mr. Hallinan: I don't want the witness to read

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

the whole thing. I just wanted to have him identify them as being——

The Witness: Oh, that's right, that is the ILWU Bulletin.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Of which you were the director?

A. I wouldn't say that, but I am trying to make clear in my mind by reading those couple of paragraphs—don't recognize my writing, because of the fact that there was three members on the publicity committee and they took turns in writing the bulletins. Now, those bulletins,—pardon me, in those bulletins that I wrote, generally they were signed by whoever served that particular week.

Q. Yes, but each one of the three members, of course, read all the material that was put in the bulletin before it was published, isn't that right?

A. No. I explained that we took turns, like, I think it was on a Tuesday, I think, after the weekly meeting or whatever day it was in the week, that one day I would take—I mean, one week I would take a day off and write the bulletin. The next week the other member would take the day off and write the bulletin. And we didn't see it until it come off the mimeograph machine.

Q. Well, now, did you ever enter any protests in the union or to the other men against any bulletin that had been published?

A. There may at times have been that I criticized certain things in the bulletin, yes. [1463]

Q. Well, now, I want to ask you about the bulletin of January 4, 1939, whether or not you didn't distribute this bulletin or whether it was not distributed under the authority of the committee of which you were a member, to the members of the ILWU. A. Well, could I see the bulletin?

(Document handed to the witness by the clerk.)

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't think it is necessary for him to read the entire bulletin, Your Honor, for him to determine whether or not——

The Witness: Well, I have to see if it—yes, I would say—I think I would say that I wrote this particular bulletin, yes, on this particular date, January 4, 1939.

Mr. Paisley: Now, as I understand it, Your Honor, he has a sheaf of them there. We don't know which ones now the witness has identified. Unless——

The Court: Mr. Hallinan will show it to you, I assume, the one identified by the witness, Mr. Paisley; so you may have in mind the content of whatever it contains.

Mr. Paisley: I just wanted it identified so we will know.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, now, we offer in evidence the issue of January 4, 1939, which the witness has just identified, as one that he distributed.

Mr. Donohue: At this time I object to it, if Your Honor pleases. In the first place, we haven't even had an opportunity [1464] to look at it.

The Court: Now you have an opportunity.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: Thank you, your Honor. (Examining document.)

We object to the introduction of this piece of evidence, if Your Honor pleases, and suggest that if Your Honor will just take a look at it, you will find that it has no relation whatsover to any issue before this Court.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to show Your Honor, if there is any question, the article that I wanted to read. I will mark it on the paper on the back, and it bears directly on the subject that we discussed this morning.

(Document handed to the Court by the Clerk.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Does Your Honor consider that none of that is admissible as contradicting what the witness has said?

The Court: Yes, sir. If you would like to discuss it at the recess, I will be glad to discuss it with you, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I will ask it be marked for identification. We offer it in evidence as the defendant's exhibit next in order.

The Court: The objection is sustained to the offer; it may be marked appropriately in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit for identification next in order, with particular reference to that part thereof having been marked in pencil by Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. [1465]

(Thereupon document dated January 4, 1939, was marked Defendant's Exhibit E for identification only.)

Mr. Hallinan: I now offer in evidence, if the Court please, the document that was shown to the witness, and particularly with reference to pages 9 and 10. And if you will read that, why,——

(Document handed to the Court by the Clerk.)

The Court: I will read it at recess.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you prefer that?

The Court: Yes. It is two full pages of reading.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, very well. That is pages 9 and 10.

The Court: It isn't fair to your offer to ask me to read it hurriedly. I would like to read it fully.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well. I only offer to read into the record those two pages. I do not offer to read——

Mr. Paisley: Does Your Honor recall——

Mr. Hallinan: Why, if Your Honor pleases, if you will put it aside?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. We have some rights in the courtroom.

The Court: No one has disputed your rights, sir.

Mr. Paisley: Well, he interrupts the Court and as well, counsel, sir, when we are trying to make a statement. I want to call the Court's attention, to save you reading two pages there, that the witness said he knew nothing about that, that [1466] that was published by the Bridges Defense Committee, that he didn't write it, that he didn't cause it to be distributed. Now he offers it in evidence.

The Court: I am mindful of that, sir. I might read it, though.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course an inference——

Mr. Paisley: I thought maybe Your Honor had missed that.

The Court: No.

Mr. Paisley: I was trying to save you time.

Mr. Hallinan: Just from the position and occupation of a person, an inference will arise as to whether he did or did not do a thing. That is my position here.

The Court: Thank you, Mr. Paisley. I have that general answer in mind.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you know Mr. George Andersen, do you, an attorney?

A. I know George Andersen, the attorney, yes.

Q. And you know a man named Charles Lamport? A. I do, yes.

Q. And a man named Carlton Melin?

A. I do, yes.

Q. And a man named B. B. Jones you have already identified? A. B. B. Jones I know, yes.

Q. On May 31, 1949, those gentlemen calling at your home at 685 Menlo Oaks Drive, Menlo Park, about 4:50 in the evening? [1467]

A. Well, no; I do not recall those gentlemen calling on me at 685 Menlo Oaks Drive, Menlo Park, at any time.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Where did they call on you?

A. At 698 Menlo Oaks Drive.

Q. Oh, 698. All right. And you had a conversation at that time with those gentlemen concerning your testimony before the grand jury, isn't that right?

A. Well, we had a conversation; I will say that.

Q. Now, I will ask you whether or not at that time you didn't—this was not the conversation: that Mr. Andersen first advised you that he was representing the defense in the case of United States v. Harry Bridges, Robertson and Schmidt; that he asked you if you would give him a statement regarding your knowledge of those people, particularly with reference to membership in the Communist Party; that you told Mr. Andersen that you had already testified before the grand jury; that you could not remember what you said before the grand jury and did not want to give a statement to other lawyers regarding what you said because nobody tells the same story twice and you could not remember really what you said before the grand jury or to the men representing the government, to whom you had spoken; that you said representatives from the government had called at your house only once, served you with subpoena; that you went to San Francisco and testified before the grand jury and was paid a full day's wages plus your expenses for testifying; that [1468] you said on many occasions that you did not want to give a statement because you did not want to get mixed up; that you did not know whether or not Harry Bridges was a Communist; that you did not want to give Mr. Andersen a statement because you wanted to protect yourself; that Bridges was a good guy, a great labor leader; that you had many arguments with Bridges; that Bridges had called you a Communist and had called other people Communists; that Bridges had nothing to worry about in this case; that you had contributed money to the Bridges case because you believed Bridges was innocent. Was that statement made?

A. Did I make a statement like that?

Q. Approximately.

A. Absolutely not. Do you want to know what actually transpired down there?

Q. Well,——

A. I will tell you what transpired.

The Court: You are entitled to state what transpired.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Go ahead. Tell us what your conversation with Mr. Andersen was.

The Witness: Do you want everything?

The Court: State the full conversation.

The Witness: Well, it is going to be pretty rough in spots, if you want to hear it.

The Court: All right, you may answer; you may state it. [1469]

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, Your Honor, here is one thing; may I say this: Now, on impeachment a witness is asked whether or not he made a statement, a certain statement, and he says no. Then the person asking the question may impeach him. But the witness is then permitted to give the conversation. But the witness is not permitted to start off on a rampage now and give a conversation not embraced within this question. I would like to ask him seriatim these separate items here, whether he said that.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: You have asked him the general text of the question. He has denied it categorically.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, he has denied it categorically. [1470]

Mr. Hallinan: Now I want to ask him each of the separate elements of it and not have the witness give the statement itself.

The Witness: Can I have something to say, Your Honor?

The Court: Certainly.

The Witness: I can say this: that that statement is false, and I never made any such statement whatsoever, and if he asks me these questions he is just trying to put words in my mouth. I have to say Yes or No, and there is no basis in fact for any of those things he has in that statement, suppositions. There is no basis in fact for it.

The Court: That may be regarded as the witness' repudiation of the statement and a categorical denial.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we have a recess now?

The Witness: Haven't I a chance to answer this, your Honor?

The Court: You might answer it when counsel for the Government on redirect examination asks you the question: What, if anything, transpired at that time, Mr. Schomaker? And I will at that juncture permit you to make a full and complete disclosure of every event, every fact and every circumstance of that meeting.

The Witness: Thank you.

The Court: We will take a recess.

(Recess.) [1471]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): In the course of your examination you stated that a gentleman representing himself to be from my office called upon you at your home on one occasion, is that right?

A. Yes, a person did come down there. He stated that he was from your office, but I didn't hardly believe it.

Q. A young man named Harold Lipset? Is that the way he introduced himself?

A. He introduced himself. It was Lip-something. I wouldn't be positive. It sounded—phonetically, yes, it was Lip-something.

Q. He went into your home, did he?

A. He did come into my home, yes.

Q. Sat down and talked with you and your wife? A. He did, yes.

Q. And he questioned you regarding your knowledge of the matters concerning which Harry Bridges was being prosecuted, is that right?

A. Well, yes and no.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Let me ask you this: When was it that he called, approximately?

A. It was under very peculiar circumstances.

Q. No, the time, the date.

A. As I recall it—as I say, it was under very peculiar circumstances. It was on a Saturday night. It was one of those [1472] rare instances where I could recall the time very definitely. It was eight o'clock on a Saturday night.

Q. Do you remember the date?

A. No, I can't recall the date.

Q. About what month it was in?

A. It was four or five weeks ago. As I say, I can recall the night and the time because I was lying in bed and reading a book.

Q. And he told you he was from my office and he wanted to find out, that we wanted to find out what you had to say with regard to this prosecution of Harry Bridges, is that right?

A. Well, no. As I say, he came into the house under very peculiar circumstances.

Q. He didn't drop through the roof, I take it; he rang the bell and walked through the door, is that right?

A. Do you want me to explain how this occurred?

Q. No, I want to find out what the peculiar circumstances were. He didn't fly in on a broomstick, did he?

A. He could very well have done it, because I didn't see him coming in.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. At any rate, he went into your house and you had a conversation with him, is that right?

A. We did have a conversation.

Q. (By the Court): How did he enter? [1473]

A. I was laying in bed that Saturday night, eight o'clock. I was reading a book, "San Francisco, the Port of Gold." I heard the bell ring and I didn't pay any attention to it, and my wife came in the bedroom door and she said, "There's a fellow from the south to see you."

It happened to be that we were working in Burlingame, the south port of Burlingame, and we got a lot of material that day and we had to pile it near the sidewalk, and for some strange reason, when she said, "A fellow is here from the south," my mind immediately went to this incident where we parked all this material next to the sidewalk, and when we did that I thought, "Maybe someone will run into this."

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I do not see what bearing this has on the conversation. I just want to lay a foundation for the conversation. I want to see if he will admit an answer he made, and that is all. The man got in and he had a talk with him.

The Court: I am interested in how he got in.

Q. How did he get in?

A. My wife came in the door and said, "There is a man from the south to see you."

My mind snapped at this. I don't know why. I threw on a robe. I thought somebody had run into this material. When I walked out this fellow rushed up and said, "My name is Blah-blah-blah." [1474]

I said, "Yes."

He said, "Anything about the case?"

I said, "What case are you talking about?"

He said, "You know the case."

And, as I say, my mind went on the question of this material and somebody running into it. Here is a lawsuit.

I said, "I don't know what the hell you are talking about a case."

He said, "Sure, you know, the Bridges case."

I said, "What the hell have I got to do with the Bridges case?"

He said, "I would like to talk to you about it."

And I said, "Who do you represent? Who sent you down here?"

I thought he said "Hooligan." He said, "Mr. Hooligan sent me here."

And I said, "I don't know any Hooligan."

My wife said, "No, no; Mr. Hallinan sent him down."

I said, "Sit down."

He sat down in a settee across the room.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now I think we have arrived at the peculiar circumstances under which he entered the house.

The Court: He didn't enter on a broomstick and he didn't come down the chimney.

Mr. Hallinan: That seems to be clearly established. [1475]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: We also got in another funny-book character about Hooligan.

The Witness: That is exactly what the man said.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): I want to ask you, on that occasion did you not state to Mr. Lipset that you did not know whether or not Harry Bridges was a Communist?

A. Permit me to repeat the question he asked me.

Q. I want to know this: Did you or did you not state to that gentleman on that occasion that you did not know whether or not Harry Bridges was a Communist?

A. He didn't ask the question in that fashion whatsoever, and I gave him a truthful answer. Now, shall I tell you the question he asked me?

Q. Yes.

A. And that is the reason why I couldn't understand.

Q. Just tell us what the question was.

A. The question was this: "Do you know"—and all the time he was sitting out like this on the edge of the couch, and he was doing like this; his face was going like the guy was hopped up or something.

Q. That is what he thought about you.

A. That is what I thought about him. It was the screwiest thing I ever saw in my life.

Q. That is what he thought about you. [1476]

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

A. He said, "Do you know"—he was going like this with his tie—He said, "Do you know if Mr. Bridges is a Communist or if Mr. Schmidt is a Communist or if Mr. Robertson is a Communist?"

And I repeated the question. I said, "Did you ask me if Mr. Bridges was a Communist, if Mr. Robertson is a Communist or Mr. Schmidt is a Communist?"

And he said, "Yes, that is the question."

I said, "Why, no, I haven't seen the guy for five years. How should I know whether he is a Communist or not? I haven't had any contact with him for five years."

His eyes rolled and he went back, and I said, "Who do you represent?" I didn't think a brilliant man like Mr. Hallinan would hire a clown like this to ask me a question, "Is he a Communist?" when I haven't seen the guy for five years. So I began to ask him a question. I said, "Who are you? Are you one of these private eyes?"

He said, "Yes."

I said, "Do you handle divorce cases?"

He said, "Yes, I handle divorce cases."

I said, "You are like this guy Moulton in San Jose."

He said, "Yes, that's me."

I said, "When was the last time you peeked through a keyhole?"

He said, "Sir, I never peeked through a keyhole in my [1477] life."

I said, "Brother, it is about time you are learning if you want to make a wage as a private eye."

He said, "I make a good living as a private detective."

As I say, it was the screwiest thing I ever heard in my life. I didn't know whether I was batty or he, the way the thing went on.

Q. Let us toss a coin. Did he tell you he was a lieutenant in the United States Army intelligence in France and had received a citation for service?

A. No, he said he had been in the Army for five years and he asked me to——

Q. Did he tell you he had been a lieutenant?

A. I don't recall that, no. He said he had been in the Army five years and he liked California.

Q. Was he fixing his tie when he said that?

A. That tie episode was the payoff.

Q. Did he then ask you if you knew whether or not Harry Bridges ever had been a member of the Communist Party, and you said you didn't know whether he was or not?

A. He never asked me that question, whether he had been. He said, "Is he a member?"

Q. Let me ask you this——

A. That wasn't all the interview by any means.

Q. Let me ask you this: You mentioned a couple of people [1478] here in the course of your testimony. You said in one place, "I'm not as stupid as Little Abner." Who is Little Abner?

A. Do you mean to take a different interview that Mr. Lipset had with me, or is that a different question?

Q. Will you please answer the question.

A. I think I made some kind of statement about Little Abner.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is a comic book character.

Q. And then in another place you said, "I am no Dick Tracy." Who is Dick Tracy?

A. He is a private eye, I think. Takes an awful beating sometimes, too.

Q. Is he some person you know?

A. No more than I read the funnies, I see the guy there.

Q. What is that?

A. When I read the funnies I see Dick Tracy in some kind of jam.

Q. What do you mean by "the funnies"?

A. The funny paper.

Q. Then you told us that when you were in the hotel room the other night you were reading a detective story when Mr. Kaiser appeared and brought you over here at midnight to go over your testimony, is that right?

A. Well, I was reading a magazine.

Q. You said a detective story, didn't you? [1479]

A. Possibly it was a detective story.

Q. Have you been promised a job in the Government?

A. Well, the other night when I went home my boss—he's the guy I work for, a hod carrier—he asked me when I was coming back to work.

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Q. Have you been promised a job in the Government? A. Absolutely not.

Q. Have you applied for a job as an investigator with the Department of Immigration?

A. Certainly not. I'm a hod carrier, not a private detective.

Q. And you are a funny-book reader?

A. I read nothing too strenuous. I read, like "San Francisco, the Port of Gold," and I read other fiction magazines, historical books.

Q. You have an ambition to be a private eye or public eye, yourself? A. No, absolutely not.

Q. And you expect after this is over you will get employment with the United States Government as some sort of investigator, is that right?

A. Why, certainly not.

Q. In giving the 22-page statement, you are only putting the finger on Bridges, Robertson and Schmidt, but in giving the 100-page statement you put the finger on everybody you know, didn't you? [1480]

Mr. Donohue: I object to the form of the question.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You are starting out now on a career of being a kind of professional stool pigeon, aren't you.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Will you tell us who are some of the other people you met at the Grand Jury who were witnesses or professed to be witnesses or are going to be witnesses?

Mr. Donohue: I object to that.

The Court: Sustained. [1481]

Q. Now all the things that you testified here about Mr. Bridges' alleged membership in the Communist Party, you knew in 1939 and you knew in 1941, isn't that right?

A. I didn't get that question. Will you repeat it, please?

(Record read.)

A. Yes, certainly I knew it.

Q. All right. You did not appear as a witness before Dean Landis on the deportation hearing did you? A. Well, I wasn't subpoenaed.

Q. All right. You did not appear before Judge Sears in the deportation hearing in 1941, did you.

A. I wasn't subpoenaed.

Q. Now, I want to show you a resolution, a copy of a resolution, that you introduced,—you and other persons introduced in the convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in Los Angeles in April, 1941.

Mr. Paisley: I object to the form of the question, if Your Honor pleases. He can ask if he introduced it, but he can't testify that he did introduce it. I make that objection to the question.

(Document examined by counsel for the Government.)

(Testimony of John H. Schomaker.)

Mr. Donohue: We reserve the right to object to it at the proper time.

Mr. Hallinan: I might show it to the Court. If Your Honor would like to read it, why, then it might save time: [1482]

(Document handed to the Court by the Clerk.)

Mr. Hallinan: Those are all the questions I had, Judge. So if you want to—if you were going to discus the other matters except relating to those documents, why,——

The Court: I had occasion to glance at the pages marked in this booklet, "Harry Bridges," and there was no foundation laid for the introduction of it. Accordingly, I sustain the general objection interposed by the prosecution. It may be marked for identification.

Mr. Hallinan: Then it may be offered for identification.

The Court: Yes, sir. Now, in this resolution, this resolution would possibly come within the category of that which we regarded as possible encomium and praise and so forth.

Mr. Hallinan: It would, but in the meantime it comes under a general opinion contrary to what the witness has been testifying to.

The Witness: Well, no. Is there an objection to this?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Then might we do this, might we have an agreement that it isn't necessary to display it to the witness, to save that time and trouble?

The Court: It may be marked for identification.

Mr. Hallinan: That even if the witness identifies it as having been his resolution, the Court would nevertheless sustain [1483] an objection to it, is that the situation?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will offer it in evidence and ask that it be marked as Defendant's exhibit next in order for identification.

The Court: The objection is sustained, interposed by the prosecution. It may be marked appropriately as defendant's next in order for identification.

The Clerk: That will be G. And may the record show, Your Honor, that this pamphlet marked "Harry Bridges" is Defendant's F for identification only.

(Thereupon pamphlet "Harry Bridges" and document "Proceedings Fourth Annual Convention, International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, page 273 thereof, were respectively marked Defendant's Exhibits F and G for identification only.)

The Court: It may go in as G, the page thereof, not the book.

The Clerk: Yes, Your Honor. Page 273.

The Court: All right. Redirect examination.

Mr. Donohue: Would Your Honor indulge me for just a moment?

The Court: Yes, sir. Do you desire a short recess, gentlemen, while you compose your questions?

Mr. Donohue: No, I think we will be ready in half a minute, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right. [1484]

Mr. Donohue: Would Your Honor give us five minutes, please?

The Court: Five minutes.

Mr. Donohue: Thank you, sir.

The Court: We will take a five minute recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, or ten minutes; same admonition to u, not to discuss the case under any conditions.

(Recess.) [1484-A]

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: We have no further questions, may it please your Honor, of this witness. May he be excused from further attendance as a witness?

The Court: Yes, sir. We have now reached the period of 3:50. There are only ten minutes left in the afternoon. Do you have another witness available?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, we have.

The Court: You may proceed, if that is convenient. The witness is excused. Did you have something to say?

The Witness: No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: Call Mr. Henry Schrimpf.

(After a pause). I am sorry, your Honor. I thought he was just outside the door. He will be here in a minute.

HENRY JOSEPH SCHRIMPF

called for the Government; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your full name to the Court and jury.

The Witness: My name is Henry Joseph Schrimpf.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Paisley:

Q. Do you pronounce the "f," Mr. Schrimpf, on the end of your name?

A. That is the correct pronunciation, Schrimpf.

Q. Where and when were you born? [1485]

A. I was born in Queensland, Australia, in 1896 on the 12th day of May.

Q. How much schooling have you had?

A. I was taken out of school at a very early age, I believe around thirteen, on account of my eyes. I had what they call a tropical disease of granulated eyelids: I couldn't continue.

Q. Did you then enter school after that?

A. No, only what my mother gave me.

Q. How many grades had you completed at that time?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Just a moment. Unless it be the intention to qualify this man as an expert, I see no reason to inquire into his education, the extent of it or the lack of it.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): You may answer.

A. Well, we have a little different setup in our schooling there. We have first and second class,

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

we call it, known as the grades here, and the top is the top sixth class. I believe I was in the fifth class when I was taken out of school.

Q. When did you come to the United States?

A. I came to the United States the latter end of 1920. I believe it was the end of November.

Q. And you were then about twenty-four years old? A. That is right. [1486]

Q. Had you been in the armed forces of the United Kingdom?

A. Yes, I joined the Australian army in May, 1915, and I was discharged in the latter end of 1917, I believe it was. I have my discharge papers over in the safe deposit box, physical disability from wounds during the war.

Q. Where did you land in the United States when you first came here?

A. I landed in San Francisco at Pier 33.

Q. Did you find a job?

A. Yes, I went out with a friend of mine I came over here with, a fellow named Davy Jones, and his father was working out at the Union Iron Works. So we went out there with my friend and we both got a job as helpers in the iron works.

Q. Did there come a time after that when you went to work on the San Francisco waterfront?

A. Yes, I started to work on the San Francisco waterfront first, I would say, around 1923.

Q. What type of work had you been doing in the meantime generally?

A. After the shipyards had slackened off—I don't know just how long—it may have been a period of six or seven months—and then I went to work out in a foundry on Drake Street or Dreak Street, I think it is, out in the Mission, and after that I sold for Collier's magazine for a short period, and also I was clerk and janitor at the Tivoli Hotel at the [1487] corner of Eddy street and Mason.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. How long did you continue on the San Francisco waterfront?

A. Well, I stayed on the San Francisco waterfront from 1923 up to the present time.

Q. What kind of work have you been doing during that time?

A. Well, I was doing longshoring and at the present time I am now working in the same department. They call it the walking boss's division. It is all longshore work.

Q. Do you now belong to the union?

A. I now belong to 91 of the MWIU.

Q. That is Local 91?

A. That is right.

Q. That is Maritime what—MWIU? What does that mean?

A. The International Warehousemen's and Longshoremen's Union.

Q. ILWU? A. ILWU.

Q. Of what other unions have you been a member, if any?

A. Yes, we had a union back home. I just forget its name now. It was an affiliate of the sheepshearers' union. It was for the other department—I mean, it was connected with the shearing.

Q. Do you know who is the president of your present union?

A. Yes, our—well, we don't call him the president. [1488]

Q. What is his title?

A. Well, we call him secretary. It is Ralph Malin.

Q. You are speaking of your local?

A. Of my union, I understood the question was, yes.

Q. You mean your local? A. Yes.

Q. I mean your international organization. Who is the president of it?

A. Well, Harry Bridges is president of the international.

Q. Are you personally acquainted with Harry Bridges? A. Yes, I know Bridges.

Q. How long have you known him.

A. Well, I have known him over a period of many years, but I first knew him personally in 1933.

Q. Have you been in meetings with him frequently, union meetings?

A. Union meetings?

Q. Yes. A. Not recently.

Q. Have you had occasion to talk with him in the past? A. Is that recently?

Q. Well, any time in the past.

Mr. MacInnis: It would seem to me that this line of questioning is rather vague, unless a foundation is being laid. He should ask the date or he should ask the witness [1489] some question.

The Court: The objection is overruled. This is preliminary.

A. Yes, I have been in many meetings with Harry Bridges.

Q. (Mr. Paisley): Are you acquainted with Henry Schmidt? A. I know Henry Schmidt.

Q. How long have you known Henry Schmidt?

A. Well, I believe the time element would be similar to that of Harry Bridges, although he came to the 'front after Bridges, and while I did know of him, I didn't become personally acquainted with him until around the latter end of 1933.

Q. Have you been in union meetings with him, too?

A. Yes, I have been to many meetings with him.

Q. Is he a member of the ILWU, too?

A. Yes, so far as I know, he still is. [1490]

Q. Do you know the defendant J. R. Robertson?

A. Only very casually.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with him?

A. Well, I have never been very closely acquainted with him. I have met him on very few occasions; I would say not more than three or four times altogether.

Q. Were you working on the waterfront, Mr. Shrimpf, when they had the strike back in 1934, I believe it was?

A. Yes, I was working on the waterfront.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Did there come a time when you took steps to join the Communist Party? A. Yes——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. I think at this time, Your Honor, the objection should be made as to all testimony to be elicited from the lips of this witness upon the ground that the decision of Dean Landis in the year 1939 and the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1945 are each res judicata upon the matters to be elicited during the years 1933 and thereafter, up to the time of the making of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in 1945. We therefore object to all testimony during that intervening period of years, upon the ground that they would be barred by the previous decisions, that questions of fact have been decided, that the matters hostile or prejudicial to the defendants in this case have specifically been found false already by proper [1491] tribunals.

The Court: Counsel, one moment, please. One moment. An objection is one thing and an argument is quite another. I think your objection is in the record; I shall rule on it. I ruled on it before. There is no occasion for this lengthy discourse. The objection is overruled for the reasons, upon the grounds heretofore stated by the Court, both orally and in writing.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will appreciate that if the objection is not made, it is waived.

The Court: I appreciate that, counsel; I full well appreciate it. We are full well in accord.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, may I suggest this, Your Honor. In view of Your Honor's expression, which I assume would be the same in the instance of every witness, if the same objection were made, may the understanding be had with you that the same objection, as to the doctrine of res judicata, would be made as to each witness? May it be considered as having been made and Your Honor's order having been made in the same respect?

The Court: Counsel, we have that, or I have that understanding with Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. MacInnis: I think not on that——

Mr. Hallinan: Only on the one witness, as to each question put to one witness, we had agreed to that. And I think the [1492] same thing as to each witness. I think we had better make it as to each respective witness. In other words, we will not have to repeat any objections.

The Court: The procedure we adopted in connection with the last witness may be adopted in connection with this, and the record saved to your objection.

Mr. Paisley: And as to all future witnesses, I hope, Your Honor?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will let it go as to other witnesses.

The Court: I think when that occasion arises, you may enter your objection.

Mr. MacInnis: I think this, Your Honor: the only danger is, we can not just say all objections to all conceivable subjects are preserved. This is a specific objection on those two matters.

The Court: You are perfectly entitled to make your objection, Mr. MacInnis, and to enter it of record to save your points. And I overrule the objection for the reason indicated.

Mr. Paisley: Would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

Mr. MacInnis:. May that answer be stricken pending the making of the objection, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The objection to that question is, further, that it specifically calls for the opinion and conclusion of [1493] the witness; that, secondly, it is not the best evidence, it is an attempt to elicit by secondary evidence that which can be produced otherwise.

The Court: The objection is overruled. Now you may answer, Mr. Schrimpf.

A. Yes, there did come a time when I joined the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): And what did you do to join the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. This same objection may be preserved as to all questions relative to whatever this gentleman may choose to say about joining the Communist Party? May that be the understanding?

The Court: Well, let us have a definition on the basis of the objection, so that there will not be a question arise hereafter. Your objection is based upon the ground that the question calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness?

Mr. MacInnis: That is one ground, and the other ground is that it is, that the answer would not be the best evidence in any event.

The Court: You may have that same running objection, then, to the particular line of testimony now being elicited.

Mr. MacInnis: To questions as to anything done by this witness as to the alleged joining of the Communist Party?

The Court: All right, sir. [1494]

Mr. Paisley: Would you read the question?

(Previous question read.)

A. Well, if I may, I would like to answer in my way. I want it understood that——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think, your Honor, that volunteer statements have no place in the record. The witness may answer the question, which was simply put. I think your Honor should strike from the record the portion of the answer already volunteered.

The Court: Well, the witness had some preliminary statement, I assume, that he desired to make for his own reason?

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: You may make that, sir.

The Witness: Well, the statement is this: I did not pursue the Communist Party, the Communist Party pursued me. The reasons——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: That is a volunteer statement.

The Court: Yes, that may go out. You may answer the question, "Did you become a member of the Communist Party?", and the answer is whatever it may be. It is either yes or no.

The Witness: I answered that already, if your Honor please. I did become a member.

The Court: All right. Next question.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What steps did you take to become a member of the Communist [1495] Party?

A. Am I permitted this; to answer, then, I will have to qualify it, that—"Take the steps"——

The Court: Well, Mr. Schrimf, you can answer the question to the best of your ability. If the answer requires a qualification or explanation or amplification on your part, you may give that, on the condition that you not make any generalized speech on the subject. The question will be addressed to you by counsel, you answer it to the best of your ability. If you feel it requires some explanation in fairness to yourself, you make it. We will see how we get along then.

Mr. Paisley: I might withdraw that question and try——

The Court: All right.

Mr. Paisley: I think I probably know what he has in mind.

Q. Were you solicited to join the party or did you yourself seek admission?

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I think, your Honor, that in the first place, that is a leading question, suggestive of its own answer; and secondarily, it would be immaterial in any event.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Well, perhaps it would be immaterial whether he be solicited or not. I don't know that has any particular bearing.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I don't either, your honor; but I gathered that that is what the witness had in mind, and he wanted to state that.

The Court: All right. [1496]

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Will you tell us the circumstances surrounding your entry into the Communist Party, in your own way?

A. We were on strike and I was quite active in the strike. The formula we used to form our strike committee, we selected one man off each dock who had been spokesman for that dock prior to the strike. As I said, I had been active, and things I was doing certainly did not go by unnoticed, evidently, to some of the Communist Party members and——

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I think that answer must be stricken as a further opinion and conclusion.

The Court: The last part, as to what might not have gone unnoticed, may go out as his opinion and conclusion and so forth.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it might be helpful if the date of this undertaking were mentioned.

Mr. Paisley: Well, we will get around to that if you will give us time. Did the Court rule on it?

The Court: Yes, sir. Proceed. I struck out just that last part.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Well, will you proceed, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Then one day, I would say towards the end of May, I was approached to join the Communist Party.

Q. What year? A. In 1934.

Q. And do you remember who it was? [1497]

A. I do.

Q. That approached you? A. I do.

Q. Who was it?

A. It was Henry Schmidt.

Q. And what did he say?

A. We were up at the mezzanine floor where we were carrying on our strike activities, and as far as I can recollect, he walked by and handed me some kind of a card and said, "Here, look this over," or "Get next to yourself and sign this up," or something, some words to that effect. I put the card in my pocket and filled it out later.

Q. Mezzanine floor of what place or building?

A. It was 13 Stewart Street, or 113 Stewart Street, I believe it is.

Q. Well, what kind of a building or what place was it?

A. Oh, it was an old hall that had been used for various occasions and we had taken it over as our temporary union headquarters.

Q. Who had taken it over?

A. Local 3879 of the ILA which was then the number and name of our union.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. I see. Was he a member of that union at that time? A. He was.

Q. Well, you filled the card out, you say? [1498]

A. I did.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I don't recall who picked the card up, it could have been Norma Perry; I am not so sure, but after filling it out, the card was picked up by someone. I believe—or, it could have been Norma Perry.

Q. Well, where did you leave it?

A. I didn't leave it, it was picked up, it was taken off me from the hall.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May the answer go out pending the objection? The further objection to this line of testimony, your Honor, is that it calls for activities and conversations outside the presence of the defendant. It calls for res inter alios acta, and we make the objection upon that ground.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Paisley: What was the question?

(Question read.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May that same objection be preserved in the same fashion as to questions put to this witness about the activities of third persons other than the defendants?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Well, when you say that she picked it up, do you mean that you laid it down somewhere and she later picked it up? Will you explain that, Mr. Schrimpf? What did [1499] you mean by "she picked it up"?

A. Well, she took it, took the card back off me, as far as I can recall, because, as I said, I can't make no positive statement on that. It is so long ago. But to the best of my recollection, it was picked up, and it could have been Norma Perry who took the card back off me after it was filled out.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a minute. I suggest, your Honor, that that answer is not responsive to any question. Unless this man says that of his own knowledge, and with his own eyes, he saw some person picking up this card of which he speaks.

The Court: The motion is denied. It has now reached 4:15, counsel for the respective parties, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I assume that is an appropriate time to take the recess. We have run a bit overtime.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir.

The Court: May I again admonish you ladies and gentlemen not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you for decision. We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. You may now retire.

(Thereupon the jury retired.)

The Court: We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Friday, December 2, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [1500]

Friday, December 2, 1949, 10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

HENRY JOSEPH SCHRIMPF

resumed.

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Paisley:

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, how long did you keep the card which you say Mr. Henry Schmidt gave you before you filled it out? A. I don't recall.

Q. What is your best recollection?

A. Well, it could have been handed in by the next day. I don't recall definitely how long I kept the card.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, that answer must be stricken; "It could have been handed in by the next day" is only a speculation. It is not even an estimation or it is not his best thought. It is just a pure guess.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): How often before you received the card from Mr. Schmidt had you talked with Mr. Schmidt? [1501]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I talked to him on many occasions, especially inasmuch as [1501] we were in or on strike.

Q. Did you sign your name on the card?

A. That is something that I cannot remember definite on either.

Q. Can you describe the card for us, as best you can remember?

A. As far as I can recall, it was comparable to the size of the average postcard. The color, I don't recall.

Q. You say you filled it out. Do you remember what you wrote on there?

A. No, outside of my name and address, which I gave as Union Headquarters, and my occupation; as far as I recollect, there was nothing else of importance on the card.

Q. How long had you known Norma Perry before you say you think she is the one who picked it up?

A. I first became acquainted with Norma Perry after we had gone on strike, so that would be sometime after the 9th of May.

Q. How often had you seen her?

A. I saw Norma Perry after we had gone on strike, I would say every day, because she was working in the office on the publicity committee, with our strike publicity committee.

Q. For the union? A. Of the union.

Q. Was she a member of this union? [1502]

A. At that time, no.

Q. Did she later become a member?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. She was made an honorary member, and I believe was given a registered brass.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, as part of our victory we entered into an agreement with the employers that we would determine who was entitled to work on the waterfront by registering each man. This is what we call the "registered brass." It was determined—I can't remember exact on the time, but I believe it was those who had worked a period of six months in a given period of from two to three years. They were eligible for registration regardless of their union affiliation to work on the waterfront, and Norma later on, I understand, received one of these registration brasses.

Q. Had you been in meetings with Norma Perry prior to the time that you say she got this card from you?

A. Norma Perry was present at some meetings, and I can only say it is my belief she was present at some meetings before I was given this card.

Q. Were these union meetings?

A. No.

Q. What kind of meetings were they?

A. Well, I was invited out to a place where she was staying at one time. It was a restaurant. It was the Spreckels Old [1503] Mansion. It is out on Scott Street, I believe. I don't know whether it is still on the corner. She was staying there, and I had visited up there.

Q. Did you know when she took the card, picked it up, as you say, whether or not she was then a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Just a moment. That assumes something not in evidence, in the first place. If your Honor will read the last remark of this witness yesterday, he told the Court and jury in effect that he did not know, but it could have been Norma Perry who picked up the card. Now the prosecutor gratuitously adopts that language, and now has the witness saying it was Norma Perry who picked up the card. I think that is a leading and suggestive question and assumes something not in evidence. [1504]

The Court: Yesterday he testified in response to the question of Mr. Paisley:

"Well, she took it, took the card back off me, as far as I can recall, because, as I said, I can't make no positive statement on that. It is so long ago. But to the best of my recollection, it was picked up, and it could have been Norma Perry took the card back off me after it was filled out."

Mr. MacInnis: Exactly.

The Court: You might, counsel——

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

Q. Well, are you sure that it was Norma Perry who took the card, Mr. Schrimpf?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is cross-examination of his own witness and another leading and suggestive question.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, may I make the further objection, your Honor: Having elicited one remark from the witness, which your Honor says may stand in the record, which your honor says is now responsive, the prosecutor cannot now strengthen the remark by asking his witness to boost his own credibility by answering that he is sure that the other remark was correct.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Just tell us, Mr. Schrimpf, whether or not you are sure. [1505]

A. No, I won't make a positive or definite statement, other than what I have already entered into the record. It could have been Norma Perry who picked this card up.

Mr. MacInnis: On that basis we move that his testimony be stricken, your Honor. We are here to elicit facts, and not suppositions.

Mr. Paisley: I think he ought to specify what testimony he wants stricken.

The Court: He has; his previous testimony.

Mr. MacInnis: All testimony concerning the picking up of any suppositious card by Norma Perry whom the witness first said could have picked the card up, but he wasn't positive; and whom the witness now refuses to state was actually the person, in answer to the question, "Are you sure that it was Norma Perry?"

The Court: I will reserve ruling on it, on the motion, counsel.

Q. What is the basis of your statement, Mr.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Schrimpf, that Norma Perry could have picked the card up? What basis have you in your recollection or in fact for that statement?

A. My basis for this is that she was serving on the publicity committee with Henry Schmidt and Ralph Malin, and as I mentioned in the record, she was spending a lot of her time in the office and being and working very close with Henry Schmidt. Henry giving me the card, and I can't make any definite or [1506] positive statement that she did pick it up, but from those conclusions, it is possible that she could have picked it up, because they were working together.

Q. It is from that that you draw the inference that she did pick it up, from those surrounding facts and circumstances?

A. Yes. It could have been that, yes.

The Court: Counsel?

Mr. Paisley: I think the jury is entitled to his best recollection, and that is what he is giving, your Honor, as to who the individual was. I don't think it is very important what individual it was, anyway.

The Court: Well, probably it would go to the weight of the witness' testimony with respect to the fact or the alleged fact or the asserted fact that Norma Perry picked the card up.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, may I suggest this, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: In all respect to your Honor, the question which you just now put to the witness was one which might be asked on cross-examination of a witness: "What is your basis for saying that?"

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: I am entitled to ask that question, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not criticizing your right to ask the question, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: I could have asked that myself.

Mr. MacInnis: I am merely analyzing what has transpired [1507] here.

The Court: I merely tried to elicit what may be the basis for it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, but he gives you now just a statement it is possible because certain other things remain in his memory, that she was working there. I think that is hardly a basis for an assertion of fact.

The Court: Yes, I am inclined to agree with you, counsel, that the basis for his testimony or inference drawn that Norma Perry picked the card up is quite indefinite, and I shall grant the motion to strike.

Mr. Paisley: All right.

Q. How long, Mr. Schrimpf, did you keep the card after you filled it out?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is asked and answered, your Honor, about three minutes ago. He said he didn't know.

The Court: What was the question?

(Question read.)

Mr. MacInnis: I would suggest, your Honor, if there is any doubt we could ask the shorthand reporter to read the previous question and answer, which was the identical question, which elicited an indefinite answer.

The Court: Would you read it?

The Reporter: That must have been in the previous take, your Honor; I do not see it in my take. [1508]

The Court: You may repeat the question. The reporter does not have it.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): How long did you keep it, Mr. Schrimpf, according to your present recollection, after you filled it out?

A. That is something I can't be positive on either, but I believe previously in the record I did say it could have been not longer than the next day. I have no positive recollection of when they picked the card up.

Mr. MacInnis: Now I suggest that that answer must be stricken, your Honor. First, on the basis of no positive recollection, secondly, the witness now refers to people in the plural when "they" picked it up. It is entirely unresponsive, entirely indefinite, not a statement of fact against men who are on trial in the criminal case.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Do you know, sir, that you delivered it to someone?

A. Very definite.

Q. And thereafter did you receive anything, any evidence of membership in the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, that is obviously a leading question, your Honor, that counsel puts half a question and waits for the witness who makes no answer—then he adds the leading words to suggest the answer. [1509]

Mr. Paisley: Well, let's go back to the original question.

Q. Thereafter did you receive anything?

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, and now having suggested the answer, of course the repetition of the proper question will elicit the desired answer.

A. Yes, I received later on a Communist Party book.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Do you have it now?

A. I have not.

Q. Do you know what became of it?

A. I believe I destroyed it.

Q. Will you describe it to the Court and jury as best you remember?

A. My best recollection is, it was a size, say, around four inches by three inches, or maybe four and a half by three inches. It wasn't a thick book or pamphlet; it was maybe ten or fifteen pages in it.

Q. And can you describe it any further? Were there any insignia of any kind on it?

A. Well, there was places in there for the stamps for your dues, dues stamps, and I cannot recall the insignias if any were on it.

Q. Was your name on it?

A. No, the name of Henry Lowman was on the book.

Q. And do you know how that came [1510] about?

A. Yes, it was explained to me it was not allowed——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a minute. If any explanation is to be offered as to what some third person said to this man, we should be informed as to the identity of that person.

Mr. Paisley: Well, if you will sit down, maybe the witness will tell you.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I am not required to sit down when I make an objection. I am addressing his Honor.

The Court: Yes. I think he is entitled to have, at some place in the narrative testimony, the identity of the person who informed him as to certain facts or circumstances.

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

Q. The question was, Mr. Schrimpf, if you know how it was that your name was not on there and the name of Lowman was on there.

A. I was told—and incidentally, I will say I don't know just who told me——

Mr. MacInnis: Then I suggest, your Honor, that no such conversation can be given. Why, it would be frustrating of every attempt to defend any case if a man could take the stand and say some person whom he doesn't know told him this, but it is binding on these three men who are on trial.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Oh, of course it wouldn't be binding on them, your Honor, unless they said it themselves or unless they were present. We won't get anywhere if we are going to have these captious objections continually. [1511]

Mr. MacInnis: We won't get anywhere unless there are proper questions and ordinary answers. Now, I suggest this, your Honor: Without being critical, we have seen in this court the amount of preparation engaged in by the prosecution, and I suggest that adequate opportunity has been had to prepare this witness so that he may give answers consistent with the ordinary rules of evidence. I am not suggesting that the witness must be a lawyer, but a direct question should be followed by a direct answer. [1511-A]

The Court: Did you complete your answer, Mr. Schrimpf? A. No, I did not.

Q. You complete the answer and then I will rule on the matter.

A. I was told by a party or parties then—I shall qualify it—whom I don't recall, that it was not regulations or customs to keep a record of your real name on any of the records of the Communist Party, and this was the accepted opinion for me and all other comrades, Party members, whom I was acquainted with.

Mr. MacInnis: The accepted opinions of unknown persons, your Honor, could be of no probative value in a criminal case. A volunteer statement impossible to test, frustrative of any cross-examination because the identity of the person could never be known, impossible of impeachment. I think, your Honor, it would be ridiculous to allow a statement like that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, do you contest the fact or the asserted fact that the internal operations of the Communist Party were held in secret or certain secret formulae may have been adopted with respect to the identity of the individual members? Do you contest that?

Mr. MacInnis: Do you assert that?

The Court: No, I do not assert it. I merely reiterate what this witness has stated.

Mr. MacInnis: I have no knowledge of that. [1512]

The Court: I make no assertion at all.

Mr. MacInnis: But these men are charged with a crime, and the crime involves the smear of Communist affiliation. Whatever the ultimate fact may be about the Communist Party and its doings, if we are to receive evidence about the undertakings of those people, it ought to be real evidence and not fictitious evidence, not what imaginary people or what forgotten people or people whose names have passed beyond the lips of any witness may have said. or what this man may now think they may have said, or what he has been told they said. We cannot receive evidence of that kind.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that has already been testified to, as I remember, in previous proceedings in this case.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: The previous objection was as to the form of the question and the ordinary admissibility, when a witness was apparently willing to state the source of his conversations; but certainly there was no problem before the Court before about completely anonymous persons.

Mr. Paisley: Since when, your Honor, cannot a witness testify as to what the customs were in his club, church, or any other organization to which he belonged?

Mr. MacInnis: I blush at that kind of statement, for it reflects upon the law of evidence. May I say one thing on that, your Honor. Let us suppose that instead of being engaged here in an inquiry as to a highly controversial subject, the [1513] matter of Communism or its affiliation, we were trying to determine if a particular person was a member of one of our churches, as the prosecutor suggests. Let us say that the inquiry was whether you or I were members of the Catholic Church. Now, could that be proved by some person saying, "I saw him come out of a church; hence he is a member"? Or could it be proved by some other person saying——

Mr. Paisley: That would be one circumstance.

The Court: Counsel, may I interrupt momentarily? There is no particular parallel or parity of reasoning in the illustration you gave us and the testimony. As I recall, the testimony of this witness was that the book was returned to him—Mr. Paisley, may I ask you to participate with me in this colloquy?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes, your Honor.

The Court: I did not want you to remove yourself from this interesting discussion.

Mr. Paisley: He invites me to go home.

The Court: I invite you to remain.

Mr. MacInnis: No, I asked him not to go home, your Honor.

The Court: The witness testified the book was returned to him in the name of another person. He stated that was the practice and custom at the time of his party. Now there has been testimony given by the prior witness as to the practice [1514] and custom. I shall allow it, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Within the limitations of your allowance of that testimony, may I ask that you instruct the jury that it is not binding on the defendants?

The Court: I will accordingly instruct the jury that the testimony of this witness with respect to the internal operations and the formulae adopted by or asserted to be adopted by the Communist Party, the agents and representatives thereof, is not to be considered at this stage of the proceedings as binding upon the defendants or either or any of them. The testimony elicited is for the purpose and the sole purpose at this juncture of determining the operations and the reasons, if they do exist, for the return of the book in the name or names of other persons rather than the true name of the person who subscribed to the Party or the Communist Party. You may proceed.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): After you had received your book did you attend any meetings of the Communist Party?

A. I attended regular meetings, known as my unit meeting, the unit to which I was assigned or placed in. These meetings used to take place every Thursday night.

Q. Where did they take place?

A. They would take place in a great number of places. That was the custom of the Communist Party, to very seldom hold——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. The witness [1515] has not been asked to narrate any custom in this question. He was asked, Where did these meetings take place? That is a question to which our previous objections are preserved by our agreement with the Court. He was not asked to say anything except the places.

The Court: Objection is overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Then I move that the volunteer statement be excluded from the record. He was asked to narrate places.

The Court: The motion is denied because he used the word "custom" as part of the context of his statement with respect to the situs or site of these various meetings, and I assume, only for the purpose of our instant discusson; that he may relate that the meetings were held from place to place and at various places, clandestine or otherwise. I don't know.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think he was asked to state whether they were clandestine or not.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: I am making the ruling on the basis of what no doubt is the trend of the testimony. Of course, what I say is not to be regarded by the jury as testimony. The testimony is elicited from the witness. You are not to regard what I say in that respect any more than you are to believe that the testimony comes from Mr. MacInnis. Proceed, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): I asked you to tell us where you remembered that you attended these unit meetings. [1516]

A. I repeat, I attended the meetings in many places. Some of the places were at John Larson's home in the Mission—incidentally, this is over fifteen years ago and I don't recall the street or number. I attended a meeting at John Schomaker's father-in-law's or mother-in-law's; I believe they lived out on Paige Street. I attended meetings in the Mission on more than one occasion, and if I may have this in the record, the way they would arrange these meetings and the contact which——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. This witness has no right to choose things which he would like to insert in the record, your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): All right. Just tell us any other places that you remember where you attended these unit meetings.

A. There was another place right at the start of the approach to the Twin Peaks Tunnel. I don't know the number of that house. I attended meetings west of Van Ness; it could have been on Pine Street.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Do you know who selected the meeting place?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is now asking for the opinion and conclusion of some person not before the Court:

Mr. Paisley: No, it is asking him if he knows.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Do you know who selected the meeting [1517] places?

A. We never knew in advance.

Q. How were you notified?

A. Someone would come around and inform me. Very often Norma Perry phoned me as many times as any other individual where I was to meet, and these meetings, as I attempted to say before, were never given in advance and the address very often wasn't given to you. They would pick you up in a car. Norma Perry had a car and she was a very busy little woman in those days, and she would drive you around to the various places. And incidentally, to make it more difficult to remember these places, the Communists were overly cautious because many times I can honestly say I would travel eight blocks to go two blocks.

Mr. MacInnis: I think your Honor, the volunteer remark has no place in the answer, and the witness' remark as to what he can honestly say is another attempt to boost his own credit. It does not answer the question at all.

Mr. Paisley: I think it is all relevant and competent.

The Court: The motion is denied.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Was Norma Perry a member of your particular unit?

A. No, not that I can recall. She was not.

Q. Did she attend the meetings of your unit?

A. I recall her at some of the meetings collecting dues and [1518] giving stamps.

Q. Was Henry Schomaker a member of your particular unit?

Mr. MacInnis: That is a new character, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: Is that right? What is his name? He is supposed to be in this conspiracy.

Mr. MacInnis: This is some new member of the cast, Henry Schomaker.

Mr. Paisley: What is his first name? John.

Q. Was John Schomaker a member of your unit?

A. Not that I recollect.

Q. Did he attend any of your unit meetings?

A. No, not that I recall.

Q. Do you recall the names of any persons who attended your unit meetings?

A. I recall John Larson.

Mr. MacInnis: I want to make a motion to strike, your Honor. I think that a part of this testimony is self-frustrative. A moment ago he said he attended unit meetings of the Communist Party at the home of John Schomaker. Now he says that he never attended a meeting with John Schomaker.

Mr. Paisley: It may not be unit meetings, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: He has answered about unit meetings. He has characterized them as unit meetings.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: It may have been meetings of the Communist Party other than unit meetings. [1519]

Mr. MacInnis: I dislike to interfere with the preparation of the prosecution, your Honor, but this man has characterized every meeting as a unit meeting. The prosecutor cannot now say there may have been some other kind of meeting.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): You say all meetings were on Thursday. Was it nighttime or daytime customarily? A. Always at nighttime.

Q. What part, if any, did you take in your unit meetings?

A. I was just a regular dues-paying member, accepting the regular assignments which ~~—~~

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, we are not interested in this transaction and the part that this man played in some activity.

Mr. Paisley: Well, if he objects to that, let us go on to something else, your Honor. It is not too important.

Mr. MacInnis: Why do you ask it, then?

Mr. Paisley: Well, the jury is entitled to hear all the facts and circumstances surrounding his membership and his activity, I think.

Q. Did you pay dues to the Communist Party?

A. I did.

Q. To whom did you pay your dues?

A. That depended on who was there at each meeting to give you stamps to collect your [1520] dues.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. How often did you pay your dues?

A. Well, I believe I kept them pretty well paid up for the few months I was in there.

Q. How often did they become due?

A. You paid according to your earnings. It was a sliding scale. They determined the amount of dues you would pay on your income. During the strike when I first started, I think I paid them $2 a month.

Q. Did you pay that monthly or weekly, or do you remember?

A. I don't recall. I had a regular schedule for paying the dues.

Q. Do you remember what kind of receipt, if any, you would receive when the membership dues were paid?

A. No, they just put a stamp in your book.

Q. Did you keep your book on your person or otherwise? A. Yes, I had my book.

Q. Did there come a time, sir, when you resigned or left the Communist Party?

A. Well, you might put it I just faded out of the picture. I just refused to function. That was not later than June, 1935.

Q. So you were in about a year, approximately?

A. Approximately.

Q. While you were a member of the Communist Party did you see Harry Bridges? [1521]

A. I saw Harry Bridges many times during that period.

Q. Approximately how many times?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Well, during the strike I saw him, I would say, every day. After the strike I didn't see him quite as frequent.

Q. Where would you see him?

A. Well, during the strike Bridges was chairman of the strike committee and on more than one occasion through being detained somewhere—where, I don't know—word would come to me that I was to go ahead and call the strike committee meeting, which convened every day, and carry on with the regular strike policy for that day.

Q. How many were on that strike committee?

A. As I started to enter into the record yesterday, the selection of that strike committee was by selecting a spokesman from each dock. This spokesman originated prior to his going on strike. We agreed—I say "we"—I mean the union agreed there would be some man on each dock during our organization of the ILA local to keep things straightened out. If there was any discrimination against anyone on the dock he was to be spokesman for him to try to straighten it out, so when the strike came along, that is the way they selected the strike committee. This spokesman was taken from each dock giving the strike committee a very broad representation of longshoremen from all the docks, and knowing generall~~y all the con~~ditions on the 'front. [1522]

A. And Mr. Bridges was chairman?

A. He was elected chairman.

Q. About how many men on the committee were there?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Approximately there was fifty members.

Q. How often would it meet?

A. We would meet definitely every day. Very often the strike committee was called to meet two or three times in a single day.

Q. Full attendance usually?

A. Not always a full attendance. There was times there when the members couldn't attend. We had the various committees set up to——

Q. Were you on the committee?

A. I was in charge of all the picketing committees.

Q. While you were a member of the Communist Party did you see Henry Schmidt?

A. As I previously reported in the record, I saw Henry Schmidt practically every day until such time as he moved to a room somewhere conveniently there because there was too much noise. It was getting too congested around the hall. So he could get the right class of publicity out. Then I won't say I saw him every day after that, but most every day during the strike after that.

Q. Was he a member of the strike committee?

A. He was a member of the strike [1523] committee.

Q. While you were a member of the Communist Party did you ever see the defendant John Robertson?

A. No, I never knew Robertson in those days.

Q. When did you meet him?

A. I just can't recall when, but it was in recent years, way after the strike and after we organized.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Do you know of a Herman Mann?

A. I know of a Herman Mann on the waterfront.

Q. What type of work did he do?

A. Herman Mann was a longshoreman.

Q. He belonged to your same union?

A: That is right.

Q. Did you have any opportunity to learn whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I believed he was a member of the Communist Party. I met at his house several times.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think that answer must be stricken, your Honor.

The Court: I think you might lay a foundation for the statement that he believed he was a member of the Communist Party, if there be such foundation. It may go out at the present juncture.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, too, your Honor: If this man named a thousand people who were members, what good would it do here? [1524]

The Court: Counsel, I granted the motion.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What opportunity would you have, if any, to form an opinion as to whether or not Herman Mann was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Well, he was a functionary in connection with the policy of the Party. He used to ~~come~~ around and give us information and inform us of meetings. [1524-A]

Q. Had you been in the Communist Party meetings with him?

A. Well, I would call them Communist Party meetings, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. There is a great deal of doubt already, as the record shows, as to what is a Communist Party meeting and what may be a meeting in which certain Communists are present.

The Court: Again I admonish the jury—I hope that I will not have to repeat these admonitions—to disregard the statements made by counsel in connection with the objections interposed to the questions. Mr. MacInnis' characterization that there is grave doubt about certain meetings being Communist or otherwise is for the ultimate determination of the jury. You are the sole and exclusive arbiters of the fact. Accordingly, I admonish you to disregard that particular statement at this juncture.

Mr. MacInnis, may I respectfully say to you that in connection with the objections interposed to question, that you refrain, so far as you are able, and consistent, of course, with the defense of your clients, from lengthy arguments. I think I know your purposes, I think I know the reasons underlying your objections; and if you will be good enough to interpose your objections, state the grounds, the foundation, omitting the argument, I shall rule as promptly as I may. I think that is a request that I should have addressed, perhaps, a little earlier. [1525]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Now, the witness has a question before him?

Mr. MacInnis: No. Pardon me. There was an answer given. The motion was to strike the answer. That is the matter before the Court.

The Court: Yes. I think—I doubt the foundation as to the characterization that Mann was a Communist. I grant the motion. Then Mr. Paisley asked a question in the nature of a foundational question; and then I lost track in the light of our discussion. What is the state of the record, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

The Court: Well, I think he should state the time and place of these meetings, to the best of his recollection, and the parties present and characterize them—not generically as Communist Party meetings, but lay a foundation to that extent. I observe your suggestion and your objection—rather, sustain them.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, tell us in your own way, Mr. Schrimpf, what opportunity you have had to form an opinion as to whether or not Mann, Herman Mann was a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The form of that question asks this witness to offer us an opinion on his own credibility.

Mr. Paisley: It is about as fair a question as a lawyer could ask, Your Honor. I am not attempting to lead him, I am [1526] asking him to tell us what his opportunities were. I could lead him by suggesting meetings and such things as that, but I don't want to do that. I want to be fair. I want him to tell us what opportunities he has had.

Mr. MacInnis: Now the prosecutor extols his own fairness. I would ask the question be read back to Your Honor. I think Your Honor will see what I mean by the objection.

Mr. Paisley: I could ask him if he was ever present when he paid dues to the Communist Party. That would be a leading question then, I think; it would be suggesting an answer. But this question asks him to tell us what opportunities he has had, and by doing that, determining that in his own mind. And the jury is entitled—often a lay witness can give an opinion, and if he tells the jury why he thinks so, then they can evaluate his opinion.

Mr. MacInnis: So, Your Honor, he now suggests to the witness during his discussion with Your Honor the answer that he expects; and thus demonstrates his own fairness.

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, we will leave it to the jury as to whether we are trying to be fair or whether you are.

The Court: Would you read the last question, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

The Court: The objection is overruled. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, you may answer that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Witness: Yes. [1527]

The Court: To the best of your recollection.

A. It is my opinion that Herman Mann was a party member. I did not see him paying any dues. I never saw his book. Incidentally, I saw very few Communist books or saw very few of them paying dues. And I would like to have this also in the record: I could not definitely and honestly swear that any one sitting in this courtroom could be an American unless they would say they were or they give me some documentary proof. And that is exactly the status of the Communist Party in this particular case. I met at Herman Mann's house, in my opinion, they were Communist Party meetings. I did meet there with unit meetings. And incidentally, in this unit meeting, to clear up a previous misstatement in the record,——

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I think, Your Honor, we are not interested in volunteer statements.

The Witness: It is not a volunteer statement.

Mr. MacInnis: If there is a misstatement, counsel may clear it up.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Schrimpf.

A. (Continuing): We have had unit meetings there in Herman Mann's place, but Herman Mann, to my recollection, was not in my unit. You may hold them at any Communist Party member's house, and he would go and his wife would sit doing her knitting and he would be out playing with the kids. Not necessary that he would have to attend the unit meeting. But there was one [1528] meeting which I recalled very vividly happened at Herman Mann's house. It was an important meeting from the Communist point of view, their side.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a minute. Now we are having the witness characterize by opinion and conclusion the importance of the things to which he is testifying.

The Court: The objection is overruled. Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Proceed, Mr. Schrimpf.

A. Well, as I was saying, it was from the Communist point of view a very important meeting. It was a meeting called to discipline one of its members for certain acts which was in violation of Communist policy. This party was Norma Perry. The accusations and charges were that she was being too friendly with a company which were not seeing eye to eye with policy of the Communist Party. Now, I want this part clear for the record. This was not an official meeting to decide and pass judgment on Norma Perry; it was a meeting called there to determine whether or not there was any basis for these accusations and charges. And present at that meeting were Sam Darcy, Herman Mann, John Schomaker, myself, Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt and there could have been others at this meeting. And to the best of my recollection, it was on a morning, and I believe it was a Sunday morning. And it took place in the front room of Herman Mann's place, house. The outcome of this meeting was, this girl Perry tried to defend her right of talking [1529] and seeking company outside of her business or her work, and I remember her very well saying, "After all," she says, "if I go out with this company, I may get additional information for the party from this company." Now, is it in order here to continue as regards to the information she had reference to?

Q. That's right. Proceed, and tell us what happened at that meeting, anything that you remember.

A. Well, Miss Perry was very active during the strike, and the party saw a good opportunity of having Miss Perry placed in a very important and key position within the union.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. This is a narrative certainly of something foreign to the meeting which this man now purports to describe.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, the testimony is that Bridges and Schmidt were both present. What went on at that meeting, what was discussed there—that is certainly competent evidence.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. (Continuing): Well, this is all a part of the cause of calling the meeting. As I said, Norma Perry, she was active as a Communist Party member, and she had done good work during the strike. She was a very hard working woman, and the Communist Party saw and seized upon this opportunity to have Norma Perry placed in a key position within the union. Her job in that union, incidentally, which was a strict violation of our union constitution—and she was so informed as an employee of [1530] our union, that all records must be confidential. But the Communists, seeing this great opportunity, they put Norma Perry in there with one major specific purpose. She was to——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. Is that part of a conversation, Your Honor? He is now making a speech about what he says, from his perspective in this case, the so-called Communists were doing with a certain person at a certain time. He has been asked under Your Honor's rulings to narrate what happened at a meeting. Now, I think, Your Honor, that anything that he says by way of criticism or by way of peroration or speech of any kind must go out.

The Court: The motion is denied. As I understand it, he was attempting to give the cause or relationship as to the background with respect to bringing this lady before a meeting.

Mr. Paisley: That's right, as I understand it.

The Court: Objection overruled.

The Witness: If I may continue?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

A. Her assignment by the Communist Party in this union, responsible job, was to compile and collect a complete record of the name, the address, the affiliation of every member of our union. This was to be a great tool in the hands of the Communist Party, such a compilation of such data. They could contact personally or by mail any time they wished every longshoreman on the beach, and that, to the Communist Party, is very [1531] important. And this was her assignment.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. Now, Your Honor, you may deem that I am being vexatious by making further objections, but here is the difficulty now.

The Court: Well, what I may deem is truly within my province, counsel, and any suggestions on your part are gratuitous. I think we well understand one another.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, yes, that is gratuitous. Here is what I want to propose, Your Honor. By this testimony the witness tells us now again the doings of third persons, whose names were not told. He tells us that unknowns asked Norma Perry to do something. He doesn't state who was present, whether the defendants were present or not.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Two of them were present at this meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: He is now giving, under Your Honor's rulings,——

The Court: I assume the focal point of the testimony, if there be a focal point, is this meeting, Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: This meeting. It is corroborative of some of the testimony of Schomaker. He testified about this meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest now that Your Honor make the same admonition to the jury in respect to the prosecutor's statement?

The Court: Yes, I think so. The statements made by counsel with respect to the offering of testimony, the objection [1532] interposed to the question and the like are not to be regarded by you as testimony or as evidence. I think I have made that clear at the very outset of the case when you were impaneled as jurors. You sit there as the sole and exclusive arbiters of the fact. The testimony comes from these witnesses. Naturally in the trial of a case, counsel make observations, the Court has to make observations, and those observations are not to be considered by you as evidence.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, let me ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf: At the time of this meeting in Herman Mann's home, at which charges were preferred or discussed against Norma Perry, you were a member both of the union and of the Communist Party, right? A. That's right.

Q. Now, were these matters that you now are testifying about discussed at that meeting, about the fact that she had been put into the——

A. That was what the meeting was called for.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is a leading and suggestive question, as are all questions of this type.

The Court: Yes, the question was what, if anything, was discussed at those meetings.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I want to be sure. Counsel was objecting; I think he is objecting in good faith. I want to be sure [1533] that these matters were discussed. And if they weren't, why, it is not competent.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: All right.

Mr. Paisley: That is why I asked it.

Q. Were these matters discussed in the meeting, sir?

A. That is what the meeting was called for, to discuss these matters.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me——

Mr. Paisley: I think it is purely competent.

Mr. MacInnis: Now he asks a leading question. Your Honor concurs that the subject matter is leading, and now following the discussion he now suggests to the witness, "Now, were these matters discussed?"; in other words, he repeats in a different form the same leading question.

The Court: What, if anything, was discussed at the meeting, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Well, this particular meeting, as already entered in the record, was for this specific purpose, of taking the disciplining of Norma Perry for her action not considered in line with Communist Party policy.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): All right. Now, tell us in general what charges were brought and what discussion was had on it?

A. That was the discussion, her being too friendly with individuals who were considered not seeing eye to eye or exactly friendly to the Communist Party. One of these individuals, [1534] incidentally, was a man named Scotty Freitas, and also Cox was in the office, and he was quite a conservative.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Well, who was Scotty Freitas?

A. He was financial secretary of our union.

Q. Why was it that you didn't—you people didn't want her talking or being friendly with Scotty Freitas?

A. Well, the Communist Party, all they live for, they live on a program of hate. And anyone who can't see eye to eye with them, if I may so, if God was to descend to the earth tomorrow and they couldn't see eye to eye with him, they would start tearing him to pieces. That is the Communist Party policy.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Is that something we are to take as part of this policy, Your Honor, under your rulings? Under your rulings he can give the background—here we are hearing a speech.

The Court: You make a motion?

Mr. MacInnis: I make a motion to strike the voluntary speech.

The Court: It may be stricken.

Mr. MacInnis: Will Your Honor instruct the jury to disregard the speech so far as the defendants in the case are concerned? I think they are not to be bound by what this man says of the Communist Party. They are not members of the party; they have pleaded not guilty, Your Honor.

The Court: Do you request these constant admonitions, [1535] counsel? If you do, I think I have attempted in the best manner I know how to acquaint the jury with the principle that attaches throughout the trial.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, may I say this, Your Honor: —

The Court: I will do it again if you wish, but I see no occasion for it.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I think in all respect to Your Honor and in all respect to the government of the United States, when witnesses are produced in a serious case of this kind, I think it would be elemental to require the prosecution to instruct witnesses regarding of the witness' personal feelings not to make speeches in the case, and when I see repeated speeches, I get the feeling that the prosecutor is not only not instructing this witness, but I have the feeling that something else has been said to him or to them. That is why I make this repeated objection, Your Honor.

The Court: We may assume that in the ordinary procedure, the prosecution has not assumed to instruct witnesses one way or the other, nor the defense, to instruct witnesses one way or the other. We assume that the witness takes the stand and unadorned tells his testimony. Now, this observation made by the witness, Mr. Schrimpf, is one of his own personal viewpoint; it will not tend to prove or disprove any particular immediate issue in this case, and accordingly I instruct the jury to disregard the same and its full context. [1536]

We will now take the morning recess.

May I again admonish you not to discuss the case among yourselves under any conditions nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Recess.) [1536-A]

Mr. Paisley: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What was Freitas' first name?

A. All I knew, he was called Freitas.

Q. How do you spell that last name?

A. Well, I was informed here now that it was F-r-a-t-t-a. I thought it had an "i" in it.

Q. What was his position with your union?

A. He was——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. If the witness is going to make a statement now about what he was informed or knew, I think those things should be divulged and we should know who the declarant was.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Let us divulge them. What was the name of the declarant? Who told you that that was the way to spell it?

A. Someone asked me here—I don't know who it was—and I referred him to Smith. He would know the correct spelling of the name.

Q. Then it was not some Government agent, attorney?

A. No. It was some lady there. I don't know who it was. I don't know anyone in this courtroom.

Q. I presume you knew him as Scotty, is that right? A. Scotty Freitas.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. What position did he hold with your [1537] union?

A. He was financial secretary.

Q. Were there other persons with whom Norma Perry was charged with being too friendly?

A. Those two names were mentioned. I can definitely recall Freitas and Cox.

Q. What was Cox's position?

A. Cox was secretary.

Mr. MacInnis: Might we have his full name, please?

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Do you know his full name?

A. No, I can't recall it now. I know it, but I can't recall it, his first name.

Q. You say he was secretary. Of what was he secretary?

A. He was secretary of 3897 Local, ILA.

Q. Were these persons with whom she was accused of being too friendly members of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Who was it who had this list of the membership of the union to which you say she was seeking to gain access?

A. I never said anyone had a list, but we have the name and address of all our members on a ledger, on a record, and she was supposed to get access to that ledger and compile a complete list of all members' names, addresses and affiliation.

Q. Did you object to that in this particular meeting at Herman Mann's house? Were you objecting to that? [1538]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, I never objected to that assignment when I knew what she was going in for. I never objected to it.

Q. I know, but this discussion at Herman Mann's house, when she was charged, did it relate to the fact that she was getting this information from the union?

A. No, it wasn't saying she was falling down on her job and not getting information. She was just being too friendly to persons not in accord with—well, not sympathetic towards the Communist Party.

Q. How long had you been in the Party at that time?

A. Oh, I was only a newcomer to the Party. I would say no more than six weeks, a couple of months, maybe.

Q. Did Schomaker do any talking at the meeting?

A. Yes, Schomaker and myself, we thought that she was being too friendly and we expressed ourselves along those lines.

Q. Were there any other accusers in the meeting, persons who were accusing her?

A. Not outright accusers like, I recall, Bridges—he was trying to be fair in the matter. He pointed out she was very efficient and she was doing a work. But I recall also he was critical, too, and he believed she was being a little too friendly with some of these fellows.

Q. What position did Darcy take about it?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Darcy in this particular issue, he had not such a lot to say at this meeting. He was more or less, by hearing the source [1539] of this, by rumors and charges, whatever you want to call them, he was more interested in getting an all-around picture.

M. MacInnis: Pardon me. Are the rules now to be relaxed so that he can tell us what another man was interested in, your Honor? May that be stricken?

Mr. Paisley: I think he is trying to say what position took in the meeting at which time the two defendants were present.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor has several times remarked, and very wisely, that one person cannot read the mind of another, and for this man, though he is a Government witness, to be allowed to reach back into the mind of this other man because of the prosecution's question, I think is entirely inadmissible.

Mr. Paisley: I think the witness has already demonstrated, your Honor, he is the kind of witness who does not purport to delve into persons' minds. I do not think counsel's objections are well taken. The witness is trying to tell us what position Darcy took.

Mr. MacInnis: May that portion be read back to your Honor?

The Court: The objection is overruled. I have in mind the particular point to which you direct your objection. It is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What position, if any, did the defendant Henry Schmidt take in that meeting? [1540]

A. I don't recall Henry offering any opinion.

Q. Do you recall whether he said anything at all in that meeting?

A. No, I can't recall him offering any opinion at all.

Q. Did anyone defend Norma Perry at the meeting?

A. This meeting was more or less a tentative meeting to hear the rumors and charges, as were quite current around—among the members, and this was just more or less a first hearing of the charges.

Q. Did she make any statement in her own defense? A. She did.

Q. What did she say?

A. She tried to defend herself by saying, after all, after work she was entitled to certain privileges, and I think it is already in the record where I also mentioned she bolstered that up by saying that, after all, "I may get some important information off those guys."

Q. Well, was any decision made in the matter at that particular meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Shouldn't the question be, "What was said?", your Honor, so we won't have more characterizations?

The Court: We had a reference to what may have been said. You may answer. What eventuated? What finally happened? [1541]

A. The last I recall of the meeting was Norma

Perry, in conclusion of her defense, she said she was not satisfied with the rumors, and she would certainly take this up to a higher body, meaning of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now, is the witness allowed to tell us what she meant? I think that must be stricken, your Honor.

The Court: What did she say, Mr. Schrimpf, to the best of your recollection?

Mr. MacInnis: I think your Honor must rule on the answer of this witness.

The Court: I will rule on it. It may go out.

The Witness: Well, I can't recall the exact words. That is over fifteen years ago. As I said, that is my last recollection. She was not satisfied and she left that thought there. She was going to appeal it to a higher bureau of the Communist Party. She was not satisfied with the rumors, and she said they were unfair and unfounded.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Do you know what measures, if any, were taken to insure the privacy of this particular meeting?

A. What was done to conclude the findings of the meeting?

Q. No, no. Do you know what was done to assure the privacy of this meeting?

A. No, none other than the regular precautions taken by the Party. I don't recall how I went there. It was not my first [1542] visit to Mann's house. He sat in the front room. As far as I recall, Mann's wife was there. I think she was back in the kitchen.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Were persons outside of the Communist Party permitted to attend the meeting?

A. Well, it was my opinion that they were all Party members there at this meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: I take it that that may be stricken, your Honor. He was asked a direct question and he gives an entirely different answer that is a conclusion.

The Court: It may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Did you ever attend any other meetings with John Schomaker?

A. Oh, I attended several meetings. One other I considered an important meeting from the Communist Party policy point of view was a meeting held one Sunday. It was down the Peninsula.

Q. Whereabouts down the Peninsula?

A. I can't recall the name of the place. It was a prune orchard or plum orchard, something of the kind.

Q. How did you go to that meeting?

A. Well, I was taken down by automobile.

Q. Do you recall who was in the car?

A. If I am not mistaken, as far as I can recollect, Walter Lambert was in the car, John Schomaker was definitely in the car, and there was other persons in the car. I wouldn't positively [1543] swear.

Q. Were they party members?

A. It was the accepted opinion that they were party members.

Mr. MacInnis: May that answer go out, pending the objection, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, the answer may go out.

Mr. MacInnis: In the previous answer, the witness expresses himself as not able to remember the other persons. Now, if he can't remember them, how can the prosecutor then ask him to say in a blanket answer that they were Communist Party members?

Mr. Paisley: That would be entirely possible, Your Honor; he might not remember the individuals, but you could remember what kind of group you were in.

The Court: Well, you might ask the question with particular reference to those persons whom he recalled as present.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Well, were Lambert and Schomaker members of the Communist Party?

A. I was told they were members of the Communist Party, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: I take it that that may be stricken, your Honor? "I was told they were members of the Communist Party, yes."

Mr. Paisley: All right, let that be stricken, then.

The Court: It may go out of the record.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What opportunity had you had at that time to know whether or not Lambert or Schomaker were members of the [1544] Communist Party?

A. Well, I will repeat what is already in the record; I never saw a Communist Party book of either Lambert or Schomaker. But from their functions and their policies, and I repeat again, it was the accepted opinion that they were party members.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, that is a deduction of the witness, to say that he thinks that a certain party was a Communist because of his activities. Particularly in these days, that is a dangerous kind of observation. I think, Your Honor, that that must be stricken. It is opinion and conclusion, purely, of the witness.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, when was this particular meeting, as you remember it, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. I can't recall the exact date, but it was some time preceding the general strike, which was called in July.

Q. How far in advance of the general strike of July was it, approximately, as best you can remember?

A. I couldn't say the number of days.

Q. Well, was it——

A. I would only be guessing and it would be ruled out anyhow. I could only make a guess or an estimate at it.

Q. Well, what is your best guess?

A. Maybe two weeks.

Q. What is your best recollection? For instance, would it be [1545] more than a month?

A. No, I wouldn't say it was over a month. I would say it was within the month.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Was the martime strike in effect on the waterfront at the time? A. That's right.

Q. Now, will you tell us who, if anyone, you saw after you got down to this place?

A. Will you repeat that question?

Q. I say, what other persons do you now remember were present down at this place where you met?

A. Well, there was Sam Darcy there when I got there. I was introduced to Earl Browder. And there was some other woman there, whose name I do not know. And Norma Perry was present at that meeting. I can't say for sure whether she was there when I got there, or—it could have been possible for her to be in the automobile with us. I don't recall that.

Q. Any others?

A. Well, at the meeting I don't know what part of it was in the record, but as I said, there was Earl Browder, Darcy, some unknown woman, Norma Perry, John Schomaker, Henry Schmidt, myself, Bridges.

Q. What Bridges? To what Bridges do you refer? A. Harry Bridges.

Q. Now, just to the best of your recollection, Mr. Schrimpf, [1546] tell us where this place was; describe it to us.

A. It was somewhere down the Peninsula. I remember going through Palo Alto. We turned off a little way out of Palo Alto.

Q. Do you remember in which direction you turned and upon what highway you had been traveling?

A. No, I can't. It is too far back. I can't recall the direction. We turned off somewhere just after we got through Palo Alto.

Q. Well, after you turned off, do you remember about how far you proceeded?

A. We stopped again after we turned off from Palo Alto at some small restaurant or soft drink parlor, whatever it may be, and I recall there, there was—I don't believe it was a paved highway, it was a dirt highway or a dirt road, before we proceeded from there into this prune ranch, plum orchard.

Q. Had you ever met Earl Browder before?

A. Never before.

Q. Do you remember who it was that introduced you to him? A. That I don't.

Q. Was there a formal meeting there, called to order in the usual customary way, or was it an informal thing?

A. To the best of my recollections, there was a meeting, and Browder did not do a lot of talking. It was—he was more or less an attentive listener. And Darcy done quite a bit of [1547] talking about the general situation, and the functions of the strike. I don't recall of any positive action being taken there as to the next movement of the strike, or the future policy. It was more or less a general discussion. But what appeared to me to be important was to sell the idea to us how important this strike was in having such a top mogul of the Communist

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Party come all the way from New York to get a report on it.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Is that not pure opinion and conclusion of the witness upon his criticism of the meeting? I move that that be stricken, Your Honor.

The Court: The motion is denied.

A. (Continuing): And it wasn't my opinion alone. We even discussed that, to have a man like that; the party members are funny characters. They act like children in many ways, such as a big personage coming or one of their top members going to speak before a meeting. They get all hepped over it like a bunch of hopheads. If President Brown is on the stand, it boosts up their morals.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor; are we now to have the philosophy of this witness binding on the defendants in this case? His philosophy about how Communists may act, I think, must be stricken, Your Honor.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Well, now, do I understand, Mr. Schrimpf, [1548] that the subject of a possible general strike was discussed at that time?

A. Well, the most important thing with our strike at this stage was holding the men together. The men, they had gone through an awful lot of hard times and abuse on the waterfront. But they were very short of money. We had no money when we went out, and most of the men were caught short, never had a chance to put a nest egg away. So the real object was in continuing this strike, how to bolster up the morale of the men. And naturally, an important issue of all strikes in supporting and building up and holding the morale of the men, is to continue to gather strong support from the outside. This I do recall was one of the facts there, and what would be the best means and the best result and how we would get more support from not only organized labor, but from the general public. Such a thing as a general strike, of a general strike, could have been mentioned there.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mr. Bridges made any talk or any statement there?

A. No, I don't recall any special or particular part there taken by Bridges.

Q. Do you remember whether or not Mr. Schmidt made any statement or speech?

A. No.

Q. Was that the last time you ever saw Browder or did you see [1549] him on some other occasion?

A. No, I saw Browder several times after that in—back east. Do you want me to qualify that?

Q. Well, was Bridges or Schmidt or Robertson present when you saw him back east? A. No.

Q. Well, then, we won't go into that, if they were not present. Do you recall any other meetings at which Harry Bridges was present, outside of the city?

A. Yes, there were meetings. I am just trying to think of the meetings which are made more or less mentally clear to me on account of they are a little more important. There was one meeting we held—this was another critical time of the strike. It was held out near Harding's golf course. The best of my recollections, it was along around dusk when we gathered there. And those present, outside of myself, was Bridges, I think Larson, a fellow named Harry Jackson from the Marine Workers Industrial Union, Schomaker, Bridges, Norma Perry, Sam Darcy and Walter Lambert. There may have been others. As far as I can recollect, those persons were present.

Q. How did it happen that you held a meeting on a golf course? Where was it, in the clubhouse or just where was it?

A. Well, I will repeat what is already in the record; the Communist Party is very cautious in arranging such meetings and inasmuch that the policy, the whole strategy of the strike was [1550] being met by bigwigs of the Communist Party, they did not want their connection with the strike exposed.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That volunteer statement is certainly not binding upon the defendant, nor is it responsive to the question. It is a speech.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I think it is. Here is a man who says he was a member of the party.

The Court: The objection is overruled, the motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Go ahead.

A. Well, as I said before, that was the strategy of the Communist Party. They are a very overcautious bunch, and in as much as they were controlling the operation and policy of the strike, it was from the Communist Party that we got our ideas, and I might mention here, at the time and right today, I don't regret; except some of the policy which they offered,—because we were a bunch of green union men, most of us never being in a strike, and we were fighting with great odds against us on the waterfront. And as I said, I will repeat, that today I have no regret that such meetings did take place. And they did help to a big degree in getting us what we did in that strike. It was a lot of their policy, and I want this clear: I hardly recall of any action ever taken at all during that strike which was not at first formulated by some such meeting. These meetings were often and frequent.

Q. Now, do you remember,—— [1551]

The Court: Have you reached a convenient time?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Therefore we will take our noon adjournment, ladies and gentlemen. And the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Thereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [1551-A]

Afternoon Session 2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please your Honor, I would like to renew a motion that was made previously, one of which was reserved by your Honor for ruling and others of which were acted upon, and I would like to cite to your Honor a case which I seriously believe is exactly in point with some of our problems.

In the case of People v. Ware, a 1924 decision reported at 67 Cal. App. at page 81: The defendant was charged with being a member of an organization, the IWW, advocating criminal syndicalism. Witnesses testified as to the purposes and attitude of the organization as learned from conversations with members thereof. It was held that this was reversible error. Testimony as to such declarations, said the Court, must normally be confined to the language itself, as nearly as it can be recalled. The witness may not give inferences drawn therefrom, nor can he be allowed to place his own construction on words by stating what he understood them to mean.

Your Honor, we had about four instances of this witness putting his own inference on conversations, stating what he knew some other person not now before the Court meant. And in the light of that decision—I found no contrary [1552] authority, I might say, in the Federal cases; it is the only decision closely in point, as I have discovered—in the light of that law I suggest that the motions to strike ought to be granted as to those answers.

The Court: Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that is a State case. I confess I have not read it. I do not know whether your Honor has read it or not.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Paisley: Certainly you would have to read it to get more facts. I do not believe your Honor has erred in any of your rulings, and I should think he would have to move to strike particular testimony rather than just lump it in one bracket here. So far as I know, we do not know just what the witness' knowledge of the situation was. As I understood it, it was a case where the witness could only relate what was said, not his conclusions from it. I have no quarrel with that proposition.

The Court: I shall adhere to my ruling heretofore made, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley: Mr. Schrimpf, how did you spell your Communist Party name?

A. Loman, L-o-m-a-n.

Q. What was the first name?

A. Henry. [1553]

Q. Calling your attention to the meeting in the home of Herman Mann, at which time you say Norma Perry was charged with misconduct or the matter was under preliminary investigation, do you know what the particular job or position, if any, was that she held with the union at that time?

Mr. MacInnis: That has been asked and answered twice.

The Court: Yes it has been.

Mr. Paisley: Well, if it has, it has escaped my memory.

Q. I believe you said she was secretary?

Mr. MacInnis: If you know what he said, then it has been answered.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley: Do you know whether or not she worked for Harry Bridges?

A. She was doing secretarial work in the union office, and while Bridges may have used up a lot of her time, she was on call for other officials of the union.

Q. Did she work in the same office where Mr. Bridges had his office?

A. I would say part time. There was two or three offices there. She may spend some time in the main office and some time in the private office, the president's office.

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, will you state to the Court and jury briefly why you joined the Communist Party and why you left it.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, it seems to me most obvious that the reasons of this man, whether they were good or whether [1554] they were capricious, whatever they might be, would not be material to this case.

The Court: Mr. Paisley, what is the purpose of that question?

Mr. Paisley: I believe I am reasonable in believing that argument will be made to the jury that the witness' testimony is incredible because he was a member of the Communist Party, and I think that this goes to his credibility. He was a member for about a year, and I think the jury is entitled to know perhaps in weighing his testimony——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: I can understand the reasons underlying your question as to the termination of his association or relationship with the Communist Party as it might go to any asserted bias, prejudice or the like. His reasons for entrance into the particular party, of course, are more remote in evidentiary quantum than the latter. I shall allow it.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the prosecutor now having stated his reason to the Court, it appears that all that he is doing is anticipating cross-examination.

The Court: That may well be. I will allow it, counsel.

A. The reason, in answer to the question, what prompted me to join the Communist Party, and my reason for deserting it, as has been drawn out in the testimony here, we were working on the waterfront under conditions subject to those of a serf in many cases and any group or any individual who had anything to [1555] offer in helping us free ourselves of those bonds, I was willing to listen to, and the Communist Party, through individuals around the waterfront, seemed to have something closely related to a progressive trade union, and it was along this line that, when I was given the card and we were in the midst of a bitter struggle, and after hearing some of their ideas on helping trade union movement, I thought I could help the trade union by placing myself or making myself a part of the Communist Party. [1556]

Mr. MacInnis: Now pardon me. I move to strike that, Your Honor, as being incompetent, as being not probative of any issue in this case, as being only a self-serving statement of this witness in an attempt to bolster his own credibility; and I suggest that the purpose is now manifest.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, will you tell us, Mr. Schrimpf, why you left the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The same objection, Your Honor: incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. The reason I deserted—I will use that word—the party, was brought around or provoked by many unpleasant actions on the part of the party. First of all, I was not a member very long, and I was given to understand in no uncertain terms that I must learn to take orders.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, again this is a narration of acts or asserted conversations between third persons not parties to this case. Not binding in any way on these defendants. Now we move to strike these volunteer and non-responsive answers.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The motion is denied.

A. (Continuing): Well, if I may continue, as I said, first, you must—and they give you to understand—take orders. These—I [1557] will mention three fundamental basic policies of the Communist Party, which is a part of their operation and one of the reasons why they must exact so much discipline of the members. Number one, there is no minority opinion in the Communist Party. None whatever. Two, there will be definitely no mass concentration of thought. And three, there shall be no organized opposition of Communist Party policy. Now, this, the members of the Communist Party must, one hundred per cent adhere to. And above that, it is this policy that they do train their members, and try and have them exact and placed on even those outside the Communist Party. That is just number one issue.

Number two issue, I mentioned earlier in the record; I saw Earl Browder several times after the meeting in the country. I don't know why he picked on me. Of course, I am continually interrupted to say that I am trying to bolster myself. But I have got to bring it out because it is the facts.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, pardon me. I suggest, Your Honor instruct the witness it is not part of his job to criticize either of the counsel in the case.

The Court: Well, I think the witness understands that. I do not believe he has been critical in that sense. Perhaps he has been a little sensitive as to "bolstering," the word "bolstering." (To the

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Witness): There is no reflection upon you. You understand that? [1558]

The Witness: No, I will take that back, if there was any reflection. I don't want to reflect on their integrity or intent.

The Court: You may proceed.

A. (Continuing): Well, it was during the actions of the strike, there was many occasions down there where we had to act very impulsively. For instance, the day the port was open, the 3rd of July, it was a very hectic day. The port was quiet then on the 4th of July, being our national holiday, and on the 5th there was a renewed attempt once more to carry out the threat of the employers to open up the port. Incidentally, that was the day two of our men were killed on the waterfront. I, as being in charge of the pickets, went and commandeered, I believe it was three automobiles, and with, I would say, approximately around 12 men in those three automobiles, we made a trip way far out the Mission to Daly City stopping at many corners, trying to convey our message to the public. I was in the party at that time, and although they condoned me for the action, they couldn't quite understand anyone with being so impulsive to do these things, and they admitted it was a wonderful thing, it was a great thing, but I was asked at one of our—just general meetings of the party why I didn't consult someone on this thing. And I told them, this thing couldn't wait. Well, leading up to my visit to Browder, it was such incidents happened on the 5th and many other cases, breaking [1559] through lines and trying to get in on the docks. Maybe that was one of the reasons which attracted attention that I should be chosen to go back to New York. And as I mentioned in the record, I was speaking to the strike committee quite a lot, and in Bridges' absence. They told me that there was lots of work to do back there, to get the story over to the waterfront workers in New York, and on top of that there was a mission there that I was lined up to take. That was a trip to Moscow. So I arrived in New York, I believe it was on a Sunday morning in the early part of September, maybe the 1st. It was the first week. Now, there may be a question how I can remember some dates and not others. The reason I remember, it was that week the Morro Castle was burned. And I did read the story, and on the date, that is how I am sure of that time. It was, I believe, on a Sunday morning. And I went up to their headquarters on 13th Street there—by "they," the Communists. I can't say definitely on that Sunday whether Earl Browder was there or not, but we had no extended conversation. I spent very little time there. And I recall very vividly the meeting of Monday morning, and it is for this reason. I want to place this in line before the others; one of my real reasons for being disillusioned with the party. It was Earl Browder, there was his first lieutenant at that time, Starchel, Sam Darcy and myself. They were there when I entered.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now, if Your Honor please, it [1560] seems to me the most fundamental rule that a conversation which this man says he participated in in New York with the people he describes now could have no probative value in this case; even this prosecutor recognized that toward the end of this morning, when he told this witness not to relate a conversation unless it was in the presence of the defendants.

The Court: This, I assume, is limited to the sole purpose, or the sole avowed purpose, of Mr. Paisley to elicit from this witness the reasons for his departure?

Mr. Paisley: That's right.

The Court: From the Communist Party. And I instruct the jury that that is the sole purpose of this testimony, and it is to be limited to that sole and only purpose. You are instructed that it is not binding on the defendant in any respect save and except as it shows, if it does show, the reasons underlying this man's departure, or as he says, his desertion of the party. You may proceed, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me.

The Witness: Thank you, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Would it in any way devolve upon the truth or the falsity of the prosecution in this case what this man's reason might be to leave the Communist Party unless it were connected with one or more of these three men? [1561]

The Court: Well, reference has been had to men in like vein in rather uncomplimentary terms so I suppose that that is the prosecution's motive or purpose. I do not know. I sit here and rule as we proceed. What is your purpose, Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, as I said in the beginning, I think the jury is entitled to hear from this witness why he joined and why he left, as affecting his credibility. Moreover, I am not so certain, as a matter of fact, that it is not binding upon the defendants because there has already been a great deal of testimony that Bridges and Schmidt met and talked with Browder in these Communist Party meetings held out in the country.

The Court: At this juncture it is limited to that sole purpose.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Why, Judge, to say that they would be bound, that it would be binding upon these defendants,——

Mr. Paisley: As to their knowledge of the policies of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: Someone could bind me now by having a conversation with somebody else?

The Court: I have made my ruling, Mr. MacInnis. I have limited it to the particular purpose, and to that extent we may have it elicited from the witness. [1562]

The Witness: May I continue?

The Court: Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Will the record show the objection, Your Honor, and the motion to strike?

The Court: Yes, the motion is denied.

A: (Continuing): Well, I shall take up as near as I can where I left off. This Monday morning, it was, when we entered the office, when I entered it, the three parties mentioned herein were in there, and there was immediately an outburst from Browder. He picked on one thing. He picked on why we had let the general strike get out of control. Now, I can't give you a verbatim wording by this man, but he was like a caged animal, and all he done there for two hours was march up and down the hall and scream out, mostly at Darcy—once in a while at Comrade Schrimpf—but mostly at Darcy, "Here you are in charge of the operations out here; we dreamed for years, we have something given into our hands and you give it up, you let it get free, you let it get away from you. Why? Why? What is the reason? How did you lose control of this?" That is what he screamed all the time. So before we——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. It now appears to me that the purpose of this question is decidedly other than as expressed by the prosecutor. I think Your Honor should again entertain the motion to strike.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor,——[1563]

Mr. MacInnis: If these men acted like wild animals, if they acted like beasts, if they reviled this man, if they treated him badly, what would that have to do with the case at bar? And why are we concerned with the reasons that this man is now a confessed ex-Communist?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, there is much testimony in this record already as to the intimate association between Bridges and Schmidt with Sam Darcy, who was present in New York with Starchel and Browder and this witness, who was himself an active Communist. It is for this jury to say whether or not on all the evidence Bridges and Schmidt were Communist Party members and knew of the Communist policy. Now, all of that testimony that they have heard, they may take into consideration in determining whether or not they were cognizant of the purposes of the Communist Party. And certainly the testimony is admissible as to why this witness left, because it bears upon his credibility. They will argue—they will not deny it now, I believe—to the jury that witnesses we produce are not worthy of belief because they were members of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: Right, now, may it please Your Honor,——

Mr. Paisley: If the man was there only a year, many American workmen, doubtless, have been inveigled into that Communist Party and have left it and if they were called as witnesses and they are maligned because they were members of the Communist Party, they ought to be able to tell the Court and jury why they [1564] joined and why they left.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in speaking now of the virtue that he ascribes to this witness, the prosecutor refers to the record in the case, and he tells Your Honor that the record now shows an intimate relationship between Mr. Bridges, one of the defendants, and the man called Browder. Unless I am in some other sphere, the records shows they met once.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: No. You omitted the link Darcy, because he asserted Darcy——

Mr. MacInnis: I am going to come to that, Judge, and I will stand on my memory, that he mentioned an intimate relationship with Browder.

The Court: Not as I remember the record.

Mr. MacInnis: And if the record is read back, that will be revealed. The intimacy of the alleged relationship between Bridges and Darcy is shown, apparently, by the fact that Darcy had to send messages by a go-between to Bridges. The witness Schomaker, who but recently departed from the stand. If that is a showing of an intimate relationship, Your Honor, then my ideas of fact and reality must disappear entirely.

The Court: The motion is denied, counsel.

A. (Continuing): If I may continue, before we were through on that Monday, there was a discussion on whether or not I should continue with plans for my trip out of this country, namely, Moscow, or whether or not I should be immediately sent back to [1565] the Pacific Coast and try and throw some fuel onto this fire which may be still smoldering, which was the general strike and the strike feeling. And as far as I can recall, I said to Browder, "Why, Browder," I said, "after all, the men out there, they have had a great victory. Their gains have been really revolutionary. They never expected anything like that." And anybody, to be honest, would say the same thing; they never. Well, he didn't say much more on that, realizing that from my point of view it was the trade unions, from his point of view it was international politics for the Communist Party.

That was my first, or the biggest setback, I will say, that I had from my short relations with the party. There was a man, after going through a lot of sacrifices, pitched battles, and making gains for a trade union movement, and he is trying to convey to me the thought, "Go back to the Coast and get it going again." [1566]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, having told what he states is his reason, he now argues the reason to the jury. He stated his reason and then he gives an argument as to why it is a good reason. That certainly is not proper in this case or in any case.

Mr. Paisely: I do not think so. I think he is stating his reason, your Honor.

The Witness: May I continue?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: That, as I said, is one of my best and greatest reasons for beginning to become very skeptical with the Party. Anyhow, I convinced them that I was not going to come back here and be such a fool or attempt to try to work up a feeling for a strike.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): You mean a general strike?

A. Yes, eventually—a strike and then a general strike. That was the dream, a national general strike.

Q. Had you had some agreements with the employers at that time favorable to the longshoremen?

A. We had very, very good agreements, although we had a board out here picking up the loose ends. The gains were much more than any of us expected.

Q. What did you mean by your statement that he was taking you men, you and Darcy, to task for letting the general strike get out of control? [1567]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now the question asks for this witness to give an opinion and conclusion upon testimony already given.

The Court: I think he has covered that pretty throughly, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Are there any other reasons that you can give us, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Well, there are two primary reasons, and as I mentioned, among the first their ~~program of~~ creating hate, and their trade union interests is secondary to an international movement of a political nature.

Mr. MacInnis: It seems to me that part of the script was given before, your Honor. He has given identically the same answer in another part of his reasons, and I suggest that that must go out.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Mr. Schrimpf, do you see in the courtroom the Harry Bridges and the Henry Schrimpf concerning whom you testified?

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think Henry Schmidt should be vilified by being identified as Henry Schrimpf. For the past fourteen years he has had trouble enough having his name confused with this witness.

The Witness: Yes, that goes for me, too.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think the Government prosecutor [1568] has the right to make that kind of mistake.

The Court: That was an inadvertent mistake.

Mr. Paisley: Counsel, I am not perfect any more than you are.

The Court: I think it was inadvertent. There is no occasion for any alarm about it. You might identify these gentlemen if you wish to.

The Witness: With my remark?

The Court: You wish him to identify the persons?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor. I had better take them one at a time.

The Court: You can identify them over here, Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt?

The Witness: Well, we all know we know each other. The Court knows now. There is Bridges and Schmidt, the third and fourth party from the right, and from my left.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Is there any question about the identification?

Mr. MacInnis: About what?

The Court: About the gentleman's identification of the two co-defendants?

Mr. MacInnis: It seems to me, I am quite sure he has met Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt.

The Court: I suppose we will have to be more formal.

Mr. MacInnis: I won't object if your Honor makes a [1569] statement.

The Court: Counsel, I am merely trying to obviate the attendant——

Mr. MacInnis: No, I have no wish to make him come down and place his hand. I will admit he has pointed out the right people. There is no doubt about that at all.

Mr. Paisley: Then you may cross-examine the witness.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. You say that you became active on the waterfront the first time when the strike broke, is that right? A. No.

Q. You said that under oath this morning.

A. No, I did not.

Q. When did you first become active on the waterfront?

A. It is already in the record that prior to the strike, and in the course of our organizing, that there was a spokesman elected on each dock to lay down the groundwork——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Pardon me. That is not the question. I asked this man when he became active on the waterfront.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, counsel. You are interrupting the witness.

The Court: You may continue.

A. Well, that is it. As I pointed out, it is in the record where there was a spokesman to take up beefs when anyone was [1570] discriminated against or any such happenings. Maybe partially responsible for this was the firing of Henry Schmidt and Wheeler from the Admiralty docks. They created quite a bit of discussion on the beach, and they were fired because I don't think they tried to organize the men down there, and maybe that is what prompted such action to have the spokesman on the dock. The dock I was on at the time was 39. I was very active on it. We had more than one beef and I acted as spokesman on it.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): When did you first become active, in point of date, on the waterfront?

A. I would say the middle of '33.

Q. What was the occasion that prompted you to become active? Was it some situation involving wages, hours and working conditions, and the like?

A. The first important issue that I can recall myself as an individual in trying out just how far we could get with this type of operation was down at 39, and another ex-official of ours named Dutch Dietrich, who was working on the dock. Now, his claim was that he had to lay off to go to a funeral, but he had been active, like a lot of us, in organizing the men. So when he came back the next morning they refused to hire this man, refused to take him back, with the pretense that he shouldn't have laid off the day before, although he had a very just cause, and that was one of the first major [1571] assignments. I was taken to task—we'll put it that way—on my particular dock. I had quite a discussion with a man named Horstmann, who was part owner in the contracting stevedoring company for which I was working, and which extended for some time. As I say, there were other issues not quite so important. From time to time things were coming up. Once in a while they would pick on some man and let him go.

Q. Whom do you mean by that?

A. The operating employers, the stevedoring contractors.

Q. You mean the employers? A. Yes.

Q. At a time immediately preceding the strike about which we have spoken, were conditions good or bad on the waterfront?

A. Conditions were terrible.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. I do not think that is material, your Honor. He said they were terrible. What difference does it make?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it goes to the testimony already given. This man can't question him on the subject and then foreclose the cross-examination.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Paisley: I just do not want to try the merits of the dispute between the employers and the [1572] union.

The Witness: Do you wish me to continue that answer?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes.

A. You asked me a question about conditions. Do you wish me to continue?

Q. Yes.

A. Conditions were terrible on the waterfront, and if I may quote you one or two very specific happenings with which I was directly concerned, one night, it was along around in 1931—it was just after the big ships—used to call them the White ships—had moved down from Pier 22 to Pier 39. We didn't get much work. The gang I was in got no ships every other week, and we used to go to work Monday morning and work through to noon on Tuesday, and then be ordered back on Friday. Once in a great while on Thursday, if there was much trade; but when we were ordered back on Friday we continued right through until the ship sailed on Saturday noon.

It was such an occasion, Friday night, one of those very miserable San Francisco nights—cold, miserable, raining—it was along in the late fall—it was very close to the late fall or early winter—I had eaten my paltry lunch and I came back to the docks and I stepped inside out of the rain. A fellow came to me—and I will tell you his name, His name was Donovan. He was port captain of the Marine Terminals at that time. He said, "Get out!" That is exactly the way he said it. [1573]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

I said, "What do you mean, get out? I am working here."

He said, "You aren't working now."

Well, I said, "We always come here when it is raining. It's blowing outside."

"That makes no difference," he said. "If we leave you in on these docks you will start to mess all the docks up." I can't use his word.

So I went outside, and on my way out there was a customs man there, and he gave me the key to his car and he said, "Here, Bud," or something like that, "get in my car. I never knew it was this way in America." That was his own words.

And I was so bitter that I really cried with temper. I thought, Well, maybe our day will come some day. It was such happenings as this—and I can quote you others just as important—which had built up a feeling of bitterness not only within me but in the overwhelming majority of the longshoremen on the beach. They were willing to make any sacrifice rather than go back under the conditions they had down there.

Q. And the strike resulted in ultimate victory, as you say? A. A great victory.

Q. Will you tell us in what particulars you considered it a great victory?

Mr. Paisley: Now, your Honor, haven't we gone into that? I don't think we are here to try the question whether the [1574] employers were inhuman, aided by the police, if you will, or vigilantes, if you will. That is not the issue in this case.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I think I can ask that question. I have a purpose in finding out the state of mind of this man.

Mr. Paisley: I have no doubt the witness is telling the truth.

Mr. MacInnis: I think this man's observations must go out on the credibility of a witness at this time, and I ask your Honor to instruct the jury to disregard it.

Mr. Paisley: We both can't talk at once, your Honor. I have made my objection. I just think it is immaterial.

The Court: I might say to the jury the background of events on the waterfront as depicted by this gentleman and the witness who preceded him, and as referred to more or less generously by the attorneys at times, is not altogether material in this cause, nor will the fact of the conditions on the waterfront, be they good or bad, tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. This matter of conditions on the waterfront has crept into this witness' testimony, as I take it, with respect to the reasons underlying, No. 1, his joining the Communist Party, and, secondly, the aftermath, his departure from the Party. The matter was opened by Mr. Paisley on that issue, and on that basis, and for that reason I shall permit counsel to dwell upon it. It has been opened. [1575] But as to its materiality I instruct the jury accordingly as I have indicated. You may proceed.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read the question.

(Question read.)

A. Well, among the greatest gains was a sense of security of living on the waterfront. To qualify the word "security," before this time there was various ways of picking their men. First of all, you had to be fairly young and husky, put up with a lot of abuses, and be a good guy, in other words, on the job. Else, if you batted an eye you were told, "There's your coat." When I say we got the security which we never had before, after we settled the strike or won the strike, we had a preference of employment, as I have already mentioned in this record, whereby first preference would be given to registered longshoremen, and the qualifications, without going into them, for others is now a matter of record.

Later on, following that, which was all built up from this first phase of security, we were allowed to build up a system of rotating, restricting the men to a certain amount of work, for the reasons that the work would be equally divided. That, I believe, is No. 1 of the gains gotten from the strike. Of course, there were many other terrible conditions, such as I have mentioned in the record, working unlimited shifts, and, for example, I will tell you the longest shift I worked on the waterfront. I went to work at seven [1576] o'clock one Friday morning and got through at two a.m. on Sunday morning, believe it or not. That is not a brag; that is one of the shifts. The lists eliminated such as that. We started on a 12-hour—12 hours with a 2-hour leeway to start—that was 14 hours—and then we gradually decreased that to 10—now it is down to 9, and, as I mentioned, anyone who was able and wanted to work could get his share of work within the number of hours which they put out each week. That was also—I would say that was the No. 2 gain in the strike.

Of course, we got certain conditions, many of which had been in the rules of the blue book, the old blue book, but they were never lived up to. There were many clauses in there, but there was no way of enforcing them. In fact, we had taken many of the rules, such as travel time, meals, and so forth, practically word for word out of the old blue book rules, and I don't know if I have mentioned in this record yet, we got a nickel raise for the time being and, above all, the spirit of the men went back—the spirit of the men when they went back to work was higher than it had ever been in the history of the San Francisco waterfront.

Q. The gains you had made in the strike were gains for the labor movement, were they not?

A. They were great gains.

Q. And the answers that you have just given here represented [1577] part of the basis for the statement that you made at the end of this morning:

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

"I do not regret that we followed the Communist Party's suggestions during the strike?"

A. During that strike.

Q. You did not regret that at all?

A. I have no retractions to make on that statement whatsoever.

Q. As a matter of fact, many people working with you who were working in related jobs, who were not Communists at all, accepted the benefits of the Communist Party's suggestions and had their gains out of the strike, too, is that right?

A. That is right. That is correct.

Q. And you do not regret that at all?

A. I don't regret anyone, if he is a workingman or any human being, who gets gains in life; that is, if they don't hurt anybody.

Q. And the fact that the other members of the labor union, men who were admittedly not members of the Communist Party, accepted the same suggestions, went along with the strike policies and ultimately accepted the gains does not brand them in your eyes at all, does it?

Mr. Paisley: Are we concerned how he feels about it, your Honor?

The Witness: There are two or three questions at once.

The Court: The objection is sustained. [1578]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You do not regret it, in any event, that union men generally attained benefits, the benefits that you described?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Objection sustained. This ground has been covered.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You told us at the time of the strike you and the people you were working with were green union men; right?

A. That is correct.

Q. You did not have any experience in the strategy of conducting strikes?

A. That is right.

Q. And that became important if you expected to win the strike, is that true?

A. I would say it was very necessary.

Q. So that when you went down, to cite an example that you have offered us, to a prune orchard in the Santa Clara Valley and met with Earl Browder, you still do not regret that you accepted his suggestions on that day?

A. No, I have no regrets of that meeting.

Q. Everything that he suggested to you on that day, if you put it into practice, were things that helped the labor movement, is that right?

A. He made very few suggestions that day. I think that is [1579] in the record. He was more or less listening.

Q. I think you did mention that one of the matters discussed, at least in the presence of Browder, at that meeting was the search for some method to combat adverse publicity in the local press, is that right?

A. Well, I never mentioned those words, but that could be part of the purpose, and the part I mentioned was to win, to get more support merely from the public generally and the trade union movement.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. In fact, you told us earlier this afternoon that on one occasion you were driving out as far as Daly City talking to people in an attempt to get information over to members of the public about the real purposes of the strike? A. That is right.

Q. And the reason you had to do that was that the ordinary press was entirely silent as to the things proposed by the workingmen?

A. We got very little support from the press.

Q. In fact, the press labeled everybody engaged in the strike as Communistic, isn't that true?

A. No, not everybody communistic; I wouldn't say that.

Q. What is your notion of the attitude taken by the press, the attitude that you were trying to avoid by these strikes——

A. The press did leave the inclination there that it was communistic-inspired, that it was communistic-led. The [1580] testimony will prove there was quite a lot of truth in that so far as the leadership.

Q. Now, you were an alien at the time of the strike, weren't you? A. That is right.

Q. Most of our local papers carried editorials urging deportation for any alien engaged in the strike as an agitator, isn't that right?

A. I can't recall just what they had published.

Q. Well, if I may refresh your memory, I will show you an article that I have in my hand.

The Court: Will you permit counsel to examine that?

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, yes (handing a paper to counsel for the Government). [1581]

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I have read enough of this to see the nature of it. There is no year on the typing here, the print, so we don't know what year it is. Assuming, however, that it is in 1934 when the strike was on, I just don't think that it has any possible materiality in this case. I would like the Court to look at it.

Mr. MacInnis: There is no question before the Court at this time.

The Court: No question.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you hand that to the witness, please?

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Mr. Paisley: Now, what is the question, Your Honor? I would like to know what the question is. He just asked him to read it.

Mr. MacInnis: You will have to wait for me to ask it before you can find that out.

Mr. Paisley: Well, will you instruct the witness to wait until he has been asked a question?

The Court: Yes. Mr. Witness, there is no question before the Court. May I ask you to refrain from reading that until you get a question.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Let's see what the question is.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: The purpose of handing him the paper to read was so I could ask a question to see if that refreshes his [1582] memory.

The Court: What is the question, counsel?

Mr. MacInnis: There was a previous question and answer in which the witness gave an indefinite reply. I think he said he didn't know whether or not there was anything about deporting aliens as agitators, connected with the strike.

The Witness: Well, I haven't read this complete report, but——

The Court: One moment now. Let us have a question, a precise question, in the nature of a question, so I may be able to rule on it, counsel. I can't quite orient myself.

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't asked a question yet. I was asked to state a purpose and I did so.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, having looked at the document that has been handed you, can you now tell us whether or not your memory is refreshed as to whether or not the local papers urged the deportation of striking aliens on the ground that they were agitators?

A. Well, I haven't read this all——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Would you wait, Mr. Schrimpf, until I have a chance to object?

The Court: Pardon me. May I say this to you, Mr. Schrimpf? Counsel for the Government has the right to object to questions, and until the objection is ruled upon, I ask you to refrain [1583] from answering, please.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Paisley: I am unable, Your Honor, to see the materiality of the question and the answer he expects to get, as to whether or not the newspapers were making any such campaign. Now, that is a news item. It is not an editorial. But I can't see the materiality of it, as to whether or not the newspapers were urging that aliens who were engaged in the strike be deported. I can't see the materiality. Maybe counsel can show it in his argument.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, Your Honor? Well, it seems to me that the prosecutor in this case elicited over objection on my part a great number of matters. He elicited, among other things, the motion that one of the problems which this man and others faced during the strike was the fact that the public could not be informed about the real situation. He said that he had been forced to ride out to Daly City, talk to many people, to tell them the truth about the strike. Now, the matter having thus been invoked by the prosecution, I hardly think that they can now stop the defense from inquiring into what this man meant. This is cross-examination. He also, and the long answer that Your Honor permitted him to give, as for his reasons in joining the Communist Party, told various conditions affecting the strike that interested him, and which he said provided a motive for him to embrace anything that [1584] would help the working man. Now, this not only is a proper inquiry based on the direct examination, but it will go to his frame of mind in other matters which I will come to presently.

The Court: The objection is sustained. Whatever may appear, or may have appeared in the press at that time would not tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, nor otherwise affect the materiality of any testimony given by this witness.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, he testified——

The Court: It is a news article. I don't know that it would have any materiality at all. The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, I ask that the——

The Court: It may be marked for identification.

(Thereupon news clipping referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit H for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, as another example of the conditions to which you referred, both before and during the strike, it is true, isn't it, that on the 17th day of July, 340 strikers were arrested by the police and they were labeled Communists upon the front pages of the San Francisco Call-Bulletin merely because they were strikers?

Mr. Paisley: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, if counsel wants to look at this paper——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: I don't want to look at it. I am not here to [1585] try the issues of that case.

The Court: Counsel, you may have it marked for identification if you want.

Mr. MacInnis: I ask that the Call-Bulletin of Tuesday, July 17, 1934, with the headline I have described, be marked for identification.

The Court: So ordered, counsel.

> (Thereupon front page from Call-Bulletin of Tuesday, July 17, 1934, was marked Defendant's Exhibit I for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, you mentioned that two of the strikers were killed on a particular occasion, is that true?

A. That's correct.

Q. That event was commemorated by a funeral procession, was it? A. That's right.

Mr. Paisley: Oh, your Honor, I think——

The Court: That is true; I think that the record will show that. The matter has been gone into.

Mr. MacInnis: I have only one more question with respect to matters which may have appeared in the press. I will respect your Honor's apparent rulings on future offerings.

Q. I want to ask you this: The persons striking on the waterfront were also called radicals by all of our public citizens, including the President of the Chamber of Commerce at that time, to your knowledge, isn't that right?

Mr. Paisley: I think that will be irrelevant, your Honor. [1586]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, your Honor, he has testified as to the good motives of the strikers, of the strike, and the difficulty that he and others had in disseminating the truth about the motives of the strike. I think we certainly have a right to show the whole picture, to show how all kinds of men who never had anything to do with the Communist Party were called Communists upon the headlines of the papers and arrested under that label because they were in the strike.

The Court: We cannot prove or disprove any issue in the case, counsel, by the headlines in the papers. I sustain the objection.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I would suggest, respectfully, your Honor, as I remarked before, we cannot prove any issue in this case by telling the Court and jury what conversation this man had in New York with some other person whose conduct he described here, either.

Q. A few moments ago in your testimony you used the word "serfdom." Will you tell us what you meant by that?

A. Yes. Serfs, we don't hear the expression very much these days, but they are, well, they are about the same level as a peon. Some lowly, considered a lowly employed person.

Q. Now, you say that the policies of the strike, and I refer now, of course, to the strike of 1934, were directed by the Communist Party?

A. That's right. [1587]

Q. And you endorsed that statement, of course, wholeheartedly? A. We had no alternative.

Q. Yes. What were the policies of the strike, if you can enumerate them for us?

A. The policies of the strike was not formulated over a lengthy period. As I have already stated in the record, there were meetings practically every day, and I don't refer to the strike committee meetings. That is, meetings with certain fractions or certain party members. These meetings had taken place over a wide—over a wide field or in various parts of the city. And on these occasions that these meetings, the chief spokesman generally was Darcy. He is not what you call a butterinski or a talkative person, but he would listen and then he would always come up with some idea, and that was the accepted strategy for the policy or the operation of that strike for that day.

Q. No. Pardon me. I don't mean who was the person who gave the policy; what were the policies themselves that you followed in order to make the strike a success?

A. Well, number one, I will have to repeat what is in the record many times—it was to first keep up the morale of the men. That was number one, because there could be no strike with the breaking, and that was our toughest job.

Q. And that was good trade unionism, was it not?

A. You mean to keep up the morale of the men? [1588]

Q. Yes.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Well, it was the only weapon-to—in fact, it was an important weapon to win the strike. Without good sound morale you can't win a strike.

Q. No. And you don't consider that merely a Communist doctrine, do you?

A. No, they are the one who always had it foremost in their mind and was concerned about the morale of the men.

Q. Yes. Now, having told us about the morale of the men being the first policy, what would you list as the next policy of the strike?

A. Well, making a second choice, we could not consider going back into the terrible conditions, such as working conditions; wages were not important, would be eliminated.

Q. And that was good trade unionism, too, wasn't it? A. It was very necessary for us.

Q. Yes. And it is not just a Communist doctrine that workers ought to get enough to eat and enough to provide themselves with homes; that is good sound trade unionism, isn't it?

A. I would say it is.

Q. And what was the next policy that you say was a policy of the strike?

A. Well, we had to get some kind of security, which is already in the record, whereby there would be no one discriminated against and we would have to make sure that all who were on [1589] strike would have a job.

Q. And that is good trade unionism, too, isn't it?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Oh, I would say it is.

Q. And that is not merely a Communist theory? Pardon me. A. No.

Q. And what was the next policy?

A. Well, I don't know if I have included the shortening of the hours in there. I don't believe I have. I just said conditions. The shortening of the hours, would have to come down. These long, inhuman hours, we would just not continue.

Q. And that was good trade unionism, too, wasn't it?

A. It was, it was very human thoughts.

Q. Yes. And again, that wasn't just a Communist party theory was it?

A. No, that is a theory of anyone who works for a living. I imagine he has all those theories in his mind.

Q. Of course. Now, tell us the other policies of the strike.

A. Well, there was many other smaller matters, such as not important—there was no limit on loads when we went on strike, and we wanted to make sure that we got up some kind of agreement where we would have load limits. And of course, we were trying to get a little more money, which, as I mentioned, wasn't overly important. We did get a little more money, a nickel an hour at the time; and conditions in general, safety and so forth and so on. Transportation had to be improved. They were all [1590] smaller matters.

Q. And you have now given us the general policies of the strike, haven't you, all of the things that you workers wanted to achieve you have narrated as best you can now, haven't you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That's right.

Q. And those were all good ends to be achieved in trade unionism? A. That's right.

Q. They were all good human ends to be achieved, weren't they? Right? A. That's right.

Q. And none of those policies were matters that you could look to and say, "That is just a Communist doctrine," isn't that right?

A. I don't think I referred to anything as "just a Communist doctrine."

Q. No. And having given us these answers about the policy of the strike, do you now affirm or do you deny that the strike was directed entirely by the Communist Party?

A. I would say it was directed practically by the Communist Party.

Q. Isn't this the fact——

A. The top leadership, yes.

Q. Isn't this the fact, Mr. Schrimpf, that workers like yourself, who at that time were interested in the ends that you have outlined for us, other workers from various trades, when the strike became general, all of you got together and you were glad, as you pointed [1591] out before, to use the suggestions of men who were more experienced in the strategy of strikes? A. That is correct.

Q. And it is true that the trade union movement used the Communist Party to achieve its ends in a legitimate manner as you have described it?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, that is not quite true. I will answer your question, if I may?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. The correct answer to that is, the Communist Party was using the trade union movement to try and make advances into the trade union movement. That was the confusing part, and that is why, I might say, while I have no regrets in having accepted their help and their knowledge and their strategy and program—but I didn't foresee just what their move was. So it is not correct when you say that we looked to them. They gave us help, with a mortgage on our union, which was to be paid dearly in later years.

Q. Well, now, let's question for just a moment the distinction that you make, that the top leaders of the strike were communists or Communist-dominated. Now, the president of the Labor Council was Mr. Vandeleur, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Edward Vandeleur; was that his name?

A. That's correct. [1592]

Q. Was he a Communist?

A. No, he was very conservative.

Q. And John O'Connell was secretary of the Council, is that right?

A. He is very conservative.

Q. He was one of the committee of seven named to handle the strike, isn't that true?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. What do you have reference to now, the general strike?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't recall how many was on it now. I believe those two were on it.

Q. And Daniel P. Hagerty was on the same committee of seven? A. That's right.

Q. And he was past president of the California State Federation of Labor; was he a Communist?

A. No.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. I have been hearing objections that the witness can't say whether an individual was a Communist or not.

Mr. MacInnis: I will let the prosecutor in on a secret: this is cross-examination, the rules are different.

Mr. Paisley: I see. I think the principle is the same, though, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in other words, he is now objecting—— [1593]

The Court: Overruled, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): How about M. S. Maxwell? Do you know him?

A. Just by name.

Q. He was president of the California State Federation of Butchers; he was one of the seven on the committee, wasn't he? A. That's right.

Q. And you don't affirm that he is a Communist, do you? A. No.

Q. And George Kidwell, do you know him or did you know him at that time?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I have met Kidwell.

Q. Do you affirm that he was a Communist?

A. No, he was not.

Q. And Frank Brown, a business representative of the Molders Union?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. I take it he is talking about some strike committee that was appointed to try to settle this; is that what he is talking about?

The Court: No, I am not familiar with what particular strike committee, counsel. The witness is here, he is thoroughly versed in the matter. I would ask him what strike committee it was. I do not know.

The Witness: Yes, I couldn't under oath say "Yes" but now he mentions the names—— [1594]

Mr. MacInnis: Top leaders were Communists!

The Witness: ——I think that's right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And you know Frank Brown, or knew him, didn't you?

A. I just know him, yes.

Q. And you knew he was business representative of the Molders Union, the seventh man on that committee, and he was not a Communist either, was he? A. That's right.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess?

The Court: Well, tell me, before we take the recess: It was not clear in my mind and maybe not in the jury's mind—what was the purpose of the strike committee? What was it, a settling group, an arbitration group, or what was it?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Well, inasmuch, your Honor, that this general strike was no longer going to be confined to just a portion of the workers, and it was going to take on the proportions of a general strike, it would be only fair to allow representation, a broad representation of unions way in outside of the maritime unions.

The Court: And these gentlemen to whom you have referred, now, Mr. Maxwell of the Butchers, and so forth—some of the names are familiar to the Court—they represent a sort of cross section of the community so far as the trades and crafts are concerned? A. That's right. [1595]

The Court: Now we will take a short recess.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [1595-A]

Mr. MacInnis: Now, as your Honor suggested by the last questions put to the witness, we had just mentioned in the questions put to Mr. Schrimpf the members of the Joint Strike Committee appointed by President Edward Vandeleur under circumstances which I think you very well described. Now, to come to the other leaders of the strike and to follow the same characterization that you offered us here, there was a joint marine strike committee, was there not? A. That is correct.

Q. And that was composed of men selected from seven seafaring unions and three metal trades unions? A. That is right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. The first of the metal trades unions, if we can take them in that order, would be the Boilermakers. There was a man named Ed Rainbow. Was he a member of the committee?

A. That is corerct.

Q. Was he a Communist?

A. He was not.

Q. And in the Machinists Union there were members Harry Hook—was he a Communist?

A. He was not.

Q. Ed Dillon? A. No.

Q. And a Curly Grou—and I am told his name is spelled either G-r-o-u or G-r-o-w. [1596]

A. The name sounds vaguely familiar, but I cannot place him.

Q. The other men you know are not Communists?

A. The other three men I know.

Q. From the Carpenters and Boatbuilders Union do you know a man named Sam Francan?

A. No.

Q. You never heard of him. Did you ever hear of his name on that committee?

A. It may have been on there. I don't recall.

Q. The Masters, Mates and Pilots had a man named E. B. O'Grady.

A. That is right.

Q. Was he a Communist?

A. Well, I wouldn't say he was.

Q. You beat up O'Grady in 1936, didn't you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Objected to, your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: It is a matter that will come into the testimony in relation to another incident later.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): How about a Captain Lawberg? Did you know him?

A. Yes, he was known as "the Poet."

Q. Was he a Communist?

A. No, he was not a Communist. [1597]

Q. And he was a member of the same committee, was he, the joint marine strike committee?

A. Was he on it, did you say?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, as far as I recall.

Q. How about a man named Eugene Burke? Eugene Burke, I am told, was from the Firemen, Cooks and Sailors, or did I have that incorrect?

A. Cook and Stewards.

Q. Did you know him?

A. I didn't know him very well. I know of him.

Q. Was he a Communist?

A. No, I wouldn't say he was.

Q. How about from the Firemen? There was a man named Denton. Was he a Communist?

A. No, he was not a Communist.

Q. How about Frank Meriwether; he was a part of the same committee, wasn't he?

A. That is right.

Q. And he was not a Communist?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, since we have gone through that list of leaders, after the strike persisted for a long period of time——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Wait a minute. I understood he was questioning the witness about the general strike committee. That [1598] strike, I understand, lasted about seventy hours, or something like that. Now he is talking about some long strike. Are we going on to something else?

Mr. MacInnis: You will perceive what I am coming to. I do not know what the objection is, your Honor. The objection may be there is an error in my memory, because I couldn't tell you the number of days the strike persisted, but that is hardly an objection.

Mr. Paisley: Which strike is he talking about? I think he ought to inform the witness of what strike he is speaking of.

The Witness: Your Honor, can I clear that up?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: I think I can clear it up.

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't asked him any question. I will begin a new question. There is no need to argue what is long and what is not long.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): At some point, Mr. Schrimpf, President Roosevelt appointed a board to discuss the arbitration of the strike and to make a determination and recommendation as to what should be done; is that true?

Mr. Paisley: Which strike is he talking about, your Honor? I would like to ask him to specify.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Is he talking about the longshoremen's strike or the general strike? [1599]

Mr. MacInnis: If there are two strikes, if they are not in the same picture, I am misinformed, although I have lived here all my life. Possibly this gentleman, who comes from the East, knows better what has happened here.

The Witness: Shall I answer that question?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. Yes, it is true the Government—Roosevelt was then President—did appoint a board.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And that board consisted of Edward O'Grady, who was Assistant Secretary of Labor, Archbishop Hanna of San Francisco, and a San Francisco lawyer named Oscar K. Cushing? A. That is correct.

Q. That board found substantially in favor of all the demands of the strikers, isn't that right?

A. Practically everything; that is right.

Q. Those were the demands that were ultimately adopted, is that true? A. That is right.

Q. These demands that you say were the result of Communist direction? A. That is correct.

Q. Isn't that about what happened? Regardless of whether or not there were Communists assisting in matters of strike strategy, at one time or another the decent people of the whole [1600] community got together, when they finally realized the truth about the waterfront situation, and they all worked together to alleviate those wrongs, isn't that right?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The objection is sustained. It is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I put in an answer to these questions? I have been given no opportunity. There was a Yea or Nay, and it is not very informative here for the jury or the Court.

The Court: Would you like to address yourself to any particular subject?

The Witness: On these questions, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say something?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think we are seriously concerned with this man's idea of the impression he is creating or the interest he has in the case.

The Court: That may well be, but a witness is entitled, as I take it, to give expression to that which he may have in mind if it be competent and relevant.

Mr. MacInnis: Do you mean at any time he likes?

The Court: No, no, counsel.

Mr. Paisley: I think the witness can explain his answer, your Honor. [1601]

The Court: There is no question about that.

Mr. MacInnis: There is no question before the Court.

The Court: You may explain.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask your Honor a question?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: What question does your Honor

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

deem the witness is going to explain? There is no question before him.

The Court: I am not deeming any question. The witness has made a request of me. In deference to the witness I am going to accede to it. If the answer be immaterial I shall strike it.

You may proceed, sir.

The Witness: I will start with the first question. There were several names in here on the general strategy committee for the general strike, and all I was asked was if they were Communists, Yes or No. I said No.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, pardon me——

Mr. Paisley: Let him answer.

Mr. MacInnis: No, I won't. This is a comment on the cross-examination.

Mr. Paisley: Wait until the witness has completed his answer. Counsel has a habit of breaking in.

The Court: The witness can explain his answer.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest something, your Honor? [1602]

The Court: Wait until the witness finishes and then you make your suggestion.

The Witness: When I said, answered Yea or Nay on these, that they were not Communists, that was not the fault of the strategy of the Communist Party, which was laying the strategy for our strike.

Mr. MacInnis: That is no answer to question to this man. I asked him if certain people were on certain committees. He is now attempting to give some argument in relation to the strength of those questions. I think your Honor can perceive that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Did you complete your answer?

A. No, I didn't complete it.

Q. Complete it.

A. In the first place, all the men you have mentioned, with the exception of Kidwell, who was considered a liberal, they were all considered very conservative. They were all belonging to old-school, conservative unions, that had been operating over a period of years in the city, and so therefore they had the upper hand. And we had many meetings concerning the so-called progressive group or the Communist group within the maritime strike—not the joint strike committee—to try and have some of our men elected on that committee. One of the men we did try to get on was Harry—Harry Bridges—on that committee, but, as I said, we [1603] were weak. You might call us newcomers to the labor world, and so therefore it wasn't a part of the Party's strategy at all.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, these are matters that might be drawn out on redirect examination if the prosecution chooses, but for this man to say now that he has a right to argue the effect his testimony——

The Court: The motion is denied. It goes to the composition of the committees and the general background of the individuals and the identity thereof.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, I have a right to ask him a question. That does not allow him to make a speech on every connected matter. I am content with the answers he has given. I do not need his argument. He can give that later if the prosecution is able to elicit it by some other question. Otherwise the cross-examiner could never choose the subject of his questioning.

Mr. Paisley: He can't cut off the witness, your Honor, if the witness wants to explain his answer. That is just as fundamental as anything I know.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, if I ever heard a bogus objection—The whole line of testimony was finished. The man had finished simply. He never asked a right to explain his answer. I am sure your Honor would have given him that right if he had. We come to the end of this and he says, "I would like to say something." [1604]

The Court: I say, counsel, if it is enlightening to this Court, and I assume it may be enlightening to the jury, as to the composition of those various committees, whether they be conservatives, liberals, middle-of-the-roaders, or whatever they may be, it is interesting.

The Witness: May I continue?

The Court: Yes, sir.

The Witness: On the second point—first of all, it must be clear we had three major strike committees. We had the maritime strike committee——

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, this is an argument. This is not an answer to any question.

The Witness: It is answering the question.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Is this an explanation?

A. That is right. All I had an opportunity to say was Yea and Nay.

The Court: Proceed.

The Witness: We had three strike committees. First there was the general strike strategy committee, and then we had the longshore strike committee, and then we had the maritime strike committee. Now, it is on this one that I also want to continue my answer. I said Yes to the men you named. The setup of those committees, each component group—there were three licensed groups, the Masters, Mates and Pilots, the Marine Engineers, and the Radio Operators—— [1605]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am in effect by this procedure forced to receive answers to questions I did not ask. I think, your Honor, the cross-examiner has the right to direct the trend of the cross-examination. If there is any subject that is relevant, it can be developed on redirect.

The Court: Counsel, I have not interfered with your examination. This witness has requested of this Court an opportunity to make an explanation. I feel that in the exercise of my discretion I can accord that right to this witness or any witness. Thus far in the explanatory note there has been nothing that you might refer to as prejudicial. It is explanatory, and I look upon it as an explanation or explication of these committees.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask your Honor a question?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: As I understand the law, and I can only understand it from reading the books——

The Court: Counsel, may I have this witness continue now? At the conclusion, if you have a motion to strike it all, I will entertain it. Thus far there has been nothing of a prejudicial nature or nothing you could object to. You may continue.

The Witness: This is a direct answer to the question when I said Yea and Nay on the men elected. I say we had three licensed groups, and I won't enumerate them again, and [1606] we had four unlicensed groups. Each of those component parts of the seafaring groups were represented on this committee, and they were also of a pretty conservative school. Incidentally, the operation of the strike was confined mostly through the longshore strike itself, and that is where the strategy was coming from the Communist Party. But in these other groups we couldn't very well say, "Let us take all men out of the longshoremen and put them on," and so we had to allow representation from those component groups, and so we had the men you mentioned, and I will admit at that time they were quite conservative. We had to give them representation on that strike committee. That is how those men got on, exactly the way they got on the central strategy committee for the general strike, and as they were pulling the strikes, they had the power. It was not a matter of Party policy putting all these men on the committee. If it had, the general strike wouldn't be over in those three days; I will tell you that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I move to strike the volunteer answer.

The Court: The motion is granted—the motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You tell us one of the meetings that you attended, that you say you think was a Communist Party meeting, was one in which a woman named Norma Perry was to be disciplined, is that right? [1607]

A. Yes. I do not know if that is the exact words I used, along those lines.

Q. You referred to her as a very busy little woman.

A. That is a very appropriate name for her.

Q. You were very friendly with her, were you not?

A. What do you mean, friendly? I knew the woman.

Q. You were very friendly with her, were you not?

A. No, I wouldn't say I was very friendly.

Q. You were in love with her, were you not?

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, we have the right to develop the relations between these people.

Q. Let me ask the question of you this way: In relation to this lady, who you say was called up and disciplined because she had been talking to people who you say were not well regarded, that lady, after she left the employ of the longshoremen's union, went to work for Harry Lundeberg, isn't that right?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. She went to work there sometime after. I don't know just when.

Mr. Paisley: I do not believe it is material, your Honor, just where she went to work.

Mr. MacInnis: I want to show this, your Honor, not only out of the lips of this witness but later on with the person named, Norma Perry had nothing to do with any [1608] Communist Party activities but had to do with the fact that the lady turned out to be a labor spy, and she was dealing with the employers, was dealing with agents of the employers, was ~~dealing with~~ various groups, and was passing out information on union activities that had nothing to do with the Communist Party, and that had to do with the enmity ultimately between Harry Bridges and Harry Lundeberg.

Q. You say that you visited this lady, Miss Perry—is that her name?—out at a restaurant called Pierre's? A. That is in the record.

Q. Did you say that?

A. No, I never used the word "Pierre's." I mentioned a restaurant and I gave a certain location. I didn't just recall at the time. But that is the substance of my statement there.

Q. Did you meet a man named Margolis at that place? A. I did.

Q. Margolis was at one time married to Norma Perry, is that right?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Yes, the man had two or three names. One was Scott, one was Margolis.

Q. He was known as Arthur Margolis, Arthur Kent, Arthur Scott, Arthur Hill, and Arthur Hilliard, is that right?

A. That is too many for me. I knew he had many aliases.

Q. When you came into court yesterday you were asked what union affiliation you had by the prosecutor who put the [1609] questions to you, and your first reply was that you belonged to the MWUI.

A. It definitely was not. I never made such a report.

Mr. MacInnis: How is your Honor's memory on that?

The Court: Well, I think resort may be had to the transcript, although sometimes transcripts are not very reliable, I found out yesterday.

The Witness: Maybe I am getting stupid.

Mr. MacInnis: I distinctly heard it and everybody else did.

The Court: Let us have the transcript.

Mr. MacInnis: Referring to page 1488, the question by Mr. Paisley:

"Do you now belong to a union?"

The answer, under oath: "I now belong to 91 of the MWUI."

A. The ILWU.

Mr. Paisley: I remember, your Honor——

The Witness: I don't know how that typographical error got in there.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: I asked him later on, I well recall, as to whether he had said that or not, and he cleared it up very promptly.

The Court: Was it cleared up later?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes. [1610]

The Court: Will you stipulate to that?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me?

The Court: Was it cleared up later?

Mr. MacInnis: I will stipulate as soon as I ask these questions.

The Court: Show the transcript to Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: I have the transcript, your Honor, in my hands.

Mr. Paisley: I have, too, and about two questions later it is cleared up.

Mr. MacInnis: I have a different purpose, if your Honor please, if I may proceed to it.

The Court: I am a little wary of [1611] transcripts.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, what does Your Honor mean by that, that you are wary of transcripts?

The Court: I asked you to proceed.

Mr. Paisley: Oh, Your Honor, he can't catechize the Court.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not attempting to; I am just asking Your Honor the question.

The Court: I suggest that counsel proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Q. Now, in other words, you do now deny that you ever said that at all?

A. Well, I must have been asleep if I did. I definitely don't recall making it, because there would be no sense in making it. I never belonged to such an outfit.

Q. And then if this were just an error in the transcript, the transcriber's notes, as is suggested by the prosecutor, he then repeated the question, after you said, "MWIU," "That is Maritime what——?"

The Court: Show him the transcript.

Mr. MacInnis: Of course. Do you doubt that those words are in the transcript as I am reading them?

The Court: I do not. Show him the transcript.

(Handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

The Witness: Well, I don't know, Your Honor, how all this got mixed up, but it just don't make sense. Now, I am not accusing anybody, and I don't say that it is not a typographical [1612] error, but reading it, it don't make sense.

Mr. MacInnis: Will you now look at your own transcript, Judge? It is now inferred I made up the transcript.

The Witness: I am not inferring anything at all.

Mr. MacInnis: He says, "I am not accusing anybody," but he looks down here——

The Court: Nobody is making any accusations. I merely wanted the transcript clarified in the light of a clear inaccuracy.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Judge, I heard him say it in addition to reading the transcript. I heard the prosecutor, as you will see, repeat it, the same language and use the word "maritime" as the first in the name, designating the initials.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Well, let us take the text here.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, it is cleared up later, but the point is, I have a right to ask——

The Court: It is cleared at lines 14 and 15.

The Witness: That's correct.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not need any aid in discovering that, Your Honor. I wanted to ask him why it was said.

The Court: Then what is the purpose, counsel? I don't follow you.

Mr. MacInnis: If, Your Honor please, I want to find out why unequivocally, when first asked the question, this man said directly, "MWIU," and why the government prosecutor in his next [1613] question repeated the same thing. Now, I know that that is not his membership. I know that is an error, but I want to know why. That is the only thing.

The Court: Well, you want an explanation from him?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, it would be idle now. Now that the government has pointed out the mistake, now that Your Honor has pointed out that two lines down it is cleared up.

The Court: Well, it is cleared?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Judge, isn't it the purpose of cross——

The Court: You asked me to address myself to the transcript and to compare this with my own copy. Now, I haven't my own copy, but I say to you, Mr. MacInnis, in fairness to the Court, and I think I am entitled to some degree of fairness——

Mr. MacInnis: Do you suggest that I have been unfair?

The Court: No, I do not, sir. "Do you now belong to the union?" "I now belong to 91 of the MWIU." "That is Local 91?" "That is right." "That is Martime what—MWIU? What does that mean?" Then the witness, "The International Warehousemen's & Longshoremen's Union."

The Witness: That's right.

The Court: So apparently,—I say apparently—there was an error. I don't know. Ask him the question.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, isn't that what I tried to do before all this colloquy went on? [1614]

The Court: I do not know your purpose, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, if you will read the record back, you will see all I asked is what is the reason for that. Now, you are telling me that is the question to ask. That is the question I already put to him.

Q. What was your reason for saying, "MWIU?"

A. I don't recall saying it, and if I did, it certainly was an error. Anybody, anyone is not perfect, but it don't make sense, as it is qualified in the 14th question.

The Court: 14th line.

The Witness: The 14th line or question, whatever it is—the 14th line.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I noticed that by some inadvertence, possibly, the prosecutor didn't ask you your address. Will you tell us what that is?

A. I live at 971 Mission Street.

Q. You have lived there how long?

A. Oh, I have been there just about a year now, a little over a year.

Q. Where did you live before that?

A. I lived at 246 McAllister.

Q. Where did you stay last night, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Have I got to answer that question, Your Honor?

Mr. MacInnis: It seems to me that there is nothing ambiguous about that question. [1615]

Mr. Paisley: It seems to me——

The Court: I know of no reason why you should not answer the question, unless you have some personal reason that may be of a purely personal concern. And if you have,——

The Witness: It is personal. I don't want to— Where I stay, if you want an answer, I can tell you. I stayed in the Mission. But it's——

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think we are bound by what this man would say would be a personal reason. That would be for Your Honor to decide.

The Court: Well, I know, but it might occur, counsel,—and it has occurred in the trial of cases in the past—that the witness might have some very, very definite personal reason for refraining to answer, and if so, I would take it up with counsel on both sides and have an agreement of some kind. I, of course, do not know what he has in mind.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I will defer that matter for the present, if he doesn't wish to tell us where he was.

Q. Now, the night before, on November 30th, where were you? That is the night before last?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I object to these questions unless he tells the Court what purpose ~~he~~ has. I have no idea what his purpose is.

The Court: What is the purpose, Mr. MacInnis?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Judge, if one disclosed the purpose, [1616] there would be no point in asking any questions. Now, it seems to me——

Mr. Paisley: Well, we can excuse the witness, Your Honor, or the jury, too, for that matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I will return to it later.

The Court: All right. It is now 4:00 o'clock and I think we might excuse the jury and go into the purpose,

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to proceed just a little bit, if I may. I will go on into another subject, Your Honor, if there is some objection to answering these things.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, let's clear up, if we may,—and if I can have about ten minutes for this particular subject?

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Maybe it won't take that long.

The Court: Certainly.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You told the Court and jury in effect that you were a member of the ILA at the time of the strike, and I supose you remained a member of that union until it became the ILWU, and that you have been a member of the ILWU ever since? A. That's correct.

Q. Now, Local 91 of the ILWU is an entirely different body than the local to which Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt belong, [1617] isn't that right?

A. Your Honor, in answering A and A, there may be some misinterpretation on this.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't know what this A and A is.

The Court: You may answer and then you may qualify it.

Mr. MacInnis: I think that is a yes or no answer.

The Court: You may answer the question of Mr. MacInnis and then——

Mr. MacInnis: I will reframe the question, Judge.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, you are a walking boss, aren't you?

A. That is what they call them.

Q. Yes. You are hired by the employers, you are not hired by the hiring hall; you are in a different class altogether than the workers, isn't that true? A. No, that is not quite true either.

Q. You receive a different wage scale, do you not? A. I do.

Q. Yes. A walking boss, as I am told, has a guarantee from the employers of $400 a month, and generally makes between $700 and $800 a month with overtime?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Now, is that a question?

A. That is absolutely incorrect, Your Honor, and I would like an opportunity to deny some of these statements. [1618]

Q. All right, you will. Tell us what a walking boss does.

A. We have different categories of walking bosses.

Q. Let's speak of you.

A. Well, you said what a walking boss gets. I am on by the hour, and I don't get my job direct from any employer. I get it down there at our office and hall, which is a combination. An operator will phone up and he will ask, "Who is available?", and he will just say, "All right, send So-and-so down." Sometimes we have an occasion where they don't ask for anyone, they just say, "Well, someone—send who is low." Now, as far as my earnings go, this particular year I haven't made, I don't think, over $3000 for the whole year. I am on by the hour. And while it is true that—for the information here—that some of these bosses, one of the categories, are on by the month, but I am not a monthly man, I am on by the hour, and we have many walking bosses down there on by the hour, as well as many on by the month.

Q. Now, to continue, and maybe you can clarify this for us, too, the National Labor Relations Board doesn't recognize the walking bosses, does it?

Mr. Paisley: Well, what has this got to do with this case, Your Honor?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I want to show that he is really not a union man, that he is an employers' man, and I want to show that the only reason that the walking bosses are kept affiliated with [1619] the ILWU is so they won't be entirely under the domination of the employers.

The Court: The objection is sustained, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Up to approximately the outbreak of the war, or thereafter, you worked as a longshoreman, is that true?

A. Yes, I worked up until 1943 as a longshoreman. That is, in the local.

Q. And then you became a walking boss?

A. That's right.

Q. And that was about what year? A. '43.

Q. You became a walking boss the same year that you attained your citizenship?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you attained your citizenship during the war, when citizenship was rather difficult to obtain?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, Your Honor; that is not within the scope of the direct examination.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, he mentioned on direct examination that he was naturalized in the year 1943.

Mr. Paisley: I recall no such testimony as that.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to find it, Your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: I didn't ask him about his naturalization. [1620]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The witness will be returned in the morning. I will examine the transcript.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, before you were a longshoreman, what occupation did you follow?

A. Well, that is already in the record. I worked out in the Union Iron Works,——

Mr. Paisley: I object to that as simply repetitive of what has been testified, unless he is trying to test his recollection; he can do that.

The Court: The objection is overruled, counsel.

A. (Continuing): Well, I worked at the Union Iron Works, I worked in a foundry out on Treat Avenue, and I sold for Colliers Magazine for a while, and I don't believe it was mentioned yesterday, but I also had some concessions out at the beach for a few months.

Q. You were a barker out at the Midway?

A. I was not a barker at the Midway.

Mr. Paisley: Now, Your Honor, I would like to read to counsel—I object to the question and ask that it be stricken,—the Code of Civil Procedure in the State of California, which he ought to know, and which——

Mr. MacInnis: And does know.

Mr. Paisley: And simply, in the codification of the common law rule, which governs the rules of evidence in this Court.

The Court: Are you addressing yourself to any particular [1621] question?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir, I am moving to strike the answer and the question. He asked him if he was a barker.

The Court: He said he was not a barker.

Mr. Paisley: Well, of course, it is immaterial—I agree with Your Honor.

The Court: Well, then what?

Mr. Paisley: A witness has some rights.

Mr. MacInnis: I can't get him to bark.

Mr. Paisley: And the right of a witness to be protected from irrelevant, improper and insulting questions, and from harsh or insulting demeanor, to be detained only so long as the interests of justice require, to be examined only as to matters legal and pertinent to the issue; that is the law in California and I think the witness has some rights and shouldn't be insulted by asking him such questions.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, may I respectfully suggest that the prosecutor might have had that principle in mind when he had this gentleman, by excoriating some people who are foreign to this case, cast some stain on the defendants. Now, I don't think there is anything improper about asking him——

The Court: Proceed, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: We may take the recess, Judge, since we have passed 4:00.

The Court: Yes. It is now 4:00 o'clock, ladies and [1622] gentlemen of the jury. We will take the afternoon adjournment until Monday morning at 11:00 o'clock. It so happens that we have some criminal matters that are scheduled for 10:00 o'clock Monday morning next. So it will be Monday morning next, December 5th at 11:00 o'clock. And in the interim, same admonition; not to discuss the case under any conditions or to converse with any person on the subject of this trial, not to form nor express any opinion until it is finally submitted to you.

You may now retire.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom.)

(The following occurred outside the presence of the jury.)

The Court: We have a matter to discuss, have we?

Mr. MacInnis: What matter, Your Honor?

The Court: The question of—you asked at 4:00 o'clock that we take up this question addressed to Mr. Schrimpf—is Mr. Schrimpf out of the room?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir.

The Court: Is it so stipulated that Mr. Schrimpf is out of the room?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: If he choses not to answer the question, I won't pursue the question further. That is good enough for me. If he says he doesn't want to tell us where he was,—because it is undoubtedly within Your Honor's discretion. If you think [1623] a personal reason is enough.

The Court: It may be. I am not inclined to foreclose counsel from any interrogation that you may have that would elicit facts pertinent, relevant, material to this examination. Now, if you have some purpose in mind in seeking to develop through this witness his whereabouts as to last night, the night before, the night before that, you disclose it to me and we will take up this matter with Mr. Schrimpf and find out to the extent it may be personal.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I am frankly content that the purpose was served by his refusal to answer the question, and I won't pursue the matter further.

The Court: Government counsel?

Mr. Paisely: Well, Your Honor, that is a tacit admission, and certainly an implied admission that he knows the question was an improper one, and of course we are satisfied if he doesn't want to pursue it.

Mr. MacInnis: Not at all. I know where he was one of those nights.

Mr. Paisley: What is that?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, then, I know where he was one of the nights.

Mr. Paisley: What is the purpose in asking the question, then?

The Court: What did you say, a tacit admission as to what? [1624] I missed part of your—May I say again to you, an earlier suggestion I made in the trial of this case, that at times your voices are low and I must ask you to just build up a little volume. I lose a lot of what you say, sir.

Mr. Paisley: An implied admission, Your Honor, that the question was an improper one and that he knows it was improper. And if he withdraws the question, we have——

The Court: Well, the record now rests in that fashion. The question and a refusal to answer.

Mr. Paisley: Well, then, I am content, too, on behalf of the Government, if he doesn't want to pursue the question. We are all content, as he says.

The Court: The witness has said, "In the Mission." I think he did say, "In the Mission." Now, that may have been lost to you, counsel. He says, "In the Mission."

Mr. MacInnis: I heard it. That is true.

The Court: "In the Mission;" now, the Mission is a large territory. You may not be familiar with our districts here.

Mr. Paisley: I am not.

The Court: The Mission occupies a large territory to the south of Market.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, sir.

The Court: Do you see?

Mr. Paisley: Well, would there be something in that answer that tends to degrade the witness? That would be an improper [1625] question.

The Court: That is the very point that I am coming to.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, the Mission is a very nice district.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, may I express myself, please, so that I will be understood? The witness may decline to answer a question on the ground that it would tend to embarrass him in some fashion, that it may be extremely personal. Now, I do not know the personal reason.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Judge, I am not responsible, and neither are you, for the personal whims of the witness.

The Court: No, but I have a duty, a constant duty.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest this?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Being content, as I was, to let the record stand with these refusals, we are now confronted with the observation that there is some tacit admission of an improper purpose.

The Court: That is the point I wanted to come to.

Mr. Paisley: No.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, here is what happened: I said to this man, "Where do you live?", and he stared at me and he waited a minute. Then he said, "971 Mission." And then I said, "Where did you live before that?", and he waited a minute and stared again and he made another reluctant answer. Then I asked him, "Where did you stay last night?" "I refuse to answer," he [1626] says. Well, am I to be criticized because of the demeanor of the witness, followed by his answer?

The Court: Counsel, no one has criticized you at all.

Mr. MacInnis: The eminent prosecutor has.

Mr. Paisley: I haven't criticized Mr. MacInnis. As I understand the law,——

Mr. MacInnis: There is no law before Your Honor. I have said, I am not pursuing the matter further.

Mr. Paisley: ——as to disclosure of personal turpitude of the witness, and his insensibility to the obligations of his oath to speak the truth; now based on that proposition, ordinarily to discredit a witness, you may only ask him as to prior convictions of crime, for instance. You can not ask him, for instance, if he has committed assault; you can't ask him if he is a drinker and a gambler; you can't ask him if he has committed adultery in the past. Insulting questions are not permissible. Now, if, by his question, "Where were you last night?", he was trying to get the witness to admit that he was in some gambling joint or something like that, that is wholly an improper question, as I understand it.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, I had no intention of disclosing these attributes which counsel now ascribes to his witness, and I am not interested in where Mr. Paisley slept last night. And other than I have indicated I am willing to rest so far as Mr. Schrimpf's last night's abode may be concerned——

The Court: The matter may then stand in the record as it is.

Mr. Paisley: All right, Your Honor.

The Court: We will adjourn until next Monday, December 5th, at 10:00 o'clock. This court stands in recess. and in adjournment, however, as to this case, until 11:00 o'clock Monday.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken in the case at bar until Monday, December 5, 1949, at 11:00 o'clock a.m.) [1628]

December 5, 1949, 11:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: It is stipulated the jurors are present?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: You may proceed.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

HENRY JOSEPH SCHRIMPF

previously called as a witness on behalf of the United States; sworn.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, we were speaking at the end of the last afternoon on Friday about your present job as a walking boss, is that correct?

A. It was. Towards the end we were talking about that, right.

Q. You became a walking boss in what year?

A. The year 1943.

Q. And you worked as a longshoreman for a great number of years continuously up to the year 1943 during the war? A. That is correct.

Q. And at that time you were made a walking boss? [1629] A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Where was your first employment?

A. As a walking boss?

Q. As a walking boss, yes.

A. My first job as a walking boss was at the army. They had requested the union to supply them any one at all who had experience as longshoreman, and I was among many of the men who went over there.

Q. Your first job as a walking boss, as I am informed, was down at Fort Mason, is that true?

A. I believe it was—no, I will take that back. I believe the first job was at 45, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Pardon me?

A. At Pier 45, if I am not mistaken. I believe that was my first job at the army.

Q. And then you went on to Fort Mason after that?

A. No, I don't think I worked at Fort Mason more than a half dozen times during the war.

Q. What are the duties of a walking boss?

A. The basic duties of a walking boss is to supervise the stevedoring operation of the cargoes on that ship in conjunction and with the man known as the supercargo of the ship. He places the gang. He is responsible to a big degree if any gear or anything else should carry away. He is supposed to see that [1630] the gear has been rigged right. He is also supposed to see that the right cargo goes in the right place and all of the things pertaining to keep the cargo in the best condition during its transportation to where it may be delivered.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. It is a supervisorial job?

A. That is correct.

Q. Having in mind your present position as a walking boss, as you define it, let me ask you this: In 1935 you were a member of the Labor Relations Council of the union, were you not?

A. 1935 a member of the Labor Relations Council of the union? I never heard of anything by that name.

Q. You never heard of anything having to do with labor relations?

A. Well, there was a labor relations committee. Would that be the same what you have reference to?

Q. It may be. Were you on the labor relations committee, if you wish to make that distinction?

A. No, no.

Q. Didn't you in 1935 walk out of a meeting of the Labor Relations Council or Committee because you said that your hatred was so great that you could not sit at the same table with a Mr. Peterson representing the employers, whom you called "scabby Peterson?"

A. No, I have no recollection to such a meeting.

Q. You have no recollection? [1631]

A. No recollection.

Q. Don't you remember that you had a talk with Bridges about your refusal to sit on that committee?

A. I still have no recollection of such a committee.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Hallinan: Did he say 1945?

Mr. MacInnis: 1935, I thought I said, in reference to that committee.

The Witness: That is right. That is what I understood you to say. [1632]

Q. And your leaving that committee was written in the various periodicals of the waterfront, was it not?

A. You mean, the periodicals, or our papers put out by the union?

Q. Yes, the papers put out by the union.

A. As I have already mentioned for the record, I don't recall such a meeting.

Q. And you don't recall whether the minutes of the union itself would show your leaving such a committee in the manner I have described?

A. No, I have no recollection.

Q. Do you recall telling Harry Bridges that your real reason for leaving the committee was that you were drinking too much and hence couldn't control your temper? Do you remember that?

A. No, that I do not.

Q. You don't remember discussing the fact that you drank too much?

Mr. Paisley: Well, now, Your Honor, counsel ought to know better than that.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, be that as it may, Mr. Schrimpf; concerning your employment, let me ask you these questions. You were not, of course, traduced or subpoenaed by the government in 1939 in a deportation hearing brought by the Government against Harry Bridges, were you? [1633]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Will you repeat that question again?

Mr. MacInnis (To the Reporter): Will you read the question to the witness, please?

(Record read.)

A. I never had a subpoena served on me. Although there were attempts made to contact me, and I presume they were by the Government.

Q. You say attempts were made to contact you. You were not difficult to find in 1939, were you?

A. Yes. For the information of this Court, and to your answer, there was one day in one of these hearings, I stayed away for 14 days from my place.

Q. How about 1941? You were not subpoenaed by the Government in that deportation hearing, were you?

A. I received no subpoena.

Q. No. And in fact, in the year 1937 you attended a convention in Portland along with other members of the union, Harry Bridges being present, and there was a meeting had, an open meeting, whose minutes were transcribed, in which there was an incident discussed concerning the planting of a dictaphone in Harry Bridges' hotel room, and you took part in that discussion, didn't you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Object to that, Your Honor: immaterial and irrelevant.

The Court: Sustained. [1634]

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, this will develop among other things something that will lead to a definite inconsistent statement. May I have Your Honor's reasons for sustaining the objection so that I can be guided accordingly?

The Court: Yes; it is immaterial, not proper cross-examination.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I will put it in this vein.

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, in 1937, at the convention in Portland of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast, you stood up at a meeting, visited by Mr. Bonham of the Immigration Service, and you criticized Mr. Bonham because you had been picked up and questioned, didn't you?

A. That is correct. I was taken by—they called themselves "immigration authorities" at Portland, and I told them I didn't think it was fair or democratic picking me up without allowing me to get some legal advice. That was a long time ago, that's the best I can recall it.

Q. What you said is this:

> "Inasmuch as Mr. Bonham has mentioned an individual here, and inasmuch as it is common knowledge that he refers to me, I believe, having been a permanent resident in this country for the past 18 years, and having entered this country legally, I, at this time, certainly take exception and wish Mr. Bonham to know > that in my opinion it is far apart from the democratic spirit of this country to [1635] molest any individual in the way of subpoena."

Mr. Paisley: Now just a moment. Your Honor, I don't like to shut him off, but it now appears that he is talking about some alleged mistreatment of this witness and not of Harry Bridges or any other defendant in the case. Therefore it seems to me that it is an improper question.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will see that I have the purpose that I mentioned.

The Court: You are coming to the point?

Mr. MacInnis: I am going to read this and then I am going to ask a question. Your Honor will see the point in a moment. I think I need not telegraph the point in advance.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis, Continuing): And you said you also wished to state:

> "As long as I am a resident of this country and not carrying out a policy which conflicts with the setup of this country, I would at all times like to reserve the right, as a resident of this country, to stand by my democratic rights in doing things voluntarily. And once more I wish to state, in my opinion, it was not acting along the lines of a democratic policy to go to my room and force me to appear before certain government officials. And as Mr. Bonham stated, they did not force me, but > their intent was to force statements from me, which in my opinion was the [1636] matter for the government officials to find out."

And then you added to that: ——

Mr. Paisley: Now wait a minute. Your Honor, suppose the witness had made such a statement. What possible bearing, what relevancy would it have to this proceeding?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will see that in a moment. This is a perfectly proper inquiry and it will lead in my respectful opinion——

The Court: I will accept your assurance, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And then you said this further, addressing Mr. Bonham, who was there as the guest of the convention as the representative of the Department of Immigration,——

Mr. Paisley: I object to the form of the question. He is testifying, Your Honor. He may ask him, under Your Honor's ruling, if he did not make such a statement.

The Court: Yes. Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): "As a representative of the Immigration branch of the United States Government, has at any time your department set forth an earnest endeavor in the attempt to deport any individual connected with big business when they knew he was an alien? They are the real ones who are detrimental to the big majority of people in this country and at all times are trying and using every effort to exploit the majority of workers."

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

And didn't Mr. Bonham reply to you: [1637]

> "Your question amuses me. The Immigration Department has attempted to deport any alien, irrespective of who or what he might be."

Do you remember that?

A. It sounds familiar. I could have made that statement.

Q. Now, Mr. Bonham, you know and knew, was the superior of Mr. Boyd, who sits here in court, at that time? Do you know that?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I must object. I can't see where we are getting. I don't feel he is getting to any relevant issue.

Mr. MacInnis: I will come to it in the next question, Your Honor. I think I am not bound to satisfy the prosecution by the trend of these questions.

The Court: Proceed, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you know that?

A. No, I did not know the connections.

Q. You didn't? You have not met Mr. Boyd?

A. Oh, I met Mr. Boyd here, but——

Q. Yes?

A. I do not know the connections—as you referred to him here, about being superior and working for who.

Q. Yes. Here is the point now, Mr. Schrimpf. All the time when you appeared at the convention, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, and made that statement protesting about the intrusion on your private rights, during all of that time [1638] you were already dealing with Mr. Bonham and passing on information to him which you hoped would destroy Harry Bridges, is that not the fact?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, I passed on no information. [1638-A]

Q. At the time that you were picked up, according to your own statement, and brought to the offices of the Immigration Department in Portland in the year 1937, you were required to give a statement under oath, were you not?

A. I definitely was not, and that is strictly a misstatement.

Q. You were not required to give any statement? A. I gave no statement.

Q. You were not asked whether or not you were a Communist, is that right?

A. No, I was not asked that question.

Q. Mr. Bonham, who had you picked up as an alien, never asked you whether or not you were a Communist, is that right?

A. Not to my recollection, no.

Q. You knew a man named James Branch on the waterfront, did you not?

A. The name sounds familiar, yes; Branch, yes.

Q. And you knew that James Branch in the year 1935 was deported from this country back to his native England because he was a Communist?

Mr. Paisley: I object.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: That was heretofore gone into. I will sustain the objection.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest, your Honor, it goes to the state of mind of this witness in telling us now the things he said were not discussed in this interview with Bonham? [1639]

The Court: The objection is sustained, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You say you were not dealing with the Immigration Department at that time as an undercover agent pretending to give information about Harry Bridges in 1937?

A. Definitely not.

Q. Had you met Harper Knowles at that time?

A. I don't recall ever meeting Knowles in my life.

Q. Had you met Stanley M. Doyle at that time?

A. I never met Doyle in my life.

Q. You had met Arthur Kent, the husband of Norma Perry, at that time, had you not?

A. Yes, that is in the record already, Kent and many other names he was alias by.

Q. And you knew that on the very day in 1937 when you were pretending to make a protest against Mr. Bonham's intrucion on your rights, that Bonham, Harper Knowles and Stanley Doyle had placed Arthur Kent in a position with NBC in Portland to attempt to dictagraph and to obtain information against Harry Bridges, you knew that, didn't you?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor,——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I definitely didn't know any such thing.

The Court: Mr. Schrimpf, may I ask you to await the interposition of an objection?

A. Pardon me, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: Objection, your Honor. [1640]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): By 1937 you were already possessed of a great hatred for Harry Bridges; is that not the fact?

A. That is not correct.

Q. You had never expressed yourself as being willing to do anything to get Harry Bridges?

A. I fought him on many occasions on policy, yes. I have even come to very bitter words.

Q. Why, you once assaulted Henry Schmidt with your fists, did you not?

A. I protected myself from an insult.

Q. And I suppose you bear him no ill will either?

A. No, personally, no. Policy, yes.

Q. Isn't it true that within the past month on at least six occasions you, while drinking at a place called Ed's Bar at No. 58 Embarcadero, have said that you would do anything to get Bridges and Schmidt, in the presence of anybody who happened to be there? A. That is a definite lie.

Q. Now, you say you were not dealing as an undercover agent of the Immigration Department against Bridges in the summer of 1937, is that right?

A. That is definitely correct. I wasn't dealing in any way at all with the Government.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. As a matter of fact, you know, Mr. Schrimpf, that Madame [1641] Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, wrote a letter to Congressman John M. Coffey of the State of Washington——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis, continuing): ——in July 1937, saying that the Immigration Department was not going to take any stock in the rediculous charges that you were making at that time, in 1937, against Harry Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, ——

A. I never heard of any such——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, Mr. Witness.

The Witness: Pardon me.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor recalls the form of that question?

The Court: Yes, I do. The objection is sustained.

Mr. Paisley: He says, "You know that Mrs. Perkins did so-and-so."

The Court: It may be regarded as an indirect method. However, the objection is sustained. The witness' answer is stricken from the record.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, to refresh your memory I am going to show you, and I will show the Government counsel first, a letter on the stationery of the Congress of the United States bearing date of July 30, 1937, in which Congressman John M. Coffey discusses this very matter.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, this is so palpably

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

incorrect and improper on the part of counsel to wave some letter and [1642] tell the Court and jury what it is before it is in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, I propose to prove the fact of this man's acting as an undercover agent was even known to Congress and to the Secretary of Labor in 1937, and it was known to him as well.

The Court: The objection is sustained. The remarks of counsel are stricken from the record and the jury is instructed to disregard the same.

Mr. Paisley: If your Honor would look at it, you could see it has no bearing.

Mr. MacInnis: There is no question before the Court.

Mr. Paisley: It is not an instrument with which he could confront this witness.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, I have not passed the instrument yet.

The Court: I assumed you had passed it to him or attempted to pass it to him. You can pass it to him now.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not see how I could, your Honor. I am attempting to obey the rule and pass the documents first to the Clerk. I ask the Clerk to pass this letter, on the letterhead of the Congress of the United States, to this witness.

(Document handed to witness.)

The Witness: Your Honor, —— [1643]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Don't comment about the letter unless some question is asked you.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, it is a fact, is it not, that sometime early in the year 1938, Harry Bridges himself made known to you his receipt of the letter just shown you now on the stationery of the Congress of the United States written by John M. Coffey to Mr. John L. Lewis, the president of the United Mine Workers of America, in which he says that Madame Perkins herself——

Mr. Paisley: One moment.

The Court: One moment, counsel.

Mr. Paisley: Counsel seems very anxious to read this letter to the jury, which is a letter from someone but not to this witness, and it is not a letter written by the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: He certainly could be asked if he had seen it.

Mr. Paisley: I made my objection: He has no basis for reading it to the jury.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest this: The prosecutor who now makes the objection has upon innumerable occasions in our last engagement here said that the statements of all transient people whose names we have never heard are somehow binding upon us. We objected in vain. Now he says a letter on the stationery of the Congress of the United States pointing out what this man was doing in 1937 is not admissible. [1644]

The Court: Counsel, there is no purpose in arguing the matter or attempting to argue the matter to the jury in connection with the offer of any evidence or the proffer of any letter. I indicated in the past I would admonish the jury, and I accordingly admonish the jury from time to time. The matter of handing a letter to the witness, showing it to him, is one thing; the matter of addressing the contents in advance is quite another thing. There is a question before the witness. He was asked whether or not he had ever seen this letter on this occasion. Was that the question?

Mr. MacInnis: Substantially. I will reframe the question, your Honor.

The Court: May I ask you again to either refrain from exhibiting the contents of the letter or otherwise referring to it in advance of identification or in advance of the receipt of the document in evidence?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, the fact of this letter's existence was made known to you sometime in the year 1938, was it not?

A. That is the first time I ever saw such a letter, and this letter does not have reference to what I done. It says, "Statements that Schrimpf may have made."

The Court: One moment.

The Witness: That is trying to confuse the issues here.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You are Harry Schrimpf, aren't you? [1645]

A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: We ask that this letter be marked for identification.

The Witness: I would like it read.

(Letter, John M. Coffey to John L. Lewis, was marked Defendants' Exhibit J for identification.)

Mr. MacInnis: I show Government counsel a carbon copy of a reply letter from Harry Bridges to Mr. John M. Coffey of the House of Representatives at Washington on that same subject, without reading the contents.

Mr. Paisley (After reading letter): Thank you.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you hand this carbon copy of the letter already described to the witness, please.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I would ask the Court to look at that document before it is handed to the witness, because it will be obvious to the Court is in no way connected with it. It is hearsay, self-serving in nature.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean there is something so terrible in this letter that Mr. Schrimpf may not even touch it; is that it?

Mr. Paisley: Address the remarks to the Court, please.

Mr. MacInnis: It seems rather idle to speak to you.

The Court: There is no occasion to submit it to the witness. You are going to address a question to the witness concerning that letter? Is that your purpose? [1646]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask your Honor a question?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: By what mental route would your Honor suggest that this witness would be able to say whether he had seen a document before if it is not shown to him?

The Court; The objection which is quite apparent with every a casual reading of the letter, is one that is elemental in the trial of cases, to wit, that it involves actions between others, res inter alios acta.

Mr. MacInnis: The rule I have urged so many times in these proceedings.

The Court: Counsel, the last remark is uncalled for. Is there an objection?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not criticizing you; I am referring to the rule, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained. It may be marked for identification.

(The letter referred to was marked Defendants' Exhibit K for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, in the year 1937; you had written some letters to the Immigration Department, had you not?

A. I have never written a letter to the Immigration Department in my life, period. [1647]

Q. And it is not true that you pretended to have any inside information about Harry Bridges at that time?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I told them I knew nothing of Bridges at that time, whether or not he definitely was a Communist.

Q. In other words, in 1937, in June of that year, you told the Immigration Department, where you had been summoned by subpoena, that you knew nothing about Harry Bridges, as to whether or not he was a Communist? A. Right.

Q. You told them that under oath, didn't you?

A. No, not under oath.

Q. You mean you make some distinction between the things you say when you are under oath and when you are not?

A. That could be possible.

Q. Why, you were brought before the Immigration Department under subpoena at that time, were you not?

A. That is not correct either.

Q. I am only referring to your statement you made in the open convention that you were brought in there by subpoena; is that false?

A. No; the way I was brought to the Government, I was in my room taking a wash, and there was three men appeared. I was sharing a room with Bill Marlow. I didn't know who they were They said, "Get your coat on." I thought I was being taken for a ride. [1648]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

I said, "Why should I get my coat on?"

Q. What do you mean by "taken for a ride"?

A. I didn't know—a bunch of thugs or something of the kind. I didn't know anything about it.

Q. They soon reassured you and it proved they were not really thugs but they were officers of the Immigration Department?

A. They showed their badges. They showed their badges, and I said to Bill, "What shall I do?"

He said, "You had better go down with them, Henry."

Q. Where did they take you?

A. I don't know. They took me up to some office.

Q. What did they do when you got there?

A. When I got there they asked me——

Mr. Paisley: This is immaterial, your Honor, to the issues in this case, unless he can connect it in some way with the defendants.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, it seems to me there would be a multitude of reasons why this inquiry would be highly proper. This man has sworn that he at one time joined the Communist Party. It also appears that he was an alien. It also appears, either from common knowledge or from things we have seen in this record, that if an alien belonged to the Communist Party, that deporatation proceedings would be taken against him. It also appears that this man was taken before the [1649] Immigration Department. Now, whatever he said at that time would be inconsistent with what has taken place

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)
here, whether he said Yes or No to the questions.

The Court: Is there an objection, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: What is the basis for the objection?

Mr. Paisley: That it is irrelevant to any issue in this case what might have happened to him. Suppose the Immigration authorities had beaten him up, tapped his wires, done all kinds of things that Government officials are usually accused of in cases of this type. What difference would that make in this case? That is obvious.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, the criticism in this question or implied in it is not directed against the Immigration Department but against the witness who is being cross-examined. We are not interested in whether he was well treated or poorly treated by them, but if he was asked at that time if he was a member of the Communist Party and he said, "No"——

The Court: We are dealing in suppositious statements on your part. The objection is sustained. I can't see at this juncture the materiality of that.

Mr. MacInnis: He has sworn under oath in these proceedings that he was a member of the Communist Party, has he not, your Honor?

The Court: He has sworn that at one time he was a [1650] member of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: If he testified here he made a statement contrary in 1937 it would be highly pertinent to this inquiry, particularly as this witness, who has purported to give some testimony linking the defendants in this case, according to the claims of the prosecution, now says that in 1937, when his memory was certainly fresh, that he told members of the Immigration Department that he had no information one way or the other as to whether Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. Paisley: We do not object to that, and we would not object if he asked on other occasions denied that he was a member of the Communist Party, but this other matter he is trying to drag in here is obviously immaterial. [1651]

Mr. MacInnis: May the question be read, Your Honor?

The Court: The objection is sustained at this juncture.

Mr. MacInnis: May the question—I confess that I have lost the trend of what the question was.

The Court: All right, you may have it read.

(Question read.)

The Witness: Now, may I answer that question, Your Honor?

The Court: The objection is sustained to it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You were asked at that time if you were a member of the Communist Party or had been?

A. I was not, and that is also in the record.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf: At the time you were taken up before the Immigration Department in the manner we have just now described, did you then make some deal with the Immigration Department where you would be spared if you would purport to give information against Harry Bridges? Is that what you did?

A. I made no deal whatsoever. When I was called up at this particular meeting in '37, I was called into the room, first of all. They said, "Can we bring a stenographer in?" and "Will you make a statement on it?" I said, "I have nothing to say." And after that they said, "Well, do you know Harry Bridges is a Communist?" I said, "I do not know anything about Harry Bridges." I was not under oath and so then they started to tell me, "Well, you are a good American, you want to help the [1652] country?" I said, "I have nothing to say." There was nothing taken down, there was no reporting made of it, and that is actually and all what happened at that hearing. Now, there was no subpoena, I was taken out of the room and I was kept there, to the best of my recollection, for about a half hour. There was nothing else said and no statements taken period.

Q. Now, no, we haven't come to the period, Mr. Schrimpf. You state to us now that the Immigration Department, knowing that you were an alien, said to you, "Mr. Schrimpf, you are a good American." Is that what you ask us to believe?

A. That is what they said; they said, "You want to be a good American, you want to help the country?" That is what they said to me.

Q. And something about you or the manner in which you spoke was so commanding that they didn't even go ahead and ask you the questions, that they just let you go?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Their big concern was to bring a girl in, and would I take an oath? And I says, "No." "At least you can show me the courtesy of allowing me to get some legal advice."

Q. And having made that attempt to speak with you, they never thereafter followed the matter through?

A. They did not. I had no more connections with them. I made a report on the convention floor the following morning. And I imagine, or this could have been, where this report comes from. It was along those lines which you have there in the recordings [1653] now.

Q. And you didn't at any time pretend to the Immigration officials in 1937 that you had inside information that would succeed in having Harry Bridges deported?

A. I had no conversation along those lines whatsoever.

Q. On Friday last you told us about a certain meeting which you said in your opinion was a Communist meeting and that the purpose of it was to discipline Norma Perry because she had been having something to do with the wrong kind of people, and the people you mentioned were two men, one named Scotty Frater, and another man named Cox, is that right? A. That is in the record.

Q. Yes. Cox's name was Ivan Cox, wasn't it?

A. That's right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Frater's name, as you gave it to us here, and as you recall it, was "Scotty Frater"?

A. That is what I knew him as.

Q. Scotty Frater was secretary-treasurer of the union at one time, true?

A. He was at that time. That is in the record.

Q. Yes. And Ivan Cox later held the same position, that of secretary-treasurer of the same union?

A. Yes. He served as a financial secretary instead of secretary.

Q. Yes. And in reference to the charges against Norma Perry, [1654] both Scotty Frater and Ivan Cox were removed from their office as secretary-treasurer because of embezzlement of union funds—both of those persons—isn't that right?

Mr. Paisley: Well, what if they were? Does that have any bearing on this?

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, the purpose of this question, among other things, is to show, as we will show, that any criticism which might ever have been directed in an official meeting or otherwise at the woman whose name has been mentioned was criticism having nothing to do with the Communist Party, having to do with her connivance with employer groups, labor spies, people like Harper Knowles, Stanley M. Doyle and the people whose names have been mentioned by this witness. It is a very material matter. This witness purports to tell us that this woman, although an innocent person, was criticized; and he gives us the reasons. Now, we certainly wish to show and ought to be allowed to show that the entire basis was different than the way this witness has described it.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, concerning the second of these two men, Ivan Cox, the secretary-treasurer, you say the following year, of your union, Ivan Cox was the man who in 1938 filed a complaint in the Superior Court here in San Francisco naming as Communists Harry Bridges, Frederick March, Paul Schmidt, [1655] Bishop Parsons, Robert Kenny, the Attorney General of the State, and Mr. Whitken, the clerk of the Supreme Court of the State of California. That is true, isn't it?

A. I can't——

Mr. Paisley: Objected to. Just a moment. Objected as immaterial and irrelevant; it is something somebody else may have——

The Court: Would you read that question to me, please, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I think it goes to the verity of whether or not these two men with whom Norma Perry was accused of collaborating were good union people and whether they were in fact collaborating with the forces that were seeking to destroy the union.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, Mr. Schrimpf, you were present in November of 1938 at a meeting of the union in which the matter of the complaint which Mr. Cox had filed was discussed by you, is that not true?

Mr. Paisley: Object to it as immaterial, irrelevant, to any issues in this case.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now you say that you have no hatred for [1656] Harry Bridges?

A. No personal hatred whatsoever.

Q. And you have no personal hatred for Henry Schmidt? A. Right.

Q. And that has always been your state of mind? A. That's right.

Q. Well, now, even after the union, which had been the ILA, became the ILWU, even after it left the American Federation of Labor and joined the CIO, you were the leader of the opposition which sought to keep the union in the A. F. of L., isn't that right?

A. That is not correct. I did object to the limited time given for the men to prepare themselves, and inasmuch as, in this objection, after a resolution which was read at the 1936 convention by Brother Bridges himself condemning anyone who wished to get out of the A. F. of L., I thought it was very peculiar that he should change his mind so quick and on such short notice.

Q. Your feeling was so great that you and two of your associates get out a newspaper so that you could publish your opposition to the CIO, isn't that right?

A. That is definitely a lie. The only connection I have with any propaganda, I sent a letter up and down the Coast asking them just what the reaction was on his change of affiliation. That definitely and positively was the only connection with [1657] any paper gotten out.

Q. Anybody else sign that letter with you?

A. Oh, I think there were two or three signed that letter.

Q. Would those be Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Ralph Malin?

A. Yes, they could have been signatories to that letter.

Q. That would be James F. Kennedy and Ralph F. Malin, is that right?

A. Yes, they could have been signatories to that letter.

Q. And you tell us now under oath that you didn't do anything by way of publishing your feelings, but you merely sent a letter up and down the Coast? A. That is definitely correct.

Mr. Paisley: Any particular part of this that you feel is relevant, counsel, or the whole paper?

Mr. MacInnis: A few moments ago the prosecutor told me to address my remarks to the Court. I hardly know what to do in this position.

Mr. Paisley: All right, sir, thank you.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask the Clerk to hand the document to the witness.

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I will ask the witness to look at the first page of the publication which is called "The Longshoreman." I will ask him whether or not there appears on that page an open letter signed by himself. [1658]

A. That is a copy of the letter which I sent up and down the Coast. That is a reproduction of it.

Mr. MacInnis: I think we can wait until His Honor looks at it.

(Document handed to the Court by the witness.)

The Court: This is the letter referred to, signed by Kennedy, Malin and Mr. Schrimpf?

The Witness: That's correct.

The Court: Dated July 29, 1937.

Mr. MacInnis: May the paper be marked Defendant's next, Your Honor?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I might say that for the time being I would like to state my position about this: I realize that certainly to some extent counsel can question government witnesses as to disputes they have had with Bridges and Schmidt and Robertson, if they have had any, as bearing upon their motive in testifying against them. But whether we can go into all the details of their disputes is quite another question; and it looks like, to me, that is where we are headed here. I would just like to make that observation.

The Court: I have not read the full text of the letter, counsel, in the brief period allotted to me. This is the letter the witness heretofore referred to?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: He admits its origin; he admitted that he had [1659] occasion to write it.

Mr. Paisley: That is true.

The Court: He admits the two gentlemen referred to acted as co-signatories. Under the circumstances, the letter, or the reprint in the publication may be received. I might say parenthetically that the balance of the publication has no immediate bearing upon the issue, and we will admit it subject to the letter and for that purpose only.

Mr. MacInnis; That is true, unless further questions disclose a relevancy.

The Court: Yes, sir. It may be marked.

(Thereupon open letter dated 7/29/37 reprinted in The Longshoreman, issue of August 11, 1937, referred to above, was received in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit L.)

The Court: Limited to the matter in question.

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

The Court: The witness denied heretofore that he had anything to do with the publication of it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Is that correct, sir?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That's right, Your Honor. And I still can't recall where, unless this was our official paper, where that letter was allowed to be republished.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, do you deny that you, Mr. [1660] Kennedy and Mr. Malin were publishers of the paper which you have now been shown, called The Longshoreman, and on its issue of Wednesday, August 11, 1937?

A. I definitely deny, yes, that I had anything at all to do with the editorial part of the publishing of that paper, if the letter—and it is in there—by my request; I can't recall that definitely I had—I had nothing to do with the publication of that paper.

Q. Did you ever hear of this paper, The Longshoreman, before?

A. It was out for a short period, I believe, on the waterfront.

Q. It was gotten out by a group in opposition to Harry Bridges, isn't that right?

A. No, it was gotten out by a group in opposition of policy.

Mr. MacInnis: I will read the letter.

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, unless it is in evidence, Your Honor. It certainly has no bearing on the issues in this case. I object to the letter being introduced in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, we certainly have the right to inquire into what he said about Mr. Bridges and the others.

The Court: This letter, I understand my ruling, was marked in association with the paper. I did not assume to mark the paper in evidence, only the letter in evidence as it is reflected in the publication. Now, that was the intent and purpose of my rule.

Mr. Paisley: But I didn't understand Your Honor had admitted [1661] it into evidence in this case.

The Court: I admitted it.

Mr. Paisley: The name of Bridges is nowhere in it, appears nowhere in it, or my eyes deceived me.

The Court: Well, I did not, in the brief period allotted to me, assume to read the full text of that letter. I assumed counsel had read it and I was waiting for any material or pertinent objection you might make to the matter. I found none and accordingly we admitted it.

Mr. Paisley: Oh, no, Your Honor. I understood he was just marking it for identification. We move to strike it.

The Court: I will take the time, then, to read the full text of the letter.

Mr. Paisley: It has no relevancy.

The Court: And in the meantime, it may be marked. We will take it at the recess.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, may I suggest,——

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it will take Your Honor only about 45 seconds to read it.

The Court: All right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Document handed to the Court by the Clerk.)

The Court: This appears to be an intramural situation with respect to the matters that Mr. Paisley addressed himself to, and I will consider it in evidence subject to a motion, if it be [1662] tied in to Mr. Bridges or not, with respect to any rancor or ill will that may have been engendered——

Mr. MacInnis: That is its purpose.

The Court: If there is no such showing, I will reserve a motion to strike it.

Mr. Paisley: That is quite satisfactory, your Honor. We just don't want to go off trying a lot of issues that have no bearing to this case.

The Court: Counsel, I have that in mind.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, Mr. Bridges was one of the leaders in bringing the longshore union into the fold of the CIO, was he not?

A. Yes, he was one of the top advocates for such a move.

Q. Yes. And didn't you, now having seen your letter in the publication already described, write as follows:

"San Francisco, July 29, 1937,
"Mr. G. Whitney, Local 3812,
"Seattle, Washington.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"The intent and purpose in forwarding you this letter is merely in the interest of the rank and file of this local. We realize that the vote to go CIO, so far as the ILA is concerned, was carried by a very large majority. But it is quite evident from the comment following this referendum that there was much confusion in the casting of the vote on this proposition by the rank and file. Many rumors [1663] have reached San Francisco to the effect that many of the locals who have voted overwhelmingly for the CIO would now reverse their previous decision if they had the opportunity for another vote on this question. At least that is the sentiment of the men in this local who voted to go CIO. It is very necessary to preserve the unity of this Coast, and we believe that some understanding and a true expression from the various ports should be made public. We should like for you to give us an unbiased opinion on whether or not your local membership have to any extent changed their minds on CIO affiliation. In your opinion, would your membership go along with this program without any danger of a split? What percentage of your membership voted to stay in the ILA? And do you think that the vote would be materially changed if the local had another opportunity to vote on this question? Nearly 800 members of this local voted to remain in the ILA. This number has increased somewhat since the membership learned that the SUP and the MFOW have destroyed their ballots on CIO affiliation. Has your port the pledged cooperation of the other maritime groups after you have received your CIO charter? Many disconcerting rumors have reached us in the past few days in regard to the views of your membership, and we, as rank and file members, would appreciate any information you may give us which would enable us to inform our membership of [1664] the sentiment of the rank and file in your port. Trusting that you will favor us with an immediate reply by airmail, and special delivery, so that this information will be available for our membership meeting Monday night, we are,

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

"Yours fraternally, James F. Kennedy, Ralph Malin, Henry Schrimpf."

Is that right?

A. That is the letter, as far as I can recollect.

Q. Now, of the three men whose names are subscribed to this letter, Mr. Kennedy is no longer in the labor movement, is that true?

A. That I don't know.

Q. But Ralph Malin and yourself, the other two signers of this letter against the CIO affiliation, are now walking bosses?

A. Malin and myself both belong to the walking bosses' union.

Q. Yes. You are both walking bosses, is that not a fact? A. That's right. [1665]

Q. Now, as to whether or not the paper which I have in my hand, which is called Defendants'

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Exhibit L, was a paper against Harry Bridges, I am going to ask that the document be shown to the witness again. I will ask him if he reads the headline, if he will read the headlines upon the first and last pages. You have read those two headlines?

A. That is right.

Q. Those are both anti-Bridges headlines, aren't they?

A. I would call them factual headlines.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Exactly, because you hate Bridges.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Will the witness refrain from answering when counsel on either side objects? Just remember that, please. Now he comes up apparently, your Honor, with a signed letter——

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think there is anything before the Court.

The Court: There is nothing before the Court. You are correct.

Mr. Paisley: We move to strike this paper that he has got in evidence, your Honor, on the ground he hasn't connected it up with the defendants in any way yet.

The Court: There is nothing before me at this time, Mr. [1666] Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: The motion is addressed to the paper, your Honor. He promised he would in some way, after he read it to the jury, tie it in to Mr.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Bridges or to some one of the defendants. He has not done it.

Mr. MacInnis: I am about to do it. I can't do it in one question.

Mr. Paisley: He has handed us another paper.

Mr. MacInnis: Surely I am allowed to hand counsel another paper, your Honor. Purely to show the source of this, your Honor, I am going to ask that the second document be shown to the witness. I will ask this question:

Q. That is the original of the same letter that was printed in the paper, is it not?

A. Well, to save a lot of time, I will take it for granted it is. Just viewing it, I believe it is.

The Court: I assume it is the same letter also.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, your Honor, the prosecutor has invited me to show any connection between the letter read out of this newspaper and the defendant Harry Bridges, and I think I can do so very speedily.

Q. Mr. [illegible]hrimpf, the column in which the letter just shown you was printed begins with the statement, "Bridges blasts rank and file for seeking information"; is that right?

A. That is correct. [1667]

Q. And it begins with this heading: "The following letter is being printed for the information of the membership. This letter was written to individuals in several of the Pacific Coast ports requesting information. Bridges attacked the writers for trying to spread false information. Read the letter and judge for yourself whether or not it is misleading or in any way tends toward anything but an effort to bring to this membership some authentic information on what is really happening in other ports."

The Court: One moment, please.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that just illustrates the position we take. He can ask this witness as harshly as he wishes as to disputes he may have had with Bridges or that Bridges may have had with him, but I do not think he can get down into the minute details and offer all these publications that might have been published back there at that time. Otherwise we won't know what we are trying here, but we will be getting a lot of irrelevant, confusing evidence before the jury.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, I do not know what would be better as a basis, at least for one step, to show the hostility borne by this witness against Bridges, than reading the line, "Bridges attacked the writers."

The Court: There is no showing before the Court that the witness on the stand had any control over the editorial policy [1668] not that he demonstrated, by expression or inference, that he had anything to do with the prefatory notes thereof with respect to the subject matter of the letter. He admits the writing of the letter, and I shall entertain a motion to strike, and accordingly strike the same from the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, we certainly have the right to proceed by more than one question to develop the matter.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: There is no logical or legal relationship with respect to the editorial comment that this man had any control of.

Mr. MacInnis: We will prove later by other witnesses that he did.

The Court: It may be marked for identification and you may reserve your offer.

Mr. MacInnis: We are certainly not bound by his present denial.

The Court: There is no question about that. It may be marked for identification. The letter is stricken and may accordingly be marked for identification. I suggest that we have the letter marked for identification so it may be referred to hereafter.

> (The letter referred to was marked Defendants' Exhibit M for identification.)

The Court: Is it a convenient time now, Mr. MacInnis, for a recess? [1669]

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever your Honor says.

The Court: If you have another question along this line——

Mr. MacInnis: I can conveniently stop.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the noon recess and resume at two o'clock. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions, not to confer with any person on any subject connected with the trial, and you are not to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [1670]

Afternoon Session—2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

HENRY JOSEPH SCHRIMPF

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, did I understand you correctly this morning to tell us that you were never on any labor relations committee of the union?

A. That is right; not to my recollection.

Q. You have no knowledge of any such committee?

A. Yes, there was a committee known as the Labor Relations Committee, but as for me serving officially on it, I have no recollection.

Q. You were never on it and hence you never resigned from it?

A. I have no recollection.

Q. In the fall of 1934 Ivan Cox, whose name you have already mentioned, was the secretary-treasurer of the union, is that right?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That is correct.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sorry. I will ask the Court to bear [1671] with me. I have lost the marker I had in this document.

The Court: That is all right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I will ask you if this refreshes your memory, that on the 17th of October of 1934 Halling, Schrimpf and Henry Schmidt were appointed to the Labor Relations Committee of the union?

Mr. Paisley: I object to the question as having no relevancy and not within the scope of the direct, and has no tendency to discredit or impeach the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, the circumstances under which this man resigned from that committee would be pertinent if proved, and he now states he has no memory, and I proposed to show by the minutes of the union itself what we suggest took place.

Mr. Paisley: How could the circumstances under which he might have resigned have any bearing upon the case? That would not be proper impeachment.

The Court: The witness has said he has no independent recollection of the composition of the committee nor that he has any independent recollection of being a member of the committee.

Q. Isn't that correct? A. That is right.

Mr. MacInnis: I will come back to that in a moment rather than delay and look for the marker here. [1672]

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt——

A. Schrimpf is the name.

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, you said this morning when asked about whether or not you had bias against Henry Schmidt or Harry Bridges that your only bias was on matters of policy, is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, matters of policy have proved over the years to be the most bitter of conflicts among union men, is that not correct?

A. It has proven so.

Q. Yes. For example, the well known conflict between Harry Bridges and Harry Lundeberg is a bitter conflict, isn't it——

A. That is correct.

Q. ——on matters of policy?

Mr. Paisley: That calls for a conclusion, your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And men in the unions have been murdered because of differences in policy?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The point is this: This man suggests, your Honor, that he has no personal bias against the defendants Bridges and Henry Schmidt, and he says that all his [1673] differences with those men over the years have been matters of policy. It has already been intruded into the record of this case that things have happened over policy conflicts. We had, not the first, but the second witness for the prosecution, Mr. Schomaker, who related about a beating he received on an intramural dispute between unions.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: That was the alleged beating by the goon squad.

Mr. MacInnis: Exactly.

The Court: Adverted to more recently by Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, correct. [1674]

The Court: Counsel, in a generic sense that may be altogether true. You might take that as an academic situation. But specifically, as I take it, we are dealing with the alleged bias or animus or the like on the part of this witness toward the defendant Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Robertson. Now, I do not see at this moment how you may descend from the generic quantity down to the more specific; but you are entitled to show, if you can show, the matter, and that is again a matter that I shall not preclude myself on. I will give you full scope to show that this man, if he has any animus or bias or prejudice towards any of these defendants.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Now, I can't anticipate the trend of your examination, and obviously I shall await that moment. But we may take it, I suppose, as somewhat axiomatic that matters of policy do engender some degree of——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: That is exactly the purport of these question, your Honor, to show that.

The Court: But the quantity we are dealing with now is this man's individual bias or prejudice or grievance or malice, if he bears any, toward the defendant.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor. I have now found the matter that I had misplaced. I looked into the wrong transcript, your Honor.

The Court: All right. [1675]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you if this refreshes your memory, Mr. Schrimpf, that on the 15th day of October in the year 1934 you were nominated and elected to the labor relations committee of the ILA.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I object to that as immaterial, irrelevant, having no bearing upon the issues in this case.

The Court: It is a preliminary question, I assume, that has to do with the relationship to this committee. Overruled.

A. What sort of relations? You say election?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Reading from the minutes of the meeting of the ILA, Local 3879, of October 15, 1934:

> "Nominations for ILA labor relations committee. Henry Schmidt elected. Henry Schrimpf elected. Charles Connors elected. George Wolfe, elected. Fred Knopf elected."

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Does that refresh your memory?

A. In answer to that question, it refreshes my memory to this extent: We had not established at that time a regular labor relations committee. We did have a committee to take up some kinds of beefs and straightening out of some of the—well, some of the functions, the working functions on the beach at that time, and it wasn't considered the regular labor relations committee, as we know it. We have a regular labor relations committee now, where men are elected by the membership, and it was on such a committee—I thought you had reference to when you questioned me. [1676]

Q. And it is your position that this was not a committee elected by the membership?

A. I don't believe it was a ballot election. I believe it was just a temporary arrangement, as I say, to take up this emergency, right after the strike.

Q. You don't think that there were any votes, actually? A. What's that?

Q. You don't think there were any votes, actually?

A. I can't recall any votes being counted, no.

Q. Well, now let me ask you——

A. That is on a ballot?

Q. Yes.

Let me ask you if this doesn't refresh your memory reading from the minutes of the same organization:

"Motion that the members of the labor rela> tions committee be elected by ballot, ballots to be printed by tomorrow noon."

Does that refresh your memory as to whether or not this was an election by ballot and by votes rather than just a temporary measure?

A. I still do not recall having a ballot election on this temporary committee.

Q. And as to the number of votes, Frank Davis, who ran, received only 26 votes and was not elected. Ralph Malin received only 132 and was not elected. George Wolfe received 193 and was elected. You received a unanimous vote. Do you remember [1677] that? A. A unanimous vote?

Q. Yes. A. Of all votes cast?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't conceive of anyone ever receiving a unanimous vote of all votes ever cast by ballot.

Q. It is your suggestion that the minutes of the organization are in error and your memory is correct? A. Oh, no.

Mr. Paisley: Well, that presupposes he is reading from some genuine minutes, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Indeed it does, and I am reading from the genuine minutes.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I answer that question? I haven't answered it yet.

Mr. MacInnis: I beg your pardon. You are skeptical of these minutes?

The Witness: I haven't answered that question yet.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: You may answer.

A. (Continuing): According to the reading there, it was a ballot vote. When they say, "A unanimous vote," that is from the floor. And that is what I tried to have reference on there. Evidently it was a hands up vote on the floor to elect a temporary committee and that is what I would like to have [1678] straightened out here. I never heard of anyone being elected unanimously in this or any other election on a ballot vote.

Mr. MacInnis: All right. Since you were not elected then, you never did resign from that committee?

A. I never said anything about not being elected, according to the votes there, and it wasn't a regular labor relations committee.

Q. Oh, you do have some memory now of the matter, do you?

A. I have served on committees, yes; many committees.

Q. I see. And let me ask you if this refreshes your memory. Reading from the minutes of the general membership meeting, Tuesday evening, November 13, 1934, held at the Building Trades Temple.

Mr. Paisley: Well, now, your Honor, how could minutes, probably prepared by somebody else refresh the recollection of a witness? We usually think of a witness being confronted with some document he prepared himself when you say to refresh his recollection. The minutes are not in evidence. We object to his reading from them.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, a man's recollection may be refreshed from any source that can be called to his attention, if it is an official document prepared by persons present.

The Court: The purpose of the attempted refreshing of the witness' recollection is to determine whether or not he was ever a member of a particular committee, and secondly, whether [1679] he ever resigned; is that correct? Is that the question?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: All right; you may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you if this, then, refreshes your memory, reading again:

> "The resignation of Brother Henry Schrimpf from the labor relations committee which had been held from last meeting, approved."

A. What date?

The Court: May I ask you to show the context of that particular reference to the witness? That may tend to refresh his recollection. Because if his recollection is refreshed in that form or any other form, it is perfectly all right.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I will ask the witness to give his attention to the third paragraph on the page, which will be displayed, and that paragraph consists of two lines only.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

A. Is that the third paragraph?

Q. Yes. Now, having seen the entry in the minutes, does that refresh your memory that you resigned from the labor relations committee?

A. I don't know yet whether there is anything presented where I ever served on the committee. The date on that is under November the 13th. It has been held over one meeting. What date was this so-called election or appointment made of this committee you have reference to? [1680]

Q. I told you that already, October 15.

A. I have forgotten. What time?

Q. October 15.

A. October 15. This is under the heading of "Minutes of November 13," It is held over for one week, and I don't know for sure whether we were holding a meeting every week or not at that time. If we were, it would still leave practically no time to serve on any committee, and the question—the pertinent first question asked, Did I serve on the labor relations committee and if I resigned, I would like to see in answer to this question some definite evidence where I actually served on that committee, which I said I did not.

Q. You mean that election to the committee? I have already read you minutes of the meeting of October 15, showing that you were nominated and elected to that committee. Now is it your position that regardless of what was done you never did serve on that committee?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: I object to counsel characterizing the testimony, your Honor, testifying as to what the witness said and his conclusion as to what it means.

The Court: Overruled.

A. In answer to that question, the time elapsed is from October 15 to November 13, 28 or 29 days. According to the minutes, it was held over from one meeting, which would mean two weeks. That would cut it down to 14 days. As I said [1681] before, this is not a regular election, and there has no proof been given here yet. It was an election from the floor. I was supposed to be elected unanimously; and I have yet to hear any proof where I functioned on any such committee, and all I have heard, I resigned from the committee. If I was elected just by an Aye and Nay vote on the floor, or a count of hands, the question is, Was I elected and served on the committee? I said I don't recall any such committee, and at that time we never had no regular setup for a labor relations committee. It was a temporary arrangement for a committee to function and try to straighten out things on a back-to-work movement, and I would ask—I should be asked some questions as to when I functioned, if ever, on that committee, and I think that would be a more fairer question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In other words, having read the report of your election out of the minutes, and having been shown the minutes stating that your resignation was accepted, it is your position that you never functioned or did anything on that committee? A. I don't recall.

Q. Let me ask you if this refreshes your memory, reading from the minutes of October 17, 1934: The caption: "A report of Labor Relations Committee. Brother Henry Schmidt supported the report of Brother Knopf. It was stated that the 15-hour [1682] and 48-hour schedule would remain in effect until a definite change had been made, except, however, for the decision that all time in excess of six hours would be paid for at the overtime rate between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Brother Schrimpf verified all previous reports." Does that refresh your memory?

A. Was that a union meeting, of a committee from a union, or was that a regular labor relations committee?

Q. It says here that it is the minutes of all of the meetings of the union from which I am reading.

A. In answer to the question, I would like to have this made clear in answer to the question: A labor relations committee functions with both sides present, and they function with the employer and the union. As yet there has been absolutely no documentary proof or evidence or any account given here of where we sat in at any meeting. I recall this very well.

Q. Now you recall it?

A. It was a committee set up to establish certain relations and conditions on this back-to-work movement within the union itself, and it was not a regular labor relations committee meeeting with the employers.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. In other words, although the committee had been named a labor relations committee, it is your position for the purpose of your testimony that it was not really a labor relations committee [1683] at all? A. No, not the way we know them.

Q. Although it had that name, though you were on it, served on it and resigned, it is now something else because you choose to say so?

Mr. Paisley: That is argumentative, your Honor.

The Court: Pardon me. One thought, if I may intrude myself at this juncture. There may be some distinction between the bargaining committee as such and the committee referred to in the minutes.

Q. Do you make any such distinction between the bargain group where the employers are present and the employer-employee relation exists, and the type of meeting referred to in those minutes?

A. Very definitely. As I tried to point out, a labor relations committee is exactly what the word implies. It is a labor relations committee, and the employers' committee sit down and try to thresh out things. This was strictly a union committee to function or to determine this back-to-work movement under which we were functioning, and the labor relations committee—anyone in the union, anyone sitting here today knows what it stands for.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

It still functions in this organization. They meet, I believe, every week and at any other time in an emergency, on call, and there is a representation of both sides there, and as yet there has been nothing presented here where any such meeting took place, only sitting [1684] down to thresh out certain union conditions and rules we would operate under, such as the 12-hour day with a 3-hour leeway, the 3-hour spread, loads, and so forth and so on. That was strictly inter-union.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we make exactly the same distinction that you did on this matter; in fact, the other questions that I put to this man this morning at the start of the colloquy concerned this question: Didn't he resign because he refused to sit at the same table with the representative of the employers, Mr. Peterson? We have exactly that concept of the labor relations committee. That was the kind of committee it was.

Q. Now, without going into the matters which provoked some discussion about policy, policy disputes within the union and among union men have been productive of the most bitter of conflicts, isn't that right?

A. They have provoked and created quite a conflict, I would say.

Q. People have been murdered because of those intramural disputes, haven't they?

A. That is a very advanced admission to make. I wouldn't say yes to that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Wasn't Philip Carey murdered in New Orleans?

Mr. Paisley: "Murder" has a connotation——

The Court: I will sustain the objection. [1685]

Mr. MacInnis: I have in mind what your Honor pointed out, that these policy disputes may indeed be bitter, and that was only illustrative of that point.

The Court: Counsel, the objection is sustained and the jury is instructed to disregard any reference made to any such situation that may be implicit in the question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): With reference to a certain newspaper which was shown you this morning containing a letter written by yourself when you were asked to comment upon the headline materials which were read to you, and which discussed the name of Harry Bridges, you said that those headline statements were only factual statements, is that right?

A. To my way of thinking they were.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, the foundation is thus laid for the connection between the material and the defendant Harry Bridges.

Q. Let me ask you this further question: You stated that the headlines in the paper which you saw were factual statements, perfectly proper statements, regardless of what persons they might hurt?

A. I said to my opinion they were, for this reason, that it was true, there was an attack made on the rank and file members, and I do, and I did at that time, consider myself a good rank and file member. We sent out an open letter up and down this coast. We were called up at the meeting. We were [1686] vilified, attacked, and called every name that you may—well, you may find mentionable, and that has also been the tactics which have been in operation to destroy any opposition, and, as the headlines will tell you, that Bridges attacks rank-and-filers, and, as I said before, it is my opinion it is right.

Q. In other words, that was your belief at the time the publication came out and that is your belief now? A. It is my belief, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: We now renew the offer of the document into evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: I do not know for what purpose it is offered, your Honor. It certainly has no bearing on the issues of this case. He is not assumed to be the author of the paper or in any way connected with it.

Mr. MacInnis: He embraces the statements now, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: I just can't see any relevancy to that paper. That is a paper, so far as I know, published by somebody else, not the witness. How can he be responsible for any of the articles in it?

The Court: Counsel claims by his approbation and approval of the headlines, that may give some plausibility to the offer.

Mr. Paisley: I just can't see it. I don't understand how it does.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: I cannot see, counsel, how your offer might [1687] be fortified to the extent that the witness may give more credence to the factual—as he puts it—factual headline to the extent that the newspaper context be offered in evidence against this individual as to his credibility and the like. I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, to come to another matter that might involve policy within your union, let me ask you this: You have had a bias against Harry Bridges and Henry Schmidt since around October, 1936, although you had other matters with them at other times, but particularly because they took the part of a man named O'Grady, whom you beat up, and upon whose matter a hearing was had before the union?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that is what I would call a loaded question. It contains several implications, half of it at least his testimony rather than a question. It is objectionable from so many standpoints that I think I need not say any more.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In the month of October, 1936, you committed an assault upon E. B. O'Grady of the Masters, Mates and Pilots of America?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that.

Mr. MacInnis: That is a preliminary question.

Mr. Paisley: He can't ask the witness——

The Court: What was the objection, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: It is improper to try to discredit a witness by asking him if he made assaults on somebody. Now, if it please your Honor, if it were the defendant I would have no objection, but you can't ask a witness if he has not made assaults on some third party in the past.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The question is not asked to show merely that this man attacked another man, because that would not be binding upon anything in this case. The point is this: The point is to show that Henry Schmidt was at that time president of the Union, that Henry Schmidt at a hearing concerning the charges of assault and battery brought against this man Henry Schrimpf, that the findings were made favorable to Mr. E. B. O'Grady, an elderly man, who was beaten up by this man.

The Court: Now you have the whole matter before the Court and the jury. I will sustain the objection on the ground that it is purely collateral, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and I instruct the jury to disregard the same.

Mr. MacInnis: Turning to another matter which might reflect upon your attitude toward Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt, Katherine Schrimpf was your wife, is that correct? A: That is correct.

Q. In the year 1937 Katherine Schrimpf was expelled from the [1689] ladies' auxiliary of the union because she tried to form a new auxiliary with your aid and assistance against the interests of Harry Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: I object to the question.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard, or may I ask your Honor the definite reason so that I can be guided?

The Court: To what extent would this witness be bound as to his testimony or as to his credibility, or how would the activity of his wife tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we have correspondence on the matter that this man adopted the quarrel of his wife against Harry Bridges and Henry Schmidt.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, you had other grounds for hatred of these men arising out of elections inside the union itself, did you not?

Mr. Paisley: I object to the question, your Honor.

The Court: The question does contain within its asking assumed evidence, and to that extent it is objectionable. You might rephrase your question, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In 1935 you ran for the office of vice president of the union, did you not?

A. One yea I did. I can't recall what year.

Q. Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt backed a man named Marlow, who defeated you for the office, is that correct?

A. That is correct. In line with the same question—this is also in answering the question—they not only backed this man, but I was called into the office, Bridges' office, as president, and he said, "Are you going to run as vice president, Henry?"

And I said, "Yes."

And as near as I can remember, there was this answer,

> "Well, after all, we both came from the same country."
> I said, "What is the difference?"
>
> He said, "You know darn well you won't take orders," And that is the definite truth.
>
> And I said, "You bet I don't take orders from you or anybody else. I take it from the rank and file."

Q. You have no bias against Mr. Bridges, of course? A. Against policy.

Q. Let me go a little further on these matters of policy and the elections. In 1937 you chose to run for the office of president of the union, and the successful candidate who defeated you that year was Henry Schmidt. Mr. Bridges backed Mr. Schmidt, isn't that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. In 1938 you again ran unsuccessfully for the office of presidency of the union against Mr. Germain Bulcke, who [1691] you, and Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt backed Mr. Bulcke, is that correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Yes. I believe it was 1938, the last I ran for office.

Q. That is a true statement, is it not?

A. I believe it was 1938, yes.

Q. And at a time further back, in 1935, in which you ran against a man named Bill Marlow for the vice presidency, Marlow got 1,827 votes and you got 305 votes, Marlow being backed by Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt? A. That is right.

Q. And in 1936 you were nominated for the board of trustees of the union by Mr. Harry Lundeberg; correct?

A. I don't know who did nominate me. I was nominated.

Q. Do you deny that it was Mr. Harry Lundeberg who nominated you?

A. I say I don't know who nominated me.

Q. I will refresh your recollection later by the minutes themselves. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, in relation to some of the statements which you offered the Court and jury on Friday last about the domination by the Communist Party of everything containing the policy and strategy in the strike, I have done a little research and I want to ask you some questions about those things.

Mr. Paisley: Now, your Honor, I think all that may be stricken. Let us get down to the question. He tries to make [1692] a speech every time he asks a question.

The Court: Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): For example, one of

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

the incidents that you offered the trial jury in this case as illustrative of a so-called Communist meeting was a meeting in which you said there was an attempt made to discipline a woman named Norma Perry, is that right?

A. That is all in the record.

A. Who was the accuser of Norma Perry at that meeting?

A. As I said before, there was a lot of rumors and accusations made against Norma Perry as to the company she was keeping.

Q. Can you tell us who accused her?

A. Well, it was—I believe I accused her, John Schomaker accused her, and Harry Bridges accused her.

Q. You were the accuser of Norma Perry, weren't you? In fact, during that meeting——

The Court: Counsel, in fairness to the witness, may I suggest that he said he, Mr. Bridges and in association with Mr. Schomaker?

The Witness: That's correct.

The Court: Is that correct, sir?

A. That is correct, as far as my recollection goes.

Mr. MacInnis: I understood him to say that, your Honor.

Q. In the course of that meeting it was you who said to Norma Perry, "Norma, you are a little stool pigeon"; correct?

A. I don't recall making such a remark.

Q. You have no recollection at all?

A. Not of making that remark, no.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Do you affirm or do you deny that you made that statement?

A. I said I have no recollection of making that statement.

Q. And the reason that you had become the accuser of Norma Perry was that she had rejected you as a suitor, isn't that right?

A. That is absolutely a lie.

Q. Now, when the strike committee was formed, Mr. Schrimpf, the chairman of the publicity committee was Ralph Malin, is that true?

A. He could have been. Ralph Malin and Henry Schmidt served on that committee. That is a matter of record. I can't say for sure who was the chairman.

Q. The members of the committee were Ralph Malin, who, by the [1694] way, is now secretary of your local? A. That's right.

Q. The walking bosses' local, 91, is that true?

A. That's right.

Q. The chairman of the committee was Ralph Malin, and the other members were yourself and Henry Schmidt, is that right?

A. That is absolutely incorrect. I did not serve on the publicity committee.

Q. You didn't serve on that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. So that if some minutes were produced to confront you on that point, again the minutes would be in error and your memory would be correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. The Committee I served on during the strike was the picketing committee.

Q. Picketing committee only?

A. The picketing committee. I may have been appointed an alternate to many committees; I don't know. But that don't say that I ever served on any of those committees: I served on the picketing committee.

Q. Now, Norma Perry was the stenographer for the publicity committee, was she not?

A. She was a general secretary.

Q. Yes. And during the strike Harry Bridges fired her from her job but Ralph Malin rehired her for the publicity committee, [1695] is that true?

A. Well, that is the first I heard it that way. She was devoted mostly to Henry Schmidt; it was Henry Schmidt with whom she moved away from the union and moved to a room uptown, after getting permission from the strike committee to do the same. So I can not see where the connection comes in with Malin and Norma Perry.

Q. I see. You have some feeling against Henry Schmidt because of that circumstance, do you?

A. No, I am trying to correct a wrong statement.

Q. You told us on Friday that one of the duties of Norma Perry in the Communist Party was to obtain a list of the union members and to pass that list on to the Communist Party, did you not?

A. I never put it that way at all, that one of the duties of Norma Perry was to obtain anything. It is in the record, and I said that after Norma Perry had worked her way into the good graces of our union and we built her up before the strike committee, that we were to get her a job in the union with a certain specific reason and that specific reason was, and you can quote me again—I can't give it verbatim, maybe, the way it is in the record—she was to compile a complete record for the Communist Party of all its members, their addresses, their affiliation and their names, and it was to this end that we had in mind when we tried to boost Norma Perry up during the strike, [1696] and it was not at that time an assignment for her to get anything, not until after she had this job as secretary in the union and was a paid employee of the union.

Q. And one of the affiliations and pieces of information that she would have passed on with those names would be the book number of the union member, is that true?

A. I don't know if that was necessary or included. I can't answer that for sure; I don't know.

Q. Yes. As a matter of fact, Mr. Schrimpf, you know that after the month of October of 1934, after the strike was settled, it was required that all longshoremen be registered and that a printed list of every registered longshoreman with his book number was published, printed, hung up on the hiring halls, hung up in the Ferry Building, and available to the employers and to every member of the company. You know that, don't you?

A. Well, no harm in that if it was so—just a book number and a name. There was absolutely no addresses, though, or affiliations.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. You know that to be true, is that right?

A. No, I don't know it to be true. I said it could have been. I don't know. It is really unimportant.

Q. Do you remember a man named John Schomaker? A. I know a John Schomaker.

Q. When did he come to the waterfront, if you know?

A. I have recollection of first seeing John Schomaker on the [1697] 'front, I believe it was late in '33. But he did not get any work. His presence stands out kind of in a spectacular way with me. He was tall, he was quiet, he never used to say a word. Nobody knew him. But he always made sure he had the big end of a hook sticking out of his pocket. I guess that was to tell them symbolically, "I want to be a longshoreman." And I don't remember him doing any work in '33, because in those days you had to be more or less known on the beach.

Q. It is your recollection, then, that he came late in 1933 to the waterfront?

A. It was sometime in '33, and I believe it was toward the latter end of '33. That is my first recollection of seeing John Schomaker.

Q. Do you remember a paper called The Waterfront Worker?

A. Yes, that was a kind of a paper put out to inform the rank and file of happenings.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. The union took over that paper in the fall of 1933 around September, didn't it?

A. I don't know when they took it over.

Q. Would that be fairly correct, the fall of 1933?

A. Are you asking me a question?

Q. Yes.

A. That is really correct? Why ask me? Why, you have answered the question by asking it.

Q. Yes. Well, then, you adopt that [1698] answer?

A. I am not adopting anything. You are answering the question.

Q. Well, I am trying to find out your answer. Is it correct that the Waterfront Worker became an organ of the longshoremen's union around September of 1933? A. I do not know when.

Q. Well, was it around the summer of 1933 and the early fall of the same year that the union was revitalized?

A. Will you qualify that and elaborate on this——

Q. Yes, I will give you a little time to——

A. No, I say, would you——

Q. I will ask you this question: There was a strike on the Matson docks in the fall of 1933 that played a great part in the struggle that was thereafter to come, is that right?

A. There was some action taken on the Matson dock, and if you want to call it a strike on an individual dock, I recall the instance. To the best of my memory, the men took their company union books, made a big fire and threw them on the fire.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. That was after the strike was over, wasn't it?

A. Why, no, this was before the strike.

Q. Why, the Government appointed George Creel of the NRA, a famous California citizen, as the arbitrator of that strike, didn't it?

A. I believe his name was connected with it.

Q. Yes. What happened was that four men were fired from the [1699] Matson dock, is that correct?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, can counsel frame a single question that is not testimony?

The Court: Sustained, yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf: It is true, isn't it, that four men were fired from the Matson dock because they were active in the union and not following the company union policy?

A. Well, you have the answer; you said it is true.

Q. I am asking you, Mr. Schrimpf.

A. I can't recall the number of men that was fired. To give a brief resume, to the best of my thinking, what actually happened, that all I know about that incident,——

Q. These were periods when you say you were active on the waterfront?

A. I was active. But I can't keep a mental picture over a period of 16 or 17 years, to something which is not that important.

Q. Does it chance these are matters you didn't talk over before coming here?

A. Will you qualify that question?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Will you repeat the question, please, to the witness?

(Record read.)

A. No, I didn't talk over those questions before coming here. [1700]

Q. Exactly. And that is why you don't know the answers to these particular questions. Let me ask you this:——

The Court: One moment.

Mr. Paisley: I move to strike that, your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Is this true,——

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, may I suggest to you again not to argue the matter in the form of questions? Counsel has interposed countless objections, I have sustained many. Now, I say this in deference to you, not to repeat it again.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not attempting to argue with the Court.

The Court: No, no, not with the Court; you are arguing the questions to the witness. If you take the last question, I think you understand me and you know what I mean.

Mr. MacInnis: I understand what you mean.

The Court: Well, then, let's understand each other.

Mr. MacInnis: The last remark that I made——

The Court: May we understand each other now so that these questions will not have to be objected to constantly?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I concede, Your Honor, that the last remark that I made wasn't in order.

The Court: Thank you very much.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I have no doubt that you were perfectly correct in making that observation.

The Court: And I would rather not interrupt you because it breaks the trend of thought, and I think, the cross-examination. [1701] I should rather not interrupt you, if you will not give me cause in the future.

Mr. MacInnis: I will endeavor not to give you cause to do that.

The Court: Thank you.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, let me ask you if this is true, that the Matson strike to which we are now referring lasted five or six days and that then George Creel was appointed by the Government to be the arbitrator?

A. I will repeat what I already said: I can't recall the number of men involved or the duration of the strike. I do not know if that is true, that it lasted five days.

Q. And is this true, that when George Creel reviewed the controversies on the Matson dock he made a finding and established for the first time that no one could be fired for joining the ILA? Is that true?

A. I don't recall such a mandate being handed down. It could have been. But I don't recall it.

Q. And it was after that time, wasn't it, that union buttons could be worn by all workers out in the open?

A. Well, it gave them more encouragement, I will agree with you there.

Q. Yes. And it was after that ruling that George

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Creel gave that there was a bonfire had, as you suggest, in front of the Matson docks in which the company union blue books were burned? [1702]

A. There was such a fire on the docks.

Q. Yes. A. During that beef.

Q. Now, to go on to another subject that you discussed with us, you told us that everything done so far as policy, strategy and tactics in connection with the 1934 strike, was under the discipline and the direction of the Communist Party, is that true?

A. I don't know if I used that phraseology, as you outline it. But as I said, it is a matter of record, I did use terms along these lines, that the policy for the 1934 strike was formulated practically all by the Communist Party.

Q. Yes. We understand each other. Now that is the matter upon which I would like to make some inquiries. Is this true that there were three matters which were very important in strike strategy: one was picketing, and you were a member of the picketing committee, is that true?

A. I was on the picketing committee.

Q. The second matter was relief, food and attention for the persons on strike. That was a matter of very important strategy, was it not?

A. That is always important.

Q. Yes. And publicity was the third. That was also an important matter of strategy?

A. That's right. [1703]

Q. Now, all of the decisions in those three matters were worked out, discussed openly and voted on by the strike committee, according to the records of the strike committee itself, isn't that true?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That's right.

Q. Although it is true that there was some secrecy necessary so that information would not leak back to the employers as to every move that the workers made, is that correct?

A. I don't know if you would call it secrecy about some moves, but on the three issues as we just answered in the affirmative, those issues were just functions to be carried out after a policy had been formulated. They were necessary functionings, just like certain things are necessary to life, certain things were necessary to carrying on the operations of this strike. And it had no bearing whatsoever on the basic policy, as outlined, what was to be done.

Q. Now, is this true, that upon the strike committee and within the strike committee there was a small steering committee which discussed matters privately before presenting them to the membership of the strike committee?

A. Why, yes. This same steering committee naturally had many issues to take up. There was always a number of cars to be allotted the amount of money we could spend for gas, and, why, the system of rationing and, as I said before, the functions, the smaller functions of the strike. But not policy. [1704]

Q. Let me ask you this. On that steering committee was a man from your dock, a man named Dietrich, is that correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I couldn't say for sure. It is quite possible Dutch Dietrich was on that committee.

Q. You remember Mr. Dietrich?

A. I know of a Dutch Dietrich, yes. It is in the record.

Q. You have not accused him of being a Communist Party member, have you?

A. I haven't accused anyone of being a Communist Party member.

Q. Fine. There was a man named Jack MacLalen, spelled M-a-c-L-a-l-e-n, on the same steering committee, is that correct?

A. Yes, there is a Jack MacLalen, still on the beach, I believe.

Q. Yes. And you know that he was not a Communist Party member?

A. I don't know. I never accused him of being a party member.

Q. Yes. And Ralph Malin, the present secretary of your walking bosses' local, was also on the steering committee, was he not?

A. He could have been. I can't recall exactly all who was on the steering committee.

Q. There was Mr. Hiner, spelled H-i-n-e-r?

A. There was a Hiner around during that period. I don't know what capacity he served.

Q. Well, now, did I understand you correctly to have told us on Friday that there was a necessary secrecy involved in the [1705] Communist Party activities behind the scenes of the strike?

A. The question is, to be corrected if I am wrong,——

Q. The Reporter will read the question.

A. If there was necessary secrecy? Is that your question?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the question, please?

(Question read.)

A. I never used that phraseology at all.

Q. Did you say that the Communist Party activities were held in secret?

A. I said our meetings with the Communist Party members, the big moguls were held in secrecy; the reasons, they did not want known their connections with the strike. I believe that is more or less in the record.

Q. Yes. We understand each other perfectly. In other words, the high officers of the Communist Party did not want it known that they were connected with the strike, is that true?

A. That is a matter of record, some such language as that in there.

Q. That is what you have said.

The Court: Counsel, I think that the witness stands on the record and that whatever he may have testified to Friday he adopts as his statement.

Q. Is that correct, sir?

A. I am even repeating the form, Your Honor, to make it clearer. [1706]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I understand that. Your Honor.

Q. Was the man named Sam Darcy a high officer of the Communist Party at that time?

A. It was the accepted opinion that he was a big mogul in the Communist Party. In fact, the name attached to him, the way I remember it, he was head of the District 13 of the Communist Party.

Q. So that he would be one of those high officials who didn't want it known publicly that he had some connection with the strike?

A. I would say that he would be one.

Q. Yes. Then let me ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf: Isn't it true that in the month of May, 1934, according to the official records, that Mr. Sam Darcy appeared in open meeting before the strike committee and offered to the strike committee the services of the Communist newspaper, the Western Worker?

A. That could have been possible. That wasn't an offering, or offer or operating or controlling the policy. If he came down to make a donation, which would be—well, stand good in the public interest, maybe. Here is a Communist unselfishly wanting to give them money, or a publicity space in the paper. But he did not come down and at any time, to any meeting, and said he would also be willing to sit down and formulate policy for the operation of the strike.

Q. In other words, he would be secret about some things but [1707] not about others?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. He was very secret about his connection in the policy and carrying on of the strike.

Q. You do not deny that he appeared openly before the strike committee and made the offer to the strike committee of the usage of the pages of the Western Worker at a time when you yourself expressed that publicity was badly needed?

A. I can't recall. That is possible he may have come down to make a contribution of space in his paper. That is all.

Q. Publicity was a very important part of the policy of the strike, wasn't it?

A. Very important on all issues.

Q. Yes. Well, let me ask you this: Did you ever hear either at the time of the strike or thereafter of an organization called the International Labor Defense?

A. That was one of the branches in operation, to the best of my knowledge, of the Communist Party.

Q. Do you have any familiarity with an address called 121 Haight Street?

A. I knew of it. I visited it on more than one occasion, and it was known as the Communist Party headquarters.

Q. Did you know a woman named Elaine Black?

A. I knew of an Elaine Black. She was in charge of operations of the ILD.

Q. By the ILD, you refer to the same organization which I just [1708] mentioned, the International Labor Defense? A. That's right.

Q. Now, tell me if this is true, that in May of

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

1934 Elaine Black, representing the International Labor Defense of the Communist Party, as you have suggested, appeared openly before the strike committee and offered the services of International Labor Defense to the strike? Is that true?

A. That could be very possibly true, because they were certainly out to woo the trade union movement.

Q. Yes. A. Right.

Q. Yes. And that was not done secretly, was it?

A. Why, no, there was nothing to hold secret about it.

Q. And the International Labor Defense had to do with relief for strikers, defense of people who would be arrested, the bringing of food to those who were out on strike and the giving of medical attention to those who were injured, is that correct?

A. I don't know. It could be. I don't—I know I never received any such service from them.

Q. Well, now, I will tell you why you didn't in a moment. Mr. Schrimpf, let me ask you this: When Elaine Black, representing the International Labor Defense, Communist organization, appeared openly, as I have suggested, and offered those services, the strike committee appointed a committee itself to [1709] look into the matter of whether or not that offer should be accepted, is that true?

A. The way I recall it, there was some opposition among the strike committee, the so-called conservatives, that we should be cautious in accepting any kind of aid from any group such as the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Yes. In other words, the conservatives in the strike committee recommended caution in looking into that offer of aid? A. That's right.

Q. And do you remember who the members of that committee were, the committee set up by the strike committee to investigate whether or not the offer of aid should be accepted?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Well, let me ask you if this refreshes your memory, that the members of that committee were Dutch Dietrich, Fred Hiner, Mike Michaelson and Harry Bridges. Correct? A. I don't know.

Q. Now, you said that the conservatives upon the strike committee raised some opposition to the acceptance of aid from the International Labor Defense, is that correct?

A. They raised some opposition to the—in other words, they expressed themselves to be cautious before they would accept any aid from anyone who was, we will say, Communistic.

Q. Yes. And the four members of the committee, whose names I have mentioned, Mr. Dietrich, Mr. Hiner, Mr. Michaelson and Mr. [1710] Bridges went openly to No. 121 Haight Street, the headquarters of the Communist Party and of the International Labor Defense, talked over the matter of aid, and they all recommended not to accept that aid, isn't that correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, I don't recall it. It could be. I don't know a thing about that. [1710-A]

Q. You deny that that was the case do you? Did you ever hear anything about that incident? You said you knew about ILD, International Labor Defense?

A. The questions asked are being pretty tricky.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May I have a ruling from your Honor upon the characterization which the witness applies to the cross-examination? I suggest that the material be stricken and the jury instructed to disregard it.

Mr. Paisley: Now, your Honor, he is testifying, which he has done constantly since court opened this morning, and asks the witness, "Isn't that so? Didn't Mr. Bridges and these others go openly up to the Communist meeting?"

The witness says, "I don't know."

Counsel has got all that before the jury as though he were a sworn witness here and accompanied Mr. Bridges up to the Communist. We move that his question be stricken and the answer if one was given, be stricken.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he said it might well be so, but he wasn't sure, and he said that he knew such a committee did make an offer. Now, the motion I made to your Honor was in respect to the remark of the witness.

The Court: We will take the afternoon recess. I will leave the record in its present state because it would take the Court at least some few moments to review the record as to the question and [1711] answer.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say something?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The matter to which the question was addressed does not require the reading of the contents of the record.

The Court: It might in the light of the witness' characterization with respect to the questions theretofore propounded. I do remember that he testified categorically that he had no knowledge of the subject matter, and then there was a series of repetitious questions designed to go over the same ground. Apparently that is what he had in mind by "tricky questions." Of course, I do not know what this witness has in mind. I think we had better let the matter rest. We will take the recess now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, and the same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to confer with any person on any subject of the trial, not to form or express any opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.)

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, when we were speaking earlier this afternoon about the letter that you wrote in opposition to the CIO, I think you told us that you and those who shared your point of view had been vilified; is that [1712] correct? A. That is right.

Q. Who vilified you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. There was a meeting called of our regular membership meeting, and I don't know the words that were used, but we were called everything but union men in trying to bust up the union, along those lines. The chief address was delivered by Bridges.

Q. In other words, Bridges vilified you at the time that you sent your so-called open letter to the various locals up and down the coast, is that correct?

A. He vilified me along with the rest of those involved.

Q. So that after July 29, 1937, which is the date of your letter, and around August 11, which is the date of the paper in which it was printed, sometime around there, Bridges vilified you for the point of view which you had expressed is that right?

Mr. Paisley: That is just repetition your Honor. I presume he has in mind emphasis. We have had enough of it I think.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he has said he has no personal quarrel. Now he says one of the defendants has vilified him, and I think we have a right to go into the bias that might arise from that.

Mr. Paisley: He just asked him the same question over again. That is all. [1713]

The Court: You may proceed.

(Question read.)

A. That is right. He offered vilification, condemnation for this action.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What did he say?

A. I can't recall what he said.

Q. Can you tell us substantially?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, not attempt to.

Q. Did he call you any names?

A. I can't recall.

Q. You say that he vilified you, that he said that you and the others who were with you were anything but trade union men. Now, didn't he call you any names at that time?

A. I can't recall.

Q. Did you make any answer?

A. I had the floor in defense of myself.

Q. What did you say?

A. I can't recall what I actually said. I defended my right as a member of the union, and as the letter speaks for itself. There was no attack made on anyone at all. I was merely asking an opinion, and the reaction on this change of policy. The letter speaks for itself. And it was along those lines I supported myself for sending this letter out.

Q. And although you say Bridges vilified you, you had no personal feeling against him after [1714] that?

A. Only on policy. When he vilifies, that is also a part of the policy which is used. That is also policy.

Q. So it did not disturb you very much. Let me ask you this: You told us that you did not authorize the use of your name or the letter that you subscribed in the paper that you have examined; is that correct?

A. I did not make such a statement that I didn't authorize my name for that letter, and I think the record speaks for itself. I admit being a party to the letter, but on the editorial policy of this paper I had absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with same.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Didn't you tell us that you did not tell anybody to publish this letter and did not give your permission to anyone to publish the letter?

A. I don't recall that statement.

Q. What is your present memory? Did you know that the letter was being published?

A. Maybe I did and maybe I didn't. I can't recall.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest, your Honor, that when confronted before, he answered definitely to the contrary when he was shown the same.

Mr. Paisley: Maybe he did. I don't remember. It is for the jury to remember one way or the other.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, did you make any protest against the use of your name in the letter that you had signed [1715] in this paper called the San Francisco Longshoreman?

A. Did I make any protest to whom?

Q. To anybody.

A. Concerning the letter appearing in the paper?

Q. Yes. A. I can't recall.

Q. Did you hear that it had been published in this paper? A. I read it.

Q. You read it in the paper?

A. That is right.

Q. At the time the paper came out?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I don't know when the writing came out, how long after.

Q. At that time, Mr. Schrimpf, when this paper came out, did you tell anybody that your belief was other than expressed in the headlines of the paper?

A. Are you dealing with the headlines regarding that "Bridges attacks," or whatever the headline—I can't recall now—"the rank and file policy"; is that what you have reference to?

Q. Yes. A. I can't recall saying that.

Q. Did you ever inquire who put the paper out?

A. I don't recall if it was put out locally, here or along the coast.

Q. When you read the paper after it came out, did you tell people that the paper expressed your point of view? [1716]

Mr. Paisley: I do not think that has anything to do with it, your Honor. It does not tend to impeach the witness.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you have any conversation about the fact that a letter signed by you appeared on August 11, 1937, in the paper called the San Francisco Longshoreman?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You tell us that in 1935, when you ran for the vice presidency of the union against a man named Bill Marlow, that you had a conversation with Bridges; is that correct?

A. He called me into his office.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. In 1937, when you ran against Henry Schmidt for the presidency, did you have any conversation with either Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt relative to the fact that you were running?

A. I don't believe I had any particular conversation before the election, but on that election the results were not brought out to this membership. The difference was less than 100 votes between us two, not considering a brief time before that, when the heat was on me plenty by a certain policy on the beach, that I only had a few votes. That point wasn't brought out by the defense either, meaning only one thing, that all these attacks by the party policy, built up, had come back to me without any kind of program at all. The election was so [1717] close that it was only around 90 or 92 votes difference. That point wasn't brought out by the defense either.

Q. The question, Mr. Schrimpf, was: Did you talk this over with Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt?

A. I can't recall.

Q. You had no conversation with them?

A. I can't recall.

Q. How about in 1938 when you ran against Germain Bulcke for the presidency of the union and were defeated by him? Did you have any talk then with Mr. Bridges or with Mr. Schmidt?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. Now, you told us, I think, about your notion of Communist Party policies. What happened inside the Communist Party, as you say you know it, when anyone opposed Communist policy?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. You mean their deciding any measure?

Q. What happened to a person who opposed Communist policy?

A. You mean the discipline to be taken by the Party?

Q. Just tell us what would happen.

A. Give me a question. You are asking me. I am trying to find out what you want.

Mr. Paisley: The question is unintelligible. What happens if somebody opposes the Communist Party? Does he mean what happens if a member opposes?

The Court: I think the witness has answered the question. You might rephrase it, Mr. MacInnis, please. [1718]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, accepting his Honor's suggestion, what would happen inside the Communist Party to any member who opposed the policy of the Communist Party? What action would be taken by the Party?

A. You mean if a member of the Communist Party opposed the Communist Party?

Q. Yes, in policy.

A. That is already a matter of record. There is three basic fundamentals you must adhere to in the Communist Party, and I will repeat for the record once more: There is no minority opinion. There shall be no mass concentration of thought. And there shall be no organized position. I believe the first shall answer the question: There shall be no minority opinion. When it is delivered by the Party, that is what it is. If this room is so high today, and tomorrow they say it is eight feet high, I am supposed to come back and say it is only eight feet high. The Party says so. That answers the question.

Q. What would happen—You say there is no minority opinion. What would happen if a person took up a minority point of view against the policy of the Communist Party?

A. You don't take up a minority view, because you are not in the Party if you do.

Q. What would happen if you did?

A. You aren't in the Party. It couldn't happen. You are [1719] out.

Q. Exactly. In other words, if we find an instance where a man takes a position against the Communist Party, he is no longer in the Party?

A. Well, it depends on the importance of the issue.

Q. By the way, how does a person get out of the Communist Party?

A. Well, if he got out the way I got out, I just faded out; just never attended no meetings. That is all. [1719-A]

Q. Did anybody ever send you any notice?

A. No, not that I recall, any documentary or any document; just told by way of mouth, "What's the matter? You are not coming to our meeting?" "What's the matter? What's the matter?" like that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Did you send any notice to the Communist Party? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Well, now, on these same matters, let me ask you about some other things happening in the year 1934. Do you remember anything in the month of May, 1934, concerning the seating delegates from the MWIU, which has already been described as the Maritime Workers Industrial Union?

A. Seating them where?

Q. Seating them on the strike committee.

A. Well, that would be a matter for the joint strike committee. I was not a member of the joint strike committee.

Q. Well, don't you remember that the MWIU openly requested the rights to be seated through its delegates on the joint strike committee, that they were admitted at first as fraternal delegates and that they were later put out by motion of the strike committee itself?

A. As I said, I don't recall. I was not a member. And on this, I don't want to be confused. I want to know if my question or if my answer took care of the question. We had two, what we call regular strike committees during the maritime [1720] strike. That don't include the general strike, strategy committee. One was the longshore strike committee, and it is a matter of record how these men were selected. On that committee there was only longshoremen. I was a member of that strike committee. The other committee was the joint maritime strike committee, which was represented by all component organizations. I was not a member of that committee.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. I understand that. The MWIU was an organization said to be Communist controlled, is that correct?

A. That was the accepted opinion, inasmuch that two accepted, well known Communists were in control of it; one was Roy Hudson, in charge of the eastern side of it, and he had out here taking care of the Pacific Coast a fellow named Harry Jackson. They both were accepted Communists.

Q. And that was the organization which openly, without any secrecy, asked to have its delegates seated upon the joint strike committee and which was thrown out openly by the joint strike committee, is that correct?

A. I said I wasn't on that committee. I don't know what action was taken.

Mr. Paisley: I can't understand what the materiality of this is.

The Court: The objection is sustained. Do you interpose an objection, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: Yes. I don't like to object if I thought we [1721] were leading up to something, but the questions just go on and on and never get to anything.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, the accusation that the strike and its policies were dominated by the Communist Party was an accusation which was made at the time of the strike itself, isn't that true? A. By whom?

Q. By many people; by members of the public, by the Chamber of Commerce, by the ordinary press. That was made openly, wasn't it?

A. We have over a million people in the Bay Area.

Q. Yes.

A. And many thought that way. Many was quite sympathetic and liberal with their minds.

Q. Yes. And isn't this true, Mr. Schrimpf, that in early June of '34 the Labor Council and the ILA, itself, both adopted a resolution protesting against any accusation of Communist domination of the strike?

Mr. Paisley: I can't see the materiality of it, your Honor. Suppose they did?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we have all of this testimony about secrecy, and I propose to show that no such thing was true, that——

The Court: You may answer. [1722]

The Witness: Will you repeat that question?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read it, please?

(Record read.)

A. That could have been possible. I don't now recall it. It could have been possible, it could have happened.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, did you ever hear of an organization called the WIR, called Workers International Relief?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I have heard of such an organization, I believe, or with such initials as that.

Q. That was accused of being a Communist organization, was it not?

A. I don't know. I don't know anything of that organization, other than just hearing of it.

Q. Weren't you active in the strike?

A. I considered I was very active.

Q. And were you a member of the strike committee? A. I was.

Q. Well, now, isn't it true that in May of 1934 the WIR, also called Workers International Relief, sent its representatives openly to the strike committee and made a proposition to offer aid to the strike?

A. That could have been possible. But I may not have been there. While I was a member to that strike committee, which was a very large committee, I was also very busy. There was many meetings, or at least parts of the meetings, where I was not [1723] present.

Q. And concerning most of those meetings, records were kept, were they not?

A. We had a chairman and we had someone to keep the so-called minutes.

Q. The secretaries kept the minutes, did they not? A. That's right.

Q. And wasn't it in 1934 that the man called Ivan Cox was the secretary of the union?

A. Yes, he was secretary.

Q. And with reference to this offer of Workers

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

International Relief openly before the strike committee, it is a matter of record that Harry Bridges openly opposed the accepting of any relief from that organization and defeated the offer, isn't that true? A. I don't know.

Q. You never heard one way or the other?

A. No.

Q. Well, now, to proceed to some other matters involving the 1934 strike, you have mentioned already that on one occasion there were two striking longshoremen killed. Was the funeral demonstration following that directed by the Communist Party?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, your Honor? I am not [1724] attempting to parade again before the record the fact that men were killed or that there was a funeral. But there is a direct connection with the matters which we are now discussing.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): ~~Well,~~ I will ask you this question: Isn't it true, Mr. Schrimpf, to your knowledge as a supposed member of the strike committee, that the Communist Party appeared before the strike committee and offered to send an official delegation to march in the funeral parade and that the Communist Party was barred from the parade by the strike committee itself?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, could you tell us anything about the aims and purposes of the MWIU?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection; object to that, your Honor, as immaterial. I see no materiality to that.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, your Honor? The previous witness on the stand, Mr. Schomaker, was asked a multitude of questions on direct examination by the government prosecutors about what he knew concerning the organization called MWIU, who dominated it, what its policies were and what it had to do with the 1934 strike. Now, your Honor has already ruled, I say respectfully, upon the validity of that subject matter in evidence. [1725]

The Court: What bearing, if any, has it on the testimony of this witness, apart from the fact that it may have been dilated on with respect to other witnesses?

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to tell your Honor that. This witness states that every matter of policy and strategy was directed and controlled by the Communist Party. I am going to show another matter, another part of the strategy that was not.

The Court: Counsel, again we may say this to one another, that I am not interested in a lengthy argument. I do not believe that the question is material or relevant to the testimony of this particular witness. I do not believe it proper cross-examination. And therefore I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, let me ask you this question, Mr. Schrimpf: Isn't it true that in the spring of 1933 Mr. Harry Bridges and a committee working with him refused to allow an organization called MWIU to participate in the aims of the ILA?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor. I just——

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Counsel ought not to testify here. Question after question after question he testifies—then the question, "Isn't that true?" I think he should be admonished, your Honor, to refrain from it.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I heard of no case which reproves a lawyer from adopting that form in the asking of a question.

The Court: We have reached four o'clock now. Is that a convenient hour, or are you about to finish with the examination of this witness?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I am not about to finish with him. I would be glad to go on if your Honor suggests.

The Court: No, I thought that if you had a matter of fifteen or twenty minutes or so we might continue on and have this man go back to his labors. I suppose you would enjoy that, wouldn't you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Witness: Well, I have got to go to work pretty soon.

The Court: So that is the thought I had in mind. If [1727] you are going to be some time, we had better adjourn over until tomorrow morning.

Mr. MacInnis: I believe I will be some time, your Honor.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon adjournment until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. Ladies and gentlemen, the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon. You may retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, December 6, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.)

Tuesday Morning Session
December 6, 1949, 10 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Proceed, Mr. MacInnis.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination
(Resumed)

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, you told us that you dropped out of the Communist Party some time in 1935, is that right? A. That's right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. It was also in the year 1935 that you ran for the vice presidency of the union against Bill Marlowe, is that correct?

A. I believe that was the year.

Q. Bill Marlowe was the candidate whom Harry Bridges supported; you told us the conversation you had with Bridges at that time, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, Marlowe was an anti-Communist, wasn't he, and he is now head of the Employers Association in Southern California?

A. Marlowe was not very active in politics. As to expressing his views with or against Communists at the time he run for office.

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, you told us early in your testimony that [1729] one of the definite assignments of Norma Perry from the Communist Party was to work in the union so she could obtain a list with the names, addresses, affiliations and so forth of the members of the union, is that correct?

A. That was the intent of her being put in there.

Q. Yes. And when you were questioned by me on that subject yesterday, you said that the registration of the longshoremen at the hiring halls did not contain the addresses of the longshoremen so that the Communist Party would have to look to some other source in order to find those details, is that right? A. That's right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. In other words, you told us that definitely the addresses were not included, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Let me ask you if this refreshes your recollection, reading from the minutes of the labor relations committee, the joint labor relations committee of the employers and the members of the union, the committee set up as a bargaining agent between them——

Mr. Paisley: I don't see how that could refresh this witness' recollection, unless he prepared them or had something to do with them.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: The minutes are not in evidence, your Honor; he is reading from something admittedly that is not in evidence. [1730]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have an official document showing that the contrary is true to what this witness has stated. May I have your Honor's indulgence to ask some preliminary questions?

The Court: May I say to you at the threshold this morning, Mr. MacInnis, rather than make a disclosure at the outset concerning the context or contents of any document before it is in evidence, may I ask you to refrain from that practice today?

Mr. MacInnis: All right.

The Court: Thank you.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, all of the registering longshoremen after the strike was settled, after the award was made, were bound to state their age, address, the companies for whom they had worked, and their qualifications and classifications, isn't that correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf:)

A. I can't recall seeing the form. It could be.

Q. You say that that could well be, is that true?

A. That's right. Of course on that form there was nothing on there that you must put your right address or your address. You could put anything. And incidentally, on that form there was a big percentage of all names gave the address of the union.
